NATIONAL BANK OF COMMERCE KANSAS CITY, MO	BROTHERHOOD OF DISCIPLES OF CHRIST BY F. J. [Signature] TREAS.

The Comrades of Paul fund begins to history. The first loan of one hundred dollars has been made and the student is in college. In December, 1909, Clyde R. Hesse, of Des Moines, suggested the thing, and about the same time A. Hall, of Princeton, Ind., suggested the name. With Hesse to think is to do. He immediately set about finding men in the Central Church, Des Moines, who would pledge themselves to give one and one-half cents per day, or five dollars per year to help some other man equip himself to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ. The idea appealed to many to whom it was presented. During the year 1910 remittances to this fund began to come to the General Office from Des Moines. Soon the amount had reached one hundred dollars and passed

In the meantime the spirit of God was moving upon the heart of a choice young man in Des Moines to give himself to the ministry of Jesus Christ. But there was a widowed mother to be considered.
 There were younger brothers and sisters whose living must be provided for, and a share of this responsibility rested heavily upon the shoulders of young Arthur Whitney. He battled his way through the difficulties, but was still without sufficient assurance that he could maintain himself in school. Then the Comrades of Paul Fund came to the rescue. There was a consultation between Finis Idle-man, pastor of the Central Church, and Clyde R. Hesse, youthful father of the fund, and others concerned. Out of this came a request to the General Brotherhood, which is the trustee of the fund, asking that a loan of one hundred dollars from the Comrades of Paul Fund be made to Arthur Whitney. The check, signed by Treasurer F. J. Bannister, went out the same day, accompanied by a note due four years after date to bear interest only from maturity, and at the rate of five per cent per annum. A fac-simile of the note, duly signed, appears herewith. This note means that Mr. Whitney will have the use of this money without interest, during the four years he is in school, and thereafter he will pay five per cent interest until the money is returned. Once in our treasury it will go out again and again, so long as the world lasts and a race of sinful men need preachers. Isn't this a glorious work? Isn't it one that you would personally rejoice to have a part in? Already something like two scores of volunteers for the ministry have been reported as a result of volunteer day in January. Many of these young people are going to need help in getting through school. By setting apart one hundred dollars a year for two or three years you could help a man through college who would have before him a long life-time of effective service. He would be your minister. But of course few can give one hundred dollars per year to such a work; but almost every man who reads this can give one and one-half cents per day or five dollars per year, and each twenty men at five dollars per year can have their volunteer in school. You do not know the other nineteen, but nearly twenty thousand men, each of whom is eligible to be one of the nineteen, will see this page in CHRISTIAN MEN, and the Comrades of Paul Pledge Card which follows. We invite you to sign the card. Paul toiled with his own hands to support himself for the Ministry of the Word. We invite you to become a Comrade of Paul by toiling with your hands to support a modern Paul, or Timothy, or Titus, or

ARTHUR WHITNEY

Stephen while he prepares himself to become an effective minister of the Word. These words are not written idly, and we would that none should read them idly. It is a great and pressing appeal of this of men for the ministry, and it is a heart-bursting need that many of these volunteers have for help. The volunteers seldom come from the homes of the rich. It is a sad fact that the sons of well-to-do parents go least of all into the ministry. Business and the money-making professions claim them. The young man to whom the heavens opened with a vision that will not be denied is usually one who is compelled to make his own way in the world and often has others depending upon him for support. Did you know that some of the most eminent of those who serve in the pulpits of the Disciples today are men whose ministerial education was made possible ya student loan fund. In the January magazine we published a letter from the honored president of the College of the Bible, at Lexington, Ky., J. W. McGarvey. The letter was of some length and written painstakingly by that hand which has been lifted in benediction above the heads of so many young men who were consecrating themselves to the ministry of Jesus, and whose voices are now heard on every continent. And do you know what was its burden? Do you know what it was that moved this man who has trained more young men for the ministry than any other living teacher, to give up the precious golden hours of his life to the writing of such a communication? Let us tell you. It was to make a plea in behalf of loan funds for needy students. That was the whole burden of the letter. It is the burden of these pages. It is a burden we would transfer to your heart, oh, reader! If once God gets it on your heart, you will never get it off until you sign the Comrades of Paul Card herewith and take the liberty of making your subscription much larger than five dollars per year if you can afford it.

Every time we get one hundred dollars in this fund you can count upon us to put another ministerial student in one of our schools.

We publish herewith a fac-simile of the first check drawn against the Comrades of Paul Fund and a picture of the first Comrades of Paul student.

Brotherhoods or Bible Classes looking for definite work to do could undertake nothing more helpful or inspiring than the securing of Comrades of Paul pledges. We can furnish the cards in blank without cost, and will gladly give necessary information as to procedure.

The Unspotting of Seattle

A few weeks ago the news flashed over the telegraph wires that Seattle's saturnalia of vice was at an end; that a mayor had been deposed; that an outraged citizenship had expressed itself at the polls in such a victory for good government and good morals as gave assurance that the great city on Puget Sound would henceforth reflect in her municipal life the healthy tone of the ocean-washed ozone that her people breathe.

Back of this achievement lies a story of heroic endeavor of individual men, of closely related struggle on the part of the church and social organizations, and of the testing out, for the first time, in a closely waged municipal battle of the votes of women where a moral issue was involved.

Some of the men who had a permanent part in this battle for civic righteousness were members of our Brotherhoods in Seattle and readers of CHRISTIAN MEN. To one of them, Harry E. Moore, we are indebted for the material from which the following article has been prepared. The fact that Harry E. Moore was honored with the presidency of the Public Welfare League, mentioned below, and served as such during the campaign, and the further fact that he is a member of the Christian Church and was baptized by W. F. Richardson, here in Kansas City, will not detract from the interest with which our readers will follow this thrilling narrative of the rescue of a great city from vice as low and sordid as ever in the history of the world clutched at the throat of virtue or snarled at the heels of purity.

Seattle has been facing somewhat the same problems that confront every city more or less frequently. It had good, bad and indifferent officers. The vice element and the vicious element have exercised their influence upon politics.

About three years ago the city adopted a recall and initiative and referendum charter amendment. The recall portion provides that city officers may be recalled by the people. The first move is to secure the signatures of 25 per cent of the voters, or rather a number of legal voters equal to 25 per cent of the vote cast at the election electing the officer in question. The city council is then compelled to call an election within not less than thirty days nor more than forty days from the date that the city comptroller certifies to that body that the petition is sufficient.

A year ago this coming March, by a combination of circumstances and political moves which need not be gone into, coupled with civic indifference, the city elected as mayor Hiram C. Gill. Gill's platform promises were that he would give the city a clean business administration. Although the State laws prohibit such, he was openly and avowedly in favor of a "restricted district," and promised to establish such, but to put it where "No man could find it, unless he was looking for it." During the campaign the information was quietly disseminated that if Gill was elected Seattle for the ensuing two years would be an open house for the women of the underworld and all the retinue of undesirable elements that flock to the "open town." Gill was elected, and the natural results followed. A so-called restricted district was re-established in the same location, where 50,000 people passed through it every day en route and from the business portion of the city. Uptown cafes and resorts, dispensing liquor to men and women, flourished. Ere long open gambling made its appearance, although indications were that only those met with favor from the chief of police were permitted to enjoy the special privileges.

Matters became so intolerable that a number of men were instrumental in calling a small mass meeting, composed of citizens of known moral and religious standing. Out of this grew the "Public Welfare League," which was duly organized and incorporated. The League employed an attorney at an expense of $2,500.00 for the year. The first move was to definitely locate saloons of ill repute, and put the matter before the mayor and chief of police with the request that they be discontinued. Although repeatedly informed, these officers refused to afford relief. The League then took the matter into the courts, and, after considerable litigation, by sheer process of law compelled the officers to abolish the restricted district, which, by the way, had become one of the most degraded and notorious that any civilized city ever tolerated. It had been enlarged three or four times over any other that the city ever had before. Not less than a dozen "crib houses" were in operation, and in these the conditions baffled description. A regular frontier mining camp dance hall was opened, where the patron paid 25 cents for a three-minute dance, and was then entitled to a drink each for himself and the woman with whom he danced, she getting a check for 10 cents. Saloons, of course, abounded everywhere, and in these were dis-

The fact of the matter was that the vice of the city had been centralized, and a syndicate of men with money were making a business out of it, in which all the details were looked after carefully, and no opportunity lost to entrap any who might be drawn there from curiosity or otherwise.

The League decided to invoke the recall against the mayor. No one who has never been through the mill of securing a petition of 25 per cent of the voters in a city of 250,000 people, with the largest and most influential newspaper opposing vigorously, and two others not giving very whole-hearted support, can tell just what a task it was, but it was accomplished. Enough signatures were secured from the male citizens, but fortunately at the November election the women of the state were enfranchised. Although there were but a few days remaining after the governor recognized the women as legal voters, hundreds of them flocked to the registration office for the sole purpose of being qualified to sign the recall, and then signed it.

After the petition was declared sufficient, another legal battle ensued. The mayor was defeated in the district court. On a technicality he went before the presiding United States court judge and got an injunction restraining the council from calling the election. Within forty-eight hours the League had prepared an appeal and had men on the way to consult other federal judges of the district, and within a very few days we had the matter in shape to proceed.

Then followed a whirlwind campaign of two weeks; in the meantime the League having brought out an opposing candidate and the incumbent of the office being compelled to come before the people again. The League selected as their candidate a clean business man—not a church man, to be sure, but one of known honor and integrity, that all classes might unite upon as a man who would hew to the line and accord full rights to all and special privileges to none.

The League and its adherents conducted educational meetings all over the city. Men and women alike attended. Conditions were set forth as they existed. The matter was not minced in any particular. People seemed anxious to know the truth, and to have a spade called a spade where the occasion demanded it. The club women entered into the matter and called for speakers at their meetings. It was one of the hottest campaigns ever seen in an American city, as well as one of the vilest in some respects. The result was that 71,000 registered for the election, and 90 per cent of these voted, and Hi Gill lost by a majority of 10 per cent. The press over the country attribute the defeat to the women's vote, but close observers feel that they were divided in about the same proportion as the men, and that the results would have been the same had the women not been enfranchised, though, of course, the vote would have been smaller and the majority smaller. The city was aroused from center to circumference, and the women of the city became better posted in the use of the ballot in this one election than they would have done in five years in the ordinary course of affairs.

Two weeks after the recall election, the direct primary election to name candidates for the coming councilmanic election was held. They have heretofore had eighteen councilmen, one each from the fourteen wards of the city, and four elected at large. This year a change goes into effect whereby they have only nine councilmen, at double the former salary, these are all elected at large. There were sixty-eight candidates before the people. All of the members of the old council ran. Many of the new men were good men, but not well enough known to command votes. Every special interest had its special candidate or candidates. The condition was confusing in the extreme. Advisory alots by the dozens were put out. No man felt he could tell what the result would be, but, as is usually the case when the people are aroused, and civic indifference overcome, they may be depended upon. The result was the selection of eighteen candidates who, on the whole, are satisfactory. The best element on the ticket received the largest number of votes. The really vicious and dangerous men in the race were ignominiously defeated and the questionable stood at the bottom of the list. It seems now that it will be impossible for the enemies of good government to secure more than three out of the nine councilmen to be elected March 7th, and as though the better element would again win with a heavy majority in the council to uphold the mayor, who was elected on the positive issue of Civic Decency vs. Civic Indecency.

There is no question but what the women have helped us to "clean house," but the fact remains that the Public Welfare League brought the whole matter about, and that except for them there would have been no change in affairs, and this is the part that should interest the reader of CHRISTIAN MEN, for the Public Welfare League of Seattle has at no me to exceed 300 members. Fifty-five of these were trustees and voted in the first, but of the fifty-five not more than thirty-five have taken any particularly active part. Reports have been circulated that money was used in unlimited quantities and was supplied by wealthy men. This is not true. The total expense to date, exclusive of the campaign fund of about $8,000, which was raised and handled by the candidate and his own campaign committee, has been in the neighborhood of $7,500, which includes all attorney fees, court costs, etc., and the results have been a complete revolution in the affairs of a great city. The tables have been completely turned. Whereas Seattle was one of the most vicious and degraded, it is now fair to be one of the best governed cities in the United States. Already in three short weeks since the new mayor took the chair there has been a wonderful change. At the primary following the recall election by a few weeks, the proportion of the registration that voted in some of the worst wards was relatively much less than in the better or residence wards. This fact together with the records of the railroad and steamboat companies, shows that a large percentage of the undesirable class have already sought more congenial climates, and they are going every day. A new chief of police has been appointed (incidentally a grand jury was called, and the old chief of police is in the toils, having been indicted for receiving bribes, arrested and placed under $25,000.00 bonds), and the work of reorganization is going on. The vice conditions which have been abated, as well as the general business conditions, are perhaps responsible for a reign of terror in the way of hold-ups and strong-arm operations in the city, but these are but an incident.

What has been accomplished here might be accomplished in any city, by systematic, consistent, organized effort of a few Christian men. In Seattle they did not make it a Christian versus a non-Christian issue. In fact, they eliminated the idea of church as far as possible, but the fact remains that the brains and sinew of the organization was composed most largely of men with the spirit of Christ in their hearts, and it can safely be said that those most active here were also most active in their respective churches.

As we are going to press, a telegram, signed by Joseph L. Garvin, Franklin Shuey, Lane and Moore, reports that the regular councilmen elected were better than hoped for, only one questionable character out of nine attaining a seat in the legislative body. Also that the famous detective, William J. Burns, after a thorough inspection of the city under its present government, declares Seattle to be the cleanest city in the United States and affirms that the Public Welfare League is such an organization as will furnish a correct means of keeping it so.

As our readers follow this interesting story to its conclusion, we would not have them overlook this demonstration of a place in our municipal life for institutions such as the Public Welfare League. The essential make-up of such an organization is a small group of citizens of unquestioned character, of incorruptible integrity and unfailing faith in the principles of our government, with a dauntless courage, a persistency that never fails, and a huge lot of common sense.

QUARTETTE OF TEAM WORK CAMPAIGNERS

M. B. Madden, Grant K. Lewis, Dr. Fred Kline, E. E. Elliott. Length of tour, 6,500 miles. Cities visited 7.
Men addressed, 5,500. Time of tour, 39 days

Touring of the Team Work Campaign Newark, Ohio, to Houston, Texas

NEWARK is a railroad city, one hour by the electric line from Columbus towards Pittsburgh and is the home of L. B. D. C. No. 324, C. C. Marriott, President, and W. D. Ward, late of Rockford, Illinois, pastor and enthusiastic friend of the movement for enlisting men in the work of the Kingdom. Things looked dark when we entered Newark, and leaking clouds began to dampen our spirits before we could get from the train to the church, but the warm welcome we received from these Brotherhood men frightened away all thought of clouds and while the rain poured without the team work speeches flowed within and the one hundred men gathered about the banquet tables were enthusiastic over the team idea.

LEXINGTON, KY. the city of schools and colleges, churches and distilleries, nestles down amid the blue grass of Central Kentucky and therein resides a group of the most royal entertainers that we have encountered on this whirlwind campaign. A committee large enough to fill a street car met us at the station and conveyed us to the Phoenix Hotel, where the chairman addressed the hotel manager something along this line. "These are the men for whom we have reserved rooms. Give them everything they want except drinks." This is the first and only time on the tour that our personal appearance has been against us. In the afternoon we had delightful fellowship with Brothers Spencer, Collis and several resident and visiting pastors and laymen. At Transylvania University we spoke to the two hundred odd young men at the evening dinner hour. Then came the banquet at the hotel, served in true Kentucky style with hospitality labeling everything from the green plush on the floor to the mural decorations.

Samuel Clay was the chairman of the arrangement committee and was ably seconded by Frank T. Baker, J. W. Porter, President I. B. D. C. No. 285, and others. Besides our Lexington churches, men came from Paris, Georgetown, Nicholasville, Carlisle, Henderson, Louisiana, Sulphur, Richmond and Louisville. The fellowship was delightful. Here we found William Ross Lloyd, late pastor at Bellevue, Pa., now evangelizing in Kentucky, and R. W. Wallace, late of Valdosta, Ga., now pastor of the Woodland church in Lexington. Space forbids mention of many whose faces loom large upon our national horizon.

LOUISVILLE is the largest city in the Blue Grass State and noted for its commercial output of whiskey and tobacco. Among the Christian churches of America and the world is more familiarly known as the birthplace of the Foreign Society and the home of E. L. Powell. Now, the First Church at Louisville is recognized as the leading church of the community and Brother Powell is looked upon as the most popular pastor in all that region. One of the annual events which is written in red on the calendars about Louisville is the banquet of the Optimists' Club of Louisville. Here we are told assembles Jew and Gentile, Greek and Catholic, the laborer and the business man, the churchman and the non-churchman, who honor the personality of E. L. Powell by their presence at this affair which was to come off the following Thursday. This is the reason no Team Work rally was held in Louisville, but there was in the breasts of our Louisville ministers a desire to meet and greet us personally, so when we stepped into the private dining room of the Galt House on Saturday noon it was to meet sixteen of the as-and laymen who had gathered around the cloth to bid us God-speed on our 6,000-journey. Thad. S. Tinsley was the Chairman of the Arrangements Committee and we say to his credit that this was one of the finest and most elaborate luncheons we sat on to, and it was served with an elegance in style which seems possible only south of London and Dixon's line. Here was Brother Bell of the First Church, Brother W. N. Key, whose work at Broadway Church has been almost a marvel; Thad. Tinsley, who combines the pastoral duties of Crescent Hill with those of County Bible Superintendent; Brother Gordon and five of his men; W. E. Frazee, the Superintendent of Bible Schools, who is a member of the Parkland Church, with H. H. Moore and Harvey B. Smith, pastor of Eden-wood. H. W. Elliott, for sixteen years Secretary of the Kentucky Christian Missionary Society, gave a glowing account of the part Kentucky people have taken in the history of the Reformation Movement. We are great people in Kentucky and lead all other States of America in offerings to Missions. Their State work is presided over by a real genius and if his name were not Elliott and we might not be inclined to boost a member of the family, we would say that the achievements of the past must be taken as predictions for the future of our work in the Blue Grass State. It is as good to be in Louisville for those four precious hours and to fellowship with these men on historic soil. Three o'clock saw us crossing over high above the surface of the new waters of the broad Ohio on one of the giant steel structures of which there are several here. We saw great tows of coal hauled by little "twin stacked" stern wheelers traveling their way south. Packet boats, with gas saloons, polished brass and soft upholstery, delighting river travelers, with veritable armies of negroes on deck, stored in with horses, cattle, pigs and chickens in great profusion. Across the river, locking arms like sweet maidens stand the twin cities of Jeffersonville and New Albany. Jeffersonville is the home of Indiana's Reformatory, which is making good citizens out of bad ones under an improved method of man culture.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. the capitol city of the Hoosier State, where we were born back in the seventies, lies three hours to the north of Louisville on the line to Chicago, its level streets spreading broad pavements for miles in every direction. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument in the center of the city, with its groups of statuary, fountains gushing thousands upon thousands of gallons of water over the mossy stones, is one of the sights of the city. The capitol building here consumed fifty years in its erection. We have some other things to be proud of here for this is the home of the C. W. B. M. and the Board of Ministerial Relief, the Missionary Training School and Butler College. We have many churches in Indianapolis and our meeting was held in the beautiful new Third Church, where Harry G. Hill, President of our National Temperance Board, is the pastor. It was from here that Benjamin Harrison ascended the White House steps and here also is the home of ex-Vice President Fairbanks, Tom Taggart, and some other National lights besides ourselves whose personalities have been in the limelight in a National way. One of our old friends, Lew Shank, is now Mayor and we understand is a better one than they have had for some years. But we started to write of our rally. Here we met for the first time L. E. Murray, recently elected State Secretary of the Indiana Christian Missionary Society. Dr. H. J. Hall, of Franklin, State President of the Indiana Brotherhood and Secretary of the American Temperance Board, was up from Franklin. In the evening we divided up and filling several of the pulpits and a midnight train found us on the way north.

HAMMOND, IND. is the center of the Calumet District comprising cities of South Chicago, Indiana Harbor, Whiting, Gary, Toleston and East Hammond, where our work has grown in eight years from one to six congregations, from no buildings to twelve church edifices valued at $51,000, from 12 members to 1,200, from thirty-five in the Bible School to 1,500, and otherwise has advanced in a way that cannot be measured numerically. J. H. C. Smith, now of Oklahoma City, established the work at Hammond when he was pastor of the Metropolitan Church at Chicago and as we talked to him about the work in his splendid office in Oklahoma City, we can realize only in a small way the sacrifice incident to the starting of the Hammond work. But that was eight years ago. Today with C. J. Sharp, H. A. Carpenter, Nelson Trimble and Martha Stout Trimble as pastors and the splendid men who stand solidly behind them and a District Missionary Society, we look forward to a tremendously large work in the Calumet District within a few years. They say that within five years this district will be one city of not less than 200,000 inhabitants, making the largest municipality in Indiana. The Team Work meeting was a grand success with 160 men present, representing twelve nationalities. Most of them baptized by the present pastors. The splendid orchestra were all of them baptized by C. J. Sharp, pastor at Hammond.

TOLEDO, OHIO turned out 140 men at the Norwood Church with a splendid orchestra and efficient service from the ladies with decorations in Brotherhood colors and spicy mottoes that added grace to the affair. Dr. C. J. Richard and Dr. T. D. Barnett were the leading lights in our entertainment while E. C. Frobese, President L. B. D. C. No. 304, is the responsible head at Norwood Avenue. Toledo is known as the home of "Golden Rule" Jones, many years the Mayor, doing a great work for boys in preparing them for future good citizenship. But we are proud of Toledo for the ever-growing manhood of our churches there who have caught the vision of drawing men into the Kingdom and putting them at a man's job. We picked up Brother Cahill again at Toledo and for the last time he told his story of what a great State Ohio is. But, of course, this has nothing to do with Brother Cahill's address. W. C. Chapman, our pastor at North Baltimore, came over to renew his acquaintance with some members of the Team and Brother Morrison, of Oak Harbor, pastor of the church there and a brother of S. A. Morrison, of Kansas City, was also present.

DETROIT, MICH.

we remember is on Lake St. Clair, the smallest of the Great Lakes. On the opposite shore King George of England rules the eminent domain. Great car ferries plough their way through mountains of ice, enabling continental travelers to remain aboard trains in crossing the border. We did not cross into Canada this trip but stood on the shore and waved a happy salute to the foreign soil. Detroit is the home of C. J. Tanner and a lot of other good men, including Phillip Gray, whose automobile bore us about seeing the sights. At noon we lunched with a party of our pastors and business men and in the afternoon conferred with them and members of the State Board who were meeting in Detroit that day. At the banquet we heard for the first time F. P. Arthur, State Secretary of the Michigan Missionary Society, and George W. Muckley, representing Home Missions and Church Extension in place of Brother Lewis, who went home from Toledo. Wellington M. Logan, Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, is Religious Work Director of the Detroit Y. M. C. A. At the banquet 150 men, said to be the largest gathering of our men ever held in Detroit, met with us and we were almost carried away with the cordial hospitality with which the messages were received.

GIBSON CITY, ILL.

in the summer time stands amid the waving fields of growing corn, but on the occasion of our visit was covered with a mushy snow spreading for miles over the fields and melting into deep pools upon the sidewalks. But we had a great meeting at Gibson City with L. O. Lehman and his enthusiastic congregation. For a twelfth hour appointment we certainly congratulate the leaders upon the attendance. A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and the speaking began promptly at six o'clock in the auditorium. Following the general program the people insisted upon some Japanese stories from Brother Madden while he sat on his feet in Japanese fashion upon the platform.

PEORIA, ILL.

where we labored for thirteen years before coming to the Brotherhood work, was our Saturday appointment in the Prairie State, turned out 150 people to a dinner at 6:30. Threearter came the speaking in the auditorium with ex-President Hieronymous and Field Secretary, H. H. Peters, of Eureka College, among our auditors. The next day (Brotherhood Volunteer Day) eleven young people decided to enter the ministry. W. Turner is the pastor of the Central Church and William Price, pastor of Howett Street Church. Both have Local Brotherhoods affiliated with the General Brotherhood and doing effective work.

JACKSONVILLE

Here is where Russell F. Thrapp leads the people on to great victory, and Clarence L. DePew, State Superintendent of Bible Schools, resides. The Jacksonville church building and membership is one of the prides of the Brotherhood. Last year more than 1,000 out of 1,500 members contributed to all our work. Brother Muckley preached in the morning, and we were proud of him. In the afternoon Brother Madden spoke at one of our mission points, Brother Kline went to the Old People's Home for a meeting, while we were taken to the Y. M. C. A. by its Secretary, Brother J. R. Watt, one of our own men, and permitted to address what was said to be one of the largest gatherings of men ever assembled in the Y. M. C. A. in recent years. Our subject was "The Relation of the Y. M. C. A. to the Church, and vice versa." In the evening nearly a thousand people listened with patience and interest to the program of the campaign, beginning at seven o'clock, the church was almost entirely filled, and we held them until the close. It was a great day. Brother Thrapp, in writing afterwards says: "This church has many big days, but the work of your bunch yesterday was the biggest thing held here in five years."

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

the birthplace of the Board of Church Extension and the resting place of the sacred dust of Abraham Lincoln, gave us a cheerful reception and entertained us royally from arrival until leaving time. We have three good churches in Springfield presided over by F. W. Burnham, J. R. Golden and H. H. Jenner. Burnham was once a telegraph operator, Golden has been a member of the Legislature of Illinois, while we do not know what Brother Jenner has been other than a good preacher whom we knew first as pastor at Howett Street in Peoria. They have Brotherhoods in Springfield at all three churches. The dinner for 50 men was served in the Y. M. C. A. by the ladies of our Springfield churches without money and without price. Men came from surrounding towns and the affair was one long to be remembered. Dr. H. T. Madison, Jr., was the enthusiast who arranged the Springfield affair and we are much indebted to him.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

is the seat of the State University with Urbana locking arms like a twin sister she is, and a beautiful community full of shady streets and pretty homes. The University Place Church is being rebuilt from the ground up and for some distance beyond the ground and when completed promises to be one of the most beautiful and commodious have anywhere about. Stephen E. Fisher is the pastor and is ably seconded by a good workable Brotherhood, L. B. D. C. No. 351. George R. Shawhan is one of the leading lights and we are indebted to him and his good wife for our royal entertainment.

DANVILLE, ILL. the home of Speaker Cannon, is full of coal miners and surrounded by coal mines. In addition it is a large railroad center and contains the National Soldiers' Home. Here we have four churches and four good pastors headed by S. S. Jones, once pastor at Champaign, but for sixteen years at Danville, W. E. Adams, J. Scott Hyde and H. Williams, late of Kalamazoo, Mich., now pastor of the Fourth Church in Danville. The driving rain made the Danville mud resemble printers' ink and everything looked dark for our meeting, but when we faced the tables at the Second Church we found 100 men staring at us in the face. This good crowd gave us undivided attention and we were happy for having been there.

INDIAN HARBOR, IND. once the home of Dan Voorhees and Rile McKean and immortalized by James Whitcomb Riley, the city otherwise famous for whiskey and race horses, is the home of two of our churches and S. D. Dutcher is the pastor of the Central, where the supper was held, and George J. Ruth, our host about the city, pastor of the Second Church. Here was another rainy night with a good crowd and we were fortunate in being able to hold their attention for the two and one-half hours consumed by the program, but they listened attentively and looked for more. The new church being constructed by the folks under Brother Dutcher's leadership promises to be one of the handsomest and costliest in the city and has a commanding site on a corner lot. Already its dome is pointing heavenward.

On the Last Lap of the Team Work Campaign

ST. LOUIS One hundred and sixty-five men of our St. Louis churches gathered about the banquet tables at the Second Church, where R. E. Alexander is the pastor and moving spirit. Grouped about the pretty tables were such men as J. H. Garrison, J. H. Allen, W. R. Wren, B. A. Abbott, Marion Stevenson, E. A. Cole, I. J. Beatty, T. C. Clark, and others whose names are almost household among our people throughout the country. Secretary Mocher was present with several directors of the National Benevolent Association. It was a happy gathering and the messages of Team Workers were received with hearty applause. At the close Brother Garrison, in a most happy little speech, moved a vote of thanks to the men and to the ladies, whose kind hands had prepared great platters of roast turkey and its usual accompaniments which disappeared before the banqueters like mist before a morning sun.

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

Springfield, Mo., is away down in Dixie, and thither the team went, shepherdless. St. Louis is almost three hundred miles from Kansas City, but so close that Secretary Elliott could not possibly get by without stopping to renew acquaintance with his charming wife and two interesting boys. The General Secretary took the rails. George L. Peters, pastor of the Central Church, Springfield, met him at the train and reported the team campaigners had already invested the town and had infested the dining room of the best hotel in it for all day. The meeting was held in our magnificent South Street church, Pastor F. I. Moffett, looking more like a clean cut business man than a full frocked clergyman, was there to greet us, surrounded by a splendid group of men, which was in immediate charge of himself and E. W. Bowers, of the College Street church. J. H. Jones, District Evangelist, and Prof. A. P. Finley, occupying our newly endowed Bible Chair in Drury College, were present. Already the professor has gathered some fine young men in the school, and we had the pleasure of meeting a number of them. But what is a team work banquet without a team? An aroma of coffee arose from the lower decks. There was the rattle of knives and forks, and now and then, as our restless glance wandered to the stairway, we caught the gleam of a bright eye, heard the musical chatter of feminine tongues, and once in a while the rustle of an angel's wing, which was perhaps after all, only the swish of a skirt. "Where is Muckley?" questioned Moffett. "We couldn't eat a dinner without him," argued Peters. Dr. Fred Kline came up and reported Muckley and Madden alive and sober half an hour before. The dinner could wait no longer. We marched in and sat down to what, by common consent, was the most tasteful dinner of the entire campaign, and that is certainly saying something. After a time, Muckley and Madden came in, tiptoeing, shame-faced, looking like two school boys who had been caught playing hooky. Muckley explained that he was waiting in the barber shop for Madden, whose hardened face turned the edge of every razor in the establishment. And to cap the climax the Secretary of the Board of Church Extensions turned Oliver Twist and asked for more. But the polished hardness of the plate which he had scraped so clean was not more like adamant than the icy stare of the well-bred lady who calmly looked George out of countenance and taught him how little boys should behave when in company. But he redeemed himself by going on with a great speech in behalf of team work, American Missions, and the Board of Church Extensions. We can forgive a man any small idiosyncrasy when he does his real work so well. D. Y. Donaldson, Dr. Kline and Madden made great addresses. The General Secretary said something about the Brotherhood, and then J. H. Jones, District Evangelist, and

Prof. Finley each had an interesting word for us. Fine, indeed, was the hospitality and spirit of this meeting. A splendid group of men and preachers we have in Greene County, Mo. And now we come to

JOPLIN, MO.

The first thing you notice about Joplin is not Joplin. It is a pile of rock about as high as the R. A. Long Building in Kansas City, and then another and another and then presently some more, and then pretty soon, a whole flock of these rock-strewn heaps. We have heard that Jordan is a rocky road, but Joplin is a rocky town. The worst of it is the people had to dig for these rocks. The real country thereabouts is beautifully wooded and gently rolling, with here and there a rippling stream, but the people of Joplin didn't seem to care for that kind of decoration, and went down in the bowels of the earth and got a lot of this blue rock and built pyramids in their front yards and back yards and cow pastures, until they out-Cheopsed Cheops. It might occur to one afterwards that Joplin is the greatest lead mining center in the world and all these pretty piles of rock are just a by-product of million making. Anyway, the train dodged in and around the rock piles—say, if I were a hobo, Joplin is one place I would never visit—rock piles to right of us, rock piles to left of us, rock piles before us, rock piles behind us, while we all wondered! But we got to Joplin, a great big, handsome, thriving city and there stood a great big, handsome, thriving delegation to greet us, headed by R. G. Blair, lawyer and Bible School teacher and Director General of the Joplin banquet. We heard a piece of G. J. Chapman's morning sermon at the First Church and began to see and hear about the great meeting that was to be that evening. All afternoon, delegations were arriving. Any time or any place that one looked out, one could see a stalwart group of beribboned men marching to the rendezvous. A whistle blew and a special on the Southern trundled into town with Engineer Hunley, Pastor of the Church at Neosho, at the throttle and one hundred men steaming along with him. Again a whistle blew, and it was a delegation from Pittsburg, Kan. The next whistle sounded all the way from Webb City and Carthage. Pastors Ludwig, of Webb City, and Moore, of Carthage, were in charge. They had one hundred men and George W. Muckley in the car when they started, but Muckley was thrown out for misbehavior and came in late, as usual. But he also made a corking speech, as usual. At five o'clock the Joplin pastors, J. R. Blunt and G. J. Chapman rallied the men on the church steps and a picture was taken. Then Attorney Blair and Real Estater J. W. Perry marshalled them by companies, two abreast, and the line of march was taken up through the business district to the basement of the Central Church, where the ladies of the congregation had prepared a most bounteous luncheon. Joplin is not quite a close town on Sunday, and it is not quite what one would call wide open, but the eyes of the town were certainly wide open. This long file of men passed through the streets on the way to a missionary meeting. At the tables they stopped and counted. Exactly four hundred men were sitting there. This made the Joplin meeting the greatest of the team work campaign, most doubling in attendance any other the entire itinerary. It was fitting that it should be in Missouri, our strongest State, and it is natural that it should be in Southwest Missouri, because nowhere has the Brotherhood met with a heartier reception in its endeavor to reach the men than on the part of the pastors in Southwest Missouri. The Joplin meeting was a success, because pastors and laymen apprehended possibilities from the beginning and went to work to reach them. The pastors in four or eight of the leading churches in the vicinity dismissed their evening services that all the men might go. Committee meeting after committee meeting was held. Reports of progress were demanded and motor cars tore up the roads in all directions seeking to rouse men and get them out. From past experience they knew how to do the thing and they did it. They furnished an example of what men can do when they begin to take hold. D. Y. Donaldson presented the cause of Missouri missions in a most effective manner. Mucky and Madden, and Kline, and Macfarlane did their best. Ex-congressman Hackitt offered strongly commendatory resolutions.

GREATER KANSAS CITY

The banquet was held in the commodious Independence Boulevard Church, whose magnificent building and equipment our people in general have become well acquainted through the past. Twenty-seven churches in all were represented and here also we counted among our interested audience Chas. Reign Scoville and members of his Evangelistic party, William Oehger, Chancellor Aylesworth of Cotner University, J. H. Mohorter, W. F. Richardson, G. W. Muckley, T. W. Grafton, Geo. H. Cons, Fletcher Cowherd, James Small and other ministers and laymen well in the forefront of our national life. We dropped Brother Mucey from the Team after his splendid address at Joplin and at Kansas City took on in his place Grant K. Lewis, whose ability as a Team Work Campaigner was well demonstrated in the early portion of the tour. One hundred and fifty-five men partook of the splendid feast served by the ladies and we all went away feeling that it was good to have been there. An automobile ride over the beautiful boulevard system of Kansas City with Burris A. Jenkins at the wheel, was a feature of the next morning. The ride ended at the Union Station barely in time to catch the train for St. Joseph.

JOSEPH, MO.

There is only one city in this great land of ours among the Disciples bearing this name that we honor and this is because there is only one Chilton, Lowe, Capp, Gode and Shreve, and these men are pastors of our churches there. Our people in North-west Missouri count themselves among the most numerous of any section of these United States of America, numbering 30,000 in twenty-five counties. We have more than three hundred churches in this district with half that number of resident pastors. C. A. Lowe is the enthusiastic District Superintendent and by a careful investigation of the operation of his office we are of the firm conviction that there is not another district among our people more efficiently managed and which promises a more brilliant future from a standpoint of systematic labor and tangible results of missionary work. It was good to see these ministers adorned with kitchen aprons spreading yellow butter on white bread and making dainty sandwiches while visiting with the Team at the First Church in the afternoon, but when later after the evening program we were permitted to sample these "ministerial sandwiches" and drink huge cups of "preacher-made coffee," we are willing to take off our hats and say that the St. Joe pastor stands at the head of the Brotherhood in this respect so far as our observations go. The spiritual feast came first so every man was compelled to wait until the speech-making was done for the banquet.

MOINES, IOWA

reminds us of Oklahoma City, but that comparison comes later. J. W. Hill at a reception committee took our grips away from us at the train and to the splendid hotel which was to be our home for the day. The banquet was served by the ladies of the Central Church, where Finis Idleman, a product of Eureka College, fills the pulpit. H. O. Bree-de whose picture adorns the wall of the pastor's study along with that of Peter Ainslie, Doss Smith and others whose likenesses we recall but whose names escape us, was pastor here before Brother Idleman. C. S. Medbury, Dean Haggard, Prof. Denny, Prof. C. N. Kney, State President of the Iowa Brotherhood, and others of the University faculty were present and men came from Waterloo and elsewhere, and when we counted the registration cards we found an even dozen churches represented. State Secretary B. S. Denny, in the welcoming address, showed tremendous possibilities for us as a people in the Hawkeye State.

BEATRICE

nestles among the cornstalks and alfalfa fields of Southern Nebraska. We have a great church at Beatrice, presided over by that pastoral genius, J. E. Davis, and a group of sterling men who believe in progress. When we arrived just before seven o'clock we found nearly three hundred men and women ready to sit down to roast chicken. Senator H. E. Sackett, Nebraska State Brotherhood President, gave the message of welcome and the usual Team Work program was carried out.

The serving of this banquet was fine and the general arrangements carried out with such precision that a vote of thanks was tendered the ladies for it.

LINCOLN

founded in 1867 and named after our martyred President, is Nebraska's capital city and the home of William Jennings Bryan. There are other people who are making Lincoln famous. Harvey H. Harmon, pastor of the First Church; L. C. Oberlies, State Superintendent of Bible Schools; Judge J. B. Strode, County Prosecuting Attorney; Louis R. Smith, general all 'round hustler and ex-President of the Nebraska Christian Business Men's League, which was the name of the State Brotherhood organization before the National Brotherhood was established, and E. F. Snively, Secretary of L. B. D. C. No. 345, Chairman of our Entertainment Committee. Judge Strode was chairman of the evening. Chancellor Aylesworth was flanked by Prof. Bert Wilson, our traveling companion on various occasions, H. O. Pritchard, pastor at Bethany, and a fine group of men from Cotner University and the Bethany Church. W. A. Baldwin, State Secretary, was not with us at Beatrice, but that is a story we do not care to tell. He was at Lincoln all right and made a fine welcoming address. Nebraska is still a frontier state, pregnant with tremendous possibilities, and Secretary Baldwin is the right man for the work. The banquet was served by the University Bible Class, young men students at the State University, and they were dressed in white coats and aprons and made an effective appearance as they dispensed heaped plates of roast chicken and gravy to the two hundred and fifty men gathered about the tables. The color effect, produced by a combination of Brotherhood colors, was a delight to the eye, and each man with a carnation in his button-hole added fragrance to beauty.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.

We landed in the arms of O. L. Cook and a committee from his Brotherhood at a time closely bordering upon the hour announced for the banquet. One hundred men were gathered about the pretty white tables in anticipation of what was later said to be one of the greatest events in the history of the Church. One of the unusual attractions of this Saturday night gathering was the beautiful singing of Delos Smith, who by the way has recently been elected Director of Music of Columbia University and will soon leave to take up his labors in this new and well merited position. His talented wife played his accompaniment. The pastor, O. L. Cook, is not the only good cook in Hutchinson, as was demonstrated to our satisfaction when the chicken dinner was placed before us.

WICHITA

is the second city in population in the great Sunflower State the boasts of three energetic churches among the Disciples. Walter Scott Priest, C. C. Sinclair and E. A. Newby are the pastors. In the afternoon the Campaign program was rendered at the South Lawrence Church, while morning and evening we divided and spoke from the various pulpits. I. W. Gill, who pays the operating expenses of the steamer Oregon, on the Congo, entertained us in his splendid home and gave us a drive behind a Kentucky roadster. This is also the home of Judge J. N. Haymaker, National Director of the Brotherhood, and a Director of Oklahoma Christian University, member of the Kansas State Board, and recognized leader in our religious life.

ENID, OKLA. is the seat of Oklahoma Christian University. W. J. Wright, of Home Missionary fame, now pastor at Enid and Acting President of the University, Prof. Marshall and Mr. Stark with his automobile, met us and miles of paved streets sped beneath us as we viewed the pretty city. We do not know the meaning of the word Enid in the Cherokee language, but in the modern vernacular of the Team Work Quartette it means beautiful homes, modern business houses, tall buildings and pretty streets. We went through the University and saw with naked eye from the top of the main building six or eight surrounding towns spreading out upon the prairies. The Team Work banquet at the church was attended by eighty men, but the crowd soon compelled adjournment to the auditorium, where two hundred listened with interest to the remainder of the speech-making. Brother Wright, experienced in similar gatherings, fathered a resolution to the effect that this was the greatest meeting ever held in Enid.

TULSA is another Indian name whose meaning we have not divined. It lies half a day by slow travel to the East of Enid, through the Cherokee strip with the Arkansas River's sand bars stretching away like brown oceans on one side. The oil city of Oklahoma, surrounded by producing wells and refineries, is a beautiful city, so modern that young men of the community recall the foundations of the business portion. D. A. Wickiser, pastor of our fine church in Tulsa, adds to his multitudinous duties those of State Secretary of Oklahoma Missions. The banquet was served by the good ladies in true Oklahoma style. There are no long horned cattle, cow boys and blanketed Indians in this section, and the city of nearly 30,000 is composed of the most enlightened people from the four corners of the country. Judge Williams, late of Lancaster, Ky., is President of the Local Brotherhood, and introduced us with unusual felicity.

OKLAHOMA in the Indian language means "Beautiful Land," and Oklahoma City, its capital, is beautiful also. The capital city is a beautiful city, too. Its pretty streets, modern buildings, great hotels and business houses, office buildings pointing heavenward, and miles upon miles of beautiful homes with that ever present push and bustle reflecting energy on every har. We stepped off the train and into an automobile, while J. H. O. Smith brought up the rear with our baggage. Charles Reign Scoville has just been to Oklahoma City, and the First Church has had more than 1,500 additions as the result, and the enthusiasm is still at a bubbling point. Two other churches have already been established, and the Third Church will likely be one of the results of the meeting. Fellowship at Oklahoma City is rare. A. R. Spicer came up from Lawton, G. L. Smith dropped down from El Reno, and the afternoon was spent in conference over the great issues which are confronting us as a people at this period in our history. The dinner was served by the ladies in the First Church. No services other than the young people's meetings are held in this church building, because it is too small, the other regular services being held in the great tabernacle where the Scoville meetings were held. The new church building is doubtless ere this under way, and before many months will be occupied by this splendid congregation. Oklahoma is full of folks from North, South and East, who came out in the early days to grow up with the country. When we consider that twenty-one years ago this great land of the red man was all prairie, with an occasional patch of jack oak and sage brush, we sometimes think that the days of miracles are not over. We had a great meeting here, full of enthusiasm from beginning until the end.

FT. WORTH, TEX. is the new home of the Texas Christian University. We were taken in automobiles by some of the trustees out to the new site, and saw the massive concrete buildings being shaped into permanent form. The whole community is hastening the day when the buildings will be completed, the public utilities extended and the college plant become a living reality. We were permitted to address the students at the noon hour, and again at five o'clock, but owing to an unfortunate misunderstanding we had no night meeting in Ft. Worth, but otherwise we had a pleasant day. We were permitted also to view the new Menolia Avenue Church, which is certainly a fine institution, presided over by E. M. Waits, pastor. In Fort Worth we met G. A. Faris, publisher of the Christian Courier, the Texas state paper; Chalmers McPherson, chancellor of the University; President Lockhart and faculty, besides a number of the trustees in attendance upon the Board meeting that day.

DALLAS is the other metropolis of Northern Texas, an hour's ride from Fort Worth towards New Orleans. Here we have a splendid group of churches, with a new mission board organized on the Kansas City plan. This is the home of the Christian Courier, published by J. O. Silburne, Cephas Shelburne and J. C. Mason, and headquarters of the Texas Christian Missionary Society, of which Brother Mason has been Secretary for so long. As we came into Texas we brought rain, and immediately upon our arrival at Dallas a steady downpour began. They told us at the ministers' meeting in the afternoon in the Courier office that Dallas was not a paved city and whenever it rained public services of all kinds were discontinued. We Northerners, so used to rain, did not take seriously the admonition, and as the rain continued increasingly toward the evening hour we buttoned our rain coats and went to church. But those Texans knew what they were talking about, for our audience consisted of six men and the janitor. But we gave a brief portion of the program, which made those present hungry for the real article, which we hope to go back and deliver one of these days. The Dallas Committee had done good work in advertising the meeting, but decided that the supper idea would not be the best, as some of our other points did also, but we are convinced after this tour that the plan suggested for getting and holding the men around a supper table is the wisest one that can be pursued in any locality.

HOUSTON was our last appointment in Texas, and on the campaign. We have two churches in Houston, the First Church, where W. S. Lockhart, late of Fayetteville, Ark., is pastor, and the South Houston Church, where N. Jackson Wright, once of Illinois, is the minister. Houston is a beautiful city full of blooming roses, magnolia and orange trees, and beautiful shrubs. The older section reminds us somewhat of New Orleans, but modern buildings testify to the progressive spirit of its citizens. Our First Church building is a beauty both in style and construction. We have wonderful possibilities there with a cosmopolitan membership. The Team meeting came in the evening with a large gathering. The weather to us was fine, but to the Southerners was considered cold, hence our audience was somewhat curtailed, but it was a most satisfactory meeting from every standpoint. Our two pastors there are hard at work, and with the splendid backing of their membership, will make great strides in time to come.

Thus closes the first tour of the Team Work Campaign. Already the call is coming to make this a permanent affair with several Teams touring different sections of the country. At this writing we are resting from our labors and can only predict that whatever the future may hold, the Team idea has come to stay. May we adapt it to our local congregations until every church is a well rounded, fully developed member of our religious family.

Shellenberger's Iowa Itinerary

Davenport, Iowa, L. B. D. C. No. 318 will entertain the men of the "Tri-cities," Davenport, Rock Island and Moline, March 24th, with Field Secretary Shellenberger as chief speaker. S. M. Perkins, the Pastor at Davenport, is revered as "God father" to the Brotherhood, having proposed the name which we bear.

Burlington, Iowa, L. B. D. C. No. 269 will entertain Mr. Shellenberger and the men of their community Sunday, March 26th. They are in a Bible School Contest with Galesburg L. B. D. C. No. 259. The Pastor, Murvill C. Hutchinson, is in fullest sympathy with the work.

Keokuk L. B. D. C. No. 288, with J. O. Boyd, President, will listen to Field Secretary on March 27th, and from that day on until the latter part of April Mr. Shellenberger will be addressing men of Iowa as follows: Albia, March 30th; Centerville, March 31st; Newton, April 2d; Capitol Hill, Des Moines, April 3d; Cedar Rapids, April 6th; Marshalltown, April 9th; Ames L. B. D. C. No. 320, April 10th; Eldora L. B. D. C. No. 283, April 12th; Mason City, L. B. D. C. No. 306, April 13th; Council Bluffs, L. B. D. C. No. 312, April 16th; Clarinda, L. B. D. C. No. 322, April 17th; Osceola, April 18th. The open dates at this writing are March 28th and 29th, April 4th, 5th, 7th, 14th and the balance of the month, beginning April 19th. These dates are being closed rapidly and if any of our Iowa men's societies or Bible classes within reach of these dates would like a visit from Mr. Shellenberger, a telegram or letter to Kansas City will bring an immediate response, giving terms upon which he will come. Our Iowa brethren are planning to make the best possible use of Mr. Shellenberger. He is to address large gatherings at every point, is to speak at the Y. M. C. A. in Marshalltown and elsewhere.

Buckner's Brotherhood Bible Class at A

And still the class grows. This class springs out of the soil of L. B. D. C. No. 248, organized by S. G. Buckner and the hearty and whole-souled co-operation of the men themselves. They have started a great Berean Brotherhood Class, largest men's Bible class in the world, to a contest. Here's hoping it will

The First Church, Springfield, Mo., has what they call a "Fisherman's Club" with Will Edmondson, President. Upon the occasion of our recent visit with the Team Work Campaign this club and its president did good work in making preparation for the gathering. George L. Our Brotherhood has been very successful in the work that it has taken up. Among the things that we have been most successful in are the opening of a church that has been closed several years and putting a preacher in the field, and the increasing of the general finances of our church about $40 per week to meet the additional expense of a new $50,000 church home dedicated last September. This statement comes from Bernard E. English, Marshalltown, Iowa.

We are in receipt of invitation and program to the dedicatory services of the church at Leroy, Ill., presided over by Ransom Del Brown, pastor, and a group of officers and heads of departments that is delightful to know. Claude E. Hill was master of ceremonies, and greetings were given by four pastors. We congratulate the Leroy brethren upon the completion of such a handsome edifice. It is beautiful from the outside and we anticipate that it is the same within.

The General Secretary attended a meeting of the Iowa State Brotherhood Committee, in Des Moines, on April 15th. President C. N. Denny, H. J. Hostettler, O. M. Pennock, E. F. Leek were among those present. Plans were made for a great Brotherhood day on Tuesday afternoon and evening June 20th, at the State Convention at Des Moines. This committee cast the program in provisional form and arrangements have been made to have a great and effective Brotherhood convention, special emphasis being placed upon the spiritual and practical phases of our life and work in connection with the church.

Among the many Christian papers coming to our desk is a neat sheet called The Christian, published every Friday by Charles D. Uhrich, editor and publisher, Uhrichsville, Ohio. In their issue of February 24th is mentioned the contest between Nelsonville and Uhrichsville and the annual banquet of the Uhrichsville Church. There is one full column of questions which are very sharply pointed.

Some brother in Indiana has been kind enough to send us a couple of poems that are above the standard for the average coming to us. We have tried and tried to find a place for poetry in CHRISTIAN MEN and only once twice succeeded. There seems always to be something else crowding it out. We regret that these cannot be returned to the writer as no address was attached to them.

Attention is called to the song, "A Call to Service," dedicated to the Brotherhood movement by John W. Marshall, one of our evangelists, published elsewhere in this issue. We hope to have a Brotherhood hymnal one of these days, filled entirely with stirring songs both old and new. Such a compilation of songs is much needed and will receive a hearty reception from Brotherhood men everywhere.

While in Des Moines, the General Secretary had the privilege of meeting at luncheon a number of men of the Brotherhood of the Hotel Hill Church, of which H. E. Van Horn is pastor. Those present were Messrs. Burn, Graves, Fillmore and the pastor. It was unfortunate that President Farram and other executive members could not come, but the notice was extremely short. The conference was highly satisfactory to the Secretary in it he learned of one of the best and most progressive men's organizations among churches. We are promised a write-up of their work by one of their members shortly.

A Notable Achievement

The Gideons, otherwise known as the Christian Travelers' Association, have recently secured an order with the American Bible Society for 100,000 Bibles, to be placed in hotels throughout the country. This order, said to be the largest ever placed, and is part of a plan to place a Bible in every bedroom in the country. One-fourth of the order is for San Francisco and the Pacific coast, 25,000 of the Bibles to be shipped in time so as to reach San Francisco in time for the International Sunday-school Convention on the latter part of June. There will be a great Bible School parade of men, every man with a Gideon Bible in hand. At the end of the parade the marchers will build their Bibles into a pyramid upon the platform of the Convention Hall to stand there as an object lesson during the sessions of the Convention.

Conference with President C. N. Kinney, as our Brotherhood work in the University of the church, Des Moines, reveals a splendid amount of activity and a growing efficiency in organization. This is possibly the largest and certainly one of the most effective men's organizations in our entire Brotherhood and we expect to tell the story of its work sometime in the next few months.

A new book, "Men and Religion," from the pen of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Association, contains addresses of Dr. Fayette L. Thompson, John R. Hubert Carleton, Marion Lawrence, Charles W. Gilkey, Francis W. Parker, Ira Smith, James G. Cannon, Elmore Harris, R. Moody, Henry B. F. Macfarland, John H. Stone, George L. Robinson, Graham Taylor and Fred B. Smith, all made at the annual conference of the Committee of Fifty-Seven. A handsome volume of 168 pages, bound in cloth and printed in good type on white paper, and every address is well within the price of book, fifty cents. A wide appeal is urged among Brotherhood officers, pastors, Bible School superintendents and leaders of masculine religious life in all departments of church work. One address by Chas. W. Gilkey, on "The Adolescent Boy," is especially interesting to Boy workers and those in sympathy with the salvation of the boy in the church. This is an exceptional opportunity to obtain a group of addresses by eminent speakers, which, taken collectively, represent the best thoughts of specialists and in a comprehensive way give voice to the best methods of correcting existing evils in our all around religious and social life. Copies may be had by addressing the Men and Religion Forward Movement, 124 East 28th St., New York, or purchased at conferences of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

CHRISTIAN MEN office has been receiving some splendid clubs of subscribers lately, from a number of sources, and as an indication we simply give those that have been received in a few days. We have hundreds of other friends who could give a little bit of their time to presenting the magazine to the men of their congregation, and find it easy to get subscribers. About all it takes is to hold up a copy of the magazine and state what it contains and the price and the men are usually glad of the opportunity to subscribe.

A conference of the General Secretary with Finis Idleman, during his recent visit to Des Moines, brought forth the fact that the men's work of the church just now is being divided into two great Bible Classes, one for young men and one for men of maturer age, each of which enrolls a hundred and twenty-five men, and has an average attendance of ninety to one hundred. They look to the day when these great classes shall coalesce for yet more practical Christian service in a Brotherhood organization.

The annual banquet held last Tuesday evening was a complete success. One hundred and fifty men sat down to a five-course banquet and were most bountifully cared for by the fifty ladies who had the matter in charge. Appropriate music was furnished by Harry Walcamp, the Gabriel Glee Club, and an orchestra of excellent ability. The toasts were responded to by the men appointed to the tasks and everybody went home feeling that the banquet was the event of the season. The next men's meeting will be on March 27th, and George Darsie, of Akron, will address the Association.—Uhrichsville, Ohio, Christian.

Central Christian Brotherhood, Springfield, Mo., where Geo. L. Peters is the pastor, wants especially to know how to handle the Boy Problem and are going after it in real earnest. This is one of the cities touched by the Team Work Campaign, where a most enthusiastic gathering was held on Saturday night.

Dunkirk, N. Y., was recently visited by Field Secretary Shellenberger and resulted in the organization of a Brotherhood of which Wm. E. Briggs is the secretary. This is not a large organization numerically but from the enthusiasm standing forth in the secretary's letters we anticipate that there will be great work ahead for these determined workers.

W. H. McCauley, one of the leading spirits in L. B. D. C. No. 300, Pasadena, Cal., in reporting their annual meeting, says: "Considered from the standpoint of what was actually accomplished last year, I think it may be said that our Brotherhood has been a success. We have, of course, the difficult problem to contend with of getting the members out. The meetings have not been so largely attended as they should be. We hope to be more successful the coming year."

Marshalltown, Iowa, has a Brotherhood with every man in the church a member. We have had thirty-five new members added in the meeting just closed. The following officers have been elected for 1911: President, Dr. G. W. Graham; first Vice-President, Dr. J. R. Bullard; second Vice-President, F. E. Bailey; Recording Secretary, B. E. English; Treasurer, A. R. Welker.

Joel Brown, one of our evangelists, recently held a meeting in a town off the railroad. The church had a fine number of men. He recommended the organization of a Brotherhood, and clinched the thing by placing the general office in correspondence with the leader and already a Brotherhood organization is on the way. Brother Brown writes: "I believe in many of our small churches such organizations will be exceedingly helpful."

Our men at Carthage, Mo., met for temporary organization, elected officers and appointed committees recently. W. C. Williams writes, "Everything looks very favorable for a good, strong Local Brotherhood here. We all feel that to get the full and complete benefit we will want to pay the five cents per month dues and be affiliated with the National Brotherhood."

Oakland, California, has organized a Brotherhood in the Fruitvale Christian Church and the work starts out well. "We began," says E. Washburn, President, "with a banquet and thirty in attendance. Have had two so meetings and the interest seems to be growing. Next Sunday evening we take charge of church services and will use the program 'Boy Problem.' It is a little past time to this subject but it is a vital subject in church, as it is in most churches, and we will make the most of it."

Mrs. Jessie Brown Pounds has written song, "Oh, Man, Where is thy Brother," inscribed to the Berean Bible Class of Nelsonville, Ohio, home of L. B. D. C. No. 311. On a recent Sunday 311 men were present and sang the song with great enthusiasm. Three hundred and thirty-three men heard B. Madden on a recent Sunday and good things are being planned along the Mission line.

This is the song:

Tune, "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."

O Man, Where is Thy Brother?

"The Other Fellow"

Inscribed to the Berean Bible Class of the Nelsonville Christian Church

By MRS. JESSIE BROWN POUNDS

O man, where is thy brother?
Shall he be left to loss?
Go thou and seek that other,
And bring him to the cross!
The Kingly Galilean
Is calling thee today;
Arise, O brave Berean,
That tender voice obey!

Hast thou not fought temptation,
And found a Helper nigh?
And lacking this salvation
Shall he, thy brother, die?
And canst thou dream of heaven,
Nor shrink away dismayed,
If thou hast never given Thy stricken brother aid?

Hast thou not felt within thee
The power to do and dare,
A glorious crown to win thee,
A glorious life to share?
And shall not he, thy brother,
The thrill of vict'ry know?
Go thou and seek that other,
O brave Berean, go!

The men of South Akron Church have effected a Brotherhood organization on the basis of the Brotherhood Covenant at their annual banquet recently, will elect officers at their first meeting next week and get committees lined up. Will start with twenty charter members, about one-half of church men, and get things ready as soon as possible to affiliate properly with the National organization. W. S. Loucks is the managing pastor.

the Fourth Annual Brotherhood, Columbus, Ohio, at their February meeting discussed the program, "Resolved, That it is more necessary that the church provide for the boys than the men." The judges found for the affirmative nine points and for the negative eight points. Then followed one-half dozen five-minute talks along the same line. The Brotherhood also passed a resolution commending State Senator Todd for voting against the Dean Liquor bill and urging State Representative to vote against the bill when he came up in the lower house. The bill was defeated. This bill is said to have caused the greatest fight ever known in the Ohio political arena, but right ultimately prevailed.

O. Wickham is pastor of the Indiana Avenue Church at South Bend and the man who organized a Brotherhood in the M. E. and Christian churches at Rolling Prairie, Ind., some months ago, which, by the way, is in a thriving condition and doing splendid work. Substantiation of the saying: Once a Brotherhood pastor always a Brotherhood pastor," is the following of a meeting furnished by

The Brotherhood of the Indiana Avenue Church met in banquet Monday, March 13th. The ladies of the church prepared a splendid supper to which about sixty men and women were invited. The supper was served at seven o'clock. The supper was served by the young men of the Baraca class, the ladies were privileged to take seats with their husbands. After the supper Rev. Decker, pastor of the First Baptist Church of that city, gave a very interesting and helpful address on "The Ideal Home," short addresses being given by others present on the same subject. Rev. Imell, of the Studebaker school, spoke on the training of the child in the home. The day-school orchestra furnished music for the occasion. At the opening of the program songs of the Brotherhood song, The Man of the Age, were distributed and all joined heartily in the singing. Brother Crabil, the postmaster, is the president, and takes a deep interest in the Brotherhood work, though a member of the Presbyterian Church. Because of other duties he will not accept the office for another term and the men all regret this, but are pleased to know that he will still be a member in the Brotherhood. The matter of a new class has been taken up and the adult class will be divided and the men will organize a Brotherhood class, Brother Hicks, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will be the teacher of the new class.

John W. Marshall, of Chicago, is one of our faithful Evangelists and Prof. J. D. Bowles, of Mine, Texas, is a Song Evangelist. At the meeting held by these brethren at Tulsa, Mo., they were assisted by D. F. Elmer, of Altoona, Ala., and Earl C. Motter, of Lyons, Kan., forming a quartette of workers and singers. A souvenir booklet of the meetings contains a number of stirring masculine songs. One, "A Call to Service," dedicated to the Brotherhood Movement, was published last month.

Among the boy workers of the Disciples of Christ, A. W. Conner, of Bicknell, Ind., stands well to the forefront. Readers of CHRISTIAN MEN are well acquainted with his successful work at Eureka, Ill., and elsewhere, but his latest triumph is vividly portrayed by two full columns in the Mt. Carmel, Illinois, Republican, which says:

The boys' campaign just closed has been the greatest campaign for moral uplift, for righteousness, for the good of boyhood and manhood that has ever been held in Mt. Carmel. Saturday morning from 8:30 until 12 o'clock the boys were going through the dungeon. This was a great experience for them. The banquet in the evening was a complete success. Plates were laid for more than 200 and all were taken. Saturday evening Mr. Conner lectured upon "Lessons from Washington's Monument." Sunday at three o'clock was a meeting for boys. Subject, "The Happy Kid." At four o'clock was a meeting for men. The evening meeting was the grand climax to the campaign. A feature of the campaign was the singing of Miss Seeger, who has assisted Mr. Conner in many of his campaigns.

The men of Magnolia Avenue Church, Los Angeles, met March 13th to organize a Brotherhood. J. P. McKnight is the Pastor and S. Brooks Fisher, Secretary.

Fort Scott, Kansas, where W. Y. Allen ministers will organize a Brotherhood the first Sunday in April. It is possible the General Secretary will be present.

Field Secretary Shellenberger addressed a great banquet at Marion, Indiana, March 10th. J. P. Myers is the Pastor and great preparations were made for the banquet, the details of which have not come to hand at this writing.

Rockford, Ill., L. B. D. C. No. 251 is planning a great gathering of men for March 23d with Field Secretary Shellenberger with them. W. B. Clemmer, the Pastor, has just concluded a meeting and prospecting for a new building. The enthusiasm for the Brotherhood speaks from the pages of their weekly calendar and some other up-to-date printed matter.

Oxford, Ind., Jesse Guy Smith, Pastor, is lining up its men for Brotherhood work. Secretary Shellenberger was with them March 22d.

"My old card is No. 55. This I desire to still retain as I feel anxious for the small number. I have had card and pin for about two years and have worn them daily in my travels and work and yesterday was the first time I had the pleasure of meeting a brother with the card and pin. It was a delight, I assure you. The Southland is a great country and you could not appreciate what it means to go a long time and not meet a Brotherhood man unless you were placed under similar conditions."—B. F. ARCHER, Rome, Ga.

L. B. D. C. No. 266 at Tacoma, Wash, recently held their annual meeting and elected Alvin W. Sexsmith, president; E. F. Wright and U. E. Harmon, vice-presidents; Charles Arnold, secretary, and W. Arnold, treasurer. This is one of the live groups of men of the Pacific Northwest. All of the men of the Brotherhood read the magazine and they are growing in knowledge and grace by doing regular Brotherhood work at all times.

Our men are still in the ring. In connection with the Missionary Rally held here Saturday by Brother McLean, assisted by missionaries Dr. A. L. Shelton and Brother C. S. Weaver, our Brotherhood held a banquet in the evening at which about sixty men sat. The attendance would have been much larger had it been on any other night of the week. Knoxville Brotherhood sent over thirteen men. Our men again took the lead in pledging for the Living Link missionary and with pledges received Sunday, we feel confident that the church will easily maintain its missionary, Mrs. W. R. Hunt, at Wuhu, China, another year, so writes Jas. A. Barnett, L. B. D. C. No. 259, Galesburg, Ill.

At Aurora, Neb., where Alden Lee Hill is pastor, a meeting of men was held for the purpose of organizing a Brotherhood. They set their stakes for thirty charter members, then moved it to fifty and at the next Sunday morning service the pastor challenged the men to make it seventy-five. They will affiliate with the General Brotherhood at once with seventy-five or more charter members. The officers are: Dr. G. H. Marvel, President; A. W. Hickman, Vice-President; C. D. Ramel, Secretary; Thos. Graham, Treasurer. Dr. G. H. Marvel presided over the meeting. The Hamilton County Register devoted nearly a column to the meeting, making a somewhat extended report of the pastor's address of the evening on "Man and His Mission."

L. B. D. C. No. 288, Keokuk, Iowa, is a bundle of live wires. So much so that both daily papers of Keokuk devoted over a half column each in reporting the annual meeting recently, at which the following officers were elected: J. O. Boyd, President; Dr. H. H. Stafford, Vice-President; E. L. Aldrich, Secretary; D. A. Uhler, Treasurer. "After the banquet," the Gate City says, "an immensely interesting program was rendered, also a debate: 'Resolved, that it is more necessary for the church to provide for its boys than to provide for its men.' The affirmative was taken by Messrs. John Peterson, Roy Whaley and Frank McMillan, and the negative side was strongly argued by Messrs. L. D. Davidson and Chas. Altes." Frank R. Bulman, J. P. Peterson and A. G. Hostetter looked after the banquet and President J. O. Boyd presided as toastmaster. Dr. H. H. Stafford spoke on "The History and Teachings of Disciples of Christ" and Messrs. Chas. B. Henry Walker, and Rev. Lilley spoke in general way of the objects and purposes of the Brotherhood organization.

Ashtabula, Ohio, is the home of L. B. D. C. No. 248, C. L. Ackerman, secretary; Dr. R. Weatherford, president, and S. G. Buck, Brotherhood pastor. The quarterly report shows an enrollment of 50 men in the Brotherhood and 220 in the Bible Classes. They held six meetings during the quarter with an average attendance of 35, two social meetings with an average attendance of 85, made 30 visits to the sick, sent 6 floral offerings, assisted cases with fraternal aid and in 2 cases employment was furnished. These figures speak louder than mere words and show the opportunities opening up for Brotherhood men every hand. The Brotherhood Class is in contest with the Berean Bible Class, Nelsonville, Ohio, at present the largest in the Brotherhood. We have a picture of the Ashtabula Class which we expect to present to CHRISTIAN MEN readers in this issue.

The gymnasium in the new Bible School Addition to the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, was opened to the men of the church on February 2. Boy's work has been undertaken by L. B. D. C. No. 1, and Chas. B. Hahn, whose work has been so successful in Anderson and Hammond, Ind., Salt Lake City, and elsewhere, has been engaged as leader in the boy's movement. The Brotherhood recently entertained in banquet the men who came into the church during the Scoville meetings. As a result, twenty-five new members of the Brotherhood were enlisted. The next banquet of the men will be held within a month, and every man will be requested to bring a member of the juvenile Brotherhood other than his own. On a recent Sunday evening a number of men of the Brotherhood made addresses on the origin and scope of the Brotherhood movement.

Among the live Brotherhoods of Southern California is L. B. D. C. No. 300 at Pasadena of which J. R. Gilbert is the newly-elected President. John G. Plank first Vice-President, W. O. Howe second Vice-President, J. A. Copeland, Treasurer, and F. C. Robinson, Secretary. Their annual banquet and business meeting was held recently and C. C. Chapman, National Director of the General Brotherhood, and F. M. Rogers, our pastor at Long Beach, were the orators of the occasion. Brother Rogers used to be back in Illinois where many good men come from, so we were not surprised at this wise selection. There were fifty-five men present and the general feeling prevailed that the Brotherhood was greatly strengthened and ready for still enlarged service. All of the elected officers are veterans in the work and enthusiastic about the opportunities for 1911. One Brother is an alderman, another one is already, on will be one, so they will keep in touch on civic matters. During the past year the Brotherhood bought a carpet for the Sunday-school room, also subscribed for $360 worth of the church's indebtedness. W. H. McCaul, retiring President, and with a good record behind him, gives us this news note.

B. D. C. No. 346, Monmouth, Ill., reports satisfactory progress during the last year. They are gradually getting the Brotherhood organized for work adapted to conditions prevailing in the local church. The year has been against them a time or two meeting nights, but taking everything into consideration, they report themselves pretty satisfied all around.

From the start, they decided to make the Bible Class a feature of their work for the year, and they have succeeded in getting a Bible Class started. This has been done in the direction of the Bible School Committee of the Brotherhood, which has an excellent chairman, and they expect soon to have much to be proud of. They have adapted the old Constitution very carefully to their needs and are taking every step carefully. This is a guarantee of future success.

Once upon a time there was a prosperous, up-to-date church that had no men's Brotherhood. Now just think of that in this day of universal brotherhoods!

Well, what happened to that careless, Brotherhoodless church? I'll tell you. A man named Shellenberger—J. K., I think it was—swooped down on that church like a mischievous parent on a lazy boy, and took it by the scruff of the neck and made it have a Brotherhood. Wouldn't take "No" for an answer. Knew just what that church needed, and he started the ball rolling one night with a little handful of charter members, governed by the best set of officers to be found anywhere.

Then what happened? Why, this: Inside a few months the society (partly because of excellent officers) grew from that little handful to a great big, elephantine society of one hundred and forty men!

Can you beat it?

And what society is this? Why, that of the Central Christian Church of New Albany, Ind. And when they held their annual banquet the last Monday night in February, one hundred of these men sat down to a splendid three-course banquet in the church dining room and listened to a half dozen of the brightest, wittiest and most uplifting talks that you could want, while they were being served by their excellent wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts. And this wasn't all. There was a solo by one of the sweethearts and sisters and numerous toasts that did the listeners much good.

And above it all and around it all was that genial fellowship and good feeling that comes in such abundant measure when good fellows get together.

HARVEY PEAKE, Corresponding Secretary.

A Meeting For Boys

Say, whoever figured out that idea of a Brotherhood meeting for boys was no slow one. He was no stand-patter. He is sure a progressive. It was the best meeting we have had at our Lincoln, Neb., Berean Brotherhood meeting. I suppose it was so good because the law of service entered into it so largely. It was the happiest bunch of men you ever saw—fifty of them. And it was the happiest bunch of boys ever—fifty of them, too. How those boys—I mean men—did eat! The staid pastor at one end of the table, pounding with his fork in clenched fist calling loudly for more bread; the retiring president, Judge J. B. Strode, at the other end of the table, deftly eating stuffed olives off his knife; and the new president, two hundred and thirty-five pounds in the shade, as center rush, insisting that he and his boy drew the smallest helpings of anybody—it was a hilariously happy, good time. Every man had to bring a boy from ten to sixteen with him or be fined heavily. A lasting bond of affection and confidence was declared to exist between each man and his boy, this bond not to expire with the evening, but to last over until man and boy became partners and chums. Ira Miller insisted upon bringing his own boy, four months old, but we wouldn't let him, so he brought five other boys of the required age, so as to make up. In the debate Paul Rowan and Roy True declared that the church owes a greater duty to its boys than to its men, and defeated M. D. Owens and E. F. Snavely by over one hundred yards. Every speech was limited to five minutes, the business was dispatched promptly; and those present said the whole session was as crisp as a newly baked Takoma biscuit. All was over by 8:45 and the happy boys and the happier men dispersed.

BIBLE SCHOOL NOTES

The Brotherhood Class at L. B. D. C. No. 311, Philadelphia, Pa., is in a contest with the Brotherhood Class of Jackson Avenue Church, L. B. D. C. No. 262, Kansas City, and we hope to have the facts of the contest to present in this issue.

The Brotherhood Class at Hopkins, Mo., orders a Brotherhood Bible Class pennant and 100 Bible Class Buttons. A letter from Pastor R. E. Snodgrass reads: "We had intended organizing our Brotherhood Class New Year's day but the smallpox kept us from our regular services for over five Sundays."

Kansas wants ten thousand new Bible School pupils by October, 1911. And these in the schools of our own churches without regard to any of the other religious bodies. This call is emphasized by a neat folder over the signature of Myron C. Settle, Kansas Bible School Superintendent, which is full of brass tacks. We doubt not that they will succeed abundantly.

"The famous Berean Class of Nelsonville received a challenge from the Buckner Class of Ashtabula by telegraph last Sunday. The challenge was immediately accepted and the battle is on. If Nelsonville is to lose the championship we are glad that it will at least not go out of the State. But, by the way, Nelsonville has not lost yet."—The Christian, Uhrichsville, Ohio.

Attention of Local Brotherhoods, Men's Associations and Adult Bible Classes is called to the Account Books prepared for Brotherhoods and Adult Classes by the Brotherhood General Office. Nothing assists in local church work like a record of members and finances. Without a satisfactory record, there is apt to be very little system in a society or Bible Class. These books were prepared for use in either Brotherhoods or Bible Classes, and the item of cost is small when compared to the benefits derived. Already many organizations have ordered the books and we ought to have every Men's Class and Brotherhood throughout the country using these books. This is one of the first steps toward progressive Bible Class work.

A unique program comes to our desk from the Fifth Annual Patriotic Supper of the Young Men's Bible Class at Minerva, Ohio, where E. N. Duty, late of Milwaukee, is pastor and O. M. Sala superintendent of the Sunday school. The program is in three colors, white and blue, tied with cord of same color while a red, white and blue ribbon attaches a Lincoln penny to the inside cover. A counterfeit presentment of our martyred president, Lincoln, appears on the outside cover. The program within is delightful to contemplate with five addresses by five men, including the mayor of the city, and followed by four toasts upon gripping subjects. R. H. Meade is the president of the class; Wm. Jones, vice-president; Wayne Fishel, secretary; Ernest Unkefer, treasurer. Chas. B. Sala is the teacher.

The Brotherhood Bible Class, Newton, Iowa, taught by E. F. Leake, has issued a neat folder giving the objects and aims of the class, a weekly calendar and an outline of the class work. Their meeting on April 9th is called the Optimists' Meeting. Every man is urged to wear a bright necktie and a broad smile to this meeting. The class censor, E. C. Jones, will impose a fine of from 25 cents to $1.00 on any fellow who frowns or complains about anything at this session. Their meeting on April 16th will be "Big Brothers' Meeting," at which there will be a paper by one of Newton's leading physicians. April 23d will be Business Men's Meeting. The defects of modern church buildings will be pointed out and the treasurer of the church will answer any and all questions regarding financial methods and general condition of the church. April 30th they will

Keokuk, Iowa, we have had a Brotherhood for a number of months with J. O. Boyd, President, and R. W. Lilly, Brotherhood pastor.
In recent letter Brother Boyd gives the situation regarding the relation of the Brotherhood and the Brotherhood Bible Class in language which may be found illuminating to churches. "We have organized a Brotherhood Class in the Bible School. It began on first Sunday in January and has reached attendance of 40. We anticipate the success of the conference on the Adult Bible Classes and the Brotherhood and put their plan in operation by appointing a committee of three live men as an executive committee of the Brotherhood and they are also the executive committee for the Brotherhood Classes. They coöperate with the officers of other organizations and make a good connecting link. They are hustlers and we are going to have a large class, the largest in the city.
We have no doubt that this plan will prove abundantly successful and shall follow them with eager anticipation."

land. Last Sunday they had 198 in Buckle Brotherhood class. Next Sunday they expect to have over 200. "Our Men's Class," first as just a large class of men and nothing to it, but after the people have seen the results we have had with our Brotherhood Bible Class they look upon us in a different light. About a month ago we started to have song service in our class and it was a great success. The men have taken a great interest in this song service."

Program for Local Brotherhoods April, 1911

SPECIAL PROGRAM

Men's Day in the Church

To be observed by all churches, whether you have a Local Brotherhood, Men's Association, Bible Class, or no organization of men.

7:00 A. M. Opening service of prayer for men and boys. In preparation for this meeting have your devotional committee secure pledges of men to attend, every man bringing a boy over ten and under sixteen years, to the service.

Devotional—Read the Third Psalm.

6. Prayer for the pastor and workers.

9. Benediction and silent prayer, all seated.

9 Bible Study Hour.

Great preparation should be made for this service. The day should be advertised thoroughly some weeks in advance, and the Bible Study Hour should be emphasized with red letters. Have great classes of boys taught by men. Men's class or classes should be addressed by the strongest possible leaders. The evangelistic spirit should be manifest in every word and deed. Large banners should be unfurled before their eyes. Fill the room with suggestive mottoes. Appeal to the heroic. (No interim.)

0 Evangelistic Hour.

2. Hymn—"Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus."
3. Morning Prayer.
4. Hymn—"Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?"
5. The Evangelistic Sermon.

6:30 The Christian Endeavor Service.

Make it a joint service of Junior and Senior societies, with one minute talks by three past members, three present members and three future members of the Senior society, on the regular subject of the evening. Prepare for this some weeks in advance and you will have an inspiring service. Close with a prayer for men and boys, that they may be brought into a close fellowship with God.

After Service

Some of the sweetest services are those coming after a full day of evangelistic effort. Meet with the workers among men and boys, inviting all who have obeyed the gospel during the day to meet with you in a sweet season of communion with God. Do not make this after-service long, but fill every moment with the spirit of devotion and consecration. In this ten minutes try to get just a little closer to the Master than has been possible during the other sessions of the day.

Fellowship in Service

The National Brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ has rendered a distinct service to our co-operative work in its promotion of the "Team Work Campaign" in behalf of the whole Missionary and Benevolent enterprises carried on by the Churches of Christ. Its martial bugle call, "All the Men of all the Church at all the Church's Work," is exemplified in this timely effort to give "information, inspiration and realization" to the men of our churches. No one of the thousands of men whose hearts felt the thrill of these stirring speeches would accuse the Brotherhood of a dearth in definiteness of aim or of work.

LESSON 2—APRIL 9.

“ELISHA’S HEAVENLY DEFENDERS.”

—2 KINGS 6:8-23.

American Revised

P. H. WELSHIMER

8 Now the king of Syria was warring against Israel; and he took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my camp. 9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are coming down. And the king of Israel sent to the place which the man of God told him of, and warned him of; and he saved himself there, not once nor twice. 11 And the part of the king of Syria was sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, Will ye not show me which of us is for the king of Israel? 12 And one of his servants said, Nay, my lord, O king; but Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bed-chamber. 13 And he said, Go and see where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in Dothan. 14 Therefore sent he thither horses, and chariots, and a great host; and they came by night, and compassed the city about. And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, a host with horses and chariots was round about the city. And his servant said unto him, Alas, my master! how shall we do? 16 And he answered, Fear not; for they that are with us are more than they that are with them. 17 And Elisha prayed, and said, Jehovah, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And Jehovah opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw; and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha. 18 And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto Jehovah, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with blindness. And he smote them with blindness, according to the word of Elisha. 19 And Elisha said unto them, This is not the way, neither is this the city; follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. And he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, Jehovah, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And Jehovah opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria. 21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them? 22 And he answered, Thou shalt not smite them: wouldst thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? set bread and water before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master. 23 And he prepared great provision for them; and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. And the bands of Syria came no more into the land of Israel.

Time. In the reign of Jehoram, about 895 B. C. Place. Dothan.

Introduction. Read the entire sixth chapter of second Kings. Dothan was a small town, ten miles north of Samaria. The name means two wells, and two wells are found in the valley south of the village. This is the Dothan where Joseph's brothers were tending their flocks when they seized and sold him to the Midianite merchants.

Explanatory. 8—Ben-hadad was king of Syria. Jehoram was king of Israel. It is quite probable that this lesson was some time after the healing of Naaman. 9—Elisha was a man of God. By inspiration, he knew the movements of the Syrians. It was profitable to Israel to have a man of God in her midst at this time. 10—Jehoram, through his troops, watched the spot spoken of by Elisha. 11—Ben-hadad knew that his plot was given away, and, in calling his servants together, attempted to see who was false. 12—Elisha's fame had spread throughout Syria. His healing Naaman had made him well known. It was pointed out that Elisha had told even the secret things of the Syrian king. 13—Notwithstanding Elisha was a man of God, as was evidenced by his miraculous powers, Ben-hadad was foolish enough to think he could thwart his plans. 14—The village of Dothan in the morning was surrounded by a great army.

15—This servant of Elisha was not Gehazi, but another. Gehazi had been dismissed, for he was a grafter. The new servant felt his weakness, and thought of Elisha and himself endeavoring to cope with the whole army. 16—Here Elisha's faith in God is manifest. 17—What a simple prayer, and how effective. They were not literal horses and chariots, but were symbolical of the great power of Jehovah in helping His own. 18—How feeble were the people in their rebellion against God. Elisha's prayer was answered, and blindness fell upon the multitudes. 19—It would seem that they were not aware of the fact that they were in the presence of Elisha, and, blind, they followed him to Samaria. 20—Within the gates of the capital their eyes were opened, and they saw the perilous position. 21—Jehoram was also at the mercy of Elisha, and asks advice concerning his treatment of the enemy. 22-23—Elisha heaped coals of fire on their heads by feeding them and giving them drink. Then they were sent home.

Lessons from the Lesson

Elisha was a patriot. His supernatural knowledge was used for the good of his country. It was well for Jehoram that the man he knew could point out to him the dangerous spot. There are dangerous places men must pass all along life's road. By a careful study of God's Word these are pointed out. Wherever you see the sign, "Avoid the very appearance of evil," turn away, for there the enemy lurks. How weak a thing is man when he rebels against God and attempts to overthrow God's plans and defeat His purposes. Here was one humble man, Elisha, who, with God, was mightier than the Syrian army. Jehovah knew His men and was interested in their work many hundred years ago. He is unchangeable and knows us the same today. As He worked through men then, He works through men now. If we will have God use us to do much work for Him we must be His servant, and surrender absolutely to Him. What wonders God accomplished through one consecrated man. If we could but see the powers that God throws about us for protection and for good we would never hesitate; we would never go limping through life; we would never play the part of coward, but courageously would go forth with as steady a tread as did Elisha when he led the blind hosts through the gates of Samaria.

Questions for Class Use

Who was king of Syria? Of Israel? Where was Gehazi at this time? What was the stand of Elisha with Jehoram? What was Jehoram's religion? What good thing had Elisha done for Syria? Name all the acts of mercy you can that up to this time had been done by Elisha. In what does he differ from Elijah? What do you know of Elisha's appearance? What was the meaning of the vision which the young man had? What lesson do you get from the treatment Elisha accorded the captured army?

LESSON 3—APRIL 16.

"JOASH, THE BOY KING, CROWNED IN JUDAH."—2 KINGS 11:1-20.

PRINTED TEXT, 2 KINGS 11:9-20.

9 And the captains over hundreds did according to all that Jehoiada the priest commanded; and they took every man his men, those that were come in on the sabbath, with those that were to go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest. 10 And the priest delivered to the captains over hundreds the spears and shields that had been king David's, which were in the house of Jehovah. 11 And the guard stood, every man with his weapons in his hand, from the right side of the house to the left side of the house, along by the altar and the house, by the king round about. 12 Then he brought out the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and gave him the testimony; and they made him king, and anointed him, and they clapped their hands, and said, Long live the king.

13 And when Athaliah heard the noise of the guard and of the people, she came to the people into the house of Jehovah;

14 and she looked, and, behold, the king stood by the pillar, as the manner was; and the captains and the trumpets by the king; and all the people of the land rejoiced, and blew trumpets. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and cried, Treason! treason! 15 And Jehoiada the priest commanded the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth between the ranks; and him that followeth her slay with the sword. For the priest said, Let her not be slain in the house of Jehovah. 16 So they made way for her; and she went by the way of the horses' entry to the king's house: and there was she slain.

17 And Jehoiada made a covenant between Jehovah and the king and the people, that they should be Jehovah's people; between the king also and the people. 18 And all the people of the land went to the house of Baal, and break it down; his altars and his images break they in pieces.

thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. And the priest appointed officers over the house of Jehoshaphat. 19 And he took the captains over hundreds, and the Carites, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of Jehovah, and came by the way of the gate of the guard unto the king's house. And he sat on the throne of the kings. 20 So all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet. And Athaliah they had slain with the sword at the king's house.

Golden Text. "Blessed are they that keep His testimonies and that seek Him with the whole heart."—Psalm 119:2.

Time. 887 B. C. Place. The Temple.

Introduction. Jehoshaphat, the good king of Judah, gave his son, Jehoram, in marriage to Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab and Jezebel. On the death of Jehoshaphat, Jehoram came to the throne, and the stream of poisonous idolatry in Israel was now turned into Judah. Jehoram slew all his brethren and many of the princes of Israel. This young man of thirty-two years reigned eight years. He left the teaching of his father and followed that of his father-in-law. Read 2 Chron. 21, and 2 Kings eighth and eleventh chapters. After eight years he succumbed to an incurable disease. 2 Chron. 2:18-19. Ahaziah, his son, succeeded him. After a short reign, while on a visit to an uncle in Jezreel, who was king of Israel, he, with his uncle, was slain by Jehu. When Ahaziah came to the throne, his mother, Athaliah, became the queen mother, the first woman in the land. Upon the death of her son she lost this distinction, and, disliking to be retired, she slew her grandchildren to keep them from coming to the throne, and thus she held the power for six years. Jehoram had a daughter, Jehosheba, by another wife. She was the wife of Jehoiada, the high priest, and a half-sister of Ahaziah. She took her little nephew, Joash, and hid him in a storage room in the temple; then later transferred him to another room in the temple, where for six years he was kept in seclusion. This was all unknown to Athaliah, who supposed she had killed all of her grandchildren. Read 2 Chron. 22:11. Verses 4 to 8 give us a description of Jehoiada making known that Joash was living, and the preparation for introducing him to his grandmother when she should appear in the temple.

Explanatory. 9—The names of the five captains are given in 2 Chron. 23:1. 10—David's weapons were now to be used in defense of his own house. It was customary to keep captured weapons as trophies in the temple. 1 Sam. 21:9. 11-12—The little seven-year-old boy, Joash, is now led out in the presence of the multitude, surrounded by the soldiers, and is crowned king. 13—After six years of glory and power Athaliah now learns that the wage of sin is death. 14—The young king stood in the place where kings were accustomed to stand when crowned; hence at a glance Athaliah knew the meaning of it all. She realized that all was lost, and cried, "Treason! Treason!" But remember, this same old murderous villain, for the sake of prominence and a little power, had killed, as she thought, all her grandchildren. Now imagine her horror when she beholds the youngest still living, wearing the kingly crown. 15—Murder must not be committed in the temple, hence none were to follow Athaliah. 16—And she was slain outside the temple, near the king's house. 17—Jehoiada was inaugurating a movement to bring back the true worship of Jehovah, to make the people loyal to God and to their king. 18—The destruction of Baal and Baal worship was now begun. This shows what the right leader can do. The captains, the foreign troops, the guard and the people now accompanied the young king to the palace. 19—The people rejoiced because the worship of Jehovah was again restored and a descendant of David put on the throne.

Thoughts on the Lesson

This is not the only time that a good woman has saved the day. When Athaliah raised her murderous hand to slay her grandchildren, that she might continue in power, her husband's daughter, Jehosheba, picked up the baby boy, Joash, and for seven years kept him in hiding. No doubt all this time Athaliah was rejoicing, thinking that there was none to take from her her glory. What a miserable set of cowards the people of that day were to tolerate such an old murderess on the throne. It shows us the length to which people sometimes go for a little glory and worldly applause, but "The way of the transgressor is hard." God never sleeps. In the temple, whose worship had so long been neglected, and in a land where idolatry was now talking abroad, a good woman was kindly caring for a little boy who would soon win the hearts of all the people and turn them again to the true God. Joash owed his life to good Jehosheba. He was also indebted to her for his ability. She was his good teacher, and we can rest assured that during those years in which he walked within the shadow of this good woman she lost no opportunity of impressing upon his youthful mind a great love for Jehovah and the importance of leading Judah in the ways of righteousness. Her teaching was not in vain, as will be seen in the work of the young king. We have seen Ahab and Jezebel one day in luxury and happiness notwithstanding all their meanness; but in a few years we behold Ahab slain, Jezebel's blood licked up by the dogs in the street, their son Jehoram killed, and their son-in-law Jehoram dying of an incurable disease, their daughter Athaliah slain near the king's house in Jerusalem; thus came to an end their abominable rule, and over it all God wrote Ichabod, for their glory had departed. Such is the way of the transgressor.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Jehoshaphat? What was the name of his son? Who was Ahaziah? Athaliah? Jehosheba? Joash? How was Joash's life spared? Why did Athaliah kill her grandchildren? What became of Athaliah?

LESSON 4—APRIL 23.

"JOASH REPAIRS THE TEMPLE."—2 KINGS 12:1-16.

Read chapters 12 and 17, also 2 Chron. 24th chapter.

1 In the seventh year of Jehu began Jehoash to reign; and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem; and his mother's name was Zibiah of Beersheba. 2 And Jehoash did that which was right in the eyes of Jehovah all his days wherein Jehoiada the priest instructed him. 3 Howbeit the high places were not taken away; the people still sacrificed and burnt incense in the high places.

4 And Jehoash said to the priests, All the money of the hallowed things that is brought into the house of Jehovah, in current money, the money of the persons for whom each man is rated, and all the money that it cometh into any man's heart to bring into the house of Jehovah, 5 let the priests take it to them, every man from his acquaintance; and they shall repair the breaches of the house, wheresoever any breach shall be found. 6 But it was so, that in the three and twentieth year of king Jehoash the priests had not repaired the breaches of the house. 7 Then king Jehoash called for Jehoiada the priest, and for the other priests, and said unto them, Why repair ye not the breaches of the house? now therefore take no more money from your acquaintance, but deliver it for the breaches of the house. 8 And the priests consented that they should take no more money from the people; neither repair the breaches of the house.

9 But Jehoiada the priest took a chest, and bored a hole in the lid of it, and set it beside the altar, on the right side as one cometh into the house of Jehovah; and the priests that kept the threshold put therein all the money that was brought into the house of Jehovah. 10 And it was so, when they saw that there was much money in the chest, that the king's scribe and the high priest came up, and they put up in bags and counted the money that was found in the house of Jehovah. 11 And they gave the money that was weighed out into the hands of them that did the work, that had the oversight of the house of Jehovah: and they paid out to the carpenters and the builders that wrought upon the house of Jehovah. 12 and to the masons and the hewers of stone, and for buying timber and hewer stone to repair the breaches of the house of Jehovah, and for all that was laid out for the house to repair it. 13 But there were not made for the house of Jehovah cups of silver, snuffers, basins, trumpets, any vessels of gold, or vessels of silver, of the money that was brought into the house of Jehovah; 14 for they gave that to them that did the work, and repaired therewith the house of Jehovah. 15 Moreover they reckoned not with the men, into whose hand they delivered the money to give to them that did the work; for they dealt faithfully. 16 The money for the trespass-offerings, and the money for the sin offerings, was not brought into the house of Jehovah; it was the priests'.

Golden Text: "Then the people rejoiced for that they offered willingly."—2 Chron. 29:9.

Time. 864 B. C. Place. Jerusalem.

Introduction. Joash began to reign at the age of seven. Jehoiada, the high priest, was regent. The temple was more than a century old. The building had become dilapidated. The sons of Athaliah had robbed it of its sacred utensils and furniture. 2 Chron. 24:7. When Joash came to manhood he began at once the repair of the sacred building.

Explanatory. 1—The names of mothers of kings were given because she was the first woman in the land. 2—Joash reigned forty years. As long as he had the good instruction of the priest, Jehoiada, he did what was right. Much depends upon our environment. 3—The law commanded there should be one altar, and that at Jerusalem. Altars previously built for idolatry were now used for the worship of Jehovah. 4-5—Joash had a warm feeling for the temple. Why shouldn't he? It had protected him the days of his hiding. Had it not been for the wife of the good priest his life would have been taken. It is strange that the priest did not suggest repairing the temple. It was a case in which the priest doubtless lacked business ability or had gotten in a rut and had become used to seeing things in a dilapidated condition and did not care. Three sources were specified from which money was to be received—from poll tax, payment of their vows, and free-will offerings. The priests and Levites were to go into all the cities and solicit money from all their friends. 2 Chron. 24:5. 7—When the king was thirty years of age, doubtless sometime after he had given orders for the temple to be repaired, nothing had yet been done. They were commanded to do no more soliciting, but to depend upon the free gifts of the people. 8—Realizing their inability, they were glad to surrender to one who could do the work. 9—2 Chron. 24:8 we learn that the king commanded that a chest be placed beside the altar. All money was handed to the priest, and he now dropped it in the chest. 10—Here was a business-like proposition. The money was put into sacks, and the king's scribe and the high priest worked together, each keeping a record. Neither was afraid to be watched by the other. 11-12—They paid the bills. 13-14—This money raised was only used for repairs, not for fixtures. 15—The men who did the work were honest and received a just recompense for their labors.

Comments on the Lesson

Joash did well so long as under the influence of Jehoiada. We see him at his best in today's lesson. 2 Chron. 24:17 we learn he later permitted the princes of Judah to restore the worship of Asherim, and he later commanded Zechariah, the son of Jehoiada, his benefactor, to be stoned to death because he had reproved him for his sin. He was a weak man and became wicked, and because of this was slain by his subjects. They did not even bury him in the royal sepulchre. We have today a good lesson on caring for the house of Jehovah. The temple was sacred; it was many years in building, cost much, and during the process of building not a sound of a hammer was heard. Joash gives us a fine lesson on money raising. It was a systematic offering; all the people had part. Absolute honesty prevailed both in raising money and paying debts. One's faithfulness to Christ can often be determined by the way in which he gives.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Joash? How long did he reign and how long was he faithful? Who was his adviser? How did he treat that adviser's son in the end? What was Joash's great sin? Analyze his character. What were his strong and weak traits? What lesson does he give us on church finances? Why had the temple been so long neglected?

LESSON 5—APRIL 30.

“GOD'S PITY FOR THE HEATHEN.”—JONAH 3:1; 4:11.

PRINTED TEXT, JONAH 3:5-10; 4:1-11.

Foreign Missionary Lesson.

5 And the people of Nineveh believed God; and they proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them. 6 And the tidings reached the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. 7 And he made proclamation and published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything; let them not feed, nor drink water; 8 but let them be covered with sackcloth, both man and beast, and let them cry mightily unto God; yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in his hands. 9 Who knoweth whether God will not turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger that we perish not? 10 And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil which he said would do unto them; and he did it not.

1 But it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was angry. 2 And he prayed unto Jehovah, and said, I pray thee, O Jehovah, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I hastened to flee unto Tarshish; for I knew that thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and abundant in loving kindness, and repentest thee of the evil. 3 Therefore now, O Jehovah, take, I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live. 4 And Jehovah said, Doest thou well to be angry? 5 Then Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shade, till he might see what would become of the city.

6 And Jehovah God prepared a gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shade over his head, to deliver him from his evil case. So Jonah was exceeding glad because of the gourd. 7 But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd, that it withered. 8 And it came to pass, when the sun arose, that God prepared a sultry east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and requested for himself that he might die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live. 9 And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death. 10 And Jehovah said, Thou hast had regard for the gourd for which thou hast not labored, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night and perished in a night; 11 and should I have regard for Nineveh, that great city wherein are more than six score thousand persons that cannot discern between the right hand and their left hand; and all much cattle?

Golden Text. "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit."—Matt. 28:19.

Time. About 830 B. C. Place. Nineveh.

Introduction. Read the entire book of Jonah. Jonah lived in the reign of Jeroboam the second. According to Second Kings 14-25 he did other prophesying. He belonged to Gath-Hepher of Zebulun. This was about an hour's walk north of Nazareth. Jonah was one of the minor prophets. This book teaches the futility of man's efforts to thwart God's purpose, and repentance and the desire of God to save all people. The book anticipates Christianity. The opening chapters tell of the prophet's call to duty, how he became disobedient, attempt to flee from his Lord, the punishment that followed, his prayer and restoration, and his facing about to do his Lord's will.

Explanatory. 5—Nineveh was a city of 600,000 to a million population. It was known for its wickedness. Jonah marched through the city for three days, crying, "Repent, for Nineveh will be destroyed." His experience at sea had given him courage and sent him with a determination to do God's will. His message was delivered earnestly. The effect on the people was such as to cause great and small to wear sackcloth. 6—Even the king led the people in their repentance and humility. 7-8—Both men and beasts were covered with sackcloth, and the people were commanded to turn from their evil way. 9—The hope was that God might change His plan concerning them. 10—Seeing their penitence, God changed His plan. 1—Jonah was a typical Jew and had no love for the Gentiles. His message was not earnestly delivered to help the Gentiles, but rather that he might be obedient to God. He was now displeased because the Gentiles were to be saved. 2—He criticised God for being so merciful, wishing to save the Gentiles from death, and he gave this as a partial excuse for having fled, and he knew that God would change His mind concerning them. 3—He preferred death rather than to see God's kindness extended to the Gentile people. 4—Jonah now sulks, and Jehovah said, "Doest thou well to be angry?" 5—Beside the city Jonah sits in a booth, waiting to see what will become of Nineveh. 6—God was kind and gave him a gourd to shade him. 7—But in a few hours the protective shade was taken away. 8-9—Under the hot sun Jonah now fainted and desired to die. Jonah was chastised for being angry for the removal of the shade. 10-11—God knew that Jonah desired to save the gourd that it might furnish him shade, so God, the Creator of all, was desirous of saving the lives of the many thousands of people in Nineveh. Jonah must be taught that the life of a man, no matter what his blood, is worth much in the sight of God.

Lessons on the Lesson

When God calls, men should answer. When He commands, we should obey. The task He lays upon us may be difficult, but if He asks us to do it He will see that help is not denied us. No matter whether on sea or land, we cannot get away from God. His eyes which seeth the sparrow seeth us also. God hears the prayers of His children in trouble. Though in a whale in the sea, Jonah had communication with God. God heard and helped. Jonah was a queer mixture. After having been punished for his disobedience, he was, he still becomes angry at God because God's purpose was not the same as his. Here God's kindness is again manifest, and in a very gentle way He teaches the prophet the lesson He would have him learn. Doubtless the appearance of Jonah and his message combined brought the people of Nineveh to the ground. There was an earnestness about his speech and manner which impressed them. He stood not in ceremony, but began his task as soon as he entered the city, and for three days he walked its streets crying at the top of his voice, "Repent, for in three days God shall destroy this city." The effect of the message was electrical. Many a message today is crippled because the messenger does not seem to be in earnest. Would you have people listen to what you say? Believe it with all your heart, and say it with all your might. We have been commanded to preach the Gospel to all peoples of the earth. That is the business of the church. It was for this that Jesus died. To this end we are called. Our task is heroic, world-wide and heaven-born.

Questions on the Lesson

Who was Jonah? When did he live, and where? What was his commission? Why did he refuse to preach to the Ninevites? What experience did he have? Where was Nineveh? What can you tell of the city? How was his message received? Why was Jonah angry? How did God teach him the folly of his anger? What is the practical application for us in this lesson?

LESSON 1—MAY 7.

"UZZIAH, KING OF JUDAH, HUMBLEMED."—2 CHRON. 26.

PRINTED TEXT, 2 CHRON. 26:8-21.

Read 2 Chron. 26th to 28th chapters.

And the Ammonites gave tribute to Uzziah; and his name spread abroad even to the entrance of Egypt; for he waxed exceeding strong. 9 Moreover Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the corner gate, and at the valley gate, and at the turning of the wall, and fortified them. 10 And he built towers in the wilderness, and hewed out many cisterns, for he had much cattle; in the lowland also, and in the plain; and he had husbandmen and vinedressers in the mountains and in the fruitful fields; for he loved husbandry. 11 Moreover Uzziah had an army of fighting men, that went out to war by bands, according to the number of their reckoning made by Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the officer, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains. 12 The whole number of the heads of fathers' houses, even the mighty men of valor, was two thousand and six hundred. 13 And under their hand was an army, three hundred thousand and seven thousand and five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy. 14 And Uzziah prepared for them, even for all the host, shields, and spears, and helmets, and coats of mail, and bows, and stones for slinging. 15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by skillful men, to be on the towers and upon the battlements, wherewith to shoot arrows at great stones. And his name spread far abroad; for he was marvelously helped, till he was strong.

16 But when he was strong, his heart was lifted up, so that he did corruptly, and he trespassed against Jehovah his God; for he went into the temple of Jehovah to burn incense upon the altar of incense. 17 And Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him fourscore priests of Jehovah, that were valiant men; 18 and they withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, It pertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto Jehovah, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be for thine honor from Jehovah God. 9 Then Uzziah was wroth; and he had a censer in his hand to burn incense; and while he was wroth with the priests, the leprosy break forth on his forehead before the priests in the house of Jehovah, beside the altar of incense. 20 And Azariah the chief priest, and all the priests, looked upon him, and, behold, he was leprous in his forehead, and they thrust him out quickly from thence; yea, himself hastened also to go out, because Jehovah had smitten him. 21 And Uzziah the king was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a separate house, being a leper; for he was cut off from the house of Jehovah; and Jotham his son was over the king's house, judging the people of the land.

Time. From 806 to 755 B. C. Place. Judah, Jerusalem and the wilderness.

Introduction. When Joash died his son, Amaziah, succeeded him. His fatal sin was pride. His subjects finally arose in revolt and murdered him. He was succeeded by his son, Uzziah. The young king was sixteen years old when he came to the throne, and reigned fifty-two years. It is said of him, "As long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper." He was a warrior and a builder. He was religious and was advised by a good prophet by the name of Zechariah.

Explanatory. 8—The Ammonites lived northeast of Moab. These voluntarily paid tribute to Uzziah. Uzziah strengthened himself by fortifications, a strong army, and arms and ammunition. His was a golden age. The rich lived in palaces of stone and ivory. The nobles flourished and the poor grew poorer, and the land came into the hands of a few great nobles, and the leading prophets of the day saw clearly that the kingdom would soon go into decay. 9-15—The king was immensely wealthy; he had many herds and fertile fields; his husbandmen and vinedressers were in the mountains and fields. 16—None but the priests were allowed to enter the temple building. When Uzziah became strong he ceased to be dependent, and no longer walked in the ways of Jehovah. In burning incense he was doing that which only priests should do. 17-19—Azariah and eighty other priests followed him in the temple and withstood him. They ordered him out of the sanctuary, for he was a trespasser. They said it would bring dishonor upon him to so act. But Uzziah became angry and heeded not of their request, had a censer in his hand, ready to burn incense, when suddenly leprosy broke forth on his forehead. 20—The priests now quickly thrust him out of the temple, and he was glad to go, for he was smitten of Jehovah. 21—From that day to the time of his death Uzziah lived a leper in a house apart from the people. Ahaziah, his son, reigned over the land.

All these lessons are teaching us that men prosper when they commit their way unto Jehovah, and that rebellion against God means sin, adversity, failure and death. The principle remains today. These old kings of other days wave before us red lights of danger, but many see them and fear not. Prosperity sometimes becomes a weight to break us down. It was so in the case of Uzziah. When he became so prosperous he became proud. He attempted to do that which only the priests should do. He was unwilling to take advice from any man. He presumed to dictate to God. A brilliant beginning but a sad ending. Magnificent farms, great herds, multitudes of laborers, an ivory palace and ivory couches, all that heart might yearn for, tribute rolling into his treasury from surrounding nations, but alas, in one moment of disobedience God's hand is laid upon him, and he is a leper, and the balance of his days he spends in a home alone, to study his mistakes and to meditate upon what might have been.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Uzziah? Who was his mother? His father? What relation was he to Joash? In what kingdom did he reign? What do you know of his wealth? What were the characteristics of the man in the earlier part of his career? What was his sin? Why did he fall? What was his punishment? What is the greatest lesson this for all today?

FAMILIAR TALKS

TIME The good old summer time is very near at hand. Experience shows us that it is such a good old good time for Brotherhoods. We sound now a note of warning to every local. The summer time brings a break in all our church work. It is the custom for some of our organizations to take vacations in the summer time. We have often heard of Brotherhoods doing so. This is nearly fatal, because it snaps the cord of Christian duty. Evil does not take a vacation in the summer time. The church organization must struggle all the more to keep alive and that is all the more reason why it must make the struggle. It will be wise for Brotherhood officers immediately to plan some kind of summer activities that will keep the organization in the harness. Use your initiative. Rejoice in the pliability and adaptability of the Brotherhood Movement and provide some things to do that are practical in the summer time, that need to be done at such season of the year and see that your Local Brotherhood makes the most of them.

PORTLAND CONVENTION

The Brotherhood National Convention will be held this year at Portland, Ore., in connection with the International Convention of our Missionary Societies. The date selected by the Brotherhood will be announced elsewhere in this issue. Mr. Elliott, our Assistant Secretary, was selected by the General Secretaries' Association as chairman of the Transportation Committee and is prepared to furnish information in regard to rates and routes and an inquiry addressed to the Transportation Committee at 419 R. A. Long building, Kansas City, Mo., will bring the necessary information. It is hoped that each Local Brotherhood, whether affiliated with the General Brotherhood or not, will send a representative to this convention. It will be a worthy enterprise to send your representative and pay his expenses to and from the convention.

Churches everywhere are urged to send their pastors and you may be sure that he will return to you filled and thrilled with a great message and he will be infinitely of more value to the cause he loves and serves by reason of his fellowship with his brethren at Portland. The Pacific Coast States will be well represented and we have a wealth of members in the great Pacific Northwest who will be there to welcome those from the East and the South. THE WEEK of the results o

EVANGELISM

From many pl

evangelism for men, of which so has been written in the last few of CHRISTIAN MEN and so much by Brotherhood men. At this w it is too early to have any de reports in hand, but one of which reaches us from a nearby North Side Church, Omaha, Neb., of L. B. D. C. No. 272, written by dent C. A. Mangum, is sufficient spiring to be worth quoting.

"The direct results, so far as add to the church and Brotherhood, two added to the church and two Brotherhood. But this was not a all feel that as a result of the me our members individually have b greatly strengthened and we have a aroused to the fact that we have r begun to realize the possibilities f organized band of men in the church

"Such a series of meetings wou have been thought of and woulch been impossible without the progrm published in CHRISTIAN MEN. Brotherhood in the North Side Chst Church of Omaha is any criteri which we may judge the value o s an organization to the church, I n understand why every church shoul have such an organization as this

"Another direct result of the net was preliminary steps looking to te ation of a Junior Brotherhood, and committee was appointed to present for such an organization. We to have this organization complete in the next ten days."

THIRD-YEAR BROTHERHOODS

Will the Brotherhood Movement live? We have been interested watching this Spring the number of Brotherhoods turning into the third year, and it is exceedingly encouraging to observe that every Brotherhood which persisted through the second year into the third comes with a fresher understanding of its problems, with a clearer sense of its duty and with a deeper appreciation of the tremendous opportunity for service that they have. Every third-year Brotherhood is looking for a better year of service than it has known.

As we look over the record of the one hundred and thirty affiliated Brotherhood organizations, we cannot but feel how much more might have been done if instead of a hundred and thirty we had a hundred, and the thirteen hundred is possible. May God lead our members in increasing purpose to accept the opportunity which the Brotherhood program offers for the enlistment and service of men in Christian service.

While we are thinking of the Brotherhoods that are entering today upon the third year of their affiliated life, we are struck with the remarkable small number of Brotherhoods that have failed to live. Of the now nearly one hundred and fifty affiliated Brotherhoods, our records show that less than ten of them which have ceased to be active and of the entire ten we have only found one where the pastor himself was willing to concede that it had actually failed, and not even in that instance was there a feeling that the movement and organization did not have any significance for their field, but a conviction that a revival and reorganization would be inevitable. Having had even a faint taste of Brotherhood work, they would not endure the thought of being without it in its more perfected form as soon as possible.

We would not be misunderstood. There have been Brotherhoods formed that did not live, but they were not affiliated Brotherhoods. They failed to grasp the great soul-consuming purpose of the Brotherhood and were therefore without sufficient initiative to survive the period of gestation.

As far as we have been able to observe, the number of men's organizations of a Brotherhood or semi-Brotherhood character that have failed, it has been almost entirely due to short-sightedness in seeing the value of close association with others who are working at the problems, and thus profiting by their successes and failures—the methods that have been tried and tested by experience.

In other instances, where some of these methods have been adopted, the organization has lagged or been fruitless because of its failure to maintain vital communication with the life of similar bodies, for this is all that the National Organization is or can ever be,—an expression of united effort and purpose of the many locals.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the new department, "Brotherhood Boys," which appears for the first time in this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN.

Every pastor should be interested in seeing that his Brotherhood or Bible Class makes early use of the first program for May on "How the Brotherhood Can Augment the Power of the Pulpit."

These programs are both printed in the April issue of CHRISTIAN MEN. The Second Program for May deals with the subject of "Men and the Bible School," and looks forward to the offering for Foreign Missions, which our Bible Classes are accustomed to make upon the first Lord's day in June, a principal subject on the program being "The Power of Men in the Bible School for Heathen Missions."

Let us urgently remind all Brotherhoods and Bible Classes that the second program for April is of great importance in preparing for the offering for Home Missions. If your Brotherhood or Bible Class has not yet given this program, will you not prepare for it immediately?

"I have seen nothing so sane and business-like, so full of promise for the recruiting of our ministry," said R. H. Crossfield, of Transylvania University, speaking of the Comrades of Paul Fund. That the eminent sanity and practicability of this fund grows more apparent is brought home to us with increasing assurance almost weekly. The last evidence is a letter from J. U. Treadwell, Missionary Secretary of the Church at Pittsburg, Kan., and President of L. B. D. C. No. 270, in which he enclosed $10.38, stating that their church used the duplex system, setting aside eight per cent of their fund for education and felt that the wisest employment they could make of this money was to put it into the Comrades of Paul Fund. It will help some deserving student through college life and into active service, when he will repay the money that it may go on and on and on through the years, helping other and still other men to equip themselves for the service of God and the fellowship of Christ Jesus in the winning of souls.

"I am not a minister, in the full sense of the word," writes a consecrated young man to us, "but I am young and God may spare my life long enough. I may yet realize my desire in what I feel to be the greatest calling for a young man today."

These earnest words come but from the heart of a young man who is doing much to make it possible for others to enter the ministry. He himself cannot go. We presume the reason is a financial one. There may be among the thousands who see these lines a man with a salary rich enough to seek out this young man and say to him, "Go to school; I will make up the deficiency between what you can earn and what you must spend to support yourself and wife while you prepare your own heart and mind for the service of Jesus Christ and the redemption of the world."

From this same letter we quote another timely logical word, believing that it will impress you as it has impressed us:

"In regard to CHRISTIAN MEN: many of our men here do not even know of the Brotherhood magazine, and many of them, which is their loss, have never seen a copy. Take a hardware merchant, a clothing merchant, an automobile dealer, a doctor, a lawyer, name any of the professions or lines of commercial pursuit, and every man will have the very latest magazines, papers, articles, whatever it may be, pertaining to his particular business. Why is it, then, that a Christian Brotherhood cannot become interested enough in the matter to become thoroughly posted not only on everything pertaining to Brotherhood matters, but make every effort to keep up to date in such matters? Let us men but grasp the vision which God has for them, if they will but open their eyes to it, in this great work, and the Christian organization will not have to pick up the distress signal and plead for certain lines of work, but would rather show such signal on account of being swamped by the messages of activity from the wires which would spring up like mushroom rooms in the night to answer the call to 'do' and 'to be.'"

At a meeting of L. B. D. C. No. 30 Pasadena, Cal., the men voted to provide a new piano for the Junior Department of the Sunday-School which will probably be paid for within two months. The Local Brotherhood has undertaken the port of a foreign missionary as a di-

The Provision for Leaders

By A STAFF CONTRIBUTOR

The Smiths are a common folk. You find them everywhere. Pick up any city directory and therein are most of Smiths. It almost seems that the first man, Adam, should have been named Smith. The name of Smith is not individual, but generic. The race of Smiths is typical of the race of the coming man. We have the picture of Smith on the cover of the magazine this month. He is just the common type. His father was named Philander and his mother Sarah. He was born in Missouri and went to school in Kansas City. Two universities, those of Missouri and Kansas, contributed to his education and Transylvania gave him a degree. Like many other Smiths, the church and its social and religious life were as familiar to him as his own cradle. As he grew up the lofty morality of the New Testament gripped his imagination and wove the woof of character in the growing soul. The example of father and mother, the teaching of a saintly woman in the Sunday-school, Mrs. Alice Sandidge, and the wise intuition of friends who saw the prophetic light born so early in the eye of the ten-year-old boy, inclined him toward the ministry as a profession and then came the preaching of Thos. P. Haley, in a hall on the third floor of a building on the northwest corner of Main and Eleventh streets, in Kansas City. To the boy, that preaching was sweet and wonderful and his confession and baptism followed shortly after. With his baptism there began for him a new life of sober truth, a life rimmed around and overcharged with that immensity whose last best name is God. Study, business, pleasure, friendship, home were transfigured by the life of Jesus. It was inevitable that the mission to preach should in the transition period possess the boy with a new and more personal passion to tell the old story of that which had done so much for him.

As the young man's mind developed that one unspoken and potential mission which was to grow for years before the time of its public utterance, was taking on additional form and the youth was seeing that partisan Christianity was wrong, and was feeling that the only way to unite Christendom was by returning to that center of the spiritual world, Jesus Christ.

In these plastic years three men, preachers and pastors, made their contribution to the life of Smith. In gathering material for this article we have come into possession of a happy characterization of the three men, John W. Mountjoy, minister of the church at Columbia, Mo.; Alexander Proctor, minister of the church at Independence, Mo., and Thos. P. Haley, already mentioned, of the First Church in Kansas City. From the characterization referred to we quote:

"Mountjoy was a man of beautiful face, of gentle manners, sympathetic to a woman, but manfully thoughtful, earnest, industrious and courageous, possessed of considerable culture, an effective preacher and gifted, when aroused with a passionate and headlong eloquence.

"Proctor was tall, gaunt, careless of dress, but such a figure as no thoughtful man would pass on any thoroughfare of the world without a second look. Owing diseased throat he spoke always at the outset of an address hesitatingly, qualifying his utterance with a sort of suppressed coughing which would have dashed the oratorical hopes of a lesser man.

But such were the magnitude of his thoughts and the simple beauty of his diction that his hearers heard his sentences not only patiently but with delighted attention. Moreover, behind the mask of awkward hesitation flowed a stream of thought as if from an inactive but unquenched fire. It was as though he had said to you that somehow notified you that he was there. After he had spoken for some time his voice cleared, his eyes opened, his diction grew more simple and direct, and intellectual grasp and spiritual insight were raised to high powers and the benevolent passion of the true teacher seemed to possess him utterly. In private he was friend and advisor to young men of his neighborhood, saint, philosopher and orator he was to all.

But it was Thos. P. Haley who, of all teachers, impressed himself more indelibly upon the life of young Smith. The simplicity and grace of his manner, the directness, persuasive reasonableness of his speech, force of his private conversation, the rare common sense and the executive ability that characterized his work as a pastor and leader, the breadth of his sympathy with his fellow Christians of all parties, and 'The white glow of his blameless life' were made doubly effective by the fact that he was the young man's good friend."

Smith himself says of Haley: "In those days of my boyhood I believed him to be a great man and a great pastor. Now that I have tested for myself the conflicting forces upon which a leader of his fellows in any capacity must bear himself, I know of him what I once guessed then. He was and is intellectually a massive, happily balanced and most useful man and a very near approach in many respects to the fair ideal of a pastor."

It was when the young man was nineteen years of age and a student in the University of Missouri, at Columbia, Mo., that Chas. A. Young took him out to Ashland, in Boone County, to preach his first sermon. Since that there have been pastorates in Kansas, in Missouri, and Arkansas, where at Eureka Springs, among such choice spirits as Geo. C. and Mrs. Persis L. Christian, got his first vision of the world evangel. After a pastorate in Marshall, Mo., his old home, the Foreign Christian Missionary Society claimed his services for a time in a secretarial capacity, and then in 1896 began the pastorate at Hopkinsville, Ky., where for sixteen unbroken years Harry D. Smith has, with unswerving zeal, with unfailing tact and ripening spiritual grace led a people higher and higher toward God and deeper and deeper into the world of practical Christian service.

This Hopkinsville church already had an honored missionary record. In 1850, before the Foreign Christian Missionary Society had come into existence, this congregation bought an intelligent Christian slave and educated him and sent him to Liberia to preach the gospel. The Hopkinsville church founded McLean College, under the leadership of Enos Campbell, a cousin of Alexander Campbell, and early laid the foundation of the Sunday-school in the scholarly exploitation of the Scripture presented by Henry T. Anderson, one of its ablest ministers. Last year this Kentucky congregation gave for missions and education $3,800, and into its membership in this pastorate of sixteen years there have been welcomed one thousand and forty-three persons.

And this busy man of the common people, typical, well born, which is to say the common born American youth of his generation, has found time to hold evangelistic meetings, to teach in colleges and lecture in colleges, serve State and District organizations of his own religious communion, and finally to be lifted to the highest honor within the gift of the Disciples of Christ, that of the Presidency of the American Christian Missionary Society. Great indeed have been the names of the men who have graced this high office. The American Christian Missionary Society has had its opportunity in the pulpits of the churches of Missouri, and now those churches have come back to it for marked and distinct service with the man who is the subject of this sketch. And it is to remind the reader of the intimacy of relationship between this great missionary institution and the life of our churches and individual members that these lines are written. Action and reaction, action and reaction, evangelized and then evangelizing, befriended and then befriending, an unheralded youth named Smith and then the President of the American Christian Missionary Society. That is the lesson of this art. That is the story of this life. As we give out, so shall we receive again. We need unknown leaders, what undeveloped preachers, what unsuspected prophets with what power of persuasion, among the countless youth going in and out of homes in our missionary territory today no one can speak with certainty. But this is certain, the youths are the tender minds, the impressionable souls, the inflammable hearts, and it is our privilege and our solemn duty to provide, through the preaching of the Word in schoolhouse and in hall, in the mission camp in the desert, in the swift growing city on the plain, and in the congested life of our cities, that the message of God, the message of hope and inspiration shall be spoken. Only thus can we provide for the leaders in the generation that is to come.

"OUR foreign offering was $193.21 of which amount the Brotherhood contributed $50.00. The men are planning to support two native Evangelists in Africa next year."

The Relation of the Brotherhood to the Men's Activities of the Church

By JAMES KNOX SHELLENBERGER

The ideal Brotherhood is the men of the church and their sympathetic friends organized for efficiency in doing the church's work. It is not simply another organization seeking to wedge itself into the midst of the many existing organizations. It seeks to simplify church organization rather than complicate it, to give every man a definite task instead of having one willing and capable man loaded with a half dozen offices, and positions.

To illustrate: Not long since the writer visited a church in which Brother as Elder, Bible School Superintendent, Trustee, Treasurer, and director of choir, at the same time there were at least seventy-five other men on the church roll who were doing little or nothing. Brother L. in that same church was teacher in a Bible class, a deacon, finance committee, teacher of training class, member of choir, and usher. Out of the whole male membership not more than fifteen men felt any actual responsibility for the church's success. On the other hand the majority of men were ready to criticise if the church did not succeed, simply because they were not men-bearers.

Another illustration: In the town of _____, is a church of which Bro. _____ has been pastor for eleven years. He collected his own salary, paid the church's bills, did all the calling, and when anything was done, took the initiative in everything the church undertook to do; and I need not add with but three exceptions he did all the public praying, conducted the training class, always led the prayer-meeting. He is gone now, and it is a matter of surprise to learn that the church was paralyzed the moment he went away?

In both of these churches the Brotherhood did not appeal. Both said, "Four men would do what you have attempted it would be splendid, but they will not do it," which doubtless was the reason.

These cases are not isolated cases. The number is legion. Their secret is ineffective organization, and lack of appreciation of the purpose of the church. When we recall that the purpose of the church is to "perfect the saints unto the work of ministering—unto the building up of the body of Christ; till we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God—unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ," we will begin to create machinery to create such results.

This is the far-seen purpose of the Brotherhood. It realizes that no man can grow spiritually who does not function spiritually. No matter how awkward he may be at first he must function. By means of practice he grows strong and capable.

Let us put a Brotherhood in either of the above mentioned churches; let that Brotherhood reach the ideal and see what happens.

The ninety men of the one church, or the one hundred and two men, of the other church, organize for the purpose of more effectively doing the church's work in that community. Instead of having a dozen different organizations, many of them officered by the same men, they have one organization doing many lines of work and each man is on his own committee and responsible for his own task.

What ought the men of such a church to be doing? We venture the following:

- 1, Studying the Bible.
- 2, Studying the Mission fields and forces.

- 3, Studying the Church's local field and problems.

- 4, Socializing and fraternizing its men.

To this end these men meet in regular meeting, with programs prepared unto definite ends, and with definite aims.

- 5, Building Bible Classes of Men and Boys.

- 6, Systematically providing for the church's missionary offerings.

- 7, Systematically providing for the financing of the local church.

- 8, Doing systematic work in personal evangelism.

- 9, Looking after the welfare of the boys (spiritually and socially) of the congregation and the community.

10, Keeping apace with all civic movements and directing them in Christian channels.

11, Lending a helping hand to the unemployed in congregations and in community.

12, Seeing that the sick and the needy are not neglected by the church.

13, Enlisting the best blood and brain of the young men for the ministry of the church.

14, Relating the church closely with all the interests of the community for the purpose of strengthening the Kingdom of God in that community.

Here are fourteen definite lines along which the church must proceed if she advance like an army of the MOST HIGH. Can a church of 90 men work along all these lines at one and the same time? Yes, by patient training.

How?

By organizing the men, then working the organization.

The first four of the above mentioned activities are carried on in general meetings of the men. But behind these meetings is the "program committee" who sees to it that the men NEVER come together without having a full, well planned, worthy program all prepared. This is a body of three or four men who are a committee, not in name only, but in fact. They WORK as does every other man in this ideal Brotherhood.

Then comes the special lines of work.

A Bible Class Committee sweats out the plans for Bible Study. This is their responsibility. To this they give their energy, and all the Brotherhood men give them their helpful sympathy.

A Missionary Committee sweats out plans unto missionary inspiration and systematic offerings. This is their responsibility. To this they give their energy and all the Brotherhood gives them its helpful sympathy.

A finance Committee (composed of Deacons) sweat out the plans for dignified financing of the church. This is their responsibility, and to this they give their energy, and the Brotherhood gives its helpful sympathy.

A personal Evangelism Committee (headed by an Elder) sweats out plans for the fulfillment of commission in the community. To this they give their energy, and the Brotherhood gives its helpful sympathy.

A committee on Boys sweats out plans for the interest and care of the young men. To this they give their energy, and the Brotherhood gives them its helpful sympathy.

And so on down the line.

Here are ten different lines of activity. Let a committee of ten be responsible for pushing the work along each of these lines and you have 100 men at work, no man duplicating the other's work, no crossing of lines, each man to his own task, all doing a certain definite work in the interest of the church and therefore in the interest of the community and the kingdom.

At the head of these committees is a captain or chairman. These committees are made up of the best men, with the officers and pastor, making the Advisory Council, behind this Council is the pastor, and behind the pastor is his Bible, and Jesus Christ his Master, and God his Father.

This is an IDEAL BROTHERHOOD. No church will reach the ideal by the mere matter of organization. A man can build a house in a twelve-month, but it takes a century to grow the oaks. The church is an organization, the oak is a thing. So an organization of men is a thing easily accomplished but the vitality of that organization is a matter of patient feeding, leading and training.

Let no man despise the day of small things.

Occidental Heroisms

As surely as there is a glory celestial and a glory terrestrial, so there is a heroism oriental and a heroism occidental. We are thrilled with the story of the victories of Christ in the Foreign Field, but we are also conscious of a heroism displayed in the midst of a heathenism that is as dark and a paganism that is as painful and yet which is unobscured by the glamour of distance because it is here at home, in the alleyways of our own house, in the flats between the car tracks, where lie those mounds upon which are flung with pitilessness the wreckage of our modern civilization. While Christianity proclaims itself abroad it must sustain itself at home. The keenest battle, the bitterest, the most decisive, the most inevitable that Christianity will ever fight is here in America. It is more essential that we shall hold the home land than that we shall take the foreign field. We must do the first in order to accomplish the second. The appeal for home missions comes to the Christian Disciple with double force. We must take it for Jesus Christ because it is for the home land, because herein we were born and herein do we expect to live and die, our brothers and our sisters, our children and our children's children, unto the latest generation. Few dream of any other earthly home for ourselves or those who come after save upon the North American continent. Ours is a goodly land today, because this wilderness was made for God and for Jesus Christ by men who with faith in their hearts and courage in their souls who, so far as vision and foresight were able, dedicated this great new world, its rocks and hills its rivers and streams, to the proposition that all men are brothers and that God is their father.

We must hold the home land that the labors of our fathers be not in vain. We must hold the home land that our children lift not their hands in curses above our graves in a day when paganism has possessed their patrimony. We must hold the home land against internal forces that are here ripening today, which, unhindered, will destroy the ideals which have made our country what it is and which have in themselves the only possibility for perfecting the process of civilization through the ages.

Beyond that, Disciples owe another duty to the home land, because of their peculiar plea, because of their own particular religious heritage and because of their own conception of the simplicity and sweetness of a Gospel which is unembarrassed by speculative philosophies and unencumbered by the traditions of men. The lessons of a hundred years of history, the lessons of a far-flung line of beckoning opportunities, all teach that it is the duty of the Disciples in this year of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Eleven, to take up the task of Christianizing America as they have never even contemplated it before. The East, with its teeming millions; the West, with its marvelous material progress, its cities that spring up in a night and its commonwealths that are but the founding of yesterday, its universities whose history is shorter than the span of our own lives but whose graduates are today in every land, this widespread and far-extending Eden, whose Northern skirts reach upward beyond the chill of the Arctic snows, whose Southern borders blush under the kisses of a tropical sun, and whose Western shores look out upon the ports of all the world, this land must be made a Christian land. Out of the high sky that looms above our towering mountains, that opens in beauty over the billowing plains, must be brought down a new Jerusalem, a new state, a new commonwealth, the new Kingdom of Heaven full of the eternal and beneficent ray which comes when Jesus enters into the hearts of individuals and through individuals into institutions and through institutions into the fabric of civilization.

The American Christian Missionary Society, of Cincinnati, has been the greatest evangelizing agency in the history of any religious people. It stands upon a record that is great and glorious. It was begotten of progress in the day when our movement was small; it has weathered every storm, it has proved a nourishing mother to thousands of churches, and an avenue of service for thousands of missionaries of the Word. Its churches, its Bible Schools, its messages, its converts are everywhere today. It is God's own method of striking hands with you in the great enterprise of Christianizing America. V. Outstretched fingers it offers to you opportunity for coöperation, it asks you avail yourself of its power, it provides a means by which you who but an individual may become a mighty army.

By the authority of a precedent long years, the first Lord's day in has been set apart as the time for annual offering in behalf of home missions through this society. Your church will be receiving such an offering. If it is not proposed you may be instrumental in inducing it to throw its power behind this important work of the Master. In any event, add your power. Lead your Brotherhood and the members of your church to a more detailed information regarding the work of this society and the deepening sense of responsibility today and to its enterprises.

A Vision of Perfectness

EDITOR CHRISTIAN MEN:—If you can use this do so, if not mail back to Loren T. Eaton, 417 D. M. St., Des Moines, Ia.

I see things in the Men's Movement that only a few have the privilege of seeing.

Does it seem possible that this is the beginning of the end—that Christ is going to give us the real perfection that we have been striving for?

Most men are blind. They strive for perfection in their own weak state and that never can be gained. Perfect things come from God alone.

Oh! why don't men wake up to the fact that their Creator is calling! He wants them to come back to Him. He wants to make things real. He wants to take evil out of mankind and leave only that which is perfect.

Look about you and reflect. Can you find anything which is not of God amounts to anything? Do you understand things as you should—as you if you do as He asks you to do?

The time has come when the preaching of the gospel by the preachers only got to stop. Every creature of His says, "Lord, I take Thy Name," and help.

When the world has heard His message, He will come, He says it. Will not take Him at His word? The Christians are going to take Him at His word from now on and those who hold back will be left behind in the race of redemption. Men will give their lives as never have before and it will not be vain. They will call upon God to take evil away and let His own Spirit rule and He will do it.

Prayer Meeting and Its Benefits

This material, from the pen of J. N. Mason, finds its way into our office and is so good that we hasten to print it immediately:

Plan, pray and study for the prayer-meeting.

Take your Bible and a friend.

Always put something into the prayer-meeting.

Pentecost began with a prayer-meeting.

Short, earnest prayer from the heart. Reaches Heaven before the devil gets a shot at it.

Prayer is the rope by which we ring the bells of Heaven, etc.

True prayer is an earnest soul's direct converse with God.

A prayer is a wish turned Godward.

Prayer is the breath of a new-born soul, and there can be no Christian life without it.

The best and sweetest flowers of paradise God gives to His people when they are on their knees. Prayer is the gate of Heaven.

Prayer moves the hand which moves the world.

The prayer-meeting is the pulse of the church.—Joseph Cook.

1. Soul rest and refreshment.—Matt. 31-34.

2. Mutual encouragement.—Heb. 10:24-25.

3. Better Christian acquaintance.—Matt. 3:16-18.

4. Spiritual edification.—1 Cor. 14:26.

5. Increase of faith.—John 20:26-29.

6. Conversion of unbelievers.—1 Cor. 23-25.

I have been driven to my knees many times by the overwhelming conviction that I had no place else to go. My own wisdom that of all about me seemed insufficient that day.—Lincoln.

Prayer will make a man cease from sin. Sin will entice a man to cease from prayer.—Bunyan.

Every praying Christian will find that there is no Gethsemane without its angel.

A house without family prayer has no foundation or covering.—J. M. Mason.

7. Helpfulness to the pastor.—Ephesians 10-20.

8. Christ's promised presence.—Matt. 19-20. And it came to pass that while he communed together and reasoned Jesus himself drew near.

9. The Holy Spirit in song and prayer.—1 Cor. 14:15.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

Don't put all the responsibility upon the mothers.

—O—

Our boys can't start wrong and come out right. What are you doing to give him a good start?

—O—

Impure thoughts in a boy's mind will last just as long as a snowball would in a oven, if that boy's mind is filled with the idea of playing square.

—O—

It is a fact, and one not to be proud of, either, that many boys in knee trousers today know more about sin than Methuselah did when he was a thousand years old.

—O—

It is said that God made the real mothers to help where He couldn't trust the men. He needed their patience and kindness and loving touches to finish His wonderful plan.

—O—

The management of boys has all the interest of a great game of chess with living creatures for pawns and pieces, and your adversary in plain English—the Drill—who truly plays a tough game, and one hard to beat."—ARNOLD Master of Rugby.

—O—

A mother's wish: "I never wash my little son's face at night and put him to bed clean and sweet on the outside that I don't think that I would give all the world, if it were possible, if I could somehow get inside of his heart and wash that, too."

—O—

Be frank with the boy in the matter of the origin of his life. Fathers cannot be too hasty in instructing their sons in this vital question. Too many boys have gone down in ruin because of ignorance. They should not learn holy things from vicious companions.

—O—

Our Boys' Department in this issue is filled with news matter, reports prepared especially for us of particular things that are being done and messages that have come to us since the department was announced. Much of the best matter has necessarily been held over in order to be better prepared for the next magazine. We shall be glad of continued advice and information, and in the meantime shall expect month by month to put before our readers the best that can be gathered upon this interesting subject. Within a very short time, the Brotherhood's own plans for boy work will be prepared and published in form available for use of all.

A Game That Never Grows Old

By T. W. GRAFTON

I have been trying to enlist and interest boys in religious service for more than twenty years. In that time I have tried many schemes, with varying degrees of success. The difficulty with most of them has been that when the new wore off, the boys lost interest. A Boys' Brigade served a splendid purpose through one season, and then the boys grew tired of drilling. At another time I planned an organization with a somewhat elaborate initiation, but when all the possible candidates for membership had been initiated, the enthusiasm died. I have tried the purely literary and the purely athletic with the same result. What captivates the boy one day, lacked interest for him the next.

About four years ago, I was led to try the Boy City plan. It was not original. Mr. John Grunkle had been working it successfully in Toledo for several years. The George Junior Republics gathering the boys of a great city had been demonstrated a success. With the assistance of Mr. Chas. B. Hahn, we planned a city government, with its officers, directors and institutions. The boys took to it at once and have never lost interest in it.

Here is a game the boys do not grow weary of because it is the game of life. In their play they are taught to do the thing their father does and that they expect to do when they come men. It presents all the variety of life. In their city the boys plan the things they want to do. In basket-ball season they play basket-ball. With the coming of the baseball season they organize base-ball teams. When they want to, have mock trials, or any other form of indoor entertainment suits their fancy. But all the while it is a Boy City throbbing with boy life, working as a gang, inspired by high ideals, learning their games the things that after awhile will help them in the great game of life. When they become parliamentarians, they cultivate the gift of speech, they familiarize themselves with municipal government and quicken a civic consciousness. And since it is all linked with the church and Bible school, it helps them to find anchorage in the great truths of God.

What One Brotherhood is Doing for its Boys

START While many of the Brother-hoods of the church have been asking what they could do to themselves felt more in the church, the erhood in the Independence Boulevard tian Church of Kansas City has taken up boys' work. They have become the big ers to the boys in the Sunday-School and icinity. The Church Board, upon the rec-endation of the Boys' Committee, appoint-y the Brotherhood, employed Chas. B. as the Boys' Work Director. Mr. Hahn ed upon his new duties the first of March.
le movement is new in the church, and is n as the Brotherhood Boys' or "Boy-
!" The government of the club is pat-rd after that of a city, and has as its of-a mayor, clerk and other officials. The ille movement is the outgrowth of the overnment plan in the public schools.
y learn by doing and in Boyville the boys a real game. That game may be running er, it may be a base-ball game, or perhaps rinting a paper or running a bank.

one can do successfully boys' work who not have absolute faith in the boy. So people can see the good in people when take them collectively, but lose it when come in contact with the incorrigible boy.

FATHER Boys like to do what their fathers do and imitate them in every way. One reason y Boyville appeals to the boy is because are so many real live questions to be vl. The boy is in touch with the problems t day, and is not asked to go away back t centuries and play knight and act out n other age's battles. It puts a boy on his
t. The boy demands reality. Let him r how to play and he will be an educated
y. Some day men will learn that the best way to teach the boy arithmetic and grammar will be through play. When boys learn to play fair in their games we will have men who will not tolerate unfairness in their business, social or political life.

In starting the work in the church the boys were first called together and the plan for the club was presented. The first step toward building the organization was in separating the boys into what we call political parties, making sports the issue. There were three divisions. All boys believing that land sports were best, joiend that faction; all believing in water sports joining the aquatics, while the Independents believe both land and water sports should have equal emphasis in the club work.
The three parties held separate meetings and had separate conventions, where they nominated their officers, and during the voting the citizens of Boyville awaited breathlessly.

ELECTION DAY On election day the boys held a parade, made up of all the parties. They were dressed in all kinds of garbs. There was a water-wagon, made by a water party man, on which he rode. Boys on decorated carts, wheels and buggies, and many on foot made up the parade.
The Independent party won.

The inauguration of the first set of Boyville city officers took place on Monday night, April 10th, in the church. Boy citizens were well represented, as nearly all the members were present. Many parents occupied places in the background. The platform was decorated with flags and banners and campaign matter.

Dr. Geo. Hamilton Combs gave the inaugural address, and installed the officers. Each of the new officers made short addresses.
There was special music furnished by a Boys' orchestra. Following is the new mayor's address:

THE NEW MAYOR'S ADDRESS

"Citizens of Boyville, friends and parents: It is proper for me in the position in which I am placed tonight to voice the hearty thanks of every boy in Boyville to Mr. Chas. B. Hahn, the father of our Independence Boulevard Boyville, and to every one who has taken any active interest in it.

"Citizens, you have thanks coming, and I give it for the loyal support you gave me in the late campaign, and now since I am mayor, I will try to live up to the good things you have said about me. You elected me because you thought that I would carry out your wishes and not because of any especial merit of my own. I intend to be your representative and carry out the laws made by the council.

"My idea of Boyville, the very foundation of it, is to play the game square. It is the system for the government as made by themselves to teach the boys how to vote, how to make laws and to have them become better acquainted with all the machinery concerned in the government of their elders; in short, it is simply the game of government played in reality.

"It shall be the policy of this administration to follow the constitution of Boyville; to favor such laws as will be permitted by our constitution. It shall be our duty at all times to favor such an understanding of our constitution that the rights of no citizen shall be taken away.

"The Independent party believes in making laws whereby the greatest good shall be given the greatest number. No gang shall rule; no set shall dictate, and no one class shall be benefited at the expense of the rest. Our platform is broad enough and wide enough to give everybody standing room, but no reserved seats to anyone. By that we mean equal rights for all and special privileges for none. All shall have a square deal. To this end the loyal support of every citizen of Boyville is invited. Our policy shall be that all shall do right because it is right. We believe that in working along these lines our criminal law will be unnecessary and wholesome laws as to what we will do will make our book of statutes.

"In the end Boyville will have made stronger and eager to fight wrong, and we have become men we will be fit to live life fairly and squarely. Taking it still further we will make the United States a greater country and even the world a little better for having Boyville."

Stanley Roach is the mayor. He is four years of age, and in the second year of School.

ATHLETICS

During the political campaign the three parties held an inter-party track meet. There were several events: High jump, 15-yard dash, a pole race, one-half mile relay race and a tug of war. The Independent party won with 22 points on their credit, the Water party came in second with 19 points.

There have been several base-ball games between the outside teams. The boys have gone on several "hikes" and are planning to go some Friday night and come back Saturday.

Play is always regarded by men as recreation, but to the boy it is the first business of life. This fact must be so regarded by the leaders.

RELIGION

The Boyville movement is a religious movement and that fact is always kept before the boys. Boys are naturally religious during their adolescence years. It is not right to give them a good time from week to week, and then at the end of the year say, "Now, fellows, let's all this to make you Christian boys." Many will join the church. The only way is to tell the boys when the club is started that the object of the organization is to make them all Christians. If they do not want to play this game then they can get out and play elsewhere. If they think that you have gotten them in unfairly this way they know the rules. No one can play any game square if they do not follow the rules.

You may get fooled today, but not if you vote for Stanley Roach for Mayor

Shots from Shellenberger

February 26th was spent with the Jackson Street Church, Muncie, Ind. Uncle Bill Allen is the pastor, and when you know him you get the habit of saying "Uncle Bill" like all the rest of us. Owing to Bro. Allen's sickness one year ago the Brotherhood organization had suffered. But the men gathered with their old enthusiasm and a renewed zeal. We left full of determination to succeed. Frank Shaw is their leader.

February 27th, and at Dayton, Ohio. Wesley Hatcher is the pastor of the West Side Church, and John P. Sala of the First Church. Bro. Hatcher was in a meeting. A union meeting of the men of both churches had been arranged. The men are doing a fine work. Bro. Sala's men had done valuable service in personal evangelism during his meeting just closed. We went two and two and called upon their neighbors, and on those especially assigned to us. The result was a splendid meeting, almost 100 additions, and the whole congregation participated. Bro. Hatcher's men were rendering valuable aid in his meeting.

March 5th.—Glouster, Ohio. Here the men are practicing Christian union. We found a Local Brotherhood. Methodists, Baptists, Colored Baptists, and Disciples were working hand in hand. All had taken the covenant and were enthusiastic for the Brotherhood. They meet on Lord's Day afternoon. About ninety men were present at this meeting. At this time the men were deeply interested in good government. With such a bunch of men to face, a city official might tremble, and there is no one but somebody trembling in Glouster. In the evening we were spirited to Athens, Ohio, via automobile. Here Bro. Max H. Hall is the pastor. Their men were just getting aroused. They were intensely enthusiastic over the work of the Men's Bible Class. We had a meeting at 7:30.

March 6th.—Still at Athens, Ohio. This evening the men only gathered. It was a meeting of the Bible Class. At this meeting it was determined to work out the Brotherhood proposition in full. Here are the figures of attendance in Bible Class since they got busy: 24, 31, 93, and goal set at 125 for next Lord's Day.

March 7th.—Nelsonville, Ohio. Here is where Doan and Walter Scott Cook live. What do I say? Anything that comes to our mind is trite. Cordial welcome? Yes. More cordial. Doan's wife had gone to a wedding and we helped him "bach." The Nelsonville Brotherhood is doing fine work in behalf of missions. They divided the men into companies of two. Then to these companies they apportioned the church membership. Each company was to see their allotted people about a regular and systematic contribution to missions as well as to the church. The duplex envelope system was being installed. They were succeeding even beyond their hopes.

March 10th.—Shreve, Ohio, is where M. S. Decker and his men live. We had a fine meeting with the men. Bro. Decker was at home wrestling with the grip. They decided to affiliate with the General Brotherhood. Here we have a talented company of men. Great possibilities lie before them.

March 12th.—Chas. Oakley and Mansfield, Ohio, seem to be fitted for each other. His Brotherhood has steadily grown. They are at work along many activities—Bible School, civic righteousness, missions, church finance, etc. As a result the whole church is wide awake and growing. Oakley is a great preacher. His men do not wait long to tell you so. A Brotherhood like that can make a great preacher of any man that has "stuff" in him. Their church attendance, by actual count, is second in the city.

March 13th.—One hundred and eighty-seven men faced the secretary at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, besides as many women. Bro. Francis, the pastor, was in a meeting. He made a special call for men this Monday night and turned the audience over to the secretary. These men are doing splendid work in the Bible Class. A contest is on. Their actual attendance was going beyond 200.

March 14th.—The Forest Avenue (Columbus, Ohio) Church is a live wire. T. L. Lowe, the pastor, is surely a man's man. S. J. Neely is a wide-awake president. They are bringing themselves fully into line with the National organization. They have decided to follow published programs and enlarge their activities. They have already done a magnificent work and will do a greater work in the coming year.

March 16th.—Marion, Ind., was launching a Brotherhood. We found them in banquet. A jolly, wide-awake, earnest set of fellows. J. F. Myers, their pastor, has led them to see visions. One hundred and forty-seven men were present. Ninety-one pledged themselves to membership in the Local Brotherhood. Committees were appointed and they started the work with hearty good will.

March 19th.—Sunday morning and at Bellefontaine, Ohio. They have no pastor at present. Dr. Thatcher is the superintendent of the Bible School. They are interested in the Brotherhood work. They will doubtless organize with the coming of a new pastor.

In the evening we spoke from T. W. Pinkerton's pulpit at Kenton, Ohio. It would be hard to put in cold type the warm welcome we received from both Bro. Pinkerton and his people. We interpreted the Brotherhood principles as expressed in the Covenant. At the close of the services the officers of the Local Brotherhood gathered at the front. A lively interest was expressed. The men left expressing a determination to present the matter of affiliation to their men at their next meeting.

March 22d.—Jesse Guy Smith is the live wire pastor at Oxford, Ind. Here we met thirty-six men anxious to know about the Brotherhood movement. Sixteen of them took the Covenant, and organized into a full fledged Brotherhood. They expect to throw their efforts toward organizing a Men's Bible Class as their first line of activity. The social committee invited us to the basement at close of meeting, where we had a social time for an hour.

March 23d.—Rockford, Ill., is the beautiful city in which W. B. Clemmer is pastor. Here is a wide-awake Brotherhood, L. B. D. C. No. 251. Forty-eight men gathered at the banquet table. It was an enthusiastic meeting. Two new members took the Covenant at the close of the address. These men are busy in Bible study work and have a large class. They are also standing royally behind the church finances. The Rockford church is seriously handicapped in that they are meeting in a remodeled building. But Bro. Clemmer and his men are going to eventually be meeting in a real church building.

March 24th.—At Davenport, Ia., we met forty-two of Bro. S. M. Perkin's men. They are a wide-awake bunch of men. They have decided to go after the Bible Class problem systematically. They also determined to follow the suggestive programs for the future year. A joint debate with the Rock Island men was being arranged to take place in the near future. Here we found our old-time friend, Prof. A. F. Ewers. He is superintendent of the Bible School and a busy worker, and is one among a host of live wires.

March 26th.—This was Sunday morning. We found Bro. C. M. Hutchinson calling his Sunday-school to order as we entered the church. A short talk to the Men's Class, a sermon in the morning, an afternoon conference and an evening sermon was the secretary's program for the day. They decided to use CHRISTIAN MEN as Bible Class literature for the men. A committee on organization was appointed.

March 27th and Keokuk, Ia. Monday night is a difficult night to get an audience. But twenty-two men met for conference. Here is where Bro. Lilly, pastor, and J. O. Boyd and many other splendid fellows live. The Keokuk men are doing good work. They have taken up Bible Class work since January 1st and have succeeded royally. They are following the suggestive programs and training their men. The civic committee has done a unique thing. The month of April was set apart by Bro. Lilly for discussing America's problems. The civic committee has been busy for some time collecting tax statistics, labor statistics, industrial statistics, they went through city and county records and have collected a mass of data which they laid on their pastor's desk. From these facts Bro. Lilly is, during April, making his sermons. He is to preach eight, two each Sunday. In the morning he will state the problem; in the evening he will articulate the church to its position.

March 30th was spent at Albia, Ia. J. A. Burns is the new pastor here. He is getting his work well in hand. The meeting was not as well attended as it might have been had conditions been different. It was the first night of a lecture in the regular course. Also one of the popular lodges were initiated. Forty-seven men. Both these attractions were heavily attended. But the meeting was a good one. No organization was formed, but Bro. Burns is leading his men in the right direction.

March 31st.—M. E. Chattey has just taken the pastorate at Centerville, Ia. Twenty men gathered in conference. They decided to take the matter of reorganizing their Local Brotherhood up on Sunday morning. Bro. Chattey is getting hold of his new work in a major way.

April 2d.—Newton, Ia., was under a heavy load of snow and ice all day. Dark clouds hung without, but J. F. Leake and his people brought cheer to the church. In spite of the weather, a storm there was a very good attendance in the morning and evening. They were already organized as a Local Brotherhood. At the close of the evening services they decided to affiliate with the National organization.

April 3d.—Capitol Hill, Des Moines, Ia. A live bunch of men, sure thing! They have the habit of gathering at the church once a week and eating their suppers together. They meet at 6:30 and eat because they are hungry. After then when the inner man is satisfied they are ready for a feast of higher order. Eighty men gathered this evening. To say "We had a glorious meeting" is trite, but is the phrase that tells the fact truly. Pastor V. Horn is sure enough a man's man. These men are doing a magnificent work. It is divided into five departments, viz.: Institutional, Missionary, Civic, Membership, Social. The Institutional is headed by N. C. Hansen, the Social specialist. He is organizing clubs for boys, the shops and missions and is making a success of his work. Associated with him are many men, who form a strong committee. All committees report every time the Brotherhood meets.

The Missionary committee under the leadership of F. E. Harris is conducting three Mission Bible Schools within a short radius of Capitol Hill Church.

The Civic Committee, led by E. C. Givens, is at present coöperating in an interdenominational effort in holding noon meetings in shops. This work is systematically organized. There are twenty-seven shops chosen and twenty-seven speakers rotate until each man has spoken at the twenty-seven places.

The Membership Committee, led by Samuelson, is busy writing men personally and always send at least 100 postal card reminders before each open meeting.

The Social Committee, under leadership of H. F. Newburn, is responsible for promoting sociability and planning means to bring a in social contact. They furnish a full meal for 25 cents once a month, such as the men would have to pay 35 cents to 50 cents were they to eat down town. A new department known as the Bible School Department is about to be created. The chairmen of these departments are the presidents of the Brotherhood.

April 6th and Cedar Rapids. Walter M. White has found his way into the hearts of the Cedar Rapids First Church. He is faithfully organizing every department. This night saw the starting of a Brotherhood. The special work of the Boys is to be the first special work of Bro. White's men. Bro. White is a big-hearted general. We will hear from his work.

April 7th.—Bro. Dan Dungan had marshalled a splendid host at Vinton, Ia. Seventy-three were looking you in the eye, all at the same time, is inspiring. It was a great meeting. Twenty-six of them took the Covenant. Prof. H. C. Coleman was made president. The enthusiasm of these men will not die and "Dan" is the son of his father. We will hear from Vinton.

April 9th.—Sunday, and at Marshalltown. The services make a full day. In the morning the secretary spoke on "God's Loyalty to Man," in the evening on "Man's Loyalty to God." In the afternoon we addressed a union gathering at the Court House. It was a great day. Marshalltown is a great church. C. M. Morris is a great preacher. Dr. Graham is a great Brotherhood president, and Bernard English is a great secretary. Senator Van Law is a great men's teacher. Oh, my! Marshalltown has great men to lend! Their Local Brotherhood is doing a fine work. They are largely responsible for the beautiful new church, and are now planning larger things.

April 10th.—Ames has a good Brotherhood. They have just lately done a worthy deed financially aiding Bro. J. H. Carr, known by many as the eloquent blind preacher of Iowa, Minnesota and Illinois. Bro. Carr was stricken with paralysis four weeks ago and rendered speechless. The Ames Brotherhood decided to send him to Sulphur Springs, Ark., where he hopes to get relief. They have just elected new officers and are laying larger plans for the coming year. Bro. Fred Randall is the new President. T. L. Houser is pastor. J. Groves, of Iowa State Brotherhood Committee, is a member here.

April 12th.—Bro. Clark has been at Eldora, Ia. just two weeks. He is almost a stranger to his people yet, but is fast getting acquainted. Eldora has 2,000 inhabitants, but here we have a live Brotherhood, L. B. D. C. No. 283. C. L. Hays has been the moving spirit. Bro. Hays is a consecrated attorney. He is leading his men to higher grounds and broader visions. He is finding a good running mate in his new pastor.

It is said sometimes that there is nothing for a Brotherhood to do in the small town. There is always something for a Brotherhood to do when there is anything for a church to do. The Eldora Brotherhood has fitted up a room in the basement of the church for their own benefit. They have been active in fraternal aid, in acts of sympathy, and have disbursed $25 during the winter in helping those who needed help. They are reclaiming men who have been down in drink. They are working in a Men's Bible Class. They laid plans tonight to double the attendance of Bible Class and also membership in the Brotherhood. They are observing the printed programs. They are devising means for bringing about 6:00 o'clock closing of business houses, thus giving store people their evenings to their homes and families. They are interested in the civic life of the city and are still planning larger things. Their Brotherhood numbers about thirty.

April 13th.—Mason City is wide awake. Pastor C. H. Devoe, Schmidt, Michaels, Willey, Letts, Peeden, Stratton, Prussia, Hicks and a host of other wide-awake men keep things moving. They are well organized and are laying foundations solidly. They at their last executive meeting determined to have twelve profitable meetings during the coming year. And they are placing special emphasis on the word "profitable." "Twelve meetings" mean, too, that they do not expect to stop for hot weather. They are using the suggestive programs and are developing their latent talent. Here is their "Working Policy for 1911:"

- "1. One good meeting each month.
- "2. Every man in the church and as many more to be good active members of our Brotherhood.
- "3. To promote Christian work among the boys of Mason City.
- "4. Each committee chairman to give a written report at executive meeting in May, August, November and February."

Under "Instructions to Committees" the following is worthy of imitation: "The Program Committee shall arrange the program for each meeting and supply the Press Committee with copy of program arranged at least four days before it is to be rendered." (Italics ours.)

Presbyterian Brotherhood Convention

St. Louis, February 21-2-3

By E. E. ELLIOTT

The most interesting session was on February 22d, Chas. S. Holt, President, presiding. Mr. Holt is an attorney of Chicago, and handled the session in an able manner. Among the things which Brotherhood men had done which were related in the thirty minutes of the conference were:

First, held evangelistic services in six churches where no other meetings had been held in years.

Second, developed men with more spiritual backbone.

Third, took a determined stand for civic righteousness.

Fourth, took stand toward observance of Lord's Day.

Fifth, advocated clean life.

Sixth, has made men.

Seventh, got men together.

Eighth, organized Local Brotherhood councils.

Ninth, sent out letters telling what Brotherhoods were doing and could do, etc.

* * *

A man from Pittsburgh stated that the failures of the Brotherhood, where such occur, are due to their not being well enough organized. Committees are appointed but do not act, not having got the Brotherhood spirit. He emphasized the necessity of appointing live men on committees. In Pittsburgh the Presbyterian Brotherhood has a council of twenty-one men that keeps in touch with Local Brotherhoods in every Presbyterian Church in the district and is holding itself responsible for the success of the Brotherhood Movement in Pittsburgh. Church men need direction. Brotherhoods have succeeded where the leaders have led and have failed where the leaders failed to keep in touch with the work.

A gentleman from Illinois said we should not expect too much of our Brotherhoods in the beginning. It takes years to properly educate our laymen and incidentally our pastors need education as well, for the Brotherhoods are dependent for direction from the pastors, and this instruction must come from them. The Brotherhoods are bringing forward groups of men who have not previously been active. In one church in Illinois they have a blind squadron of fourteen men, under the direction of the President of the Brotherhood, whose purpose is to strengthen the other organizations of the church. They are discovering a large amount of useful material lying dormant. Brotherhood work cannot be done rapidly. That is a question of education and instructions. This blind squadron has been at work for three years and is just now beginning to see some results.

Mr. Chas. T. Thompson, of Minneapolis, a leading attorney, who is also a member of the Executive Committee of the Methodist Religion Forward Movement, spoke of the effect of the Local Brotherhood. He spoke of one church in his section that was wide open by some local disagreement. A Brotherhood man called all the men of the church together after the pastor had left. They put a Brotherhood man in the pulpit. The Brotherhood men got after the whole church proposition and put every department on a proper basis, increased efficiency and advancement of the Bible School, Christian Endeavor and the church services as well.

Mr. Houston, of Denver, told of a church in their vicinity which needed support. The Presbyterian Brotherhood of Denver stood solidly under it, organized a wide-reaching campaign and put the college squarely on its feet, interested business men in the enterprise and finally built a railroad to the school. This was the first time it was mentioned that the Brotherhood had helped build a road.

* * *

Mr. Wilson, of Indianapolis, says the Brotherhood there looks after the work of the Juvenile Court, interests new men coming to the city and gets them immediately into the church. It also does a definite work among foreigners. It was established by the American Bible School Society, under the direction of Rev. Walter Scott Elliott, now of Shanghai, China. They have organized a city Brotherhood with dues of fifty cents per year, and its duty it will be to look after the organization and maintenance of Local Brotherhoods in local churches. They realize that the Local Brotherhoods are busy in their local churches but the City Brotherhood will form the connecting house.

* * *

Mr. Phillips, of Middletown, Ohio, a manufacturing city of fifteen thousand inhabitants, started a Brotherhood with forty-eight members which now has two hundred. The Brotherhood of the Presbyterian Church in Middletown, is rapidly taking the place of the Y. M. C. A. The life of the organization is in the Bible Classes, whose membership is limited to Presbyterians and men not having any church home. They are now looking for a good Presbyterian manager to run the institution and another to act as President and Director.

Andrew Stevenson, of New Jersey, is a member of the Brotherhood of the Fourth Pres-

Church of Chicago, which has decided to build a $500,000 institutional building. At its recent board meeting, $384,000 was subscribed toward this fund.

A gentleman from St. Louis spoke for the establishment of Presbyterian hospitals, himself having been an inmate of two hospitals recently, one a Catholic institution and the other our own Christian Hospital.

* * *

A. H. Humphrey, of Chicago, once National Secretary of the Gideons (Christian Traveling Men's Association), got hold of forty boys. Each boy was given a credit card. When he goes to Sunday-School he gets one credit. If he stays to church, he gets another credit. If he brings his father another, and at the end of a given period, a prize is given for a certain number of credits.

A gentleman from Omaha spoke of a lecture to boys given by a Mr. Lewis. This lecture, we understand, was printed in the proceedings of the Presbyterian Convention held in Pittsburgh in 1910. We will endeavor to locate it and see if we can furnish it to our Brotherhoods.

A gentleman from Kansas City spoke of the Brotherhood work being necessarily spiritual. He said the social life was proper, but not sufficient. The Brotherhood in Kansas City is doing city mission work. The pastor is the one behind the organization. He pulls the men in and the Brotherhood man ought to do the work. They have a men's Bible Class every Sunday, and cannot operate the Brotherhood without the men's weekly meetings. They have every man divided up, with captains over each ten men. They also have a prayer circle, where the Brotherhood men meet with the pastor thirty minutes before service, for prayer. Their annual dues are one dollar, and this includes subscription to the Brotherhood magazine, Presbyterian Men, which is published quarterly.

* * *

Mr. Hull spoke of the appointment of a committee in every church to handle the engine proposition.

* * *

The Brotherhood in New Orleans supports a Missionary in China, contributing three hundred dollars per year.

* * *

A. B. T. Moore, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, spoke on the doctrine of fried chicken. He said the apostasy of the cook-stove was taking hold of many Brotherhoods and making them strictly social instead of religious.

A member of the Men's Sunday Evening Club of Chicago, spoke of the pleasant Sunday afternoons, for which the Brotherhood provides speaker and music and luncheon. Men and women in the boarding house districts are invited and in other ways it follows the plan of the Brotherhoods in England, of which Brother Mark Williams, Pastor of the Second Church in Milwaukee, has told us, and which we hope he will write up for our information, one of these days.

Immediately following this luncheon the Christian Endeavor meeting is held and materially strengthened by the afternoon meeting. They have a squadron of boy scouts and many students in their membership. They are doing a great work among students of Chicago.

* * *

Mr. Post, of Lincoln, Neb., says their Brotherhood reorganized the church, that they now have a live minister and all the organizations are very much alive, that the Brotherhood is largely responsible for erecting the Y. M. C. A. building and the fact that they have no saloons in Lincoln. A town of 150,000 people which is patrolled by eight policemen in the day time and fourteen at night.

* * *

A gentleman from Kentucky said that we hear the argument that there are too few men in the church to organize a Brotherhood but that they had called together men of the Methodist and Christian churches and organized an interdenominational Brotherhood.

* * *

Mr. Moore, of Indianapolis, said the men of his Bible Class subscribed for 432 Bibles, through the Gideons organization, to be placed in the largest hotel in the city.

* * *

Mr. Snead, of Texas, is pastor of a small church which has no Brotherhood. He called the men together and introduced them to each other. He said the majority of them were not acquainted with each other until that time. He said now they are calling each other Bill and Jim on the telephone. These men meet with the pastor for five or ten minutes prayer just before the preaching services.

* * *

Another Brotherhood man says they organized with fifty members and immediately commenced to rehabilitate the church. They bought a new piano for the Bible School and a number of other improvements were added. He reports that his Brotherhood is not intensely spiritual, but it is intensely financial.

A gentleman from Chicago said, "If you do not think the Brotherhood is doing something, better leave it alone." He said also that there is too much lime light thrown upon what our laymen are doing and we forget what our ministers are doing. It is not the minister's fault that our men are not active in the church, and with the proper response on behalf of our men, our ministers will begin to unload some of their heavy burdens.

* * *

Mr. Oakley, of Memphis, says their Brotherhood works in the slums two evenings of the week. Every week their men go two and two to conduct services in churches without pastors, and where the pastors are sick, whether these churches be Presbyterian or any other communion. They also do extensive work in Bible Study.

A gentleman from Joplin, Mo., says their Brotherhood is five months old and now has a membership of a hundred. If any members are not at church on Sunday, the Brotherhood takes it for granted that they are sick and sends them a bouquet of flowers.

* * *

A gentleman from Indiana said their Brotherhood had federated all the base-ball leagues of their city, with Brotherhood men at the head of affairs, and the result has been no Sunday base-ball since the federation was established.

* * *

Another man from Chicago spoke of the organization of a Boys' Brotherhood, which was represented by a delegate to the convention.

* * *

A gentleman from Illinois brought men together socially in his home, and as a result, more men are attending church than ever before.

* * *

There was a query as to how many men it takes to make a Brotherhood. Answer, three.

* * *

There were other brief talks relating to the above subjects, which we did not get, but this was the most interesting thirty minutes we have had for many days.

* * *

The address of Dr. J. I. Vance, of Nashville, Tenn., on "The Challenge of Men and Boys of America" was an able one and held the audience of a thousand men almost without movement for forty-five minutes.

Then followed the address of Geo. M. of Washington, D. C., on "The Brotherhood and the Bible School." There were some interesting things in his address, which we will give below.

* * *

Eighty-five per cent of the church members come from the Sunday-School.

* * *

Seventy-five per cent of the Sunday-School pupils never unite with the church.

* * *

Twenty-two per cent of the Sunday-School pupils unite with the church every year.

* * *

Seventy-five per cent of those who do unite with the church are young men who go out and never return. It is the job of the Brotherhood to conduct and strengthen Bible Schools, so that we can hold young men in the Sunday-School, vitally, where they can discuss only the Bible. Make for efficiency rather than enrollment. Reach those men in the community less likely to be reached by any other good influence.

* * *

There were other inspiring addresses. Rev. Andrew V. V. Raymond, of Buffalo, N. Y., James D. Rankin, of Wilkesburg, Pa., and the remainder of the afternoon session was devoted to a very close conference regarding the Men and Religion Forward Movement. In the evening five thousand people listened to William Jennings Bryan in the Coliseum on his address on "Foreign Missions."

A Brotherhood Legislator

VERMONT FINLEY
Kendallville, Ind.

We present in this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN, a picture of Vermont Finley, a member of the legislature of the State of Indiana, an active Bible School man and a member of L. B. D. C. No. 292. Won to Christ by Chas. S. Medbury, while a student at the Tri-State Normal at Angola, he has not departed from Christian service in the practical sphere of life in which he has been thrown. Distinguishing himself as a student and orator in the Department of the Indiana University and successful in his law practice in Kendallville, he was elected representative of his county in the autumn and served during the recent session of the Indiana State Legislature with honor and distinction. Indianapolis papers frequently referred to him as the brightest and clearest young man in the Indiana Assembly. He was one of a very few temperance men elected to the Indiana Legislature last fall and made a hard fight for the retention of the C. Local Option law. He is Bible School Superintendent at the Kendallville Church and a strong right hand of the pastor, A. B. Hazen. In many of his enterprises and with the members of L. B. D. C. No. 292 he is so popular that the surest way to secure a large attendance is to announce that Finley will speak. He has been known to fill the pulpit when the pastor was away. A Kendallville enthusiast writing to him says: "Keep your eye on Finley. In fifteen years from now, when Champ Clark and the democrats are thrown down and our republicans are in power again, Finley will make good timber for Speaker of the House."

Our second regular meeting was a big success. Had about fifty-five men out, who enjoyed a good program, after which we had lemonade and cakes, also a short session of storytelling, at which H. A. Denton shone out as a bright star. Things are sure to hum with him around and he seems to be very much pleased with the work so far. Two of our men were buried with their Lord in baptism the next night after the meeting, so we are looking for big things in the near future, as I think we have the right man at the helm—one who is very much interested in man and men's work,—so keep your ear close to the ground and if you hear a very loud rumble, just put it down to the credit of Denton of Troy, N. Y. So saith John T. Curtis, Treasurer L. B. D. C. No. 355, Troy, N. Y.

An Invitation

The big meeting of the Brotherhood each year is the annual meeting. This year it will be held in the rooms of the Young Women's Christian Association, Friday evening, February 17, 1911. The price of the dinner will be 50 cents and we expect to begin to eat promptly at 6:30.

H. H. Harmon, Pastor of the First Christian Church, Lincoln, Neb., will deliver the address of the evening on the subject, "The History and Teachings of the Disciples of Christ." Harmon has in his church one of the largest Brotherhoods in the State, and a delegation of his Brotherhood men will accompany him.

Reports of our Brotherhood activities for the past year will be given, officers for the ensuing year will be selected, and just enough refreshment to enliven the occasion will be worked in between times.

This meeting is not only for members of the Brotherhood, but for their friends, and we most heartily invite you to be present and bring any friend you desire, only one condition, however, and that is that your friend must be a man, as this is strictly a stag affair.

Yours for a man's work in a man's way

The Men of Galesburg

More and more the Brotherhood organization demonstrates its power in practical achievement. The first Sunday in April was observed by the church at Galesburg, Ill., as Men's Day, and the particular theme of the day was civic righteousness. A program printed handsomely and widely distributed, announced the different sessions of the different churches. The slogan was: "The Men of Galesburg or the Man of Galilee." E. F. Young, President of the men's class and also President of the Brotherhood, Local No. 259, presided. There was much music. There were important responsive services conducted by the President and the men and then by the President and the boys and finally by the entire school. The sermon was delivered by the pastor, J. A. Barnett, and the subject was "The Man of God." The fact that the weather sprites had arranged a program of snow and thunder and lightning for the same day and hour in no way daunted the men. Seventy-five of them marched through the streets of Galesburg with raised umbrellas singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." The feature of the service was a separate offering by the Brotherhood. A tin pan was provided and President Young stood by the treasure box while a musical number was rendered and the men filed past and threw in their offering to the time of the song. The total offering by this was $102.50.

Addresses of the day were by C. E. Harmon on "Naaman, the Statesman-general," Judge R. C. Rice, on "The Christian in Politics," Roscoe E. Johnson, on "The Friend of the People," Senator La Follette being cited as a type of modern statesman. J. G. Franklin, Superintendent of the Adult Class of Knox County gave a practical talk on the same subject.

And this is not all the Galesburg Brotherhood has been doing. On a recent week they debated the question, "Is Galesburg a dry town?" C. A. Galloway and Roy I. were on the affirmative and Dr. Wing was on the negative. A committee consisting of C. A. Foster, C. A. Galloway, and J. A. Barnett petitioned the Board of Supervisors to release the prisoners now in the county jail for illegal liquor selling and set them to work repairing the streets and highways. This resolution was endorsed with such vigor by the Brotherhood that it tried its hand again and introduced a stringent resolution asking for the abolition of slot machines and all forms of gambling devices. There was also a talk by the Universal Postal Union, by G. P. Foster, postal clerk.

Brotherhood President a Preacher

churches at Gary, Ind., under the vision of Nelson H. and Martha Trimble, made a wonderful record for activity in local work among men. When Brother McCracken came to Gary, in June, the first person who went after for membership was A. W. McCracken, an osteopathic physician who was formerly a minister in the United Presbyterian Church. Brother McCracken got the vision of liberty in Christ upon the New Testament, he came with us. Then Brother McCracken began to urge him to preach the Gospel once more. We omit the intervening years, but the climax is that Brother McCracken is now in Webster City, Iowa, in charge of our church there.

And that is not all that has been done at Gary. They had a Brotherhood of more than ordinary promise. Benjamin Barton was taught of the class. When they started the Third Church in Gary, they had to have a preacher. Brother Barton agreed to supply there. They sent him out to Glen Park Church of Christ, and the pastor of this church and President of the Brotherhood of the First church has wrought with unwavering zeal to the day when he rallied the Brotherhood around him and built again in Gary a church in a day. Thus have come two volunteers for the ministry, each of them in charge of a church and each of them owing their place, their present joy in Christ's service to the consecrated efforts of a pastor who has caught the vision of the possibilities of the Brotherhood.

A Brotherhood Newspaper

Uniontown, Pennsylvania, Local Brotherhood No. 263, has quite eclipsed itself with a committee Brotherhood issue of the Weekly Index, which is an ambitious and well-edited weekly, published in the interests of the Uniontown Brotherhood. The issue bears across the top margin the words "The Brotherhood Number," and carries the emblem in both upper corners and at the head of the first column. The page is adorned with a half-tone of the new president of the Brotherhood, Benton Boyd, and this is followed by an article on the initial phases of their Brotherhood work by Brother Boyd. The rest of the first page is filled with the names of the present officers, J. E. Gans, president; J. E. Hardwick, vice-president; John C. Wilson, secretary; George McKney, treasurer, and an article on "The Duties of the Committees," as outlined by Wm. Gans, president. We cannot too highly commend this article, which runs through several columns, carefully setting forth the duties of the committees. The first assurance that a Brotherhood will succeed comes with carefully organized and efficiently directed committees, and the only assurance an organization can give is that its committee work will be well directed. It is the fact that the president of the organization himself knows what he can expect his committees to do.

The committees organized by the Uniontown Brotherhood are Ways and Means, Membership, Relief, Athletic, Music, Program, Social, Executive, and after thus carefully setting forth the committee duties, very pertinently repeat the names of the members of those committees, with their chairmen. This is a vastly important thing, for, with the president knowing what he can expect from his committees, and the committeemen knowing just what is expected of them, and the entire Brotherhood recognizing that its entire departmental activity is thus properly manned, there comes a sort of organization consciousness which means intelligent coöperation and loyal devotion on the part of all.

One of the very finest features of this Brotherhood issue is a three-column article on the Brotherhood Covenant, by J. Walter Carpenter, the pastor. We have often wondered that pastors did not make more in their preaching of the covenant, and of the value which it contains as an appeal to loftier spiritual endeavor. Here is one pastor who is making the most of it, and underneath all the round of this Brotherhood's activities is very clearly revealed the Christian faith and purpose.

The other articles in the paper are one on the "History of the Brotherhood," and another the "Brotherhood Athletics in Local No. 263," two base-ball teams and other features that appeal to the young blood of the church, are incorporated. Judge M. M. Cochran, one of the National Directors of the Brotherhood, is a member of this Brotherhood, and it would appear a patron saint of the Athletic Department.

Each month we are made to rejoice in fresh evidences of local initiative and larger power developed by Brotherhood organizations. We have not begun to appreciate the significance of this yet. We are walking on the shore of a mighty ocean of possibility.

The Melting Pot in the Middle of the Ocean

A Letter From Honolulu

George Chamberlain, who for a number of years has been serving in the Coast artillery in Honolulu, took an honorable discharge in January, at the end of his enlistment, in order to enter Y. M. C. A. work. He writes interestingly of the Y. M. C. A. in Honolulu and also of the men of our church there, in the following:

We have a splendid staff of THE Y. M. C. A. secretaries here, and especially our General Secretary, and they are backed up by a fine Board of Directors. You see our Association has a peculiar work to do here, as this city of the Pacific Ocean is the great melting pot into which pour the advancing ranks of the Occident and Orient, and from which in the course of time more and more will emerge a new type, as it were, of the American citizen. Through the spirit of love, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of service, we Americans here will endeavor to create within the disposition of the Oriental the purpose to Americanize. And already an encouraging beginning has been made and the work will enlarge as time goes on.

I have become greatly interested in the mission work done here in our city and I can say of it from personal observation that much good is now being accomplished, but so much remains yet to be done. The people are very intelligent and eager to learn, but there are not nearly enough trained workers or means at hand to do the work so much needed right here in this city. If our people on the mainland could realize the great opportunity for service among so many different nationalities, right here under our flag and anxious to be taught, they certainly would be prompt and generous to do their share in bringing Christ to these peoples.

OUR CHURCH The Disciples of Christ have one small central church here, but the membership is shifting so much, this being a tourists' haven, you see, that it makes it hard to build up a strong congregation. There are two mission buildings here owned by the Christian people, but we need funds to support a man at each of them who can give his full time to it. In a mission among these people it requires more than teaching a Sunday-school or, rather, Bible School, and preaching on Sunday. There must be lessons in being clean in person and clothing, in being orderly and having due respect for a church of worship. They must be taught to be honest and frank, and to have pride in their appearance and in making their homes tidy and attractive to the family. They have need of a true friend and helper, one to whom they can go for advice and help in some cases. The district where we have already made a beginning and own a fine little building and furnishings has so many people without a church who are eager to come and learn to better themselves. They need a church life and with it social headquarters for the neighborhood, where the people can enjoy clean recreation and spend some time in improvement.

There is a little group of loyal friends of this worthy work here who will raise a month on the expenses, and we will pray the Lord will open the way to provide the necessary $75 a month.

SLOAN MISSION Under another cover I am sending you a photograph of the Sloan mission in the district I have been telling about. The attendance at the Christmas service was over three hundred and the average attendance has been about a hundred and fifty persons. The children and parents as well are eager to come and but especially the children. In time we to have a strong Bible School, all our men reading the Christian Evangelist, or some church paper, the men organized into a Christian Brotherhood with a department for and the women organized into a Sisterhood with a department for girls. The serial publications of CHRISTIAN MEN and the for women, Missionary Tidings, published in Indianapolis, would be read.

OUR OPPORTUNITY In passing, let me say that in my humble opinion the natural division of church work should be along the lines of sex. Men and boys should be trained in a masculine way to do the masculine duties of Christian service, and the women and girls should be trained in a feminine way to do the work natural to them and in their way of church service, all would cooperate. The Christian Brotherhood with its departments of work is a good idea, why not launch a Sisterhood on similar lines for the women and girls. Under each of these two heads of church work we would group all subdivisions of church activity. It would mean, under proper guidance, higher efficiency.

reference to the Sloan Mission work I told that Mr. W. C. Weeden, 1717 Bingham Honolulu, H. T., is the official representative of the church, in charge of the mission. Mr. Weeden and his wife deserve much for their generous efforts in putting the building in repair recently. They have spent several hundred dollars on it, in fact.

By the way, W. C. Weeden in 1885 was a member of the Eleventh and Locust Street Church of your city, and Mrs. Weeden was in your city at a later date. All remittances should be made to Mr. Weeden.

I now commit the matter into your hands and sincerely pray the Lord will bless richly those who help the cause.

Another Chapter in the Unfinished Book

J. L. HATTOCK

I have been requested by a friend to write of my experiences as a laborer in connection with the American Christian Missionary Society, a task at which I blush to attempt. As the little vessel glides further out on life's sea, I pass so many vessels of so much great importance to suffering humanity, that I often when I think of the small effort I have made. However, I shall repeat a few incidents that will all live in my memory as long as memory lasts.

Six years ago we were called upon to conduct the great Northwest Texas Camp Meeting. J. L. Haddock conducting the personal work, and many other helpers did the pastoral work, and I did the evangelistic work. This was the "cattlemen's camp meetings." The tent could be arranged to seat 6,000 people, and from 100 to 200 other tents dotted the prairie for a half-mile around. While no tent or house was near those big-hearted men, they arranged for city advantages at a big expense and went to work at soul-saving in earnest. The best musicians were secured, good students were at our disposal, and I never heard such singing before, nor since. I saw men come down the long aisles to confess at a time, and some of them had driven hundreds of miles to hear the Gospel preached. Some of them it was said, as wild men of the West, that they had fought every man in the country who would accept their invitation to the Gospel. Many of these noble people have died in Glory; many have become preachers and great workers. All of this country is now crisscrossed with railroads and dotted with cities; hence the camp meeting is no longer so vital, as churches have been established all over this locality. I am glad to say that the people are all missionary. Hundreds of souls are under the influence of the work done by the American Christian Missionary Society in these great meetings.

We were sent into Louisiana as missionaries under the American Christian Missionary Society when Louisiana was surely one of the most destitute fields in the union. A tent and sound lights were prepared. We began at Baton Rouge, a town of 2,500 people, where the colored people had never heard of a plain Christian, as our people had not preached a sermon there in fifty years. With great effort we established a congregation and started a church house that today is a credit to any city. The dear old American Board stood by us and kept us in Louisiana for three years, and church houses were erected in Baton Rouge, Alexandria, Monroe, Cheneyville, Crawley and Jennings. At Jennings we pitched our tent among strangers. At the end of four weeks a lot was secured and money partially raised to erect a house for the new congregation. In nine months I was called back to dedicate the best house in town. Arrangements had been made with the Church Extension Board to borrow $1,000, but the collection on dedication day was sufficient to take care of the indebtedness and to return the $1,000 to the Church Extension. About three years ago the faithful H. L. Magee wrote us to come to Pecos, Tex. Brother Magee is an invalid and part of the time has been speechless; yet he felt there was a great field for hundreds of miles on either side of him. He gave us the Macedonian call. We pitched a tent and laid siege to what was then thought to be a wicked little city. Scores of people accepted the Christ, many of whom were prominent infidels at the beginning, but are now great characters in the Kingdom. Some are preaching the Gospel. At the close of the meeting money was secured and a pressed brick church house was erected, worth $15,000, and the work is felt over the State.

Last December a call from a discouraged sister at Asher, Okla., came, saying: "We want a meeting, but we have no money, no house, and about half a dozen members." We went and preached in an old open storehouse a week, raised money to insure the erection of the best house in the town, and have promised to return sometime during the year and dedicate their new house of worship, but I must desist.

Some ask me as to the best time and place for a meeting. I tell them that now is the best time, as the Gospel faithfully preached never is destitute of results. May God speedily send faithful men into the harvest is our earnest prayer.

Percy G. Cross, Pastor at Little Rock, Arkansas, has a splendid class of men and they propose to use CHRISTIAN MEN as the class paper. The pastor himself subscribes for three years in advance.

The Loyal Men's Class, of Grand Junction, Colo., sent in a handsome club of subscribers for CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine for the men of the class. Two members, H. Benton and Irving E. Wade, have been subscribers from the beginning.

The Bible School at Quincy, Ill., and Hannibal, Mo., just a few miles apart, are preparing for a spirited contest on the order of the Akron-Canton contest last summer. We shall look for some stirring reports from these two Mississippi River towns.

The Loyal Men's Bible Class of the Christian Church, Fort Scott, Kan., issues a beautiful postcard invitation to men to attend their sessions. The reverse side of the card contains a handsome halftone picture of the class. This is a fine idea and makes good advertising.

And now comes William Ross Lloyd, of Belavben fame, now Evangelist in Kentucky, building up Bible Schools and organizing men. At Flemingsburg a men's class organized with 7 has grown to 40 and Bible School from 59 to 175. They send for 50 copies of CHRISTIAN MEN.

Trenton, Mo., has a great Men's Bible Class with the following committees: Hustlers (Get 'em), W. S. Vawter; In Line (Keep 'em), H. J. Bain; Good Times (Social, etc.), T. J. Collins; Program (Spice Box), N. G. Rogers; Devotional (Uplook), F. J. Daniels; Service (Out Reach), W. R. Ward.

Word comes from Jacksonville, Ill., that on a recent Sunday with rainy weather they had an attendance of 408 and a collection of $514.25, the greatest missionary offering in the history of the school. The weekly bulletin gives the offering by classes, showing two classes taken by Mr. Watt and Mr. Harney, offerings of $14 and $85 respectively.

L. B. D. C. No. 314, of the First Church, Seattle, organized a Brotherhood Bible Class with 14 members and have recently taken 40 new members into the Brotherhood Class. A sad thing in connection with the class was the sudden death of one of the members who dropped dead at his work. A. F. Scher, Treasurer of the Brotherhood, is President of the Brotherhood Class; P. J. Gabel, Secretary; O. C. Moss, Teacher, and J. R. Watson, Assistant Teacher. "Watch them grow."

A Brotherhood Class at Hopkins, Mo., was organized on March 12th with 51 men present. This is a town of 900 people with four churches. Some of these men were never known to have been in Sunday-School before and others had never been seen in a church before. J. H. Bryan, Missouri Bible School Superintendent, was present and fired them with great enthusiasm for the Bible School work. The Brotherhood Class hopes to make a record that will be hard to surpass under similar circumstances.

The record books for Secretaries and Treasurers are being received with hearty commendation. Guy Pruitt, Secretary at Sayre, Pa., says, "We are very much pleased with the Secretaries' and Treasurers' record books. We have organized a class of twenty members between the ages of 18 and 35, all of whom have joined our Brotherhood. Sayre is the home of L. B. D. C. No. 360. C. V. Backes, Secretary, L. B. D. C. No. 342, of Sterling, Mo., tells us they are very much pleased with the record books for the Secretary and Treasurer recently purchased from us.

L. B. D. C. No. 248, Ashtabula, Ohio, has a Brotherhood Bible Class enrollment of 165, increasing about 20 every Sunday. They believe their best work to be ahead of them.

is the custom of the Brotherhood Class of Central Church of Des Moines, Iowa, to have a Thursday noon luncheon. Their church being a down town one and easily accessible to the business district, this has become a natural place for the men to meet for the transaction of the church business, the different committees having separate tables. The Brotherhood Bible Class discusses its interests and transacts business here which otherwise would occupy a part of the class hour. Finis Idleman says of the general plan, that it furnishes a delightful opportunity for fellowship in the mid week and is indispensable to their work.

What Can Church Men Do?

THE picture below is of a Brotherhood Bible Class that meets every Sunday for the study of the Word of God, and meets also on week nights twice each month as L. B. D. C. No. 354 for pursuit of CHRISTIAN MEN programs prepared for Brotherhoods, as per pages 37, 38, and 39 of this issue. The Pastor of the church, R. Lee Bussabarger, is an enthusiastic friend of the Brotherhood movement, and will be found leading his men into the biggest tasks to be found in his community.

L. B. D. C. No. 314, of the First Church, Seattle, had forty-five men at a recent banquet, with Judge Frates of the King County Court Juvenile Department, as the chief speaker. They report a splendid interest and commend the Judge for the good work he is doing.

O. H. Williams is the Pastor of L. B. D. C. No. 274, at Bellingham, Wash. In a recent letter he says "Our Brotherhood is still at work. We are gathering men into the Bible School." They are soon to have a meeting with J. A. Lord, late editor of the Christian Standard.

LaFayette, Indiana, is the home of L. B. D. C. No. 359, and F. L. Pettit, Minister, with Sam J. Ellis, one of the workers. A recent report shows a good business meeting held, the appointment of committees and a charge to the membership committee to increase the membership list.

L. B. D. C. No. 351, University Place Church, Champaign, Illinois, remitted dues of $5.90 to the General Brotherhood and since obtaining their charter in January have added ten new members, making their present new membership 55. Stephen E. Fisher is the President and Oliver Harris, Brotherhood Treasurer.

The men of the First Church, Rochester, N. Y., recently organized a Brotherhood, accepted the Covenant and Model Constitution and have affiliated with the National Brotherhood by remitting dues for fourteen members and applying for certificate of membership. W. A. Patterson is the Treasurer and Robert Stewart the Pastor.

Local Brotherhood No. 300, at Pasco, Cal., stood sponsor for a lecture by Mr. J. Anderson, illustrating his famous five year trip around the world, working his way from place to place. On another evening the Brotherhood had a meeting for men only, known as a "Get Acquainted Night." New members were secured and Brotherhood men were enthused. J. R. Gilbert is the President.

A Brotherhood has been organized at Ontario, Cal., with Mr. Schaeffer, President. We understand they are preparing an initiation degree and we hope to have further information along that line for our readers. We understand the degree is based on the life characters of the New Testament and will include a liberal education on the work of the twelve disciples.

L. B. D. C. No. 360, Sayre, Pa., organized March 18th, is holding regular meetings and observing CHRISTIAN MEN programs. Since organizing they have held three meetings with an average attendance of thirty men. Every member is working to make a success of the Brotherhood. At their meeting in April refreshments consisted of hot biscuits and warm maple sugar.

As our Brotherhoods become imbued with the true idea of Brotherhood and fraternalism we frequently hear of instances like the following which comes to us from Uniontown, Pa.: "On Sunday we attended in a body the funeral of Brother Jas. H. Ramage, a member of our church. About 40 men turned out in spite of a terrific storm. Each carried a carnation and laid it on the casket as the men marched. The service was impressing and helpful. Two lodge members were also present, but our men showed up along with them in sharp relief. They showed where they stood for and represented a bunch of Christian men. One of the lodges had a very different looking class of men. The other—a Christian Brotherhood, was not in such contrast."—J. W. CARPENTER, L. B. D. C. No. 263, Uniontown, Pa.

Our Brotherhood held its first annual conference in our church parlors Thursday night. Forty-five men sat together and were glad. F. Van Voorhis, State Secretary of Wisconsin, N. A. Borop, our Beloit Pastor, and A. Ferguson, Pastor at Limon, Colo., were our town guests and made short talks. Mr. Becker sang and led our men in rousing songs. Field Secretary Shellenberger made the address. Twenty-one subscriptions for CHRISTIAN MEN were received. $50 was pledged to the Brotherhood on our church interest. Our ladies certainly served most graciously and our men appreciated by a standing vote H.

hl presided as toastmaster and G. L. Wiley produced the speaker of the evening. Our Brotherhood, we believe, will be as permanent a part of our church life as our organized women's societies—and as helpful. Why not? The Pastor is deeply grateful for his men and with them he is made strong.—The Calendar, Central Christian Church, Rockford, Ill.

The men of Frederick, Okla., met in banquet hall April 15th, and planned for the formation of a Brotherhood, and set a meeting date for April 26th, to form the permanent organization. They ordered thirty copies of the Model Constitution and six copies of "How to Organize," to distribute among their members.

B. L. C. No. 354, of the Park Church, New Albany, Ind., where R. Lee Bussabarger, an energetic Brotherhood man, is the Pastor, held an open meeting on the last Thursday night in March. The church was packed and much enthusiasm was aroused. The event of the evening was an old-fashioned debate on the subject "Resolved; That the tendency to bachelorhood of both men and women is an indication of social decay." Mrs. Bussabarger and Chas. Porter spoke for the affirmative while R. Lee Bussabarger and Miss Rose Shea argued for the negative. The affirmative won unanimously. Several special numbers consisting of reading and songs served to make the evening a most enjoyable one. This Brotherhood uses 20 copies of CHRISTIAN MEN in the Bible School. Our correspondent says Brother Bussabarger has all lines well in hand and we predict great achievements for Local No. 354. We have two strong Brotherhoods in New Albany. The other is No. 330 at Central Church, where R. N. Simpson is Pastor.

II. PROGRAM FOR MAY

The Church and the Social Movements

By H. ERWIN STAFFORD

have noticed from time to time the excellence of the programs produced by the Brotherhood at Massillon, Ohio, L. B. No. 286. Inquiry develops the fact that Brother Stafford makes them. We asked him to stand on the second program for May, which is herewith. We think it is an excellent piece of work. We print, of course, the first program as well, prepared by Mr.

Shellenberger. We should be glad to have you take your choice and write us which you like best and why. We are especially trying to find out whether a fuller program like that of Brother Stafford and those which Brother Shellenberger prepared for us last year is preferred to the briefer and exceedingly pithy and pertinent ones which he has been preparing in the past few months.

Topic: What Are and Why the Social Movements of the Age?

Give a brief sketch of the different movements and the purpose for which they stand.

Why have they come into being—have they been born out of necessity?

Has the church been impractical—failed to see the need?

Has it laid down on the job of blessing men socially?

Discuss: What Should be the Attitude of the Church to the Different Social Movements?

Speak of the natural social endowments and qualifications of the Church.

Treat of the opportunity that lies before the Church in the social world.

The use of the Church building and the Christian home as a factor in keeping the young man who is boarding in the city true to the Church, etc.

Write Select some one, who may have ability to write a short story; for instance, a young man who lived in a small town, was a member of a church that had a strong social life, came to a large city for work, expecting to find the same interesting social life, but finding it not, drifted away into other companionship and was lost to the better things of life.

Topic: Jesus and the Social Problem.

Discuss as the first Individualist.

Is the revelation of the Fatherhood of God—man's relation to God.

Discuss the first great Socialist.

Is his attitude on the Brotherhood of men—man's relation to his fellows.

Discuss kept these two related.

Resolution: Resolved, "That the Church of today is not equipped to meet and solve the social problems that come within its doors."

Biographical Sketch: Robert Raikes and his Work.

Make a study of the man.

Cite the conditions that suggested the first Bible School.

Describe the purpose and scope of the work.

Paper: The Bible School Movement from Robert Raikes to 1900.

The world wide growth of the movement.

The relation of the school to modern citizenship.

The short comings of the Bible School.

Speech: The Modern Adult Class Movement.

The graded school.

The organized adult class and its powers over the unorganized class.

Some things it has accomplished.

Fifteen-Minute Story Session on Big Brotherhood Classes.

Have five live men take three minutes each in telling of the one or two features of some great classes among our people or any other.

Open Debate: Resolved, "That the well organized and affiliated Brotherhood class is a greater factor for good citizenship than the lodge."

Pick out three men for each side who will lead off without being called on.

Note:—All programs should be under the direction of a wide-awake program committee, which would pick out the proper man for the theme, give him a suggestive outline and a list of books, or magazines, as references. Besides this the committee should be ready to help any one whom they have chosen to appear in every way possible.

THE above suggested outline of the subjects is made, first, because it gives a uniform method of treating the subject; second, analysis to a theme is the point at which many men, who otherwise could write a good paper, fall down; third, it is often the means of starting a line of thought of much worth that would not have come but for the printing.

Every program committee should have a magazine index at hand so that all articles in the files of the leading magazines on any subject suggested might be consulted. We have found that many men have had a taste created for reading because they have been thus encouraged to look up a few topics.

LESSON 2—MAY 14.

"ISAIAH'S VISION AND CALL TO SERVICE."—Isa. 6:1-13.

(Home Missionary Lesson.)

American Revised

1 In the year that king Uzziah died I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up; and his train filled the temple. 2 Above him stood the seraphim: each one had six wings; with twain he covered his face, and with twain he covered his feet, and with twain he did fly. 3 And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is Jehovah of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. 4 And the foundations of the thresholds shook at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke. 5 Then said I, Woe is me! for I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, Jehovah of hosts.

6 Then flew one of the seraphim unto me, having a live coal in his hand, which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar: 7 and he touched my mouth with it, and said, Lo, this hath touched thy lips;

Time. 755 B. C. Place. Jerusalem.

Golden Text. "I heard the voice of the Lord saying, 'Whom shall I send and whom shall I send?' Then said I, 'Here am I; send me.'"—Isa. 6:8.

Introduction. Read chapters two to four and note the condition of the country when Isaiah was called to service. Great wealth, mammon worship, pride, social wrongs, government and slaves to fashion, and yet enough leaven left to leaven the lump. It pictures the day when Godliness will triumph. The word Isaiah means, Jehovah is salvation. His father was Amoz. Isaiah stood high socially and was intimate with the king. He was a leading citizen of Judah during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, and Manasseh. Tradition has it that he was put to death by an order of Manasseh, when ninety years of age, because he refused to submit to the king and worship idols. He is said to have been placed between two planks and sawn asunder. Through all the years, his voice cried out against wrong. He was both a statesman and a preacher.

Explanatory. 1—Isaiah was inspired for his service. Uzziah died 755 B. C. The Lord seated on a throne was in high contrast to the end of Uzziah. 2—Seraphim. This indicates servants ready to serve. The first pair indicate reverence; the second, self-forgetfulness; the third, ready for service. Peloubet. 3—They sang and cried responsively, "Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of Hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory." 4—The posts of the temple moved. A proclamation of truth always moves things. The shaking and the smoke were expressions of the glory and power of God. The sight of all this made a profound impression upon Isaiah. The vision fitted him for earnestness in service. 5—Woe means unhappy or wretched. In comparison with what he has seen, he feels small. His lips, neither those of the people with whom he dwells are worthy to speak the praise of Jehovah. According to the Old Testament, a man could not see God and live. Isaiah has seen, hence his fear. 6—A live coal taken from the altar, with all its atoning power, was placed on Isaiah's lips. It was a symbol of purification. Touch thy lips as fire has power to burn away the impurities, so the heavenly fire was a symbol of cleansing from sin and defilement. 8—Whom shall I send? The Lord had angels at His command, but He does not desire to send an angel to preach unto the people. Men can best preach to men. Here am I. Here is a volunteer. It is not difficult to get a man to perform a great task if he has once had a vision. 9—Go and and thine iniquity is taken away, and sin forgiven. 8 And I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, who will go for us? Then I said, Here am I; send me. 9 And he said, Go, and say to this people, Hear ye indeed, but understand not; and see ye indeed, but perceive not. 10 Make the heart of this people stiff, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes; lest they see with their eyes, hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and turn again, and be healed. 11 Then said I, Lord, how long? And he answered, Until cities be waste without inhabitant, and houses without man, and the land become utterly waste, 12 Until Jehovah have removed men far away, and the forsaken places be many in the midst of the land. 13 And if there be yet a tenth in it, it also shall in turn be cut up: as a terebinth, and as an oak, whose stock remaineth, when they are felled: the holy seed is the stock thereof.

ah's first duty was a difficult one. God's men have not always pleasant tasks to perform. He has to stand before his own people and say things which would go to their hearts. Their religion was all formality. 10—*The heart * * * fat.* An allusion is here made to the condition. Heavy ears and closed eyes means no interest and no understanding. The Lord is always willing for people to repent and be saved, but He wants genuine repentance. 11-12—How long? We here have a prediction of the coming Babylonian captivity. This came true. We here have a prediction that the people will be destroyed, but a remnant—a tenth will linger, but they, too, shall be consumed.

The young man Isaiah, while brooding over the condition of his country and studying a way of escape from the destruction that must inevitably come if conditions are not changed, had his mind called away from the power of earthly kings and he saw the Lord of hosts sitting on the throne. The vision was such as to inspire the young man for greater service. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Isaiah was called to a difficult task, because he had been prepared for the task, but he was prepared to accept the preparation necessary to do Jehovah's work on earth. The reason the Lord does not use some people for His work is because they do not put themselves in a position so that they can be useful. There has just as much need today for men of Isaiah's type as He had 2,600 years ago. The Gospel must be carried around the world by men, not by angels. The command is, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel;" and Jesus was talking to men. The Lord could not use Isaiah until first He had cleansed him of defilement. Many a man is useless today because his life is not right. Of all the men in the world, the ones who should keep themselves unspotted from the world, have pure hearts and clean hands, the teacher and preacher of the Gospel should hold first place. God cannot successfully send His pure message through impure channels.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Isaiah? Where did he live and when? What was his vision? To what service was he called? What is the meaning and the purpose of the seraphim? The coal of fire from the altar? What was the condition of Judah at the time Isaiah began to prophesy?

LESSON 3—MAY 21.

"THE SONG OF THE VINEYARD."—ISA. 5:1-12.

(Temperance Lesson.)

Let me sing for my wellbeloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard. My wellbeloved had a vineyard in a very fruitful hill: 2 and he digged it, and gathered up the stones thereof, and planted it with the choicest vine, and built a tower in the midst of it, and also hewed out a winepress therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

And now, O inhabitants of Jerusalem and men of Judah, judge, I pray you, between me and my vineyard. 4 What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes? 5 And now I will tell you what I will do to my vineyard: I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be eaten up; I will break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down: 6 and I will lay it waste; it shall not be pruned nor hoed; but there shall come up briers and thorns: I will also command the clouds that they rain no rain upon it. 7 For the vineyard of Jehovah of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Judah his pleasant plant: and he looked for justice, but, behold, oppression; for righteousness, but, behold, a cry.

8 Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no room, and ye be made to dwell alone in the midst of the land! 9 In mine ears saith Jehovah of hosts, Of a truth many houses shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant. 10 For ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath, and a homer of seed shall yield but an ephah. 11 Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink; that tarry late into the night, till wine inflame them! 12 And the harp and the lute, the tabret and the pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of Jehovah, neither have they considered the operation of his hands.

Time. About 755 B. C. Place. Jerusalem.

Golden Text. "Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to handle strong drink."—Isa. 5:22.

Introduction. Uzziah's reign was a brilliant one. The people had prospered, but the overshadowing sin of the land was drunkenness. The prophet appears as a minstrel before the people of his country and recites a story which is supposed to be the experience of a friend of his with his vineyard. In this manner, he gets before the people the truths he desires to impress upon them as they listen to the simple story that is told.

Explanatory. 1—I will sing. He presents his story as a song. By this means he attracts the people, who listen intently to the song he sings. My well-beloved. The vineyard means the land of Palestine, a fruitful hill, a place where vines would flourish. 2—He digged to loosen the soil. Palestine is stony. The ground was cleared of the stones to aid the growth of the vines. Built a tower, from which to guard the vineyard. While the owners lived in villages, someone stayed in the tower and watched the vineyard at the time of vintage. Wine Press. A vat cut out of the rock, into which the juice ran. Wild grapes. The owner had tilled, planted and prepared for a fine harvest of grapes. His disappointment came in that he received only wild grapes, which were poisonous. 3—The prophet here calls the people to judge. 4—*What * * * more?* Had not all been done that it was possible to do for a great vintage? What more could be done? 5-6—A decision is rendered. To remove the head is to take away, a prediction that the vineyard will be eaten up. To remove the wall, will be trodden under foot. To cease pruning and hoeing means a growth of briars and thorns. Without the rain it becomes parched and barren. Here is a picture which all could understand and none thought the owner of the vineyard unjust. 7—We now have the application of the parable. The vineyard is Israel and the choice fruit the mint of Judah. The wild grapes is that which Israel was producing, which was not pleasing to Jehovah. Oppression was the vintage being gathered. 8—The prophet here talks of the wild grapes that were produced. Woe means a curse. The time had come when Judah was about to be changed into a nation where only a few wealthy men could dwell. Their buying land and adding house to house had been done dishonestly and the evicted land owner was deprived of his rights and citizenship and being unable to find a home was forced from the land. 9—In mine ear. The Lord told Isaiah there would be many houses without inhabitants in the land. This was a prediction of the captivity that was coming. 10—Ten acres. Because of their greed the land will be barren and ten acres will only yield less than eight gallons. A man would only gather one-tenth of the amount he had sown. 11—Woe. Here is a curse pronounced against drunkenness and against the man whose appetite for drink is so strong that it crowds him out of bed at the early morning hour that he may follow strong drink. The meaning is, the strong drink becomes a man's master and literally leads him whithersoever it will. 12—They use the instruments of worship, but there is no spirit of worship. The instruments that are used for the worship of God are now used in pleasing the devil. Jehovah is forgotten and the operations of His hands are not considered.

Comments on the Lesson

It has been proven, by an instrument called a work recorder, that the strength and endurance of the index finger has decreased eight per cent by the taking of one ounce of alcohol with a meal. If it so effects one finger of the body, how about the whole body? Tests of dogs were experimented upon. Alcohol was given to one set and not to the other. The alcoholized dogs had only half the energy shown by the others. A printer experimented with four professional typesetters. They were habitual drinkers. They were allowed on certain days only one ounce of alcohol; on other days, no alcohol. On the latter days they set ten per cent more type than on the former. Does it pay for the employer to employ a man whose system is alcoholized. The man who uses alcohol and his offspring must take an inferior place in the race of life. He is in no condition to compete with the clear brain of the man who touches not and tastes not intoxicants. Alcohol is a poison. It weakens the heart, the brain, nerves, liver, kidneys and stomach. A drinking man is susceptible to contagious diseases. Woe to the man who is addicted to the use of alcohol if tuberculosis or pneumonia touches him. The most gigantic evil in the land today is the whiskey evil. There are about 300,000 liquor dealers in the United States, and over five million men employed in the manufacture of liquors. But the liquor traffic is wrong. Through the schools, churches, Bible schools and temperance organizations, a public sentiment is being created and conscience is being aroused, and already throughout the land men are rising in the power of righteousness and are smiting this tiger in its lair.

Questions for Class Use

In what form was Isaiah presenting his teaching? What was the condition of the country when he spoke? What was the threatening of God concerning Judah? Where was the evil of adding field to field and house to house? What woes are pronounced upon men, in this lesson?

LESSON 4—MAY 28.

(International Peace Lesson.)

1 But in the latter days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of Jehovah's house shall be established on the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and peoples shall flow unto it.

2 And many nations shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of Jehovah, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. For out of shall go forth the law, and the word of Jehovah from Jerusalem; 3 and he will be between many peoples, and will judge concerning strong nations afar off: they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. 4 But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and they shall make them afraid: for the strength of Jehovah of hosts hath spoken it. For all the peoples walk every one in the name of his god; and we will walk in the name of Jehovah our God for ever and ever.

6 In that day, saith Jehovah, will I assemble that which is lame, and I will gather that which is driven away, and that which I have afflicted; 7 and I will make that which was lame a remnant, and that which was cast far off a strong nation: and Jehovah will reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth even forever. 8 And thou, O tower of the flock, the hill of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, yea, the former dominion shall come, the kingdom of the daughter of Jerusalem.

Time. 740 B. C. Place. Moresheth.

Golden Text. "Nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn any more."—Mic. 4:3.

Introduction. Read the book of Micah. Micah prophesied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. He was from Moresheth, a village between the mountain ridge of Judah and the Maritime plain. He not only talked of peace, but condemned the prevailing sins of his day.

Explanatory. 1—In the latter days. Undoubtedly the time of the Messiah, the Messianic age is described. Mountain of Jehovah's house. The Lord's house stood on Mt. Moriah, a part of Mt. Zion. Jehovah's worship was to be preëminent and enduring, to be supreme over all other faiths. And all the people, Jew and Gentile, would flow into it. 2—Many nations meaning, all peoples. They will speak one to another, inviting them to go to the presence of Jehovah. The purpose in their going was that he might teach them. Jerusalem was to be the center. It is but a prophecy of the going forth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, from Jerusalem. 3—I will judge. Jehovah will have influence over the nations and His teaching will lead the people to love, to beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation will not desire to war against nation. There will be no occasion for learning the art of war, anymore. 4—The vine and fig tree. Every Palestine garden had a vine and fig tree. Every man would have his own when war was over. People shall dwell in plenty and be surrounded with peace. 5—The people walk. The people would walk in the name of Jehovah. 6-7—When this shall come to pass, the Lord will assemble the remnant that was left. 8—The former dominion shall come. That is, the rule of the Davidic line, which had been interrupted by the captivity, is to be restored. We find the fulfillment in Christ's reign.

Comments on the Lesson

Fifteen billion lives have been lost in the wars of the world. Forty thousand millions of dollars is about the amount paid by the nations of the world in cash in a single century for war. This does not include the enormous destruction of property. General Sherman estimated that at least three hundred millions of dollars worth of property was destroyed by his army alone in its march to the sea. When the last soldier of the Civil War and his wife shall have passed away, the pensions will have amounted to five billions of dollars. A duel is only a duel on a large scale. We forbid a duel today, why not war? It costs ten million dollars to build a warship and one million dollars a year to maintain it, and it is out of commission in fifteen years. The amount of money expended in war, if expended in the preaching of the Gospel, building hospitals and schools, would help to develop a citizenship that would be stronger than the armies of the world. The better the people, the more enlightened, the more they become Christianized, the less occasion for war.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Micah? Where was he reared? What are the conditions of his country as described in his book? What is his prediction concerning universal peace? When was his prophecy to be fulfilled? What are the agencies now at work to bring about the fulfillment of his prophecy?

LESSON 1.—JUNE 4.

"ISRAEL'S PENITENCE AND GOD'S PARDON."—HOSEA 14.

O Israel, return unto Jehovah thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. 2 Take with you words, and return unto Jehovah: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and accept that which is good: so will we render as bullocks the offering of our lips. 3 Assyria shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses; neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods; for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.

4 I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for mine anger is turned away from him. 5 I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall blossom as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. 6 His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. 7 They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the grain, and blossom as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. 8 Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have answered, and will regard him: I am like a green fir tree; from me is thy fruit found.

9 Who is wise, that he may understand these things? prudent, that he may know them? for the ways of Jehovah are right, and the just shall walk in them; but transgressors shall fall therein.

Time. About 792 B. C. Place. The Northern Kingdom.

Golden Text. "Thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger.—Neh. 9:17.

Introduction. Read carefully the entire book of Hosea. In this lesson we are near the close of the Northern Kingdom's existence. Hosea, the prophet, makes a final appeal. It is significant that the prophet's name means salvation. All we know of Hosea is what we learn from his writings. We learn he was the son of Beerī. His home life was sad. Hosea saw many wives like his own, who had fallen, and in the majority of cases, he traced their downfall to the licentious worship of idols. Many a man is forced to strike hard blows at evil because the evil has first attacked his own home. The worship of Israel had degenerated into sensuality. The idol worship was revolting. Hosea's call was back to the worship of Jehovah.

Explanatory. 1—Thou hast fallen by thy iniquity. He saw in the movements of Israel the tragedy of his own home. He had married a wife who had proven unfaithful to him. She deserted her husband and took up with others and was finally sold into slavery. He purchased her and did his best to again make her respectable. He applies the story of his home life to Israel's condition. 2—Take with you words. Instead of taking sacrifices and burnt offerings, Hosea urges the people to bring words which will show the sincerity of their heart. It was a heart service that God wanted, not merely a gift of rams and bullocks. 3—Assyria shall not save us. Hosea desires Israel to recognize that Jehovah is more powerful than the armies of earth. They were to renounce human aid and accept God's protection. 4—We will not ride upon horses. They were no longer to depend on horses and armies. They are weak when compared with Jehovah's strength. 5—Neither will we say. This means breaking away entirely from idolatry. 6—I will heal their back-sliding. The prophet now gives Jehovah's answer. God would forgive their backward movements. He is a God of love, and notwithstanding their drunkenness, in that they are a changed people, He will love them freely. 7—I will be as dew unto Israel. In the absence of rain, dew was a great blessing to the land. 8—He shall blossom as a lily. The lily suggested purity and beauty. 9—Cast forth his root as Lebanon. The cedars of Lebanon could be shaken by no storms. They are known for their strength and stability. 10—His beauty shall be as an olive tree. The olive tree is both beautiful and serviceable. The full value of the olive tree is not reached until fifty or twenty years. It requires much watering and digging, but when it matures, the tree endures for centuries. 11—And his smell as Lebanon. Lebanon was covered with olive orchards, vineyards and fertile fields. Its plants and flowers made it exceedingly fragrant. 12—They that dwell. The greatest prosperity is here predicted. 13—Ephraim. The tribe of Ephraim was given over to idol worship more than any other of Israel. Ephraim here represents a nation. In his strength and prosperity, Ephraim now contrasts his present prosperity with the time when he worshiped idols. 14—Who is wise? In closing, the prophet points out a wise and prudent man is he who recognizes that Jehovah's ways are right and walk therein.

What would become of the world if none would suffer for it? A reformer many a time has to virtually lay down his life for his people. Someone has to do the arousing. If there were none to sound the clarion call, none to call the people back, into what ruin we would be plunged. The condition of the kingdom was appalling to Hosea. He was in touch with Jehovah and knew what was right. Only such a one can effectively turn the people from the error of their ways. We need Hoseas today. In a Christian nation, people forget. God's love is unending and His love goes forth to the erring one who repents, and the beautiful imagery set forth by the prophet in describing the strong people of Jehovah is just as true today as then. The wise and prudent accept God and His Son.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Hosea. What was the shadow that darkened his life? What were the sins of the people of his day? What figures did he use in describing the blessings they would receive from Jehovah? What does this lesson teach concerning God's love? What does it teach about repentance?

How often, oh, men, how often must we remind you that the church of God is a religious institution and that it is folly and failure in the beginning to seek to rally the men of your church upon any basis that is not religious? Only men of faith have the necessary unselfishness to engage in the labors which the Brotherhood program involves. Only men of persistency, men who are willing to sacrifice for the sake of success and wait long for the day of fruitage, are capable of realizing the ideals at which the Brotherhood movement aims. A Brotherhood organization is no picnic party. It is no social club. It is no affability affair. True, it will have picnics, social life, and an atmosphere of affability, but these are only incidental to the great, high purpose expressed in the covenant. That is, a purpose to adhere to the program of Jesus Christ for the individual, and for society and to devote themselves to the carrying out of that program.

Noblesse Oblige

A busy pastor of an important church remarked to one of our field secretaries the other day that he had recently been invited to make an address before a Brotherhood at considerable distance from him. He was very happy to respond, travelled almost across a State and was away from home the better part of two days, enduring the usual discomforts of a large crowd, etc., but received, above the railroad expense and the meals he had to buy on the way, the sum of forty cents to cover wear and tear. It seemed to him that a Brotherhood organization ought to be sufficiently thoughtful and considerate of a man's time and energy not to ask so much and offer so little.

The privilege of addressing an interesting and enthusiastic body of men is always one thoroughly worth while, but few men can pay so much as this brother expended in time and vital energy for its privileges. Of course it was mere oversight or failure to comprehend on the part of the men. It is a common impression that preachers just delight to make speeches and that all one has to do is to give them an opportunity. Now, it is true that every honest, earnest, faithful preacher of the Word is willing to do anything he can to advance the Kingdom, that he does not measure cost and expenditure within reasonable limits, but certainly, where as much time as this was expended, to have given this good man what was practically nothing at all was just a trifle absent-minded.

The brother was not himself coming; he only mentioned it and suggested that we speak of it in the magazine Brotherhoods not to start them on so low a plane. It is our own fault that this was mere thoughtlessness. We mention it that other Brothers may not be similarly guilty.

The Man of the Hour

The man of the hour in Portland now is the man whose picture is on the cover of this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN. His last name, as you doubtless know, is Reagor and his first, as we are about to tell you, is Will. Oh, perhaps it is William in the family Bible, back in the blue grass region, and whether he now reposes in a Kentucky or Tennessee homestead at the moment we do not know. But the name is Will, or, as you may perhaps think, William. And by the by, never think of the evolution of a man. There was a time when the subject of this sketch was Willie. That was when his mother starched his pinafore and slicked his hair back smooth and started him off to school. But it was little Willie who left his back door yard, it was Bill who six years later catapulted into the marble hall crowd at the schoolhouse door. As he grew a little older and began winning the girls to like him, Bill had to take place to Billy. But when some of parental or scholastic discipline brought him under the stern influence of father or master the teacher thundered the ominous summons and his fate rolled and reverberated through the liquid syllables of William. Now, out in the big world of the pastoral life, the old evolution repeats itself with variations. His name is Will, his intimate friends call him Bill, and some of us who have seen smoke hanging low over the smoke position suddenly burst into a flash, volcanic in its vehemence, we dare to call him, affectionately, Bill. But for the purposes of this, he is neither Will nor Bill, but m—William F. Reagor, Chairman Portland Convention Committee, mitred bishop of a growing dio-

First Church in Portland was not epecially easy proposition. It is rrounded by great churches of the or nations, but while surrounded it n: been overshadowed. The work W. F. Reagor in the First Church Portland is without doubt the best is life, thus far. As one of his mem- s is said, "Enlargement is the watchword all along the line. Progress and Christian service is the characteristic of his work."

The First Church employs an Associate Pastor who looks specially after the Bible School and the finances. The Bible School organization is thoroughly up-to-date, the Brotherhood is alive and active and the activities among the boys and young men are wisely fostered. The C. W. B. M. is not neglected, but beyond this one of the notable things in this church is the Sisterhood, an organization of all the women of the church into a relationship intended to be to the women's work what the Brotherhood is to the men's work.

During this brief pastorate many difficulties have been solved, many rough places have been smoothed, many souls have been won to Jesus Christ, the proclamation of the plea for a united church upon the New Testament basis has been cried aloud with force and vigor and yet in a spirit of tenderness and humility that has multiplied its power. Still greater times are just ahead of this congregation, but W. F. Reagor is not a one-church man. His vision has been broad enough to see and to recognize and co-operate just as far as possible with the work of our other churches in that city. Our brethren have honored themselves in making him chairman of this committee and it may be said to our brethren throughout the country at large that his executive ability, his tried experience in city work and his intimate knowledge of the needs and methods of our great conventions are such as to insure a provision for the entertainment of the International Convention of 1911 that will be second to none in the history of our great cause.

Thos. G. Picton

Convention Secretary, Portland, Oregon

The Secretary of the Portland Committee, who for a period of more than six months has been devoting his entire time to preparation for this convention, is a man who deserves a wider introduction to our Brotherhood beyond the mountains. Picton is his name, and he is a man who goes to extremes. He began his ministry in Maine. He is carrying it on in Oregon. For a long time he was paraded as the handsomest unmarried preacher in California, and now the pendulum has swung again, for he picked out the finest girl he could find and married her and now his wife insists that he is the handsomest married minister in the whole Pacific Coast. We here present his features and enter him for the beauty show.

In the ministry Brother Picton has specialized in Bible School work. His pastorate at Woodland, Cal., which for many years was the greatest and now is one of the greatest churches in the Northern part of the State and his last pastorate, at the Rodney Avenue Church in Portland, both reveal his master hand in this department of church work. His duties as secretary of the Portland Committee are being discharged with a tact and fidelity that will not only multiply friends for himself but greatly increase the attendance at the convention itself.

Any mention of our Portland which did not include that veteran many years of faithful service, Brother Ghormley, would be entirely incomplete. Brother Ghormley served for many years as pastor of the First Church and on the South Side he ministers in the great structure recently dedicated Central Church of Portland. The popularity of his meetings and the praise of his converts is everywhere on the Coast.

We learn that Herbert Moninger, well known Bible School special agent in Cincinnati, is in the hospital. His friends will hear with something of a shock that he has passed through a great deal of an operation for appendicitis. Happily our information states that he is on the way to speedy recovery.

Call for Meeting

The Third Annual Convention of the General Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ will be held in connection with the International Convention at Portland, Oregon, on Tuesday, July 5, 1911, beginning at one o'clock p. m. Due announcement of the place of meeting will be made in the July issue of CHRISTIAN. It is urged that every Local Brotherhood elect their delegates, one of whom shall be the pastor, and send as many as possible to participate in the affairs of the convention.

A meeting of the Advisory Council, consisting of the National Directors, State Brotherhood presidents and secretaries and one delegate from each State where there is no State organization, will meet Wednesday morning, July 5, at a place to be later announced, for the purpose of nominating a National President.

President, Recording Secretary, Treasurer and seven directors and make such recommendations in regard to policy and management of the Gen- Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ may be necessary and wise.

Summer Time Suggestions

are called for suggestions for summer activities. Below we give replies. This is alarming. Does it mean that only Brotherhoods are actually prepared for summer time, and that all the rest are wasting sheep's eyes at Coney Island and the old swimming hole? Every Executive Committee of every Brotherhood ought to hold an immediate meeting on the subject of summer time plans, perhaps after digesting the matter and what themselves they could make the basis of a program for a regular meeting of the Brotherhood. This is a subject the importance of which every individual member will be prompt to recognize and the discussion of so vital a subject in an open parliament will undoubtedly bring out the necessary solutions and commit the men to the carrying out of whatever plans are adopted.

Some of the suggestions that have come to us are very valuable and we list them below:

Our men were very loyal and supported every meeting called, took part in men's meetings at Y. M. C. A., all during last summer, and in fact on account of their splendid response we have not laid any special plans for the coming summer. Have started to hold two meetings a month and expect from present interest to have continued active work this summer.

C. H. DAUM,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 325,
Riverside, Cal.

Brotherhood No. 310 is taking the lead in the organization of a federation of men's clubs of Rock Island. We hope to put this across this summer.

WILLARD A. SCHAEFFER,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 310,
Rock Island, Ill.

Our Brotherhood will meet once each month during the summer. Four committees, one for each meeting, have been assigned to prepare a program of special interest for these meetings.

J. O. BOYD,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 288, Keokuk, Iowa.

* * *

My policy is that of never suggesting to the men the idea of summer slump, but at the same time get the leaders to put in extra effort to keep interest up. Always keep the vision that we are going to have more to the next meeting than we had last time. Ninety-three men attended church in a body on Brotherhood Night two weeks ago.

E. M. POLK,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 291,
Elkhart, Ind

* * *

For our summer work we want to entertain our men and boys as much as possible to keep up interest. First, we are organizing a B. D. C. brass band and will give concerts each week and Fourth of July we want to give our boys a "sane Fourth" and will take them for a picnic to an inland lake about twelve miles from railroad and away from cannon crackers.

H. S. RUDDOCK,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 366,
South Bend, Ind.

* * *

Our plan for the summer is to hold two mission meetings in Ada, build and dedicate a mission work in a day, July 4th, also plan to have a rally meeting addressed by an out-of-town speaker.

LEROY M. ANDERSON,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 337, Ada, Okla.

* * *

Our class has entered a contest with the men's class of the East End Pittsburgh church and the men's class of the First Church at Washington, Pa., for attendance during the summer. Expect good results.

A. R. KREWSON,
Vice-President, L. B. D. C.
No. 299, Bellevue, Pa.

We resolve for the next three months to increase our Bible Class or our Brotherhood class to fifty men. We now have enrolled seventeen, but will try to have the fifty before the time is up. Will be thankful for any suggestion that will help to increase interest in the Brotherhood.

P. J. MOSELEY,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 342,
Sterling, Colo

Our plans for the summer are to keep our work going besides our regular monthly meetings, which are well attended and much interest shown. We are having a monthly union meeting of all the Brotherhoods in the city and the Chautauqua has given us a day and will bring a great speaker and worker to us. We expect great times this summer.

J. O. CONKLIN,
President, L. B. D. C. No. 330,
New Albany, Ind.

The second Brotherhood program for June deals with the most inviting topic, "The Democracy of the Master." It looks forward, of course, to our great National holiday, the Fourth of July. It affords a rare opportunity for Brotherhood men to hold patriotic service. It is also an open door for the Civic Committee. Here is a place to connect up your Brotherhood Movement vitally to the State and the Nation. The program published in this issue of the magazine will be found very suggestive.

A Message from the Transportation Committee

"Please send me all information regarding routes, rates, etc., to the Portland Convention. My church board, acting upon the suggestion of the Transportation Committee, voted to send me to the Convention, and I want to begin preparations for the trip." Thus writes a pastor from one of the Eastern States.

Let us quote another letter from one of the leading preachers in one of the Central States: "It would be a delight to be with you were I able to make the trip, but like the majority of ministers, financial circumstances preclude my attendance. There is a small chance that my church may catch the vision of sending me."

We wish these two statements to be read by 100,000 of our church members and that it would burn into their hearts and pocket books until the paltry dollars necessary for the trip are in the hands of the worthy ministers of supreme importance. Matters of supreme importance come before the Portland Convention and each one of them cries for a representative attendance. We have felt ourselves, that possibly our people are tired of conventions, but when we receive such letters as those from which the above extracts are taken, we are certain that our church membership is very much alive to the situation, and one is more anxious to add oil to the wheels of our religious progress. The worthy Heralds of the Kingdom stand in our pulpits and proclaim the message of a risen Lord. Brethren, we allow a matter of a half dollar or a dollar from a hundred or two hundred members in our local church to stand in the way of having a representative at the convention, who will "represent" us. No other representative can possibly be found. The rates of fare are the lowest in years, the season the most propitious in our history, and the matter standing in the way of attendance of our unpaid ministry is the price of a railroad ticket, and a few extra dollars for living expenses. The transportation committee feels that it voices the sentiment of our Brotherhood at large in saying that those churches that want their minister to keep up with the progress of our movement, and perform a divine contribution to the cause he loves are es, will provide the necessary where-al to make the trip possible. Con-; brethren, consider.

Faithfully, your servants,

THE TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE,

E. E. ELLIOTT, Chairman,
Kansas City, Mo.

J. H. MOHORTER,
St. Louis, Mo.

MRS. EFFIE CUNNINGHAM,
Indianapolis, Ind.

R. H. WAGGENER, Cincinnati, Ohio.

O. F. JORDAN,
Chicago, Ill.

The first program for July, for Local Brotherhoods, deals with "The Influence of Great Men." At a time when the world's social and industrial life was more complex than now and when advances of transportation and communication have brought the ends of the earth closer, so that the effect of mass population is a more omnipresent one than before in the history of the world, nevertheless notable that great personalities, instead of being lost in this mass, make themselves felt the more acutely. Men like Tolstoy, Gladstone, Lincoln and other great personalities of their influence far today and it does seem a wise and fitting thing that our Brotherhoods engaged in the protection of manhood should study the influence of great men of our times and of the past and things that go to make up that influence.

A reference to the printed program will show that Mr. Shellenberger has been particularly happy in the drift given to the line of thought.

The Golden Road—And the Smile that Won't Come Off

FRANK WALLER ALLEN
Paris, Mo.

The smile that won't come off belongs to Frank Waller Allen, pastor of the church at Paris, Mo., Abbot of the Greyfriars, high priest of literature and friend of the common man. Other things being equal, that man will succeed best as a minister of Jesus Christ and shepherd of one of His flocks who has touched life most widely.
But it is not enough to say that Frank Allen has touched life. The reverse is also true; life has touched him.
It touched him in his barefoot, boyhood days when he wandered over the Kentucky hills and dipped his brown toes in pasture land dew. It touched him when he was learning the rudiments of newspaper reporting on the Louisville Courier-Journal, and it soaked his mind full of the seamy, noisesome underlife when he was reporter on the Journal in Kansas City.

Was it the rebound from this that makes his books so full of nature, so full of the open road, of the high sky, of the wandering, vagrant breezes and the lights that dance upon the waters?
Here is a man that knows the nooks and the crannies of the town, the hot, steaming life that flows to and fro upon the city bricks. As a busy pastor, his heart is filled with all the burdens of his people. He knows where the sick children live, where the heart of a wife is breaking, and where a man has lost his grip upon himself and is desperately battling his way toward a new life. Kindly conscious of all this, kindly helpful in the midst of it, yet he has a mind that turns out into the open way. He writes books full of nature and not a frowzy, unkempt, cabbage garden sort of nature it is either, but a quiet, peaceful, ordered out-of-doors, so harmonious and restful as to give the impression that it is clean and fresh from the creator's hand.

Allen's first book, although I have heard much of it, only came to my hand recently and lies yet unopened but the title, "Back to Arcody," stares at me reproachfully. It seems to say, "Why don't you leave the grind and come out with me out into the wide open world of nature?" I cannot go yet, but some day I purpose the excursion. Some day the easy chair, the subdued light, with birds twittering in the boughs that rustle and sway in the morning breezes outside my library window, with a shining strip of the Missouri heliographing its good-fellowship up through the trees on the crest of the hill, then I shall pick up the book, swing the cover open like a gate and walk out into God's great out-of-doors, see the flowers that bloom on the hillside and the roses on the cheeks of the fields, and the warm, pulsing, ambitious life of the men and women that make Frank Allen's brain their camping ground at dream-time.

Still I don't exactly know the man. I have just seen a letter or two from his pen, a clipping from a newspaper and heard of him through his friends. But besides I have read his book, "The Golden Road." The Golden Road—that's a taking title. And the book? Well, I find it hard to review or to criticise. To begin with, it is an airy, fairy, el sort of tale, just like some of the tucky highways that it tells about. do not start anywhere in particular meander over the hills, through the past the meadow, along the river and away, and away, and away! There a delightful sense of irresponsibility the narrative that amounts almost to audacity of genius. The author nowhere to betray the slightest consciousness that he has any obligation grip the attention or to get on with the tale. One sits down and takes up the book. (It is beautifully bound, tastefully printed, and the pages artistically decorated. The bookmakers have been good to "The Golden Road." They have done for it the best that have seen bestowed upon current fiction.) And then one turns the page. The first sentence was not intended to grip attention. It was just to lead down there by a writer supremely confident of himself, as naturally as one lets down the pasture bars, certain that the horse will immediately find her way into the clover field. As simply as that the story starts. Sentence by sentence the author lets down the bars and the reader follows into the fairyland of that little village on the Ohio river and begins to make the acquaintance of that interesting boy and that fascinating girl whom he comes to know so well.

The chief character creation is Francois, half peddler, half gypsy, half Indian. Francois is most interesting, although not entirely convincing; not that we are asked to believe too much of him, perhaps, but because he does so well his part of forming a pivot upon which scene after scene of the story swings that we come to care more for the scenery and the story than for the characters. Francois brings us to the river and the road. He brings us at last to the that old mansion around which the imagination of youth has woven such a web of mystery and romance.

But there are others. That dear old father—and the careful spinster. And the boy, too; a natural, life-like character with all of a boy's prejudices and flashes of humor. We like him fine. Alas! The boy grows up and becomes a doctor and the wooer. We like him so much then because he has grown self-conscious, and besides we are jealous of him—very jealous—on behalf of the girl.

And what a girl! What boots it that the road is golden if we must travel it? How bare a thing is the most beautiful road when occupied only by an anciently old caravan, drawn by spirit-horses, even though they be urged by a driver whose mind is full of memories, whose past is mixed with mysteries, who continually burdens the air with quaint French melodies and in the business method the wanderlust triumphs over the moneylust. But the girl! Frank Waller Allen, it is the golden girl that makes your golden road the road which men will delight to travel. The glorious, this girl with the wonderful eyes, this girl that is so sweet and so warm, so warm, and radiant and wonderful. In her thou hast a treasure indeed. Here is a heroine worth all the heroines that writers have wrought since the beginning of time. And let it be known to the world that heroines are much in demand upon the literary field. Today the unhorsed Duke of Gloster in the forest for a publisher goes not limping across the field, ripping the strident air with cries of "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" Rather he sweats in his study, tearing his hair and crying "A heroine! A heroine! My kingdom for a heroine!"

But to return to the tale of the Golden Road. Well, it ends. It wanders on, from enchantment to enchantment, until at last you suddenly find yourself off the road and into the scrub oak of empty pages. The story has run out. It slipped from you unawares. Like a hound that has overrun the trail, I nosed back unsated through the closing paragraphs.

When a man so young who has come in contact with so much of the blacker, uglier connotations of human experience, yet retains his sense of proportion and the ability to see that the higher and truer life of this world is good, and can sound with his pen a note that is pure and optimistic while at the same time warm and passionate with the blood of humanity itself, his is a personality worth pausing to take into account. When in his second novel such a man can weave a romance so compelling that though months slip by it yet remains with the memory like an enchanted vision of a world complete in itself, it is ground for calling attention to both man and book as one whose future it will be worth while to watch.

Inside Play

The progress of the national game in the last ten years has been in the direction of what is called inside base-ball. By this is meant the suppression of individualism and the development of a communal spirit in the game. Star play is wanted, but the star who would sacrifice the prospects of his team to increase his stellar brilliancy is disrated. Inside base-ball means concerted action developed to the highest power; it means that the manager on the bench, the men in the field and on the bases have established an inter-relationship of intent and action so close that they play the game as one man.

It is the conviction of many people that the time has come for more inside play among the Disciples of Christ. There is a feeling that individualism and that ultra-protestantism, of which we are perhaps the most ultra-expression, is in danger of going one step too far. We are a people of diversified interests, but a common aim, yet in this day of over-multiplication of societies there are times when it almost seems as though churches, societies and special interests were engaged in exploiting each other. We know there is a unity of purpose but diverse methods of expression are vociferously manifested. Soberly, men have paused and questioned if we who would plead for unity should not ourselves be more united. Hence the unification committees and talk of conferences and discussions and debates regarding representative conventions.

This wish for closer coöperation among the Disciples of Christ is widespread and earnest. The problem is one of the most important that ever confronted the Disciples and the proper adjustment as delicate as churchmen have undertook to regulate.

We are absolutely certain, all of us, that we will allow no man or convention of men to fetter us, either in thinking or in action. At the price of church-romances centuries have we come to stand in freedom wherewith Christ has set us free. On the other hand, we plead for union. We remember that the church is a community and not an aggregation. We would avoid waste. We would escape the evils of ruinous competition. We would not leave ourselves open to the clash and jangle and discord that comes from rivaling interests in a common field. Moreover, we are sensible of growing tendencies to unite. The analogy of the seven sticks is to the fancy of this age. E Pluribus Unum is stamped on the circulating medium of human thought. The tendency to combination is everywhere. We have combined armies and combined railroads and combined stores and combined manufactories. We have combinations of capital and combinations of labor. We are soon to have combinations of social effort. The pu n's Christian Association, the Laymen's Missionary Movement and the Men Religion Forward Movement each represent combinations of religion.

Combination of effort is that step in the order of human progress which the world is taking today. The universe is

The old philosophers saw it. The world is won. Jesus revealed this in the monotony of His experience. On one side He touched on the life of God. On the other side He touched and is touching on the life of men. It was Paul more clearly than any other wrought out, in that mighty and ever widening concentrics of universals which he seemed to be involved in the program of Jesus.

The message of Christianity is a message of unities. Every great combination in the world of business is but acquiring the heritage which God offers the world through Christ. And may it be that the church which has brought the world this vision of the possibility of value of combination shall herself not enjoy its fruits? Hardly. All the logic of circumstance and the pressure of conditions will throw its historical branches of the church back upon itself again and again until at last they are fused in the common whole, out of which will come forth the spirit of universal conquest and the ultimate of service. Neither would it seem possible that our own ultra-individualism can long resist the logic of our tendencies, nor the sentiment of our own plea.

The Committee on Unification, which has been appointed and reappointed from one time in our National Conventions and is now working under instructions from the Topeka Convention, has addressed itself seriously to this task of unification and the report which it will present at the Portland Convention is found upon another page of this magazine. The laymen of our churches owe it to themselves to take the keenest interest in this subject and give it the best of their thought and consideration during the days when the plans are being shaped and moulded or utterly rejected.

The report recognizes the feeling among the Disciples that they need a closer unification of their various missionary, educational and benevolent interests and affirms steadfast adherence to the independence and autonomy of the individual churches. The Committee proposes a General Convention of Churches of Christ of representative character. The object set forth is the promotion of unity, economy and efficiency among all the philanthropic organizations of the church. Membership is to be composed of delegates appointed by the different churches on the basis set forth in the report and the representatives of Executive Boards of coöperating State and National organizations. The usual officers are to serve for one year and the President shall be ineligible to succeed himself. Amendments may be made by a majority of the members present at any regular session of the convention and notice thereof must be given in writing at the previous annual meeting by the Executive Committee or by not less than ten members. The most interesting part of the report lies in the resolution at its close, which recommends that in order to provide for the organization of the first annual meeting under the constitution, a committee consisting of one person from each of the different societies and eight others named by the Chairman of the Convention, shall be provided for with authority to call the first annual representative convention.

The readers of this editorial and of the report itself should keep clearly in mind that this is only a report, that it is entirely without effect until it shall be adopted by a National convention, either the one at Portland or some succeeding annual convention, and that thereafter at least one year must elapse before the first General Convention would be called.

The report is a statesmanlike document. It has not been hurriedly prepared and is put forth for the consideration of our people as a whole and of the attendants at the Portland Convention in particular. The questions involved are grave. They run back into the life history of our people. They take hold upon things we have always considered vital. It is impossible that any consideration of this report can for a moment be free from a sense of the tremendous gravity of the issues involved. This makes it imperative upon us that we shall come to the consideration of it with our minds free from prejudice, with our hearts empty of all passion save that engendered by loyalty to the principles of the church of Jesus Christ. There should be the fullest discussion. There should be the amplest opportunity for explanation and no graver mistake could be made by the friends or enemies of this report than to permit it to be misrepresented through undue limitation of debate or through undue haste to get it acted upon by one of our conventions. Our people are democratic. They have a very strong group consciousness. They are not overly awed by the decrees of conventions and are seldom profoundly impelled by self constituted leadership, whether for or against. It would be entirely possible to get this report adopted by a convention and have it absolutely defeated through the pure inertia of the churches by their simple failure to regard it. It is even hinted that our missionary societies might consider themselves under no particular obligation to acknowledge the advisory position to which the convention aspires with regard to their work. To be very effective among our people, decrees have permeate the mass. They have to trickle down here and there patiently, sometimes for years, until all is saturated, and then out of this gradual process cockle-warming the heart of the whole at last flames up with conviction. It may take five years, it may take twenty, but ultimately our people as a whole will squarely face the issues presented in this report and the wider issues hinted at in this editorial and declare themselves upon them with an emphasis that will not be misunderstood easily.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Brotherhood on May 1, General Secretary P. C. Macfarlane announced his intention of retiring from the service of the Brotherhood at the time of the Portland Convention. He will remain in Kansas City and devote his time to literary and religious work.

A Scoville Tabernacle in a Day

Since the building feat of L. B. D. C. No. 29 and L. B. D. C. No. 301 at Peoria in building a church in a day last May, their example has been emulated by a number of groups of men throughout the land. The latest achievement is reported from Galesburg L. B. D. C. No. 259, presided over by that pastoral genius, James A. Barnett, and Brotherhood Presidents E. F. Young and C. E. Conner, and the modern achievement was accomplished by the Galesburg men, assisted by Knoxville L. B. D. C. No. 267, Monmouth L. B. D. C. No. 346 and the men of Abingdon, Cameron, Coldbrook, London Mills and East Galesburg. Now, the men of Galesburg and vicinity are just as busy as any groups of men anywhere, but they considered the building of the Scoville Tabernacle of such importance that thirty farmers of the Coldbrook neighborhood left their corn planting and helped build this one-day church. Altogether there were more than one hundred and fifty men at work on the building, and we are indebted to Pastor Barnett and Brotherhood President Conner for an extensive account of the day which, on account of limited space, it is necessary to condense in order to get it in CHRISTIAN MEN for the month of June, and even to do this it has been necessary to stop the presses while these lines are being written and the above photograph being prepared. Needless to say, all of the labor was of the volunteer kind. In the first place, the men assembled early. Ex-President E. F. Young had made extensive preparations, but right in the midst of them his term of office expired, and being a very modest man, as most railway mail clerks are, Mr. Young refused a fourth annual term. Hence another able man, C. E. Conner, an ex-preacher and lawyer and always a business man, was elected president and into his hands fell the completion of the arrangements and the erection of the building. M. L. Irons, deacon, was appointed superintendent of the job. At seven o'clock Tuesday, May 16th, fifty men answered the roll call, after which Pastor Barnett offered prayer for the success of the labors and welfare of the men. A stanza of Coronation was sung and the men went at the task. They were divided into two general divisions, one on either side, under competent lieutenants, with eleven foremen with a dozen men each, and the work moved forward with clock-like precision and the sound of saw and hammer out-dinned the battle of Juarez. This was the hottest May day Galesburg has experienced in years, but it did not deter a single man from his duty. Preachers from surrounding churches were on hand doing "A Man's Work in a Man's Way," working right up to the time of services and participating in the dedicatory exercises in their working clothes with the stain of honest toil on hand and brow.

Oh, yes, we almost forgot there were ladies in connection with this one-day building enterprise. They served a most excellent dinner and luncheon in tents to the men in relays of forty, so the sound of hammer and saw was continuous throughout the noon hour. We are informed that three passing "tourists" with through "tie-tickets," being attracted by the odor of good food, applied for employment, and as no class distinction prevailed they joined in the activities readily and did good service, the enterprise being thus of moral benefit to these men.

The fascination of the thing was irresistible. A business man connected with one of the other churches stood about a while catching the fever, asked for a number assignment, took off his coat and went to work. Others did likewise. Crowds of watchers passed to and fro during the day. The building is on a prominent street, centrally located, size 96x136 feet, 24 feet floor to gable. The citizens were amazed at this one-day building enterprise has made a profound impression upon the community and it augurs well for the success of the coming campaign by the Scoville Evangelical Company, which will be under way by the time these lines are read.

This demonstrates that any group of men with the love of God and a determination to do things in their hearts can draw men to them and do the practical and necessary work for the extension of the Kingdom in "A Man's Way." The Brotherhood at Galesburg needs more pastors like James A. Baker and leaders like E. F. Young and C. E. Younger. God speed the day when our men will go about the tasks of the Kingdom with the same brand of enthusiasm displayed by the Galesburg men in this enterprise.

An Ambitious Plan

Nova Scotia is recognized by New Englanders as being rightly named. It is an American edition of Scotland. A native dropped down from Nova Scotia to Boston seeking work for the winter. "What can you do?" was asked. "Are you a mechanic?" "McAnnich!" scornfully answered the Nova Scotian. "Naw, I am a McInnes." The man we are about to tell you isn't named McInnes, but something like it. M. S. McIninch is a lawyer of South Auburn, Neb., and he is the liveliest wire we have stumbled against in some moons. They have a Men's Movement Bible Class in the church there, and on April 21st had a banquet for men only, the purpose being to stimulate interest in the class. The following program was rendered:

Music, "America," by the Audience.

Invocation, J. G. Alber, Pastor Christian Church, Auburn.

Music by Christian Church Quartette.

Address of Welcome, M. S. McIninch, President of the Class.

"Why We Are Here," Dr. H. G. Harris, Auburn.

Music by Quartette.

"A Man's Work in a Man's Way," J. G. Alber, Pastor Christian Church, Auburn.

"Benefits to be Derived from a Study of the Scriptures from a Business Man's Standpoint," J. R. Cain, Jr., State Senator, of Nebraska.

Song, "Onward Christian Soldiers," Auburn Christian Church, Beatrice, Neb.

Benediction, G. W. Harmon, Auburn, Neb.

The local paper devoted nearly a whole column to a report of the meeting, saying it was one of the most enjoyable of its kind ever given in Auburn. Eighty-seven men were present.

President McIninch writes us that they had a banquet arranged for May 19th at Fairbury, in the same county, where they planned to organize the men and acquaint them with the Brotherhood Movement. They intend to treat in like manner each community in the county where the Disciples have an organization, after which it is planned to have a general gathering of the whole county in Auburn. It is hoped eventually to affiliate all the organizations with the General Brotherhood. They bring in speakers from outside the county by paying their expenses.

The Story of the Peoria Volunteers

Ten From One Church on Brotherhood Volunteer Day

BY W. F. TURNER.

How with are pictures of our band of volunteers. At first there were eleven. One has been added and two have dropped out, leaving number at present ten. Five are boys and five are girls.

They all responded to the appeal made by the National Brotherhood. I preached for two Sundays on the matter to bring it fully before them. As it often is, many were surprised to know we had so many young people ready to go when they were asked. Four went to college from this church last year to prepare for the ministry, so the Central church is bearing some good fruit. As soon as these expressed their desire to equip themselves for the ministry and mission field, they were organized into a band of workers, meeting each week for prayer, fellowship, and mutual helpfulness. They have been reading and discussing "In His Steps." Their spiritual growth is as manifest to me as the growth of nature at this season. They have become a real power already in the work of the church. I will not try to enumerate all they are doing, but no opportunity is left unimproved to serve the Master and extend His kingdom here at home.

The greatest difficulty has been the objections of parents. It is truly a time of probation and testing. Am hoping that every one of them will remain in the ranks and enter Eureka College this fall. Have told them if they will the Lord will open the way for them to go. Some of them will have to receive assistance if they enter school this year. Several kind offers have come already and others will come.

We are proud of these volunteers and believe that out of their ranks will come some workers that in the years to come will make their mark.

Mixing the Twins

We have two Brotherhoods at New Albany, Ind., and both of them are laughing at us. In the May issue we printed a handsome picture and credited it to the wrong Brotherhood, for all of which we humbly beg pardon. It is now rightly labeled. This is the Brotherhood Bible Class of L. B. D. C. No. 330, of the Central Christian Church, Robert N. Simpson is the pastor.

This Brotherhood enjoys the proud distinction of being the largest among us. Their charter was issued for one hundred and one members and they have added thirty-five since, making this unquestionably the largest affiliated Brotherhood. The officers are: President, John O. Conklin; Vice-President, H. R. Pickins; Secretary, C. A. Slaton; Treasurer, C. A. Ruhsenbeger. In addition they have an efficient reporter in the person of Harvey Peake, who carefully prepared the news notes which have appeared in CHRISTIAN MEN from time to time. Quarterly reports of this Local show activities commensurate with the great strength of the organization.

Local No. 330 meets every Sunday morning at 9:15, as a Bible Class, with about seventy-five members enrolled. The pastor, Robert N. Simpson, is the teacher and they take fifty copies of CHRISTIAN MEN for use in the class, but as a Brotherhood, they meet monthly.

We are sorry for the mistake; Local No. 354 doesn't want honors to which they are not entitled and it must have called for an exercise of considerable brotherly grace to see their great work improperly credited. Anyway, hurrah for New Albany! We wish a few more thriving cities would embarrass us with a multiplicity of Brotherhoods.

Intensified farming is the slogan of the up-to-date agriculturist. Now here is a piece of intensified farming in church work. On this page is the picture of the tabernacle occupied by the First Christian Church of Newberg, Oregon. April 9, 1907, a bare four years ago, Geo. C. Ritchey and his brother, Arthur, now of other University, began a meeting. Now the church has a membership of two hundred and fourteen, a Bible School of one hundred and thirty-three with an enrollment of fifty-three in the Christian Endeavor and four volunteers for the ministry, one of whom is already in school at Eugene Bible University. Pictures of the volunteers are printed herewith. Geo. C. Ritchey is General Member No. 200 of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ.

Minutes of a Meeting of the Board of Directors of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, May 2, 1911

Meeting called to order at 10:00 A. M. Present, R. A. Long, J. N. Haymaker, T. W. Grafton, T. S. Ridge. Absent, Graham Frank, Burris A. Jenkins, C. M. Chilton, R. A. Doan and M. M. Cochran. Present by invitation, W. F. Richardson, Secretaries Macfarlane and Elliott.

Invocation by Brother Grafton, after which minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Secretary Macfarlane at this time advised the Board of his determination to retire from the General Secretary's office, same to take effect at the time of the Portland Convention, July 5, 1911.

The consideration of the position of the sessions of the Brotherhood work in the program of the Portland Convention was then taken up, and after due deliberation it was determined to occupy the afternoon of Wednesday, July 5th, said session to be concluded with a six o'clock banquet if this could be arranged. This conclusion was reached after hearing the report of the General Secretary, who had been instructed to confer with other General Secretaries having the arrangement of the program in hand. It was further decided to extend an invitation to the C. W. B. M. to occupy thirty minutes of said session with presentation of its work.

Committee, through General Secretary Macfarlane, reported result of conference with representatives of Men's Bible Class representatives at St. Louis, as follows:

Plans for Unifying the Organized Work for Men Among the Disciples of Christ.

WHEREAS, there is a similarity in the aims, purposes and work of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ and the Men's Adult Bible Class Movement, making a union of forces desirable, and

WHEREAS, under the blessing of God, a long step forward was made toward this end by the conference at St. Louis; therefore, in order to still further advance the movement for the unification and coöperation of these great forces, we, your Committee on Permanent Relations, recommend:

I. The addition to the secretarial forces of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ of a man thoroughly acquainted with the work and purpose of our Bible Schools, who shall pay particular attention to the interests and development of the work among local men's classes.

II. That CHRISTIAN MEN be adapted to meet the need of a unified work among men and adopted as the national organ of the men.

III. That all State Bible School Superintendents furnish the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ with a list of all men's classes within their respective states, together with the names of the presidents and secretaries thereof.

IV. That all men's classes, organized up to the Standard of the International Sunday-School Association, without necessary change of name or officers, affiliate with the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ by complying with the additional requirements set forth below. Upon so doing they may receive a certificate of affiliation as such from the General Brotherhood, and will henceforth be an integral part of that organization.

REQUIREMENTS.

1. Adopt the Annual Brotherhood Calendar as a means of training for citizenship service, and with a view to creating a greater interest in all our missionary and benevolent enterprises, and that a committee be appointed from each class to arrange for at least one program per month from this Brotherhood Calendar, and that each class undertake special work in behalf of at least four of the following lines:

State Missions, American Missions, Foreign Missions, Benevolent Association, Church Extension, Education, Temperance, Ministerial Relief.

2. The secretary of the local organization report quarterly to the General Secretary of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, 412 R. A. Long Building, Kansas City, Mo., on blank forms to be provided, showing the activity in all lines of work.

3. In view of the large additional service that is to come to the Bible School work through the employment of a Bible School Secretary and the adoption of CHRISTIAN MEN as to better serve the organized adult classes, every local organization to make an annual contribution to the support of the General Brotherhood. (Signed) C. L. DePew, Chairman; T. W. Grafton, W. T. Fisher, J. N. Haymaker; Myron C. Settle, Secretary.

After full consideration, the report, by motion duly seconded, was unanimously adopted and Brothers Haymaker and Grafton were appointed a Committee to arrange for a Bible School Secretary.

Adjournment for Lunch

Reassembled at 1:00 P. M.

Upon motion duly seconded, General Secretary Macfarlane was instructed to prepare a complete and concise report of the result of the Brotherhood work since its organization, same to be submitted at the Portland Convention.

Recommended by Secretary Macfarlane that a readjustment of secretarial duties be made so that Secretaries Elliott and Shellenberger, and the new Bible School secretary provided, could carry the work forward with no interruption of present plans or activities, and without making any further additions to the secretarial force at the present time than already provided for.

Upon motion duly seconded, a committee, consisting of Brothers Grafton, Haymaker and Ridge, was appointed with instructions to formulate and submit plans for carrying forward the work and for the necessary readjustment of duties of secretaries and office organization.

After prayer by Brother Macfarlane, meeting adjourned.

Report of the Committee on the Reconstruction and Unification of our Missionary and Philanthropic Interests

REPORT FOR A CONVENTION OF REPRESENTATIVES OF CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, There is a widespread feeling among the Disciples of Christ that they need a closer unification of their various missionary, national and benevolent organizations, a closer general fellowship of the Churches of Christ in all coöperative efforts for the extension of the Kingdom of God in the world, and their own greater efficiency;

The Gang Spirit

BY CHARLES B. HAHN.

WHAT IS A GANG?

A gang is a group of boys who play and run together, whose sympathies, likes and dislikes are somewhat the same. The word "gang" does not need to always imply that a certain group of boys are vicious and mischievous but can be applied to any bunch of boys who are organized into a club or society.

A gang can be good as well as bad. We find the gang instinct in men and if we study the history of those men who like to belong to clubs we will find that this instinct was started when they were boys.

Men are born with a desire for association and we must not blame the boy if he acquires it early. It is during the adolescence age that a boy begins to gang, and he finds that he is weak when alone and strong when with other boys. Many boys find themselves in the gang. During the ganging age, as was the boy never goes out at night alone to have a good time, most of his fun is with the fellows of his gang. As a boy finds his place among the members of his gang so will he find his place in life.

GANG LAWS

Gang laws are based upon principles of right as the boy understands the right. make the principle right the law will be right. In the Boy City club we use this principle in dealing with the boys. Play the game is the Boy City motto.

Those Buffalo Boys that B. S. Farrall Wrote About Last Month

Boyville the laws are written, but in a the laws are unwritten, but they are none less powerful. Their code of honor may be like older people would have, yet the who disobeys is held in contempt.

We should not try to get a boy to "snitch" on his gang or crowd, but tell him that if he is in the wrong gang to get out of it.

THE CONGREGATING OF BOYS means more than just getting together for mere association. We know that just as soon as boys get together something must be doing. The first question boys usually ask when in a crowd is, "What are we doing?" and we know that something must happen. The real object of the gang is to have fun, and the boys gather in a vacant lot in sheds, shanties and caves to have it. Many times the gathering of those accustomed to meet stands for something in particular—something planned out. All boys want is something to do that will give them a good time. Much of their fun ends in a sad way if directed.

THE CORNER GANGS are usually made up of a variety of ages of boys, from eight to twenty. It is a training school in vice. The younger fellows are being trained to take the older ones' places as these older boys leave home or go to work. The corner gang is a school where many an innocent lad first hears of the under world and where many times he first enters into doing deeds off color. But boys cannot be raised in a glass house. They must get out among the other fellows. What parents must do is to keep the confidence of their boys.

GANG LEADERS A gang will never accept a leader who will not lead. The boys who gang together will always choose a leader and we make no mistake when we try to get the gang by getting the leader. The leader is not always the oldest boy in the bunch. The one who can do things is usually chosen to lead the others, no matter what his age. A boy twelve years old and considered one of the worst for his age told me one day while talking of what he used to do.

"The first kid I got in with at my home town was about my match, but he was older than me. We stole peanuts and candy off the Dago. Then me and him joined the Pig Alley Gang. We met in an alley. It was every one had pigs and gee, it was rank. We met sometimes in a hollow tree and if any kid came along we did not know or did not like we would strip him and put him in the tree. Then we would go away and leave him to get out the best way he could. After that we robbed John Sullivan's bank. Johnnie was a big boy that saved his money and kept it in a small bank. Then his father and all of 'em went away and me and all the Pig Alley Gang goes up to their house and gets into the back window and takes everything we can. And after that I was such a good fellow at stealin' they made me leader of the gang."

The requirement is for a man who is, above everything else, a thorough sympathy with the boys. If he is, they'll find it out in ten days and then the women are gone.

A word from Marcellus R. Ely, Puyallup, Wash., about his boys. I do not consider it the fault of the boys that we haven't a good club for them. It is a question of leadership. I am taking the matter into my own hands now and we have begun to do something. We went on a "hike" through the woods not long ago and had great sport with the old game of hare and hound. One boy climbed a tree and left us "up in the Air." Am anxiously looking for CHRISTIAN MEN and the Boys' Department.

H. D. Smith, of Hopkinsville, Ky., has organized a Boys' Brigade for about three years. The boys are from 12 to 18 years of age. They have 35 members, who meet as a military company on Friday night and as a Sunday School class on Sunday. Bible study, military drill, lodge work, summer camp and music are some of the things that the boys are interested in during the year. The name of the company is the Jim Young Company. H. H. Jenkins is the Commandant and teacher and C. H. Taudy, Captain. More will be written about this work in a future number of the paper.

A Boy's Cyclone

BY O. M. PENNOCK, PASTOR.

Our Brotherhood entertained the boys of the church and Bible School. It was the most money and time we ever spent. All women and girls were notified to stay away. The boys were told to come not before and not long after 7:30. A cyclone arrived at 7:00. Seventy-five boys. Admission was by ticket. In the large basement room a tug of war was the first event to work off the uncontrolled energy. Then a program was given. A boys' orchestra furnished music as did also a quartette, a good one. A good story-teller told a story. A humorous recitation was given by one of the men. The pastor gave a sleight-of-hand performance. This was followed by old time tricks and stunts we learned in boyhood. Each man was prepared to start. The men played with the boys. At the end each boy found a seat and men served the boys with a simple lunch, such as boys eat. At the close all the boys gathered about the pastor in the center of the room and gave three cheers for the Brotherhood. Various committees had arranged all the details and ent off on schedule and the boys went at 9:30. The expenses were paid out of Brotherhood Treasury. Men and boys were happy. You ought to try it, too. Linda, Iowa, April 7, 1911.

are in receipt of the initial number of Boy City News, issued by the Boys' City Independence Boulevard Church of Kansas City, presided over by that Juvenile genius, Charles B. Hahn. It is a four-page sheet, three columns to the page; devoted to general news of the Boy City, stirring editorials regarding Sunday-School and athletics, with one column of Boy Philosophy, together with a splendid group of clean advertisements. On the first page is a cartoon labeled "Now, All Together," which we reproduce herewith.

word from F. E. Bossard, Tulsa, Okla., interesting. At present our boys are organized into a Boys' Scout Troop. About a year ago I took the class with eleven members and since then it has increased to thirty-five. The success came through constant practice and never failing to meet an appointment with the boys and personal interest. I have made a practice to sacrifice everything for the boys. In the Boys' Scout work we now have plans for the future, for an indefinite period. The rewards are the badges the boys receive when they reach a certain height in the organization. Much of the athletic work done in Boys' Clubs in the past has been for the individual rather than the whole company. I mean by that that the boys who are strong have the advantage over the weaker boys, as the teams do not like to have an inexperienced boy lose the game for them.

In the Boy Scout movement the athletics is carried on by all the members, rather than the few. We go on camping trips for an afternoon or evening and get experience in cooking and building fires. We are planning to go on Friday night and come home on Saturday. We are also planning to camp this summer. There is nothing in the Boy Scout movement that is military except the discipline.

We have from one to five new boys each Sunday. I think that there should only be about a dozen boys in one Sunday-School class. I should like to see a Boys' Department organized where the boys assemble by themselves. Then they could be spoken to in their own way, as boys in the adolescent period of their lives like to be by themselves and are very sensitive. The pastor should preach to the boys once in awhile. The sermon should be on the lessons covered by the graded course, so that the boys would be in the spirit of the sermon.

First Church Scouts at Springfield, Illinois

By C. C. Haradon, Boys' Work Sec'y Y. M. C. A.

We have the boys organized into two divisions, under thirteen and over, which work apart as much as possible. There is meeting held every week for some stunt to be pulled off either the following Saturday or during the week. There have been a variety of things that the boys have enjoyed very much that I can only name here, which would make good stories in themselves, such as our hound and hare chases, visits to an astronomer's house at the edge of the city, camp fires at night in the woods, skating trips, parties at different Scouts' homes, chile con carne suppers, trips to the Sangamon River (5 miles), base-ball games, and visits to the different manufacturing plants of the city, such as the watch factory, plow factory, a foundry, shoe factory, a bank, a restaurant, down and through two coal mines.

We have given a public demonstration in the Sunday-School and will probably give another soon. We have taken the boys through the State capitol here and the Supreme Court building and the Armory, also had the Scouts out for inspection when President Taft was here and was officially recognized by him.

Because of this organization several boys have stopped smoking and others who had been in the habit of stealing have changed their ways. The worse a boy is the more we want him as they are the ones who can help. This work is a great one with boys here and one that I think our church should take up as the boys of the Nation heard of it. It has taken like wildfire the boys of this State.

The Loyal Knights

BY REV. W. G. LANCKS.

The Loyal Knights is an organization of boys used in the South Akron Church Christ. The direction of this club is in the hands of the pastor. The membership clause in their constitution is as follows:

"All boys applying for membership must be free from the use of tobacco, intoxicating drink and profane language. He must be willing to pay an initiation fee of ten cents in advance of their admission, to the club treasurer and must become a member of the Sunday-School. He must sign the pledge here with given.

PLEDGE.—Realizing that Jesus at my birth was strong, manly and pure, I will try to make Him my example. I will try to be truthful, and to be true to all my promises. I will try always to be kind to those dearer than myself. I will make every effort to cultivate a clean life by keeping myself free from tobacco, strong drink, profanity and unfaithfulness. As a member of the Sunday-School I will try to be regular in my attendance. As a loyal knight I will try to be manly and do manly things, and so far as I know how I will make an earnest effort to be true to all my duties as a club member."

A feature of the club is the Messengers service that each knight promises to render to the church and pastor.

The King's Army Club

(What the pastor of a country town with an old-fashioned handy, one-room church has done for his boys.)

BY R. C. MANLEY.

If manhood is worth anything to the youth of Christ, boyhood is worth far more, for at least two reasons: First, men are already trained, often by the Devil, boys are at the period where they can be trained by the church. Second, a man has lost years of ability and power, the boy has all this re him. It seems to me that you have struck the strategic point of the Brotherhood, for if Christian men can do what they in the last few years, being practically trained, what will the next generation be to accomplish if the boys are taken now trained for "A Man's Work In a Man's we have considered club work outside the day-School carefully, thinking of and making a study of the "Boy Scouts" and other organizations, but so far have decided that it is better to bring the club idea into the day-School rather than to make it separate the club of which I shall tell is in my own school and is made up of the Junior and Intermediate boys. The club is called the King's Club and is divided into the cadets and regulars. Boys between nine and twelve are called cadets, and boys between twelve and sixteen the regulars. We hold our meetings once a month, at which we have an hour for business and a general good time and then get down to the business session and resolutions. There is a library controlled by the club, of about fifty books.

We had a camp last summer and shall go again this year. One thing we learned from the camp is that it is better to take the Juniors and Intermediates at different times. We try to have some special trip during each quarter. Our program of trips would be something like this: Spring Hike, Summer Camp, Fall Chestnut Hunt, and Winter Kang Party.

Last fall we hired a team, obtaining the money by selling ice cream by the quart, and rode ten miles to the foot of the mountains and then walked to the summit to some famous rocks and spent the day. The boys have recently elected officers for their base-ball team.

These boys' work has not only obtained and helped the boys in the Sunday-School, but it has brought a close relationship between the boys and their pastor that could not have been formed in any other way.

About the only thing that we have done for the boy on the outside was a Boy's Temperance Rally in which the boys took the principal part with a snappy talk by a temperance orator and a lover of boys.

We have never thought of putting over our boys as teacher anyone but a man. There must be a condition or an especially fitted man that would make us change our policy of having a man to lead to manhood the coming year but it would have to be a very special case.

Kappa Sigma Pi or the Modern Knights of Saint Paul

Junior Brotherhood that Furnishes what a Boy Needs.

BY EDWARD D. GOLLER.

One in a great while God reaches down and places his hand upon a man and instructs him to bring forth a work especially designed to fill a great need as God sees it. Judging from the almost perfect way in which the Kappa Sigma Pi furnishes the real physical, social and spiritual needs of the modern boy, it seems that nothing less than God's own hand led the Rev. David H. Jemison to originate and give to the world this splendid plan to save boys for Christ and the church. Under the present stress of modern life the boys need powerful incentives to keep them safe. Of all modern organizations none can be compared to the Kappa Sigma Pi which does definitely three things:

1. It ties the boy to the Bible.
2. It ties the boy to Christ.
3. It ties the boy to the church.

Any organization for boys which does less than these three things is simply wasting the greatest opportunity in the life of the boy to save him for Christ and the church. It is the only organization that really provides, definitely in its plans, for these three vitally important items. Other organizations tack these on the outside as a sort of side issue while this organization makes it the main issue and what is best about it the boys are simply delighted with the work that is done. Almost every boy who takes the whole work unites with the church.

New Testament Standard of Life

In all the work of the Kappa Sigma Pi the New Testament standard of life is continually the goal. Paul is the boy's hero and the life of the great apostle is taught to the boy. The initiation is strictly Scriptural, being taken entirely from the New Testament. There are three degrees. At the age of ten the first degree may be taken, which is called the Order of Jerusalem

In this degree the boy is led to sit at the feet of Gamaliel to learn. He is pledged to attend Sunday-School, abstain from tobacco, intoxicants, etc. This degree ties him to the Bible. The second degree, which is taken at the age of thirteen, is

The Order of Damascus

As Paul was converted on the way to Damascus and afterward confessed Christ to the world, so the boy must now confess Christ on all reasonable occasions. This degree ties the boy to Christ. And if there is a young people's society in the church he is pledged to attend it. At the age of sixteen he may take the third degree,

The Order of Rome

Here, as Paul offered himself up, so the boy unites his life permanently with the church and becomes a knight. He remains a member until at the age of nineteen he graduates into the Men's Brotherhood of the church.

This is an inter-denominational, International organization that gives every promise of being, soon, the foremost order for boys in the entire world. All the features of the Boy Scout work are taken up incidentally in the summer camp work. Explanatory literature will be furnished free upon request to the grand chaplain, Rev. D. H. Jemison, Circleville, Ohio. Toledo, Ohio.

The West Side Brotherhood, Springfield, Ill., reports regular and splendid meetings. Mr. A. C. Glasco is president. They have been making much use of the programs printed in CHRISTIAN MEN. John B. King, one of the members, read a paper at one of these meetings that was very much commented upon. His theme was "The Church, as Based on the Bible." He declared the church to be the noblest and most precious of all the boons that God has given to man, that the church is the school in which we are disciplined for the great work of life, that it is a social organization which operates powerfully on society and makes valuable contributions to its life.

We are in receipt of a magazinelet, size 4x5 inches, eight pages in all, written by hand on some kind of duplicating machine and issued weekly by the Brotherhood Bible Class of the Central Christian Church, Toledo, Ohio. The magazine gives the names of the class officers and committee chairmen and is full of items of news, suggestions, announcements and general miscellany pertaining to the work of an up-to-date Brotherhood class.

We see in the course of a month many happy little suggestions of Brotherhood activity, but this little booklet written by hand and speaking so eloquently of the zeal and enthusiasm of energetic young men who are determined to do the best they can for the uplift of the Brotherhood and Bible Class touches us deeply. We accept it as another evidence of the glorious initiative in Christian service which is being developed among our men.

The South Akron Church, Akron, Ohio, presided over by W. G. Loucks, minister, has been going about the organization of a Local Brotherhood with patience and skill. It is their desire to get all the men in line. They observed the week of Prayer and Evangelism with meetings each night, conducted by the men under the auspices of the Brotherhood. This was their first effort and the pastor in writing of it says: "It was one of the best things ever done in our church for the men or for anybody. The men really found themselves and went home knowing that they could really do things."

On the last night the State Brotherhood Secretary, Wm. Spanton, gave them a splendid address.

The Kingdom Now

Mr. A. D. Dougan, of Plankinton, attended the meeting of the L. B. D. C. at Plankinton, City, Ia., on April 13, at which meeting the Secretary Shellenberger presented the report of the Brotherhood. Mr. Plankinton showed the enthusiasm common to all men who care to understand the great and definite mission of the Brotherhood. He says:

"I wish I could tell you how much I enjoyed the meeting last evening. I am a member of the organization, but I cannot say enough of its import. The vital mission of the Brotherhood was to establish a kingdom right here on earth. It seems to me that this argument is is a forerunner in making ready for the establishment of the Kingdom of God. For the Kingdom of God on this earth was the original intention. God's will will be fulfilled and His Kingdom be realized."

seems to be the fashion just now for presidents of Brotherhoods to become pastors and preachers. C. F. Schmidt, President of the Brotherhood at Mason City, Iowa, is the last to follow the mode. At various times in Mason City, Brother Schmidt has been President of the Y. P. S. C. E. and Superintendent of the Bible School and since 1917 he has been President of the Men's Brotherhood. He attended the Iowa Brotherhood Convention at Boone last year as a representative of the Mason City Brotherhood and was sent by the Mason City Brotherhood at their own expense to the Brotherhood Convention at Topeka. He is now pastor of the church at Fertile, Iowa, and expects to organize a Brotherhood there soon and in two nearby churches. Brother Schmidt was formerly a member of the Lutheran Church and has had academic work at Drake University but is a graduate of Memorial University of Mason City. He has previously spent five years in the ministry.

The men at the meeting helpful and inspiring. In the same way, Pastor Hill has been enlivening his Sunday night service with a series of lectures on life, with the following topics:

- Li. a Sea Voyage."
- Li. a Railroad Journey."
- Li. a Pilgrimage."
- Li. a School Room."
- Li. a Warfare."
- Li. a Harvest Field."
- Li. and Its King—Jesus Christ."
- Li. and Its Jewels—Home and Heaven."

L. B. D. C. No. 355, Troy, N. Y., observed the week of prayer and evangelism and in their preparations sent out a letter which is so important from the standpoint of practical accomplishment that we reproduce it in full herewith:

My Dear Brother:

Would YOU be a Christian man today if some one had not been interested enough in you to urge your personal acceptance of Christ?

An unkind word of censure, or criticism, may damn a man, but one kind, earnest word has proven the salvation of many.

Will you speak such a word? Some one is waiting for you to say it. Will you?

The only way in which you may make any acceptable return for the great price that was paid for your salvation is to "save the other fellow." To consider your salvation alone is a sordid, selfish view.

You were saved to SERVE. Are you serving? Here's your opportunity.

BROTHERHOOD WEEK OF PRAYER AND EVANGELISM FOR MEN. Program enclosed. THINK about it. PRAY for it. TALK about it. WORK FOR IT. A meeting for men, by men. One more Brotherhood success. Be there yourself. GET YOUR MAN.

We enclose five invitation cards for the Sunday evening service, which we urge you to use at once.

Fraternally yours,
Executive Committee.

The program as suggested in CHRISTIAN MEN for March, prepared by T. W. Grafton, was carried out in full and a letter from H. A. Denton, pastor of the church, says it was the greatest week ever held in Troy and it did the men great good. He says: "We were the only Brotherhood in Troy on this job."

What They Did

Gleaned From Quarterly Reports

L. B. D. C. No. 252, Niagara Falls, N. Y., sends quarterly report showing two meetings with average attendance of eighteen. Their church contributed $100 to Foreign Missions on Easter Sunday. They have sixteen subscribers to CHRISTIAN MEN, collected $56.90 during the quarter and disbursed $42.15, and have a balance in the Treasury of $88.59. At a recent meeting change in officers resulted in the election of J. R. Dick as President, Fred Williams as Vice-President, E. C. Williamson as Secretary and William Payne as Treasurer.

L. B. D. C. No. 316, of the First Church, Little Rock, Ark., sends $12.15, dues for 50 members, with quarterly report ending March 31st. Their meetings have averaged 15 in attendance, with an enrollment of 50. The Program Committee has provided five programs, two of which were taken from CHRISTIAN MEN. They have four Bible Classes in the Bible School, with 65 in attendance. Their Social Committee has been active, and served refreshments at three of the meetings. Fraternal Aid Committee made six calls upon the sick and gave aid in one worthy case. This Brotherhood pays $2.50 per month towards the maintenance of the City Mission in Little Rock. After remitting dues they have a balance of $6.45 in the treasury.

L. B. D. C. No. 249 is in the South Joplin Church and of course every one knows that Joplin is in Missouri. This Brotherhood was organized and affiliated with the General Brotherhood in June, 1909, being the third Brotherhood to be so affiliated. The quarter ending March 31st they held six meetings with average attendance of 30. Their present enrollment is 59. Three programs were provided by the program committee, one of which was taken from CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine. Their civic committee investigated candidates for the city offices. In a financial way the Brotherhood disbursed $33.90 and remitted $9.10 dues for 59 members in the General Brotherhood. This is the Brotherhood that entertained a special team work meeting during the District Convention, of which mention is made under Organization Notes.

The secretary says: "Many committee meetings have been held and much more has been accomplished than this report would indicate. Men and boys have been reached more effectively during the past year than ever before in the history of the church."

"Our Brotherhood is progressing nicely for so small an organization. Our aim is to build up the Bible School and at present we have no committees except the Bible School Committee, which embodies the whole membership. At our last meeting it was the unanimous resolve of all present to try to attend Bible School regularly unless prevented by some just cause.—E. L. SEIVERSON, Secretary, L. B. D. C. No. 289, Saratoga, Cal.”

“Do you know who they are? Listen! They are men; men who pledge themselves five dollars a year to a fund for the assistance of young men who are preparing themselves for the ministry of Jesus Christ, either in regular church service or upon the foreign field, at home or abroad. You can see them quarterly. This is a ‘Men for the Mission’ movement and you will hear more about it from time to time. Our class treasurer will accept your money. The work is carried on by the National Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ. It promises to be a great factor in filling our colleges with students for the ministry.”

LESSON 2—JUNE 11.

"HEZEKIAH'S GREAT PASSOVER."—2 CHRON.
30TH CHAPTER.

Golden Text. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but Jehovah looketh on the heart."—1 Sam. 16:7.

Memory Verses, 18 to 20.

1 And there assembled at Jerusalem all the people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great assembly. 14 And they arose and took away the altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron. 15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought burnt-offerings into the house of Jehovah. 16 And they stood in their places after their order, according to the word of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood which they received of the hand of the Levites. 17 For there were many in the assembly that had not sanctified themselves: therefore the Levites had the charge of killing the passover for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto Jehovah. 18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim and Manasseh, Issachar and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it is written. For Hezekiah had prayed for them, saying, The good Jehovah pardon every one 19 that setteth his heart to seek God, Jehovah, the God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary. 20 And Jehovah hearkened to Hezekiah, and healed the people. 21 And the children of Israel that were present at Jerusalem kept the feast of unleavened bread seven days with great gladness; and the Levites and the priests praised Jehovah day by day, singing with loud instruments unto Jehovah. 22 And Hezekiah spake comfortably unto all the Levites that had good understanding in the service of Jehovah. So they did eat throughout the feast for the seven days, offering sacrifices of peace-offerings, and making confession to Jehovah, the God of their fathers.

23 And the whole assembly took counsel to keep other seven days; and they kept other seven days with gladness. 24 For Hezekiah king of Judah did give to the assembly for offerings a thousand bul-locks and seven thousand sheep; and the princes gave to the assembly a thousand bullocks and ten thousand sheep; and a great number of priests sanctified themselves. 25 And all the assembly of Judah, with the priests and the Levites, and all the assembly that came out of Israel, and the sojourners that came out of the land of Israel, and that dwelt in Judah, rejoiced. 26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem; for since the time of Solomon the son of David king of Israel there was not the like in Jerusalem. 27 Then the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to his holy habitation, even unto heaven.

Time. According to Beecher, Hezekiah became king 723 B. C.

Place. The temple of Jerusalem.

Introduction. Hezekiah means, Jehovah strengthens. He was the son of Ahaz, the grandson of Jotham. From Jotham to Manasseh, we have as kings, good Jotham, bad Ahaz, good Hezekiah and bad Manasseh. Isaiah, the most influential citizen of Judah, was a prominent factor in educating and influencing the young king. Hezekiah's character and the success of his reign are told in these words, "He did that which was right in the eyes of the Lord." For a complete understanding of the lesson of today, let the reader study 2 Chron., chapters 28-31; 2 Kings, sixteenth chapter: 18:1-7; Numbers 9:1-14; Lev. 23:5-8; Exodus 23:15. Read all of chapter in today's lesson.

Explanatory. 13—And there assembled. Much emphasis is laid upon a public assembly, throughout the history of Judah and Israel. There is power in an assembly. The feast of unleavened bread. For a description of this feast read Exodus, chapter 12. The regular time for holding it was the fourteenth day of the first month, Exodus 12:2-6. The law gave them permission to postpone it a month, when occasion demanded. Numbers 9:10-11. Owing to the demoralized condition of the temple during the reign of Ahaz, it could not be ready for use until the fourteenth day of the second month. 14—Took away the altars. These had been erected by Ahaz for idolatrous worship when the temple had been abandoned. They were now thrown into Kidron, a very deep ravine on the east of Jerusalem. It was used as a dump ground. 15—And the priests and the Levites were ashamed. During the reign of Ahaz, the priests and Levites had gone with the crowd into idolatry, and now, when the young king calls them back to the path of duty and points them to the ways of Jehovah, they stand with shamed faces. They now sanctify themselves and endeavor to get right with God. 16—*And they stood * * * after their order.* It was customary for the priests to stand in two rows from the altar to the outer court, where the crowd assembled. When an officer slew a lamb, the blood caught in a basin and handed to the nearest priest and thus was passed on from one to another, until it reached the altar, where it was thrown by the last priest, thus basins full of blood passed up one row while the empty basins were passed back along the other. 17—Had not sanctified themselves. The work had been done so quickly and so many had gone into idolatry and were ceremoniously unclean; they had not had time to conform to the law in the matter of purification. Ex. 12:6-7 requires the head of the household to kill the paschal lamb. Here the Levites did the killing. 18-19—For Hezekiah prayed for them. While many had not cleansed themselves, Hezekiah prayed that they might now be pardoned. Hezekiah believed the people were now doing the best they could under the circumstances, hence asks God's pardon for "everyone that teth his heart to seek God." 20—And Jehovah hearkened and forgave because the people were doing their best. If through carelessness or prejudice, or through unwillingness to humble themselves, they had refused to make the preparation required, there would have been no pardon for them. 21—And the children of Israel that were present. All were not there. Many gave no heed to the invitation. But there were enough gathered from the tribes to make a great number, and they kept the feast. 22—And Hezekiah spoke comfortably. Encouragingly he spoke. It was like the good, olden days when the people had not turned away from God. The prophets had been true; the people had gone after idolatrous gods. 23—And kept other seven days. They were so joyous in their worship and so determined to be devoted that the whole assembly continued the feast for another seven days. 24—*Hezekiah * * * did * * * a thousand bullocks.* The people had brought a sufficient number of animals for seven days' worship. Hezekiah supplied the need for another seven days. 25—a great number of priests. The religious fervor of the people was now becoming contagious, and a number of neglectful priests had come over to the side of Jehovah and were lined up for the truth. 26—The sojourners. There were men of alien descent who dwelt in Jerusalem. They, with all the people, rejoiced. 26-27—Great joy. Jerusalem had seen no such day as this since the days of Solomon. Everybody was happy. The priests and the Levites arose and blessed the people, using, doubtless, the benediction given in Numbers 6:24-26.

Comments

I. The value of a leader. Hezekiah was a young king, but well trained. He had convictions and enthusiastically stood for them. To an on-looker, it would seem that ah had gone head-long into idolatry, but a few good people, like the king and the prophet, soon called them back to the ways of Jehovah. How much we are indebted to them in all the walks of life to a few leaders.

II. The power of worship. The people assembled. In a public assembly there is encouragement, devotion, enthusiasm, optimism and strength. If a man will keep strong in the faith and be not weak in practice, he must meet with the brethren. It is no mistake when David said, "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree," for the palm tree flourishes best in groups.

III. When prayer avails. We read, "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Such a man was Hezekiah. He prayed that the people might be pardoned, because their face was set in the right direction, and they were now doing the best they could. That is all God requires of any man, but it is well for man to examine himself constantly, asking, "Am I doing the best I can? Is my purpose right? Am I to the best of my ability doing just what Jesus desires me to do? If I am well and good; if not, the prayer will not be answered."

IV. Our passover. Dearer to us than was the passover to the Jews, is the ordinance of the Lord's Supper. Jesus said, "Do this in remembrance of me." Here is a means appointed by our Lord for our remembrance of Him. When He requests, can we refuse to grant the request?

Questions

Who was Hezekiah? Who were his parents? When did he live? What prophets were associated with him in his work? What was the most striking characteristic of his reign? Why did he assemble the people in Jerusalem? What characteristics of greatness did Hezekiah possess? Why was the passover postponed a month? What was the religious condition of the kingdom when Hezekiah came to the throne?

LESSON 3—JUNE 18.

"THE DOWNFALL OF SAMARIA."—2 KINGS, 17:1-18.

Printed Text, Verses 1-14.

Golden Text. "He that being often reprov'd, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."—Prov. 29:1.

Memory Verse, 14.

In the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel, and reigned nine years. 2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah, yet not as the kings of Israel that were before him. 3 Against him came up Shalmaneser king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and brought him tribute. 4 And the king of Assyria found conspiracy in Hoshea; for he had sent messengers to the king of Egypt, and offered no tribute to the king of Assyria, as he had done every year; therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison. 5 Then the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years. 6 In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away unto Assyria, and placed them in Halah, and on the Habor, the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

And it was so, because the children of Israel had sinned against Jehovah their God, who brought them up out of the land of Egypt from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods, 8 and walked in the statutes of the nations, whom Jehovah cast out from before the children of Israel, and of the kings of Israel, which they made. 9 And the children of Israel did secretly things that were not right against Jehovah their God: and they built them high places in all their cities, from the tower of the watchmen to the fortified city; 10 and they set them up pillars and Asherim upon every high hill, and under every green tree; 11 and there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the nations whom Jehovah carried away before them; and they wrought wicked things to provoke Jehovah to anger; 12 and they served idols, whereof Jehovah had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing. 13 Yet Jehovah testified unto Israel, and unto Judah, by every prophet, and every seer, saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets. 14 Notwithstanding, they would not hear, but hardened their neck, like to the neck of their fathers, who believed not in Jehovah their God.

Time. Hoshea became king in the twelfth year of Ahaz, 726 B. C.

Place. Samaria.

Introduction. At this time Hezekiah was carrying out his reforms in Judah. The prophets of this period were Isaiah, and probably, Hosea and Micah.

Explanatory. 1—In the twelfth year of Ahaz. Hoshea, which means "save," the nineteenth and the last king over Israel. Jeroboam was the first. Two and half centuries had been wasted. Here is a nation that might have succeeded had she walked with God. The corrupt religion and the spineless patriotism helped to bring about her fall. 2—He did that which was evil. The people were not united and the nation was on the decline when the king came to the throne. While he did that which was evil, he was not so bad as some of his predecessors had been. 3—Against him came Shalmaneser, the king of Assyria. He reigned from 727 to 722 B. C. Israel was reduced to such weakness that Hoshea became the servant of Shalmaneser and paid tribute to him. 4—Found conspiracy in Hoshea. Shalmaneser and his helpers were watching for disloyalty. They found it, for they learned that Hoshea had sent messengers to So, king of Egypt, and he offered no tribute to the king of Assyria, as had been done in previous years. As a result, Hoshea was locked up and bound in prison. 5—Then the king of Assyria. He came with an army, and for three years besieged Samaria. 6—In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria took Samaria. Israel was carried into Assyria and distributed along her rivers and in the cities. 7—And it was so. It is plain that this was sent upon the people as a punishment for their sinning against God. Like men today, Israel forgot. 8—Walked in the statutes of the nations. While in captivity, the Jews went further into idolatry. 9—And the children of Israel did secretly. As though God could not see them, they built places of worship in all their cities, such as altars and towers, where they might worship idolatrous Gods. 10—*And they set * * * up pillars.* These were probably wooden images for worship. They were very similar in their rites to Baal worship. 11—And there they burned incense. This was part of the religious worship. 12—And they served idols. Here God rebuked them. 13—And Jehovah testified in Israel. Through the prophets and seers, God had spoken to Israel and Judah for many years, endeavoring to keep them from destruction. God had done His part and Israel and Judah had constantly refused, hence they must take the results that naturally follow. 14—Hardened their necks. To harden one's neck means to refuse all guidance.

Comments

Israel's sins found her out. When Jeroboam came to the throne, the Lord had promised long and prosperous days if he would walk in the ways of Jehovah, but "Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, made Israel to sin." This is the history of each king through the whole nineteen, and is a history of the follies, mistakes and wilful disobediences of a group of men who misapplied their powers and failed to improve the opportunities. And the people, when severest punishment came and they were in captivity, went farther and farther into sin and idolatry. "There are none so stupid as those who will not see." It was difficult for them to understand that their disobedience to God had brought about their captivity. "The soul that sinneth shall die." "Be sure your sins will find you out."

Questions

Who was Hoshea? When did he come to the throne? What mistake did he make? Who carried the Israelites into captivity? How long did the captivity last? Why did they harden their necks? What argument can be given for the people going into idolatry?

LESSON 4—JUNE 25.

"REVIEW."

Golden Text. "What doth Jehovah require of thee but to do justly and to love kindness and to walk humbly with God?"—Mic. 6:8.

The lessons for the quarter are as follows:

1. "Elisha heals Naaman, the Assyrian." 2 Kings 5.
2. "Elisha's heavenly defenders." 2 Kings 6:8-23.
3. "Joash, the boy king crowned in Judah." 2 Kings 11:1-20.
4. "Joash repairs the temple." 2 Kings 11:21; 12:16.
5. "God's pity for the heathen." Jon. 3:1; 4:11.
6. "Uzziah, king of Judah, humbled." 2 Chron. 26.
7. "Isiah's vision and call to service." Isa. 6.
8. "Song of the vineyard." Isa. 5:1-12.
9. "Micah's picture of universal peace." Mic. 4:1-8.
10. "Israel's penitence and pardon." Hosea 14.
11. "Hezekiah's great passover." 2 Chron. 30.
12. "The downfall of Samaria." 2 Kings 17:1-18.

There are many plans which have been successfully used by various classes in conducting the review. One of these is to divide the class into two sections, prepare a list of questions covering the three months' study, and then question down like the ling bees of olden times. Another plan is to select the principal characters of the story and have a brief talk on each. The following questions are suggestive for work in the twelve lessons:

Who was Naaman? What was his affliction? Who was Elisha? How was Naaman cured? Who suggested Naaman's going to Samaria? Where did Elisha's faithful defenders appear? What was the occasion of their appearance? What was their purpose? What gracious act did Elisha perform in dealing with the enemy? Who was Joash? How was his life spared? Where was he crowned and at what age? What became of his grandmother when he became king? What great reform did Joash bring about? Why should he any more than any other king be kindly disposed toward the temple? How did Joash end his career? Who was Jonah? When and where did he live? Where did the Lord send him? Why didn't he want to go? What was his punishment? What is the lesson that he teaches? Who was Uzziah? When did he reign? What can be said of his reign? Who was his good adviser? What was his chief sin? What punishment was inflicted upon him? Who was Isaiah? When did he live? What distinguishes him from the other prophets? When did he receive his vision? What was it? What is the lesson to be gleaned from the song of the vineyard? What did Micah prophesy concerning universal peace? What is being done today to bring this about? What are the disparagements of war? What was the burden of Hoshea's message to the people? What threatening and promise did he receive? Who was Hezekiah? How old when he began to reign? Who was his father? What great reform did Hezekiah bring about? For whom did he pray, and why? When did Samaria fall? and why? Who was the king of Israel at the time? Into the hands of what king did she fall?

LESSON 1—JULY 2.

ISAIAH'S PROPHECY CONCERNING SENNACHERIB."—ISA. 37:14-38.

Printed Text, Verses 21-38.

Golden Text. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."—PSALM 46:1.

2 Then Isaiah the son of Amos sent unto Hezekiah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah the God of Israel, Whereas thou hast said to me against Sennacherib king of Assyria, 22 this is the word which Jehovah hath spoken concerning him: The virgin daughter of Zion hath despised thee and laughed thee to scorn; the ruler of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee. 23 Whom hast thou defied and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice and lifted up thine head on high? even against the Holy One of Israel. 24 By thy servants hast thou blasphemed the Lord, and hast said, With the multitude of my chariots am I come up to the height of the mountains, to the most parts of Lebanon; and I will cut down the tall cedars thereof, and the fir-trees thereof; and I will enter into its farthest height, the forest of its fruitful field; 25 I have digged and drunk at wells, and with the sole of my feet will I tread upon all the rivers of Egypt.

26 Hast thou not heard how I have done it long ago, and formed it of ancient times? now have I brought it to pass, that it should be thine to lay waste fortified cities into ruinous heaps. 27 Therefore their inhabitants were of small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the housetops, and as a field of grain before it is grown. 28 But I know thy sitting down, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy fighting against me.

29 Because of thy raging against me, and because thine arrogancy is come up into mine ears, therefore will I put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

30 And this shall be the sign unto thee: ye shall eat this year that which groweth of itself, and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruit thereof. 31 And the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward. 32 For out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and out of mount Zion they that shall escape. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this.

33 Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come unto this city, nor shoot an arrow there, neither shall he come before it with shield, nor cast up a mound against it. 34 By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and he shall not come unto this city, saith Jehovah. 35 For I will defend this city to save it, for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

36 And the angel of Jehovah went forth, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians a hundred and fourscore and five thousand; and when men arose early in the morning, behold, these were all dead bodies. 37 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and returned, and dwelt at Nineveh. 38 And it came to pass, as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adramme-lech and Sharezer his sons smote with the sword; and they escaped into land of Ararat. And Esarhaddon his reigned in his stead.

Time. 701 B. C.

Place. Jerusalem, Nineveh and the land of Ararat.

Introduction. Read Isaiah chapters 36-38. Also 2 Kings 19:20-37; 2 Chron. Samaria fell 721 B. C. Its fall for a little while had a good effect upon Judah, but soon wore off, and the people of Jerusalem returned to their life of luxury. Sennacherib succeeded Sargon, and then began an uprising on the part of all the small states of Assyria and Palestine. Hezekiah was leader in the movement. Sennacherib kept close to home because of uprisings there, and in 703 B. C. he crushed a revolt in Babylon. The next year he showed his authority in Media. In 701 B. C. he conducted a campaign against Phoenicia and Palestine. The history of his campaign against Jerusalem is given by himself. He captured all the prominent cities except Jerusalem. Hezekiah paid heavy duty to him. The Bible accounts of this campaign are found in 2 Kings 18:13-19 and thirty-seventh chapter. It is told in Isaiah 36 and thirty-eighth chapter. Sennacherib sent a letter to Hezekiah, in which he sought to secure his surrender. Hezekiah took the letter to the house of Jehovah and prayed over the matter. In the lesson today is the answer to his prayer.

Explanatory. 21—Isaiah, the son of Amos. This was the prophet. The prayer of Hezekiah is recorded in verses 16 to 20. 22—Concerning him. Verses 22 to 24. Isaiah's message is addressed to Sennacherib. The virgin. This title applies to the city of Jerusalem. It is expressive of the high esteem in which it was held by the Lord. Shaken her head at thee. Expresses scorn. 23—Whom hast thou defied? Sennacherib thought he was defying Jerusalem, but instead it was Jehovah. 24—Thy servants. Compare Isa. 36:4-13. Here the servants are given. To go into the high mountains of Lebanon and cut down the trees was almost impossible; it was reaching the very height of man's achievement. To accomplish this would mean that Sennacherib could conquer every section of the holy land. 25—I had digged. Hezekiah had stopped the fountains and the water sources about Jerusalem, and thus cut off the supply for Assyria. 2 Chron. 32:34. Sennacherib had laughed at this, but he said he could dig new wells and secure other waters. Dry up the rivers of Egypt. Scarcity of water made warfare difficult in Judah, and the over-abundance served as a hindrance in Egypt. Sennacherib means that neither condition shall affect him. 26—I have done it. This means, 'Sennacherib, have you not heard how I have protected Israel?' It now comes to pass that Sennacherib has been selected to lay waste to the fortified cities and destroy everything but Jerusalem. 27—Therefore the power did not belong to Sennacherib, but it was God working through him that brought the relief. These figures of the verses denote frailty and weakness. 28—I know. There was no movement of Sennacherib concealed from God. He knew it all and He today knows the movements of every man. 29—Because of thy raging. God here compares Sennacherib to a beast turned loose; because he knows not how to use his power and he is subdued. So God deals with Sennacherib and he is turned back and not allowed to go to Egypt, as he boasted. 30-32—A sign unto thee. God now speaks to Hezekiah. The destruction was not to come speedily. Jerusalem was to be spared for a time; crops were to be raised and harvests gathered. 33-34—Therefore. Because of God's purpose and God's protection, the king of Assyria was not to come near to shoot an arrow in the city. 35—The Lord would defend the city for His own sake and for David's sake. 36—And the angel. God's messenger that night slew 185,000 people. The work was done so quietly that it was not known in camp that they were dead until the men began rising early in the morning and saw the dead bodies.

Comments

This lesson furnishes a fine example of God's watchfulness above His own people. His interest in the people of this world. Sennacherib, while in rebellion against God, was shown that his own powers were feeble, that God could set his work at naught, and because of their luxurious habits and forgetfulness of God, Jehovah was bringing punishment upon the people of Judah. He was using Sennacherib to inflict this punishment. And yet God's patience and sympathy were manifest in postponing His judgment for a little while.

Questions

Who was Sennacherib? Who was Hezekiah? What effect did the fall of Samaria have upon Judah? What was the chief sin of Judah? Who was the prophet that helped Hezekiah? What effect did Jehovah's announcement have upon Sennacherib? Why were the people of Judah given more time in which to sow their crops and reap the harvest? Why were they not carried away at once? What three great lessons does this lesson teach?

FAMILIAR TALKS

Hail and Farewell

In this issue the writer retires from editorship of CHRISTIAN MEN, and at the Portland Convention his official connection with the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ comes to an end. This does not mean, however, that his interest in the movement ceases, or that his services in its behalf shall not be continued. I believe in the Brotherhood movement. I believe in the men to whom official direction has been committed. They have labored with me faithfully to the present moment. I believe in them thoroughly. They have my most sincere and hearty support. Each of them is peculiarly fitted for the task which he assumes. They know the field and they know the work. To them is due a large measure of credit for whatever has been accomplished.

Plans for division of the work between Mr. Elliott, who will have general charge in the office, and Mr. Shellenberger, who will have general charge in the field, with the closest and most cordial relations between them in the long line of contact between the office and the field, are being prepared. They will coöperate in the editing of the magazine, with a view to enlarging continually the scope and measure of its usefulness.

The task committed to the willing but humble shoulders of these men is a very difficult one. There are but two men where before there were three, and the duties are increasing instead of diminishing. Intelligent interest in the Brotherhood Movement is greater now than ever before. More Brotherhoods have been organized and affiliated in the last six months than in any previous six months. More satisfactory results are being attained. There is a better understanding on the part of our people generally of the possibilities and responsibilities of the Brotherhood plan. Several of the State conventions last year revealed a lack of appreciation of the problems and possibilities of the Brotherhood. Our State Brotherhood Conventions this year have been cordial in spirit, helpful in character, full of a fine fellowship and vastly stimulative of all kinds of religious work among men.

For myself I look back over the past three years and find the work accomplished a source of satisfaction to me. The Brotherhood Movement, as applied to our people, has been conceived, and its plans and purposes have been tolerably well defined. Its possibilities for good are already established in the minds of a good many people. In addition to this the Movement has been permitted some general and some detailed service to the cause of Christ in the field of missions, in the matter of ministerial supply and in a general stimulating influence upon the activities of the men in our churches generally. Perhaps as much has been accomplished as, considering the long purposes of God, we had a right to expect. We all hope for more rapid progress. Certainly I did. But there are parallels in Christian history with experiences like ours, running clear back as far as the beginning. The oak grows slowly, but the wood is of an enduring fibre. The Brotherhood Movement was launched in the very beginning upon high ideals. With those ideals unsullied, the work is committed to other hands. The preme objective all the time has been to keep our plans and purposes saturated with the Spirit of Christ, believing in Him only is Life and Light and joy of true service. The sincerest prayer of my own life and the ambition which I care more than all other ambitions, and I am not without others, is that the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ may live and bear fruit in such a way and to such an extent that it may in time be reckoned a worthy contribution to the life of a great religious people. Because I believe that the future under the Brotherhood's present care and management, is big with promise, such a life, I lay down its burdens and responsibilities with real joy, grateful to God for having been permitted to do for a short time in such a behalf. When the responsibilities have been heavy and the way for me has not gone by on the other side of Gethsemane, it has been a happy way and the journey a rich and fruitful one.

I cannot close without a personal expression of appreciation of the unanimous courtesy and the more than gracious manner in which myself and my proposals have been received at the hands of our ministers, our secretaries and our people generally. Crass indeed would be a man who did not feel in his soul a swelling out of gratitude to everyone for all of this. It is impossible that in a person there can ever be any adequate retribution. But in my devotion to the cause of the Disciples of Christ, as expressed in the second section of the Brotherhood Covenant for "the Union of God's People," and in the passionate endeavor to hasten "the Extension of Christ's Kingdom," again quoting from the Covenant through the larger ministry of the pen, upon which I now enter, the ringly entertained that this wonder-ministry of good fellowship of which we have been the recipient may not be to have been in vain.

P. C. MACFARLANE.

Particeps Criminis

At in California there is a grand man now rising seventy years of age who is still in the harness as one of the most active and efficient super-agents of the Anti-saloon League here in America. His white locks, earnest face, his youthful earnestness and his glowing logic are almost familiar on California convention platforms as is Mt. Shasta on the landscape of the upper Sacramento. Ervin S. Chapman is his name. For many years he has been a minister and evangelist of the Methodist church, but for the past twenty years he has been fighting the wine cup in the state where they make the stuff of it. Dr. Chapman probably hates the saloon in more kinds of forceful and picturesque language than any other man on the platform today. His address, "The Stainless Flag," has been circulated in millions and is one of the most erudite tracts on the relation of the United States Supreme Court to the legalized traffic that has ever been uttered. Now, Dr. Chapman has put all his views on this subject into a small book called Particeps Criminis. Do you see the connection? And within the covers of the book he has told the story of a California Rabbit Drive. Through that drive he has preached again the fresh life and dramatic power his old, old message of hatred of the American saloon and of reproach against the government for being a partner in that vicious enterprise.

The book is splendidly printed, is beautifully illustrated on the borders with etchings, many of which are possessed of rare illustrative value and dramatic appeal. There are a number of half tone inserts which add very much to the beauty and attractiveness of the volume, which is in cloth and sells for fifty cents. It is published by Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York.

There are some of our ministers and laymen who fail to realize that a large Brotherhood membership is an incident rather than an object. Better a meeting of fifteen or twenty gathered in Jesus' name with His promise, than a mass meeting of whatever amount of interest, but without the presence of the Lord. The only excuse for a large Brotherhood is to be able to do a large work.

Benjamin Borton is one of a thousand men who had never entered the ministry because no one ever went to him and pointed out that it was his duty, that the need was great, that God expected him to do it, and begin at once. When I had to have a preacher for Glen Park, and put it up to Borton, he said: "All my life I have wanted to do this thing and never until now have I seen that it was easier to do it than to shirk it."

Brother Borton has been a high pressure salesman for many years, and when he got after a man it did not take long to get the name on the dotted line.

Now he is putting the same pressure to work for Christ and results are equally gratifying. For a long while Brother Borton has been selling religious literature for the Ram's Horn Publishing Company. He moved to Gary last summer and at once started to work in our Congregation.

As president of the Brotherhood he holds the men in his magnetic power. I once heard an Evangelist (Claude E. Hill) say he needed some help from the men in the Church. Brother Borton stood up, looked over the congregation and said, "Men, follow me." Every man in the audience rose and walked with their president to the platform. Brother Borton looked at the Evangelist and said,

"Brother, here we are, command us." man who can get fellows to follow that way is unusual.

Brother Borton is still a young man he has a life of large service before me. I rejoice in the small part I have had in encouraging him to enter the active ministry and dedicate his wonderful magnetic personality to the Matchless Brotherhood of us all.

NELSON TRIMBLE

F. D. Power is Dead

A news dispatch from Washington on the eve of our going to press with the July issue announces the death of Dr. Frederick D. Power, for many years pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church in Washington, D. C. Brother Power, one of the most striking personalities of his day, enjoyed a very wide acquaintance by reason of his extensive travels in this country. For many years he was our only minister in Washington. He attained a brilliant distinction as Garfield's pastor, and also conducted President Garfield's funeral services. Dr. Power was sixty years old, a native of Virginia, and from 1881 to 1883 was Chaplain of the House of Representatives. Earl Wilfley, who has been his co-pastor for the past two years, has kindly consented to write an article on Brother Power's life, which will be found on another page.

will be two years in September P. H. Welshimer began writing School lessons and comments for CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine. In that time circulation among Men's Bible classes has increased materially and we are happy to count among our readers over a thousand more men than before Brother Welshimer struck hands with us in this worthy work. His many friends are sorry to learn that at this writing he is confined to his home and receiving medical treatment for ulceration of the cornea in one of his eyes. On this account only the first two lessons, that of the 9th and 16th, are from Mr. Welshimer's pen. The remaining three are for July 23d and 30th and August 6th prepared by Brother T. W. Grafton, National Director of the Brotherhood and pastor of L. B. D. C. No. 1000 Kansas City, Mo. Brother Grafton teaches one of the largest men's Bible classes in the Southwest and has always been an able leader of men and boys in the church. Brother Grafton has a style all his own and with his practical application of the Old Testament to our modern life his pronouncements will be found based upon the judgment he maintains as a leader in his own community and a director of the larger energies through the National Brotherhood.

Here is receipt of the program of the First Convention of the Federal Council of Lutheran Brotherhoods, held in Washington, D. C., June 5th to 7th. The convention theme was "Organization for Service." The convention foretold so important from the standpoint of universal Brotherhood work that we are quoting it almost entire herewith.

CONVENTION FOREWORD.

The first convention of the Federal Council of Lutheran Brotherhoods meets under the most auspicious circumstances. The entire history of the movement is marked by the leadings of a providential hand. As an organization it was born because of the desire of Lutheran men to be more useful in the church and more helpful to one another. It came into existence in a time when a spirit of church loyalty and missionary enthusiasm pervaded the church. It partook of this spirit and at once began to cultivate the same. The Lutheran Brotherhood stands for the church and is the champion of all its missionary and benevolent operations. Its progress, though rapid, has been conservative enough to be substantial and safe. Its work has been such as to commend it to the confidence of the entire church.

Though in its infancy as an organization, it has already been welcomed as a factor for good in scores of congregations. Doors of opportunity are everywhere open to it. The awakened manhood of the church is everywhere seeking an agency through which it may work most effectively. The Lutheran Brotherhood, when organized in the true spirit, proves just the agency they want. Its object as stated in its manual, at once commends it to all who love the church and seek the welfare of men. It aims to lead men into fellowship with Christ and the Church; to promote the spiritual, intellectual and social welfare of its members; to quicken the activities and increase the efficiency of the congregation with which it is connected, and to give to men in every condition of life, especially in times of trial, the stimulus of Christian comradeship and the inspiration that comes from association with men of kindred aims.

As a Brotherhood, it stands for everything that tends to a noble manhood. Its purpose is to promote the prosperity and power of the Lutheran Church.

The future of the Brotherhood will be wonderfully influenced by the discussions and deliberations of this first convention. The men of the church are listening eagerly for its echo. They are expecting from it and praying for it that it may sound the note of a mighty forward march all along the line of church activity. May the manly courage, the unselfish devotion and the all conquering faith of the man Christ Jesus characterize every word and every act of the convention.

One of the most interesting sessions was held on Tuesday evening, June 6th, with six ten-minute addresses on the following topics:

- (a) "A Man and Himself".....
..Mr. I. S. Runyon, New York, N. Y.
- (b) "A Man and His Home".....
..Mr. Henry Denhart, Washington, Ill.
- (c) "A Man Among Men".....
.....Chas. Geesey, Esq., Altoona, Pa.
- (d) "A Man and His Business"....
..Hon. John Hubner, Catonsville, Md.
- (e) "A Man and His City".....
Col. Edward Vollrath, Bucyrus, Ohio.
- (f) "A Man and His Church".....
John G. Schilpp, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

At the closing service, President Taft and various Foreign Ministers and our own Champ Clark, General Member No. 3, Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, addressed the convention.

Addison Clark, General Member No. 215, died at Comanche, Texas, on May 13th, at the age of 69. Brother Clark had been a follower of the Lowly Nazarene for 57 years and was a resident of Texas all that time. In the War of the Rebellion he enlisted in the Confederate Army with a company almost entirely made up of members of the Church. This company saw active service in the Trans-Mississippi Department and during the severe conflict the courage of Brother Clark and his very nobility were often in evidence. He was commissioned a second lieutenant and later a first lieutenant, performing his duty for the commanding officers to which of superior rank were naturally promoted. Later as a student and then as a teacher, Mr. Clark mastered foreign languages and higher mathematics and was preaching the Word himself in 1860. He was married in the church of his birth and immediately began his pastoral work.

Together with his brother a school was opened in Fort Worth which later was styled "Add-Ran College." In order to finance this institution the Clark Brothers sold lands for four thousand dollars which are today reputed to be worth forty millions. Add-Ran College is now a part of Christian University. Brother Clark was connected with our work in Texas from its very infancy and has always been a lover of the ideal. His later pastorate were at Waco, Amarillo and Indian Wells. He fought a good fight and finished the course and at his request was succeeded by J. C. Mason, State Secretary of the Texas Christian Missionary Society. He pronounced the eulogies commending his spirit to the Maker.

Brother Clark became a general member of the Brotherhood and a member of the Ten-Dollar League at the Pittsburg convention, where he was present at the meeting in Luna Park. The sympathy of the Brotherhood is extended to his family who mourn his loss and all, to our Cause in Texas, which was deprived of his wise counsel for so long more. Addison Clark did a good work and as a faithful Disciple is entitled to eternal rest.

. A. Doan, General Member No. 400, Director of the Brotherhood, is journeying to Portland by easy stages, trying to wire a set of almost unstrung nerves. We have a letter dated at Minnewauke, in Minnesota, where we anticipate was angling for some of the small-fished species of the finny tribe, that would like to get at ourselves. He is going to Yellowstone Park and on to Portland, and will doubtless meet others of our people in Yellowstone who are making the Park trip prior to the convention.

A Letter From Mangum

We expect to carry out the programs outlined in the Brotherhood Calendar. We have made provision for the physical training by organizing a Brotherhood baseball team; have provided tennis courts and croquet grounds for the Brotherhood members. We have just started a "Mean Business" contest, which is going fine. We hope to complete our work by September 1st and have 100 Brotherhood men in our Bible Class on the first Sunday.

At this time of year, all of our schools and colleges are making special efforts to reach all of our most likely young men and young women in the interest of higher education. The Campbell-Hagerman College, of Lexington, Ky., is an example of what we mean. Their letter of May 27th is so important from the standpoint of all of our schools that we are giving space to their appeal editorially herewith:

DEAR BROTHER:—May we not count on a little help from you in a good cause? We are trying as best we can to give to the young women committed to our care a Christian education. While teaching them the subject matter of the text-book, we are also trying to impress upon them the fact that the purpose of an education is service. We are therefore sending them out into their home communities to be efficient helpers—leaders in whatever is best wherever their lot may be cast, to reverence the church and to be real factors in its ministry of love to the great needy world.

We want girls and young women to come to us, in increasing numbers, from all parts of our great country. Will you not help us by writing on the inclosed postal the names of any young women whom you know whose parents are able and who are thinking of sending them off to college? Underscore the names of those who are practically certain to go. Also if you know any minister who has a capable, studious daughter with a serious life purpose, we would be glad to give her substantial aid in securing a thorough education.

Wishing you God speed in your own good work and trusting we may have your help and good wishes in ours, I am,

Fraternally yours,

B. C. HAGERMAN.

A Spicy Letter From New Albany, Indiana

The Brotherhood General Office receives many communications from various sources and hundreds of reports from Local Brotherhoods, Bible Classes and Men's Societies indicating an awakening of the manhood of our churches to a sense of their responsibilities for undertaking Brotherhood work in real earnest. It is seldom, however, that we receive a letter which is more full of achievement than the one from L. B. D. C. No. 330 in the Central Church at New Albany, Ind., which comes to us from the pen of C. A. Slaton, the Secretary, which we quote herewith:

"Perhaps it will be of interest to you to know how the Brotherhood Movement is taking hold of men in this city. Recently Local No. 330 extended an invitation to all Brotherhoods and similar men's organizations in the city to meet with us and a most enthusiastic and well attended meeting was the result. Nine churches representing six different communions were represented by more than 150 men. The program consisted of helpful speeches from representatives of each church. A Union Committee of nine was selected to arrange another meeting and bring about a permanent organization. The next meeting was held in the First Presbyterian Church and despite inclement weather, eleven churches representing six communions were represented by more than 100 men. The meeting was most helpful and enjoyable. It was unanimously agreed that a federation of Brotherhoods be organized with one director from each men's organization. These directors will meet and perfect plans for the permanent society. The duty of calling this meeting was placed upon L. B. D. C. No. 330. We cannot help but feel that great good will be accomplished in our community by thus joining the forces of nearly 600 Christian men."

We are in receipt of announcement of Drake University, College of the Bible, for 1911, which is full of information and instruction in regard to the courses of study in our Iowa School. Students and others interested should address Hill M. Bell, President, Des Moines, Ia.

In connection with the great Winona Bible Conference at Winona Lake, Ind., there is to be established this year a Young Men's Bible Conference. No one who is vitally in touch with the working forces of the church has not felt at some time the lack of enthusiastic, devoted, trained young men. The new conference should be a power in developing just the class of workers and leaders. The conference is to be under the direction of William Mather Lewis, who will also lead the discussion on "Young Men and Boys' Work."

The speakers already secured and their subjects are: Dr. George L. Robinson, "Young Men and the Ministry;" Rev. William Sunday, "Young Men and Personal Work;" William J. Robinson, "Young Men and the Commercial Life;" John Timothy Stone, "Young Men and the Bible;" Dr. John Balcom Shaw, "Young Men and Church Organizations."

It is hoped that Governor Osborn, of Michigan, will speak on "Young Men and Public Life." "Young Men and Sportsmanship" will be discussed by an athlete of national fame. After each address there will be a round table discussion. The young men in attendance at the conference will have access to the regular class and devotional meetings, and much inspiration should be gained from them.

Winona offers many delightful opportunities for outdoor recreation, swimming, boating, base-ball, tennis, golf, and a young man could find no more charming place to spend his summer vacation. The conference will be held from August 21st to August 30th.

Plans For The Summer

L. B. D. C. No. 300, of Pasadena, Cal., presided over by that Brotherhood business man, J. R. Gilbert, is into its second summer with determination to cut its eye teeth without pain, or worry, and in addition hopes to grind out some grist that will be useful in the Kingdom. We are indebted to Brother Gilbert for an elaborate account of the plans, which, on account of space we condense below:

Last summer's plan was to have an occasional lawn party at the home of some member. The men enjoyed it very much as it was the means of getting acquainted with each other and the meetings were held from place to place some of the neighbors were invited to be invited and many of them were not church goers. This year, however, their energies will be more concentrated upon Sunday-School work. The Brotherhood will be divided into divisions with a captain over each 10 members. By this method they can get into touch with every man of the church and each captain will make a special effort to get all of his men into the Brotherhood and into the Bible School, which it will be an easy matter to get him into the church. They find it in California, where sunshine and rain bring forth the golden fruit, that it takes constant effort to keep a Brotherhood going, as it does in Kansas City and a lot of other places where it is hot and blows and does a lot of things that they say it doesn't do in California, but in Pasadena they keep pegging away just the same. They believe that they can do more work by working steadily to develop the spiritual life of the men already in the church than they do by inviting a lot of outsiders to social gatherings and then let them drift away without the church getting hold of them. They say that California is one of the hardest States in which to maintain a Brotherhood, or a church organization for that matter, on account of the constantly changing population. It is a good deal like the First Church in Kansas City, which has the same problem with which to contend. However, it is different from the Parish church in which you win a man and he stays with the church. Out in California he is here today and gone tomorrow. The man who led the orchestra in Pasadena a week before our information was sent was at that time enroute to Portland and Pasadena was looking for a man to take his place. The Sunday-School Superintendent resigned on account of duties which will take him out of the city on Sunday. The president of the Men's Class is thinking of leaving the city and that will make his place vacant. If we would listen to our informants seriously we would think for a moment that Pasadena was soon to be depopulated, but from our experience we know that when they lose one they gain two and so our heart need not be troubled. However, the Pasadena Brotherhood is a bunch of live wires. W. C. Hull is the minister and he and the Brotherhood President have time from their busy duties to go to surrounding towns and make addresses upon the Brotherhood subject. They propose to go to Whittier, a neighboring hamlet, and organize a Local Brotherhood soon. They are looking forward with eager anticipation to a successful visit. Don't you hope they have it?

Word comes to us that the Official Board of the Jackson Avenue Christian Church, Kansas City, took action recently in deciding to send their pastor, T. W. Grafton, to Portland and pay his expenses. Brother Grafton is a fruitful worker and wise counselor, and we are glad not only for his sake, as giving evidence of his church's growth in liberalism, but for the sake of all who may meet him at the Portland Convention and associate with him there.

Enthusiastic reports of the Brotherhood Week of Prayer continue to come in. A note from H. J. Kirschstein, pastor of the North Side Church at Omaha, L. B. D. C. No. 272, says:

"While there were many interruptions that week, it was the best thing the men of this church ever did. We had twenty-two to thirty-one men out every night and the effect on the men and the entire church was fine. Net results were three additions, one by statement and two by primary obedience."

Isn't this worth while?

Here is another summer Brotherhood located at Rock Island, Ill., and the plan outlined by the President, Willard A. Schaeffer, indicates a live executive, who is determined to make hay while the sun shines:

The Brotherhood of the Memorial Christian Church have created an athletic department in furtherance of boys and young men's work in the Church and Bible School. A committee on athletics has been appointed of which Mr. W. R. Wells, of No. 107 Thirteenth St., Rock Island, has been appointed chairman. The committee are organizing a base-ball team and will later take up basket-ball.

They are also promoting a series of races which shall culminate on next Labor Day in a number of long distance races and for which some very valuable prizes will be offered. The trophies will consist of gold watches, fobs, sweaters and other things which will be greatly appreciated by the winners of the various events.

Classes will be provided in all events for boys and young men of different ages in order that every one competing shall have an even chance with others of the same age at one of the prizes.

Eligibility to membership on the teams and to completion in the races will require a bona-fide membership in the Memorial Bible School or in one of the Christian Mission Bible Schools and of an attendance of at least four consecutive Sundays prior to participation in a main event.

Any boy or young man who wishes to compete or join the teams should see Mr. Wells at once or be at one of the Bible Schools for enrollment any Sunday morning at 9:30, then see Mr. Wells or one of the athletic committee.

WILLARD A. SCHAEFFER,
President.

"We never did any active work until after Shellenberger's visit of February 11th," is the way the Secretary of one of our locals in an Eastern State expresses himself in regard to the value of Mr. Shellenberger's services as a Field Secretary.

In this connection, Mr. Shellenberger's appointments on the Pacific Coast during July and August are now being rapidly closed. If there are any churches who have not yet arranged for a visit, where it is believed the results would be profitable to all interests, there is perhaps time to slip in an engagement.

The Committee of One Hundred, arranging for the Men and Religion campaign of Greater Kansas City, is holding semi-weekly meetings, and preparations of all kinds are progressing satisfactorily. A special folder interpreting the movement in its relationship to Kansas City and surrounding territory is being circulated.

The Men and Religion Movement is gathering its forces rapidly. A meeting of the Committee of Ninety-seven was held in the Hotel Manhattan, in New York City, on June 9th. The attendance was large. Campaign Leader Fred B. Smith had just returned from a trip abroad and reported the engagement of a number of eminent men for membership in the teams. The report of men engaged for team work includes our own Charles Reign Scoville.

The meeting was followed by a banquet at night at the Hotel Astor, attended by about 400 citizens of New York. The addresses of the evening were received with much enthusiasm.

The next thing on in connection with the movement is the conference on the plans and message of the Continental Campaign to be held at Silver Bay, on Lake George, in New York City, from July 22d to 30th inclusive. A conference program in detail will be found upon another page.

We have no hesitancy in saying that pastors and laymen who are interested in this movement, or who are thinking of taking a vacation at such a time, they could combine both pleasure and profit and could hardly do better than to arrange to attend this conference. They will be enriched 'in soul by coming in touch with these earnest and consecrated men.

Just as we were going to press the magazine, affiliation papers came from the University Place Church, Moines, C. N. Kinney, President; W. Darner, W. F. Barr, E. H. English, O. O. Snyder, Vice-Presidents; C. Denny, Secretary, and B. D. Van Meter, Treasurer; C. S. Medbury, Pastor, remittance of $36.90, local dues.

Also affiliation papers for our Brotherhood at Beatrice, Neb., J. Davis, Pastor; D. G. McGaffey, President; Kirk Griggs, Vice-President; J. B. Crutcher, Secretary, and J. Klein, Treasurer, with $14.90 dues.

These gladden our hearts and make us feel behind us in this Movement the power of a great body of men who are laboring at the problems of the Kingdom.

Herbert Moninger is Dead

As we were closing the forms for the July magazine, this sad and depressing news comes to our desk. He was in our thought only a few minutes before as we looked over the prospectus of the Moninger Tour of the Bible Lands, 1912. The Holy Land has claimed him already. He died suddenly at his home in Cincinnati, at 10:55 p. m. on

His age was thirty-six years. It probably been given to no man in generation to render so large a service to our people in so short a time. We shall miss his cheery voice, the gleam of his eye, and the sweet and sane personality of the man for many years to come. But we shall feel his presence in the mighty stimulus to Bible School work which has largely come through him. This is a monument which will be enduring. Never at any time in the future the work of the great Bible School activities of Disciples of Christ is related, one of the names to be written first will be of Herbert Moninger. It is less than two years since, at a time when a review of the work of Brother Moninger was being prepared for this magazine, he remarked somewhat facetiously: "I want to live so that when I die it can be written upon my tombstone, 'Here lies the fellow who delivered the goods.' " "Yes, we can do it, brother, and in sincerity, too.

More death has found a shining example. In these pages we recount the life of home of veterans, like F. D. Clark and Addison Clark. They lived, they fought, and in the fulness of life have laid their armor down. Herbert Moninger goes in the very fulness of his powers. Each was loyal to his country. Each was loyal to his Lord.

Herbert Moninger was General Member No. 204, of the Brotherhood of Disciples and was also a contributor to its work through the Ten-Dollar League.

To our brother's sorrowing loved ones, and to his associates in the Standard Publishing Company and to Bible School workers generally, who held him in affection, we tender our sincere sympathy.

"Father's Day"

The following paragraphs are clipped from The Herald of Gospel Light, a journal published at Dayton, Ohio:

FATHER'S DAY, JUNE 25.

At a regular meeting of the Billy Sunday Club of the First Christian church of Danville, Ill., May 2, 1910, a resolution was adopted, setting apart the last Sunday in June, of each year, as "Father's Day." An invitation was extended to other clubs and churches to join in this movement and in honor of our fathers to wear on this day a white flower with a sprig of evergreen.

The Ministerial Association of Danville adopted the resolution and several of the churches in Danville and vicinity observed the day. The Billy Sunday Club, an organization for the improvement of men, morally, socially and spiritually, cordially invites all clubs, churches, in fact, all people everywhere, to join in this movement.

B. I. POLAND, Pres. B. S. C.

Danville, Ill., April 28, 1911.

* * * The church at Danville, Ill., under the pastoral care of Rev. H. G. Rowe, and the "Billy Sunday Club," has inaugurated "Father's Day"—it is to be observed June 25. They wish all churches of all denominations to join in the movement. Dr. Poland calls attention in this issue to the matter.

The general observance, and cordial advocacy of "Mother's Day," would warrant, I think, the consideration of the observance of "Father's Day" as well. It is more than a mere sentiment that prompts this later movement. We all admit that there is a peculiar tenderness associated with the name of "Mother" that reaches down into the very depths of our souls; but do we not—with somewhat different emotions, perhaps—cherish and deeply reverence the name of "Father"—father, who extended the strong right arm to lift us up, who stood between us and the dangers and hardships of life?

Shall we not have "Father's Day?" What says CHRISTIAN MEN, our recognized leader in the helpful movements among men?

Greater Efficiency

AN EDITORIAL BY W. F. ROTHENBERGER

Among the key words of life which have gripped modern men is the characteristic word "efficiency." The pulse of the Brotherhood seems to indicate that after several years of varied experiences we have made a large place for this significant word in our vocabulary.

Out of our much experimenting, incident to an organization just forming, great lessons have come. We have learned that a Brotherhood on paper sustains about the same relation to a really efficient organization that blue prints sustain to the building itself. Blue prints have never kept the rain or cold from anyone, neither have paper Brotherhoods shielded men from the ravages of the world. Our desire for efficiency is forcing us to enjoy the sound of the tools in the hands of the best blood of the church in building a masculine tower of strength that will do honor to the greatness and the dignity of the King's business.

Again, we have learned to appreciate the fact that efficiency is not dependent wholly upon the size of the organization. A cozy home is sometimes more productive of real comfort than an uncared-for mansion, the cobwebs of whose rooms bear evidences of unuse. A padded roll of several hundred members looks good in print, but efficiency can never be seen in a membership which, upon the day of visitation, presents the appearance of father's old Morris chair, which has long waited to be upholstered anew. As the presiding officer of a patriotic meeting in a town in Southern Italy at which the king was the guest of honor said, in his address of welcome, "We welcome you in the name of our 5,000 inhabitants, 3,000 of whom are in America," so an occasional presiding officer at a meeting of the Brotherhood might to our Secretaries or other guests in honor, "We welcome you in the name of our 200 members, 69 of whom are on paper." Highest efficiency is to be seen in that body of men, of whatever number, who, under the burdens of the community and among the problems of the hour with which the church is struggling, sweat at their manly task.

Experience has taught us once again to assess the true value of the economic and social side of Brotherhood work. With a new appreciation of the natural life in the life of organized Brotherhood there has come also a larger appreciation of their limitations. We are regarding them as means to an end. In many summers the old Rockefeller mansion on Euclid avenue, with its extensive lawn, studded with beds of beautiful flowers, was known only as the place where the richest man in the world gave an occasional summer dinner. That is the home of the Neal Cure for those who are fighting the awful battle of drink. Many local Brotherhoods have hitherto existed for the sole purpose of social pleasure, as useful as a program may be, are either dying or have been saved by the consciousness that there is a still greater service to be rendered. The most efficient Brotherhoods of today are those which are feeding the bodies of men and affording them pleasurable pastime, have awakened their deeper natures and have cultivated the life of the soul. The most significant sign of the times among organized Christian men is the growing vision of greater efficiency.

Mr. A. Long,

Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Brother Long,—

At the Brotherhood Conference held during the Ohio State Convention at Portsmouth, on May 23d, a resolution was passed instructing the secretary to express to yourself our appreciation of what you have done in the furtherance of the Brotherhood Movement.

The money you have put into it can, of course, be computed in dollars and cents, but the time and thought given to the consideration of plans, conferences held, conventions visited, addresses made, the great draft of all this upon the energy and vitality of a busy business man—these are some of the things which cannot be computed, and which really mean more than the mere giving of money.

It gives me great pleasure, Brother Long, to transmit to you this action of the Conference, and to express the hope that you may yet be spared many years to continue your labor of love on behalf of the men, and to see some fruition of all that you have so unselfishly and unstintedly done for your brethren in Christ.

Very sincerely,

WILLIAM SPANTON, Secy.

Frederick Dunglison Power

BY EARLE WILFLEY.

inia was his birthplace; his place of birth, the hearts of a grateful people; his final resting place, the grave of his Lord.

Power was born January 23, 1851, in York county, near historic Yorktown, Va. He was the second of nine children. His father, Dr. Robert Henry Power, was a well known physician, and served in both houses of the State Legislature. His grandfather, Dr. Frederick Power, was a Baptist, but the old church, where the family worshipped, was founded in 1813, accepted the teachings of Alexander Campbell, when he died in 1856.

Power's mother was Abigail M. De Ruyter, N. Y. She was a strong and a woman of exceptional culture and beauty of character. From her mother he received his early education. During the Civil War his home was in the path of armies. There were no schools, so his father employed a private teacher in the home. Two winters he lived in Richmond as a page in the State Capitol. He obeyed the gospel under the preaching of A. B. Walthall, when fifteen years of age.

In September, 1868, he entered Bethany College to prepare for the ministry. He spent three years in Bethany, and five years of hard work and close application. Graduating in 1871, he was called to a city church at a salary of $500, but he declined it, accepting the labors of caring for three communities in Virginia for $500. Of this he himself said: "I was poor, in debt, without books—but I regretted my choice. I would not exchange the experience for any sum of sound money, or unlimited coinage at 16 to 1."

In January, 1874, Mr. Power accepted a call to the church at Charlottesville, the seat of the University, with the purpose of taking lectures there. March 17th of that year, he married Miss Emily Browne Alsop, of Fredericksburg. Of the wife of his youth, who was with him to the end, and whose tender fidelity was beautiful to behold, he thus speaks in one of his booklets: "From the beginning of my ministry I have been blessed with a wife who has been a steadfast comforter and helper, second only to the Master I have sought to serve. Her counsel has always been safe, her influence has been exalting, her faith has braced my soul."

In September of the same year he returned to Bethany as adjunct professor of ancient languages. This was an exceedingly profitable year for him, being associated with his old professors, Pendleton, Loos and others.

In May, 1875, he received a call to Washington, D. C., but declined it. Later a member of the board of officers went to Bethany to see him and prevailed upon him to visit the church. The arguments pro and con advanced by different persons on the subject of accepting the call are interesting, in the light of the glorious ministry that followed.

The president of the college tried to dissuade him, saying: "You may go there for a year and they may not want you longer. Here at Bethany you may remain as long as you desire."

The famous Jere Black, at Washington, said: "They will starve you, young man. I know them. They are not able to sustain you."

A number of preachers had declined a call to the church. One declared he could not rent a house on the salary.

Of this crisis in his life, Mr. Power has said: "I found a congregation of 150 people, somewhat divided, worshipping in a small frame chapel, well out in what then seemed to be the outskirts of the city. I saw that before any preacher who accepted this field, there was a hard struggle—the building up of a cause in a great city, with a small congregation, little means, and an obscure and unattractive building, while other religious bodies were well established and equipped." Though at heart hoping the call would not be pressed, when, however, it was unanimously repeated, it was accepted, and the memorable pastorate began September 5, 1875, the inaugural sermon being, "What is Truth?" and "The Love of Christ Constraineth Us."

The character of the building and the state of the cause at that time may be judged from the fact that when some thief stole some books from the church, the papers announced that "the little colored church on Vermont avenue" had been robbed. And later, when President Garfield was a regular attendant, and people were turned away by the hundreds from the doors, an indignant citizen, who failed to get inside "the court church," went away denouncing it as an outrage that the President of the United States should worship in "that little Campbellite shanty."

But what a work of sublime faith and untiring devotion followed! From an humble flock of 150 souls in their little "shanty" the cause grew through the years, until in 1884 they were housed in their splendid building, and from the one despised congregation they have grown to ten, all of them the direct result of the zeal and consecration of the M Church.

In this notable advance, it is not to say, the influence of F. D. Power is paramount. Through and through he only believed in, and was intensely to the gospel of the New Testament. He believed in spending and being for it's sake. And he applied this trine not only to his own supreme selfish life, but also to the church which he ministered. As a result, his congregation, though one of small means, supports its own mission both the home and foreign field and liberally to many other worthy enterprises.

Mr. Power was a vigorous defender of the faith, and its doctrines were lessly declared with fullness and convincing clearness and power, without asking permission of the president of the center pews." And yet he was not a sectarian, but granted to every other what he claimed for himself, the right of independent thought and freedom of speech. He loved all men whom he had a chance to love, and carried no personal shafts for any of the "other shepherds." He was deeply pained when a certain brother preached a sermon from the pulpit declaring that Luther and Wesley and the other great reformers may have been good men, but none of them were in the kingdom. In recognition of this breadth of thought and catholicity of spirit, he was made a trustee of the United Society of Christian Endeavor very early in its history, which honor he retained until his death.

What should be said of his place in the great Restoration movement? Of his clear and scholarly writings; of his powerful and inspiring convention sermons and addresses; of his illuminating lectures; of his wise and timely counsel; of his gifts and graces that made him the preacher of the nation's capital? and a closer scrutiny of his life and must be required to answer these questions.

Many will remember his keen sense of some humor and how he could give a jest with equal relish. But humor had no sting in it; the shafts of wit were not barbed.

Others will think of his courtly mien, quiet, unostentatious dignity, his bearing—a princely gentleman.

By this congregation, for which he had laid down his life, he will be held in everlasting remembrance, above all else, as their kind friend, their self-sacrificing pastor, their tenacious, unwearying shepherd.

His sympathies were profound and deeply touched. No cry of distress went unheeded if in his power to answer it. Early and late he might be seen going on errands of mercy. Every other man's humane was in a very real sense his. The draft upon his emotional nature was constant, and this, together with his activities, local and general, brought about the fatal result. Tired human nature, mutely protesting for awhile, at last gave way, and the "prince and great man of Israel" fell. All too plainly physicians and friends saw the approaching end. During the months of waiting, the senseless, impotent grief of the people was unbearable. He breathed his last calmly and peacefully on Wednesday morning, the 14th of June, and at the Thursday evening prayer-meeting we gathered together in silence until a great sob of anguish broke from every heart.

On Friday afternoon, when the church, which he had helped to build, was packed to every corner by men and women of every rank—from the Speaker of the House of Representatives, Senators and Congressmen, to the humble colored woman who served in his home—the writer tried to voice the love and devotion, tried to give relief to the pent-up emotions of this great and loyal congregation. Before us lay all that was left of F. D. Power, his face like that of a Grecian hero chiseled by the hand of a Phidias. That evening a sculptor took an impression for a death mask, and then at sunset we laid away the ruins of that beautiful temple.

Many loving hearts have tried to comfort Mrs. Power in her crushing sorrow. And bravely has she borne herself. Through the long weeks and months she scarcely left her husband for an hour, and to the last her own hands were chief among those to minister to him. With her at the end were their daughter, Mrs. Sparks; a brother, Mr. Frank Power, of Decatur, Ga., and three sisters, Miss Lucy and Miss Labelle Power, and Mrs. Mary Alsop, of Newport News, Va., and other relatives.

In conclusion, may I be allowed to add one personal touch to this hurried sketch. When I began my ministry with this church the first of last November it was with fear and trembling. But I say with extreme gratification that this royal people had room enough in their hearts for the beloved pastor who had laid down his work and for the one who took it up. And, more pertinent still, this remarkable man, whom I had counted for years as a friend, received me with open arms, and from his every word and act there shone the radiant character of the Christian gentleman. He was gracious and considerate. Not the least slighting of brotherly courtesy. But at all times, right up to the very last, he strove to lighten my burdens and protect me from all possible embarrassments. I can never tell how deeply touched I was by his farewell message to me, spoken in his last moments of consciousness. He had just said it to me and then repeated it to his wife: "Tell Brother Wilfley not to do as I have done," meaning the wasting of his forces in overwork. Many other things I could repeat of priceless value to my brother ministers, but not now.

He was my friend. I loved him as a father and a brother. I refreshed my heart with the sweetness and purity of his beautiful character, even as he clung to my strength at the last. I am a man and my ministry will have a meaning, since I have known him in inner life. In my labors here I shall always remember his farewell Scripps message to the church, spoken before the end: "These are my words which I spake unto you while I was with you."

How to Manage Fathers

There has been a good deal said and written and preached to fathers on how to manage their sons; this article is to boys on how to manage their fathers. There are two sides to everything, and to nothing more than to the delicate relation of father and son. A boy ought to know how to handle his father, quite as much as vice-versa.

It is an irreparable loss to lose a father; and we can lose any one who has been dear to us in other ways than by death. In fact, death seems sometimes the happiest way to separate. Of the dead we think nothing but good and tender things; but when we lose some one by estrangement, by misunderstanding, by growing away from him, the alienation is often mixed with bitterness.

One of the hardest problems of human affection is that of father and son. The man is so proud of his baby boy, and until he gets into his teens the little fellow seems closer to the big man than any other person. So long as the boy can be led by the hand and be sung to sleep at night and babied and caressed as a pet, the father and son relation is very simple and idyllic.

But when the child grows up and develops a will of his own, becomes a separate individual, seeking his own companions, and recognizing that he has his own peculiar tastes and notions, comes a change. And, sad to say, usually the two who used to be so intimate and loving, grow entirely estranged. The one person the boy cannot get along with is his father. In his presence he is awkward and irritated. He gets in the way of avoiding him as much as possible.

A barrier appears to grow up between them. A wall builds itself there. It is my purpose to give the boy—In other words, nothing to say this time to the father—some hints on how to break down that barrier and to pierce that wall.

And it is well worth while to try to get along with your father. Your life is rich in proportion to your friendships. You cannot afford to miss no kind of love that is the privilege of men. And of all friendships possible, none has the peculiar grace and satisfaction and value of the friendship with your father.

A mother's love is very beautiful. The love of a wife is a powerful factor in life, men friends have their own valuable importance, and women friends of the right kind are helpful; but to have as a sympathetic, understanding, and true friend the man who nursed you, who planned for you, and dreamed for your future, all during your childhood, d, is, if not the best of all, at least ong the best of all.

n early childhood one is not a sep-e individual at all. He is just a e of the family. He thinks and feels as the household thinks and feels.
n, with opening years, comes a nge, often disquieting. The boy beto be a definite integer himself. He s in himself notions, ideals, longings, erent from those about him. His destiny stirs within him. Here is a danger point. The little fraction of humanity is breaking away to become a man. The mind is doing its own choosing, the heart making its own selections.

break away you must. It is a law of nature. You cannot remain a mere instrument of your parents. But in the face of this, in passing over into your new manhood, how can you keep your father?

In a sense, you cannot keep him. You must lose him and find him again; and it is hard. For commanding and obey-ing here must be substituted advice and discussion, instead of ignorance shielded by experience there must be mutual friendship; the father has to learn that he no longer has to do with a baby, and the boy has to learn that his father's wisdom, experience, and counsel are fully as valuable as were his authority and commands. Here are some rules for you to observe:

First, study your father. Realize that it is worth while to know him, that he may be a better fellow to know than any of the other boys or men who seem so attractive to you.

Be patient with him. Try to understand that he is just as much perplexed by the subtle alteration going on in you, as you are by the change you think is taking place in him. Remember he is not all-wise, he is doing perhaps the best he can.

Sympathize with him. Growing old, as you will find out some day, is no joke.
It means a lot of disappointment and disillusion and heart-wrenching and sadness.
You do not know how many bright dreams of his have faded, how many times, baffled and beaten, he has to pluck up courage again as best he could and go on with the battle for bread and butter.

Remember, too, that probably he has had some golden hopes about you, foolish hopes perhaps, but none the less dear to him. He may have set his heart on your becoming a doctor, as he is, or a lawyer, or minister, or farmer, as he is, and it is pretty hard for him to reconcile himself to your inborn craving to be a musician or railway man or a mechanic.

Respect him. He's entitled to that, in any case. Never show contempt for anything he may say. Never seem to appear that you think he does not know what he is talking about. When he speaks, listen with attention. I do not say for you to obey him implicitly always; that is another matter. But even if you do not always do as he says, at least you can show him that you respect what he says.

Flatter him. Really, in his heart, he is prouder of your praise than of that coming from any one else. Of course, he would not show it. Perhaps he will let on that he does not care at all what you think. He may even pooh-pooh you. But I will tell you his secret: A word of appreciation from you is mighty sweet to him. So whenever he does anything you like, be sure to tell him. When he does anything you do not like, keep still.

Be affectionate with him. Keep your baby-hold on him if possible. If he is cold, and reserved, and repels your advances, still be as loving as he will let you; and don't overestimate this coldness. Whatever it may be for others, ten to one it is not meant for you, and very probably his heart is inwardly yearning for your caresses.

Don't argue with him. He has probably fallen into the habit of expecting you to accept anything he may say as gospel truth, just because he says it. Now, that is a harmless sort of belief. Let him think of it. It pleases him and doesn't hurt you. And it's a trifle disconcerting to a man of forty to be set right by a boy of sixteen. Of course, the boy may be right and the man wrong; but that is not the point. We all have our little vanities, and father has his; one of them is that he knows more than you. Indulge him. Some day you will be forty perhaps, and you will know a deal less than you do now.

Help him. He is a burdened man. Every father of a family has burdens you little understand. Life looks so different to him from the way it looks to you. You are young, and like a colt that has not been broken, kicking up its heels in the pasture, ignorant yet of bridle, saddle, or collar. But father is more or a pack-horse.

He has ties you cannot appreciate. He is harnessed, and sometimes the load is galling. Every day is more or less a grind. And there are risks and pitfalls. There are gadflies and wasps, there are the whips of duty and the fretting yoke of necessity. He has a sense of being tired, unlike any kind of tired you feel. It is not the good, healthy tiredness that comes from play and study, but the worrisome, wakeful tire that comes from strain and strength that still feels the strain and danger and the need of watchfulness. Oh, my boy, you need to make a good allowance for father than he makes for you.

Whatever happens to you, you are young and will get over it. But with him, recovery becomes every year more and more difficult. He is getting year more like an old rubber band that has lost its spring. He needs you, your trust and help. Don't fail him.

And last, and most important of all, to make up the round dozen of words I have for you, be loyal to him!—

HECK for $5.00 comes to us from S. Y. Elliott, Rushville, Mo., to be credited to the Comrades of Paul Fund. Easter Sunday, April 16th.—Mound City, Mo., was robed in all her beauty, and so was the congregation in both Bible School and Church. One year ago the men's class reached its climax on Easter with an attendance of two hundred. It was their ambition to reach that climax today, but just half the number materialized. However, 100 men make a good stage from the transitory enthusiasm that carries us to the peaks of the spectacular sentimentally only for an instant. In the evening we were with Council Bluffs Church where Brother Edgar D. Price, minister. Easter thought and music bore us all right again. After listening to an hour's song of surpassing beauty we delivered the Brotherhood message. The Council Bluffs Brotherhood is standing behind the church's work fully.

April 17th.—Clarinda, Ia., is where O. M. Pincock lives. Clarinda is the home of one of the early Brotherhoods of the State. Brother W. C. Fisher, who is now State Bible School Superintendant organized a Brotherhood here before he closed his pastorate. The Brotherhood includes in its membership some of the most influential men of the town. Here we met Brother Fisher, who had been with the Bible School over Sunday and remained for the Brotherhood services. The Clarinda men are in line with the National Organization and have done a splendid work for the local church. J. S. Chiles and R. W. Stafford make a good team as President and Secretary and are seriously studying their problems.

April 18th.—At Osceola, Ia. It rained a heavy shower just at the time the men were supposed to be gathering. The attendance was limited. But the meeting was a success. There were eleven present. Eight signed the covenant. The other three were not members of the church, two of them being members of other Brotherhoods. These eight took the covenant with a determination to succeed. Each took two cards which he determined to get filled out before the next meeting. Thus did they plan to treble their number by their first meeting. Osceola is one of Iowa's good churches. But the same cry for trained leaders comes from there that comes from every church in the land. The Brotherhood will train them if it does its work.

April 19th.—Creston, Ia. Met 44 members of V. O. Winter's Brotherhood Bible Class in a banquet, and the ladies of the church had furnished a meal worthy of the name. The men eagerly listened to the Brotherhood's message. They were eager to organize a Brotherhood immediately. Their pastor, Brother Winter, thought the time not opportune, hence the matter was deferred. They, however, decided to have semi-monthly meetings and use the programs being published in CHRISTIAN MEN as the basis of their work in these meetings, thus becoming a Brotherhood Bible Class.

April 20th-23d was spent in General Office at Kansas City.

April 24th.—Girard, Kansas, is the home of W. M. Brizendine. He is a consecrated banker who is interested in men and the Kingdom. Through him a Brotherhood meeting was called. Twenty-one Girard men came and nine from the L. B. D. C. at Pittsburg, Kansas. A Brotherhood was organized. Prof. H. W. Shidler was elected President, D. M. Whithead, Vice-President, W. M. Brizendine, Secretary, and Ed. C. Strickler, Treasurer.

April 26th-27th.—In office at Kansas City.

April 28th.—The livest district convention we have attended for some time was the one at Eaton, Ind. The Sixth District of Indiana did herself proudly. And J. C. Wilson is the live wire pastor at Eaton. The convention was rich in spirit throughout. The Brotherhood session came last, and was well attended. Seed was sown which is already ripening into Brotherhoods.

May 2d.—And with the Independence Boulevard, Kansas City, Men. This Brotherhood is carrying on different lines of work. At this meeting they recognized an attempt of the boys in Boyville of the Independence Church to establish a printing press of their own. The men of the Brotherhood subscribed for some $75.00 worth of stock at this meeting and the boys were given encouragement to go on. Their Civic Committee is also doing practical work in that they are securing city improvements that are ministering the welfare of the city. Just now the securing of a high school building in the east section of the city is the chief item of interest. We gave an address on the Brotherhood Ideals. The Independence men have a warm hand clasp.

May 3d.—Fifty-one automobiles all in line and following their leader is enough to wake up any city. This is what happened at Joplin this evening. We all met at the First Christian Church and the autos came along and picked us up by fives and sevens until the last auto was full and then some had to walk. Down through the center of the city we went. The street was lined on either side with lines of curious humanity. They took us to the South Joplin Church and dumped us out. About 350 men gathered in front of the church doors waiting for them to open. There they waited and sang. Finally the doors were thrown open and the men streamed in, filling the places at the tables that covered the entire floor of the South Joplin Church. We sang together and we ate together, and then we talked together. A program lasting from 6:00 till 10:30 p. m. is a long one, but Joplin men are stayers. During all this time there was not a "slow" moment. G. W. Muckley represented Church Extension and Home Missions. J. W. McCreary, of St. Louis, spoke for Benevolences. Dr. Shelton, of Thibet, told the story of Foreign Missions. A. P. Finley, of Drury College, urged Christian Education. D. Y. Donaldson plead for Missouri Missions. The writer told the Brotherhood story and acted as toastmaster of the occasion.

The Mayor of Joplin and the prosecuting attorney for the county were both present and bespoke their interest in the great men's movement and the Kingdom of Christ. It was a great meeting. And we saw our opportunities in visions of transfigured glory.

May 4th.—Carthage Brotherhood is a week old. They had organized themselves. Brother Moore, the pastor, had been holding a series of meetings. This evening he gave over to a special service for the men. One hundred and forty of them were there and filled the center section of seats. The remainder of the auditorium was taken up by women. The auditorium was crowded to the doors. Ten new members were secured, making a total enrollment of 65 to date. They accepted a challenge to contest from the South Joplin Church. We expect to hear of things doing in Southern Missouri. F. L. Hall is the new President, Roy R. Legg, and J. A. Harbaugh, Vice-Presidents; Geo. F. Blue, Secretary, and Frank Shafer, Treasurer.

May 5th.—Bartlesville, Oklahoma, has just dedicated a new and handsome church. It is a thing of beauty. Imposing without and attractive within. F. D. Macey, the pastor, is leading his men into larger visions. Thirty-three gathered to hear the Brotherhood story. Thirty-one of them took the covenant. The other two were out of town men, hence it was unanimous. They decided to put CHRISTIAN MEN in their Bible Class and ordered 40 copies. Dr. T. C. Wilson was made President; Chas. Teeple, Vice-President; O. L. Jones, Secretary, and J. L. Overlees, Treasurer.

May 7th.—This is Sunday and we are at Pittsburg, Kansas. Do you know Sam I. Smith? No? Well, you have missed a great treat. Who is he like? Nobody on earth. Where is he from? From Kentucky, of course. Nearly seven feet high and just wide enough to make a shadow when the sun shines its best. Sam is a captain. "To one he saith 'Come' and he cometh. To another he saith 'Go' and he goeth." Things are doing down in Pittsburg. Did you ever take notice as to just how sardines were packed in the box? Well that's the way they were in Sam's church Sunday morning. Four hundred and ninety in a building that would comfortably seat 350. Where did they all recite? Every place. The men hiked off down the street to a real estate office. The girls went away up in a lodge room. Then some more girls went to the same lodge room. That Bible School was scattered sure thing. But Sam got them all together again. And many of them stayed for church services. At these services we spoke especially to men.

The Pittsburg Brotherhood are conducting a mission out in the east part of the city. Here we spoke to two hundred people in a little building 24 x 40 feet. Pittsburg needs two new church buildings. The Brotherhood is seriously planning to solve this problem.

May 8th.—The first face we saw as we dropped off the train at Charleston, Illinois, was that of Pastor F. C. Brown. Brown did not take time to say "Glad to see you." He simply looked it, grabbed our grips and was gone. We made up our minds to follow him and we both landed at the hotel. In the evening a storm arose just at the time the men were ready to come to the meeting. The attendance was light. But the interest was good. The Charleston men had already organized and affiliated with the National Organization. They were deeply in earnest and many questions were asked and answered. They were marking out some vigorous work for themselves.

May 10th.—Western Pennsylvania is having one of her best State Conventions. Here we found a royal fellowship. The requests for visits to the local were numerous and in many cases urgent from the pastor of the district. Western Pennsylvania's attitude to the Brotherhood work is that of an open mind. We believe they will have a place for the Brotherhood on their next program.

May 15th to 18th.—Brother C. A. Freeman, writing in the Christian Evangelist some time ago, said Indiana is a "sleeping giant." There was nobody asleep around Columbus when the State Convention was going on. Indiana is getting awake. She is out of bed, has had her breakfast and has her sleeves rolled up for the tasks that lie before her. The Columbus Convention was an unusually enthusiastic convention. It opened up with a Brotherhood session, on Monday evening. About 300 men gathered. Dr. Hall, of Franklin, State President, presided. Brother Z. T. Sweeney was toastmaster. And to all who know "Zac" that means "Nuff sed." The addresses went to the point and the Brotherhood work received strong emphasis. It would have been possible for the Secretary to have made month's dates directly from the convention had he been able to have filled them.

The new officers for the year are as follows:

President, Robert N. Simpson, New Albany; Vice-President, Judge Ed. Jackson, New Castle; Vice-President, Benjamin Borton, Gary; Secretary, John O. Conklin, New Castle; Treasurer, Milton O. Reeves, Columbus.

A Third-Year Brotherhood in a Small Church

Append below the story of a Local Brotherhood in a small church. We might have made a choice of any one of several places as the scene of this story, but thought it best to go to the National Capitol, to Local Brotherhood No. 253, in the H Street Church. The first article is by A. A. Ackerman, President of the Brotherhood, and the second by J. Oram, the pastor. We call especial attention to the emphasis upon the religious viewpoint and to the lack of boom methods. The sooner it is realized that the Brotherhood is just an every-day sort of a proposition and making its strongest appeal to the religious worker rather than to the mere enthusiast, the quicker will the mission of this organization be appreciated and its benefits realized.

A. A. ACKERMAN

President L. B. D. C. No. 253, Washington, D. C.

"Going on Free,"

By A. A. Ackerman, President L. B. D. C. No. 253

"How old are you, bub?"
 "Sen, goin' on eight."
 This is the way we answered the kindly inquiries of our elders when the writer was by L. B. D. C. No. 253 is two years old, upon three; entering upon its third year as an organization of men with that splendid motto "A Man's Work in a Man's Way," before it and striving every day to do what He would have us do and meeting with great success, and we think that it is time the fellows about this great United Brotherhood of ours should know something about the work at the little old H Street Church. We have not grown in numbers as we first wanted to do, and thought we should, we have more than held our own. We have lost several members by removal, but in a new one every once in a while we keep ahead. But the spiritual growth has been wonderful and the development of the fellows into workers has been great. At most of our meetings each and every man present has something to say on some subject under discussion, no laying back in quietness and passing remarks, but up on the subject, shooting it out right from the shoulder, talking the way men like to hear a man talk, showing that they are enjoying their religion and want to help others and to be helped—men on the floor talking, who, up to two years ago, said, "I can't talk in church." But they are doing it now and strengthening themselves and others as well.

Our meetings are mostly conducted by ourselves. While the president will hold the chair, some other member will lead in the service and we change leaders. We have had but three men from other churches to help us at our meetings. We had Dr. Pruitt, of Luxedo, Brother W. G. Eddingfield, of Vermont Avenue Church, and Brother G. W. Muckley, of U. S., with us one night, and we enjoyed them very much. But our best meetings have been our own fellows doing the work, and that is the only way a bunch of men can hope to grow, i. e., by exercising their religion. We have had but one "back-slapping, grub-consuming" meeting, and that was an open meeting, and we let the ladies in on that. We have missed but two meeting nights in over two years. The devil doesn't go on vacation during the heated spell and so we feel that we cannot either.

One of our Brotherhood men who was only a friend of the church when he became a member of the Brotherhood, has been led to the good confession through his own work in the Brotherhood. Another member has given up a good government position and is now at Old Bethany preparing himself to do "A Man's Work" in a more acceptable way. We keep in touch with our Brother Carl Pultz, and he often writes us a letter to be read at the meeting and we cannot help but feel that he belongs to us, in a way. If we never did any more than win these two, one to Christ and the other to the ministry, we would have done much.

The Brotherhood often takes charge of the services and conducts them in their own way, and the pastor knows that he can leave and be away over Lord's Day and that the Brotherhood or a Brotherhood man will conduct the services, and thus the Brotherhood is assistant to the pastor. The Bible School superintendent is a member, and the Board of Deacons, except one, are members. The Bible School secretary and three teachers are members, and now we are getting in the young men of the Bible School, and, while our growth is slow, it is none the less sure, but the greatest growth is in the members themselves, for they do the work. Sunday, April 16, was Building Fund Day, and they gave $50 that they had accumulated just from the dues and refraining from the grub.

How do we keep up our Brotherhood? By having a meeting every month, with something doing. We use the program given in CHRISTIAN MEN very often. We strive for quality in the workers and are thereby getting quantity, and we have a pastor who be-believes in "A Man's Work in a Man's Way," and believes his men ought to do that work—a pastor who preaches it, prays for it and who works it. If you have such a pastor you will always have a bunch of men who are striving and each of whom knows that

"Onward! are his marching orders,
He who leads to victory.
Onward! till the world is taken For the Man of Galilee.
O, thou Man of Galilee,
We will follow only Thee.
O, thou fearless, peerless leader,
Glorious Man of Galilee."

Can You Have a Brotherhood in a Small Church?

By W. G. Oram

Pastor of the Church and Brotherhood of Which A. A. Ackerman is Writing.

We think, in a measure, we have answered this question in this H Street Christian Church, Washington, D. C. This is not only a small church, but a mission church, housed in an old renovated business room that is unsightly and unsuited in every way for a meeting place of the church.

When we organized, more than two years ago, our idea was not to form a men's club or simply a social organization to entertain, or be entertained. But, primarily, a religious organization of the men of the church for definite training and religious work in the church.

We meet regularly on the second Tuesday of each month. The Social Committee gets together at least one week before the time of each regular meeting, and very carefully works out a program. Subjects of discussion are chosen that cluster around the church's immediate needs and the ability of our men to meet these needs.

Thus, the men are brought face to face in open discussion with the actual work of the church. The responsibility of actually helping to do the work of the church is thus laid upon them. Our Social Committee has done its work so wisely in arranging the programs that we have had very few meetings in which every man present did not have some part.

Our Brotherhood has never attempted to do its work by having great speaker leaders come in from other churches to entertain us. Certainly we have had representative men address our Brotherhood such as Dr. George T. Prewitt, George M. Ley and P. C. Macfarlane, but these only with the other men on the subjects under discussion.

I have been impressed with this one peculiar thing about our Brotherhood, a thing that I believe must be true of every successful Brotherhood, and that is, that the religious and earnest people in the church are in the Brotherhood, because it offers a practical channel of training and service to the church and for Christ. In all our years and more of experience we have made no effort to boost the Brotherhood of things with a whoop and hurrah. Our plan is to make the Brotherhood boost the church by active, practical, helpfulness in all religious work. As a result, our Brotherhood men are in the lead in all departments of the church. I believe that if you can get your men to actively think and really take some part in the religious activities of the church, and to preach to them in real earnestness that every man should be a live wire, an actual preacher of the gospel of Christ, just as far as his ability and strength will permit, something will happen in your church. I believe this is the mission of the Brotherhood. The list, to train and actually get into the church the men of the local church. Certainly you can have a Brotherhood in a small church in any church where you have a few men who are willing to work and lead others into the service.

The Brotherhood will lead your men to larger things for themselves and the church. While our Brotherhood is small and young, one of our splendid young members, named Carl W. Pultz, through the Brotherhood was drawn into activities of the church. He discovered a desire to give his life completely to Christ and the church. He is our first volunteer for the ministry. He is completing his first year in Bethany College in preparation for his chosen life work. So you can have a good Brotherhood in any church, even if it is small, if you make the Brotherhood boost the church and not the church boost the Brotherhood.

L. B. D. C. No. 329 is in the Howett Street Church at Peoria. Before becoming a church, this organization was a mission for twenty-seven years. A Brotherhood was organized in 1910 and Arthur W. Leu is the President. Like all active Brotherhood men generally he is an all around man and has demonstrated his efficiency as a good advertiser in issuing a very unique badge for Children's Day, same being a large figure one cut out of white cardboard, upon which is the following in bold letters:

L. B. D. C. No. 323 is in the First Church, Mansfield, Ohio, where Martin Gerhart is Secretary and C. R. Oakley is the pastor. During the first quarter of 1910 the Brotherhood held six meetings with an average attendance of 35, an enrollment of ten members making the present membership sixty. At a social meeting there were men present. Their fraternal committee made two visits to the sick, taking floral offerings. They remit dues of $16.95 for their membership up to April 30th.

A new church was dedicated at Centerville, Wash., in April, following closely a meeting held by S. M. Martin, evangelist and General Member No. 7 of the Brotherhood. Most immediately after the church was completed, H. E. Ryder, the minister, began responding with the Brotherhood regarding the best method of men's work to undertake and at this writing we have several enthusiastic communications and are anticipating early receipt of their application for certificate of membership in the General Brotherhood.

L. B. D. C. No. 332, of Wellsville, N.Y., affiliated with the General Brotherhood in September, 1910. For the quarter ending March 31st they held three meetings, average attendance of 20, received three new members into the Brotherhood, making their present enrollment 25. Program committee held three meetings; two programs. They have three night classes in the Bible School with an enrollment of 60. They use 30 copies of CHRISTIAN MEN in the Bible School. Their program committee is active, likewise their fraternal committee. Field Secretary Shellenbeger visited them on February 11th and gave them men a vision of larger service in the world of the Kingdom.

One of the newsy sheets that comes to us from Ohio is The Christian, published at Uhrichsville, Charles Darsie, Editor and Publisher. In addition to news items relating to their own work, it publishes almost one page of pithy epigrams, one of which reads: "A man's religion is not much good if it does not make life pleasanter for his family." Among the news items we notice that A. H. Stahl, pastor at Steubenville, has been called to Dover to make an address in the Methodist Church.

From Semaphore, South Australia, comes a request from W. Z. Taylor, Minister, for information in regard to the Brotherhood. He has an essay to be read at meeting of the ministers of South Australia at Adelaide in August. The information went to him by return of mail and we are hoping to receive a copy of the essay to give some of its pungent points to readers of CHRISTIAN MEN. We hope before long to have the Brotherhood movement planted upon Australian soil with an Australian State Brotherhood articulated with the General Brotherhood as many of our State societies are already.

L. B. D. C. No. 311 is in the West Philadelphia Church, otherwise known as the Third Christian Church. They recently held a novel and unique entertainment for the benefit of the ladies, consisting of humorous songs, choruses and speeches, participated in by Pastor George P. Rutledge and Brethren W. Van-sloot, Oscar Muller and Brotherhood President Arthur. Dr. Evans also enlivened the evening by several vocal selections. Refreshments were served by the Brotherhood men themselves and it is their intention to hold these "Ladies Nights" more frequently in the future. There were 195 persons present upon the occasion in question.

In the provisional program of the twenty-first International Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held at Atlantic City, July 6th to 11th, we note the following names of our ministers who will make addresses at various sessions:

I. A. Denton, Troy, N. Y.; Claude E. Hill, Vero Beach, Ind.; A. B. Philpott, Indianapolis, Ind.; Earl Wilfley, Washington, D. C.; F. D. Pever, Washington, D. C.

Among the men of National and International fame are President Taft, ex-Vice-President Frank B. Rowland, Fred B. Smith, of New York, and W. J. Williamson, of St. Louis. The convention will be held in the million-dollar pier, which contains four auditoriums.

L. B. D. C. No. 334, Gary, Indiana, has three branches—the Central or Main Church, Glen Park Church, and the Tolleston Church. The men of all three churches met on their regular meeting night recently and enjoyed an address from Mrs. Martha Stout Trimble, pastor at Tolleston and wife of the indefatigable Nelson H. Trimble of Gary fame. According to a newspaper account, there is a membership and attendance contest on between the three churches, with Glen Park Church leading with 390 points, Central Church coming second with 330 points, and Tolleston Church 130 points. Refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned to meet at Tolleston on June 5th.

L. B. D. C. No. 300, Pasadena, California, held six meetings between January 31st and March 31st with average attendance of 20. Their present enrollment is 30. Their program committee is active, likewise the Bible School committee. They report four male Bible Classes with 200 men and boys in attendance. During the quarter 15 men and boys were won to the Bible School. The social committee is active, having served refreshments at three of the meetings, while the fraternal aid committee made three visits to the sick and made one floral offering. They reported $4.50 dues for 30 members and have a balance in the treasury of $16.29.

H. O. Smith, of Oklahoma City, gave his lecture, "Gumption," before the annual men's banquet of the church at Lawton on May 25th. The affair was announced as "A Live Wire:

Red Blood Program." The lecture occurred at the Christian Church at 8 o'clock, while the banquet was at the Midland Hotel an hour later. Special music was furnished by an orchestra and male quartette. One thing that appears on the ticket was the price, $1.00 per plate, including admission to the lecture. This shows that our men will pay the money to hear something good.

Bro. Smith delivered an address at the Brotherhood session of the Oklahoma State Convention at Enid on the evening of June 8th.

L. B. D. C. No. 284, Modesto, Cal., recently held two meetings. George T. Meeker, General Secretary of California Christian Missions for the northern part of the State, made an address to the men that promises to make the Modesto Church become a living link in home missions. H. K. Pitman, probation officer, George Jennings, police judge, and J. W. Webb, all around Brotherhood man, discussed the boy problem. The Bible Class has adopted the name "Loyal Brotherhood," with D. Grundy, president; M. H. Noonan, secretary; H. W. Cole, treasurer; J. W. Webb, Brotherhood president and teacher of the class. These are achievements worthy of pattern. The Brotherhood of the Modesto Church have sent in dues for each quarter since their organization.

We are indebted to Harvey Peake, Secretary of L. B. D. C. No. 330, New Albany, Ind., for report of the Brotherhood meeting held May 29th, which is in our hands. An address was made by Mr. McClaughrey, of the State Reformatory at Jeffersonville, upon the subject of "Identification by means of finger prints," illustrated by photographs and documents. Mr. McClaughrey is reported as a most interesting speaker, full of his subject, and commanding the very best attention and created a great impression upon his listeners. His address was voted the most absorbingly interesting that had been heard in New Albany in some time. Music and refreshments rounded out the warm evening happily. One feature of the meeting was the liberty of the men to remove their coats.

A joint meeting of the Brotherhoods of all the churches in Des Moines occurred recently around the banquet table. Prof. C. N. Kinney, Chairman of the Iowa State Brotherhood Committee, was toastmaster, and addresses were made by President Hill M. Bell, of Drake, H. C. Harris, First Methodist Church, and Lieutenant Governor Clark. A number not on the program was an extemporaneous toast by Mayor Hanna, of Des Moines. The orchestra of the Central Christian Church, in whose building the banquet was spread, furnished the music, as did also a male quartette. An association of Brotherhoods was outlined to include all Christian Church Brotherhoods within a radius of twenty-five miles of Des Moines, and a committee on such organization was appointed, consisting of the pastor and one member from each church.

L. B. D. C. No. 262, Jackson Avenue Church, Kansas City, Mo., observed Men and Religion Forward Movement Recognition Day Sunday, June 18th. In the morning the pastor preached upon the subject and in the evening three laymen, J. L. Taylor, President; A. L. Hockett, Secretary of the Local Brotherhood, and E. E. Elliott, Assistant Secretary of the General Brotherhood, made brief addresses upon the movement.

L. B. D. C. No. 262 is recognized as a leader in men's work in Greater Kansas City. Three of its members are connected with the Kansas City Committee of One Hundred responsible for the conduct of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. Every Brotherhood meeting has some reference to the coming campaign and the community is already awake to the part the men are taking. On Recognition Day a male chorus and glee club furnished special numbers.

We are in receipt of the program of the First Anniversary Week of the Churches of Christ in the Calumet District, Indiana, comprising the Central Church at Gary, Tolleston, and Glen Park Church, presided over by that pastoral genius, Nelson H. Trimble, and his wife, Martha Stout Trimble, and Brotherhood Volunteer pastor, Benjamin Borton, whose picture we published in CHRISTIAN MEN for May. The program itself, beginning on Friday, June 16th, and running to Monday, June 26th, is delightful to contemplate, and indicates such speakers as Austin Hunter, of Chicago; Herbert Carpenter, of Indiana Harbor; O. W. Shaw, of Whiting; Claude E. Hill, Valparaiso; Cecil Sharp, of Hammond; George Watson Henry, Captain Norton, Judge Crumpacker, Gary L. Cook, of Indiana Bible School fame; W. P. Clark, L. E. Murray, State Secretary; Mrs. Wm. Lash, Dr. Errett Gates, of Chicago. There will be one day of field events, with a base-ball game between Gary and Whiting. On the last evening the Calumet Christian Missionary Society will be organized.

Gary is the home of L. B. D. C. No. 334.

At the Team Work meeting in connection with the Third Missouri District Convention, Joplin, George F. Blue, Secretary L. B. D. No. 367, and a group of his men at Carthage, carried Field Secretary Shellenberger home with them for a meeting the next night. In writing of the affair Brother Blue says: "I enjoyed Brother Shellenberger's visit very much. Had about one hundred and forty present, filling the auditorium, with ladies filling both sides, which, account of our revival meeting being in progress, seemed best. The ladies enjoyed the talk and said they were glad they came. We had an after meeting with Brother Shellenberger, and he gave us some good pointers, and his coming did great good to our Brotherhood. We are holding sunrise prayer-meetings every Sunday morning, beginning Easter morning, and are going to keep it up for the present. We also had change of the prayer-meetings during the first week in May. Much personal work was done by the Brotherhood and the meetings did much to give a place to the Brotherhood in the life of the church. It has cemented its membership by giving it individuality and inspired the men with the opportunities for accomplishment."

L. B. D. C. No. 330, New Albany, Ind., is one of the latest organizations to affiliate with the General Brotherhood. Between January 1st and March 31st three meetings were held with average attendance of 50. Present enrollment is 140, making this by all odds the greatest Brotherhood among us affiliated with the General Brotherhood, and its committees have been busy also. The program committee has seen that a good program was rendered at each meeting, while the Bible School Committee have subscribed for 50 copies of CHRISTIAN MEN for use in the Bible School. The program committee is active at all meetings and has served light refreshments, thus creating a masculine social atmosphere in the church. Their Bible School activities have resulted in four teachers being supplied from the Brotherhood. Twelve dollars general dues to the National Brotherhood was remitted. This is the Central Christian Church Brotherhood with R. N. Simpson, State Brotherhood President, elected at the Columbus Convention as pastor. John O. Conklin, Secretary of the Indiana State Brotherhood is the President of L. B. D. C. No. 330, with H. R. Peters, Vice-President; C. A. Slaton, Secretary, and C. A. Ruhsenberger, Treasurer.

Class Ages

The following in relation to the ages of men in the great Berean Bible Class, Nashville, home of L. B. D. C. No. 315, and R. A. Doan, a National Director, will be of interest to readers of CHRISTIAN MEN:

There has been considerable discussion among Sunday-School men as to what age men attend Sunday-School in the largest number. Some have had the impressions as we have discovered in talking with them about the class, that the Bereans had a large per cent of boys in attendance. With his investigative turn of mind, President Sanders last Sunday turned the class into a laboratory and experimented. This is what he found. Among about two hundred men present, the largest per cent, 30 per cent, were between the ages 40 and 50. Between ages of 30 and 40, 21 per cent; between 50 and 60 there was 21 per cent; between 60 and 70, 12 per cent; between 21 and 30, 11 per cent, between 70 and 80, 4½ per cent; between 80 and 90, 1½ per cent. There happened to be last Sunday not one of the class members present under 21. The average age for those attending for the day was 47 years. The success and interest in the class can hardly be called "The enthusiasm of youth and immaturity." Paul would not say of the Bereans, "When they became men they put away childish things." We hope that the class will always do as it has in the past—appeal to mature men.

On a recent Sunday Pastor D. G. Dungan, of Vinton, Ia., turned over the morning service to the Brotherhood, and, as our correspondent writes, "They made good and then some. They took the place of the choir, and forty men filled the platform, not only with avoirdupois, but with enthusiasm and fine music." Seven five-minute addresses were made and the pastor closed with a talk on "The Significance of the Brotherhood Emblem," which appears elsewhere in this issue of the magazine. As to the results of the morning service, we quote again from our correspondent: "When the invitation was given, who should respond but the leading pool hall owner and gambler of the town, and you ought to have seen the Brotherhood men climb over each other to give him the glad hand. I tell you, it was great, and amid tears and prayers we consecrated him to the Lord's work. He is selling out his joint this week and the Brotherhood will let him set up in some good, honorable business immediately. Last night he joined the order and signed not only the obligatory section of the covenant, but the pledge to prayer and personal evangelism, saying it was only that any Christian must do if he truly lines up with God. Well, the organization has a wonderful future before it, and I am sure Vinton will see greater things yet from this fine bunch of men.

"Oh, yes, we signed up the papers and are now a part of the National Organization.

"Hoping for continued victories for the men of the Church of Christ, I close with best wishes for you and the work."

J. W. Underwood organized L. B. D. C. No. 248, at Ashtabula, Ohio, where he was then pastor. Later he took charge of the Belmar Avenue Church, at Pittsburgh, Pa., and has organized L. B. D. C. No. 335 there. The motto "Once a Brotherhood Man Always a Brotherhood Man" is getting pretty well established; and in the case of Brother Underwood this is literally true. At the recent convention of the Western Pennsylvania Christian Missionary Society, at Beaver Falls, he made an address upon the Brotherhood and is quoted as saying "There never was a time in the history of the world when men were as willing to lovingly clasp hands over the ruined walls of sectarianism as now. There never was a time when we Disciples had a better opportunity to saturate the church at large with the grandest plea beneath the sun, when the Disciples so much needed a National Brotherhood surcharged with the gospel plea, enthused with the spirit of Christ, to mobilize our great army of awakened men.

Mr. Underwood spoke of a union meeting of city Brotherhoods of Pittsburgh, wherein the President asked that all the M. E. Brotherhood men should arise, and a veritable army stood on its feet. The call was then made for the Lutheran Brotherhood, and a second army arose, then the Presbyterian and Congregationalist and last, but not least, the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ was called and the Belmar Brotherhood showed its colors. Brother Underwood has been baptizing Brotherhood men quite frequently. On a recent Wednesday evening, two more were baptized. It is the expressed feeling of local parties that the Brotherhood has been fundamental in the life of the Belmar Church, in these latter days.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

¶ Never dress a boy in his best clothes and tell him to go and have a good time. He can't do it. Don't scold if he comes home with a spot on his knee.

—O—

¶ Remember that there never was a real man in this world who was not a real boy.

—O—

¶ It may be true that hickory and lath have saved many a boy, but where there is a consecrated mother there is not much use for the hickory lath.

—O—

¶ We have head education but we need more heart education.

—O—

¶ I am tired of dealing with boys who merely love God; I want to find some who love God and hate the devil.—Thomas Arnold.

—O—

¶ Boys know no medium shades—folks to them are either black or white, either a hero or not a hero—either true or false.

—O—

¶ There is no use trying to scare a boy into being good.

—O—

¶ Heaven to a boy does not mean harps with golden strings and songs by angel choruses. Too many a lad can't strike one correct note. The average boy would be out of place there.

—O—

¶ It must be a religion with the gang spirit, the brotherly spirit—he wants his chums in on it.

—O—

¶ Too many folks find it easier to use the coat collar method than the heart method in dealing with the boys.

—O—

¶ Boys expect you to know them, and do not like to be called out as "The boy with the pretty necktie."

—O—

The Boy and the Brotherhood

BY CHAS. B. HAHN.

If your Brotherhood does not assume the responsibility for the Boyhood of your church, who will.—Frank Dyer.

This being the right sort of a person to be with children is a very great secret.—Marie Hofer.

I often wonder if the men of the Brotherhood realize how important it is that they know the boy, that they understand him. The Brotherhood men must remember that what they do with the boy today the boy will do with the Brotherhood later. All Brotherhood members should be big brothers to the boys of the church. Too long the responsibility has been left to the mothers. The fathers, if they would, could make every boy better and there isn't a man living today but what would be a member of the church if his father had said so when he was a boy. Every boy has a hero—and boys choose men as

oes. They do not always take the best n to be a hero either. As the fathers and big brothers stand on the moral problems the day so shall the sons and younger others be affected. One boy will stand for ht, another for the wrong and all because his father. Up to a certain time in every boy's life the father has the son's confidence. I have heard boys talking and when there was dispute as to who was right in a certain argument I hear one boy say, "Well, I know this is right." "Why?" asks the other boy. "Because my father said so."

Help a boy build his block houses and he will come to you and ask you to help build his air castles. No teacher can know the boy who never sees him outside the class. If you really want to know the boy take him on a ride or visit him on the base-ball diamond one Saturday. Be sure that you do not judge the boy by his actions before company. He never shows off to advantage then.

The only real way to know a boy, to help him, to make him better is to love him and let him know it. Not a silly, wishy washy and sentimental, but a manly love.

Moral education should be given a boy in a frank, open way. We cannot and must not overlook this part of his education no matter how much we may wish to pass over it. The morality of the boys today is said to be lower than a generation ago. The men are responsible for this. We are not fighting the Devil hard enough. There should be in every city places as wholesome as the Devil has that are not good. The Christian Brotherhoods must supply or help to supply these.

The home has all to do with whether a boy is good or bad. It is a sad commentary on a home when I know the boys of that home better than the father does. Be the big brother by closing your business duties when you leave the office. Give the boy in the house some of your time.

Every boy's time should be occupied with wholesome work and play. The home today is changed because of industrial and social conditions. The Flat life takes away from the boy work that used to occupy much of his time after school.

The five cent theaters take many stray nickels and sometimes boys sell articles of value for almost the price of one ticket to the moving picture show. The pictures shown should be censored in every theater before they are permitted to be shown. All pool halls should be made to keep all minors out. Seeing that those things are done can become the work of the Brotherhoods.

The church that has in the neighborhood of a thousand members and owns a building that cost several hundred thousand dollars and hasn't a place for the boys, ought to be ashamed. Most all churches have been built for grown people. It has only been recently that any provision has been made for the children in the church buildings. One thing must be remembered, that it doesn't take a rich church to do Boys' work. All churches should undertake to do some kind of work for the boy. One day I received a postal from a boy. On the card was a picture of his church, on which he had put an X on one of the windows of the basement of the church and below he had written: "This is where we hold our club meetings." This church boasted a tower that cost perhaps several thousand dollars. I consider it a crime to the growing manhood to build a tower and not provide a place for the boys. The church—yes the Brotherhood—must save the boy between the ages of fifteen and twenty.

We must not condemn pleasures unless we substitute something better. It is not right to tell boys that they cannot shoot fire crackers before the Fourth when the men are allowed to sell them. There is no use to sit down and figure out why the church pews are not filled with men when the boys are neglected.

Brotherhood means to help and aid the weaker brother. Let there be more real fathers and big brothers.

Boys Meeting at Sheffield Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo.

An effort is being made at the Sheffield Christian Church to organize a Boyville. On June 5th a stereopticon entertainment was given at the church for the boys. Messrs. Hahn, Young and Thomas gave the entertainment. Mr. Hahn gave the lecture, showing all manner of boy work with pictures of boy camp and life. About 75 boys were present and enjoyed the evening.

Mr. Hahn sure knows the boy. It did not take but a few minutes to get the attention of every boy. He impressed upon them that the thing to do is the square thing. He said some plain things to them which they took good-naturedly. At the close of the meeting the boys voted unanimously for Mr. Hahn and Mr. Young to meet with them on June 15th, at this meeting arrangements will be made looking toward an organization in the future.

Mr. Young will be secured to have charge of this work if we can induce him to do so. He has charge of the boy work at the Jackson Avenue Christian Church, and Mr. Hahn has charge of this work at Independence and Gladstone Church. The boy is one part of our church work that is badly neglected, but with these men to help us we feel sure of success. C. D. Pearce is the pastor of this church and he is interested in his boys.

A Word to Brotherhood Secretaries

You see above the Brotherhoods that have remitted dues to the National Brotherhood since January 1st. If your Brotherhood is not among them, it is because no dues have been remitted. The question of collecting dues is simply one of the Secretaries bringing the matter to the attention of the members, and calling for the money. Possibly dues have been collected and turned into the treasury and not remitted. If so, this word is for the Treasurer as well. Dues paid by members for support of the National Brotherhood should be remitted quarterly, and report blanks and return envelopes have been forwarded to the Secretaries of every affiliated Brotherhood at the beginning of every quarter since your Brotherhood affiliated. Brethren, we need the money. We are not asking for it altogether on that account, but because it is due. We have counted upon receiving it regularly, and because you have not remitted, our work is being retarded.

AUGUST—First Program.

No attempt is made to outline a program. Every Brotherhood, Adult Class or organization of men of any kind ought to have initiative enough to plan a good time for their wives, their brothers, sisters, and their children.

Forget business for one day at least and really live with your families. Take to the woods, the hills, the creek or the lake. Live with nature and breathe the breath of nature fresh from God.

Let this be a day of unselfishness. Think of others, too. You doubtless would enjoy a ball game and a three-legged race. But mother would like a hammock better, in the coolest place by the water's edge. Margaret would rather have a boat ride and a tennis net.

And don't forget Ned and Johnnie. If you don't provide amusement for the day, they will. Give them freedom. There is more fun "bein' free" than in anything else; but the wise Brotherhood is a wise fatherhood and sees that their boys are free in clean pasture. Let us not disassociate holiness and joy-making. Jesus' first miracle was the enhancement of joy at a marriage feast. His last words made a home for his mother. He found happiness by bringing it to others.

Let our Brothers learn by experience that our own joy is but a by-product of bringing it to others not one day, but all days.

This is the Spirit of Brotherhood.

"THE SUFFERING SERVANT OF JEHOVAH."

—ISA. 52:13-15; 53:1-12.

P. H. WELSHIMER

Time. Unknown.

Golden Text. "The Lord hath lain on Him the iniquity of us all." Isa. 53:6.

13 Behold, my servant shall deal wisely, he shall be exalted and lifted up, and shall be very high. 14 Like as many were astonished at thee (his visage was marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men), 15 so shall all he sprinkle many nations; kings shall shut their mouths at him: for that which had not been told them shall they see; and that which they had not heard shall all they understand.

1 Who hath believed our message? and to whom hath the arm of Jehovah been revealed? 2 For he grew up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him. 3 He was despised, and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised; and we esteemed him not.

4 Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

7 He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before its shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. 8 By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who among them considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due? 9 And they made his grave with the wicked, and with a rich man in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

10 Yet it pleased Jehovah to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: when thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of Jehovah shall prosper in his hands. 11 He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by the knowledge of himself shall my righteous servant justify many; and he shall bear their iniquities. 12 Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he poured out his soul unto death, and was numbered with the transgressors: yet he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

Introduction. This lesson was written over 2,500 years ago; fulfilled 1,900 years ago. It breathes the spirit of service and of suffering. Jesus of Nazareth has been the only person in the history of the world who has in every respect reached the ideal herein set forth. Jesus is the ideal servant. Geo. Adams Smith says, "He whom we have seen in this chapter only is the purpose of God—only through the eyes of consciences of generations yet unborn—comes forth in flesh and blood. He speaks, He explains Himself, He accomplishes most to the last detail the work, the patience and the death that are herein described as ideal and representative."

Explanatory. 13—My servant. "The Hebrew for servant means a person at the disposal of another—to carry out his will, do his work, represent his interests." Shall deal wisely. His plan of saving the world shows perfect, divine wisdom. Shall be exalted and lifted up. His greatest exaltation is the Son of God. He shall be the Christ. The prophet said they would call Him Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Prince of Peace, etc. 14—Astonished at the—Because He came differently than they had expected. His visage marred. This description is not simply of His face, but rather His entire position among men. He was humbler and poorer and was altogether different from the king they had expected to see. 15—Sprinkle many nations. This is no allusion to baptism; in fact, sprinkle is not the word, according to the original, but means rather he shall startle many nations, and, as a result, kings shall shut their mouths. They will keep silence before Him, for He is the Christ of all. Shall they see. The greatness and the glory of His kingdom will be grander than they had expected. 1—Here the prophet looks back on the servant's suffering as though that had already been. Who hath believed? From this we infer that unbelief was general in the world and God's revelation would not be believed by all. The arm of the Lord. Indicative of His strength. 2—A tender plant. That which is weak and insignificant. Jesus was so considered, little being made of Him while growing up at Nazareth. Root out of the dry ground. That which is not promising. So in Jesus the world could not see the promised Messiah. No beauty. From the standpoint of the physical the world would not have selected Jesus as king to reign over and lead them. 3—Despised and rejected. In place of being gladly received and having honors heaped upon Him, such as royalty receives, Jesus was to be a man of sorrows and be acquainted with grief. In this way He would be "touched with the feeling of our infirmities." 4—He hath borne our griefs. Jesus did no wrong, but to save us He bore our wrongs and carried our sorrows as a hero and a martyr. And men looked upon Him stricken, just as though He was receiving what He deserved. 5—All of Jesus' suffering, burden-bearing and His death were because of our sins. He gave Himself up to save us. Our peace came by chastisement laid upon Him. 6—All we like sheep have gone astray, hence we need a shepherd to lead us in the way from which we have gone. Our iniquity has been laid upon the Christ. He willingly accepted it. 7—He was oppressed in suffering, and that unjustly. He opened not his mouth. He made no outcry. He submitted to this cruel and wrong treatment. 8—By oppression and judgment. While this was a legal procedure, it was unjust. Rank injustice was done Him on every hand. The people of His day did not understand Him nor could they understand His death, hence with the masses no note was taken of his death any more than of the thieves on either side of Him. For the transgression of my people. That is why He was stricken, but the people did not know. 9—His grave with the wicked. Jesus was crucified with two thieves. He was buried in a rich man's tomb—that of Joseph of Arimathea. Because no violence had been done and there was no deceit in His mouth, He was not deserving of such treatment as this. 10—It pleased the Lord. Not that the Lord rejoiced in the suffering of Jesus, but through it all He saw the salvation of the world. It was God's ordained plan for the saving of humanity. He shall see his seed. Those begotten by the word of truth. They will be filled with Christ's spirit and will help to extend His kingdom. Prolong his days. Jesus shall live forever. He is at the right hand of God, the Father. The pleasure of the Lord shall prosper. That is, that which the Lord desired to have done will be done. 11—He shall see the travail of His soul. All His suffering and sorrow and burden-bearing shall yield rich results in the saving of the world and He shall be satisfied. 12—He will divide Him a portion with the great. This will be the reward for His suffering. He will be exalted to a position of power and greatness. His shall be the greatest kingdom and He the King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

Comments on the Lesson

Nearly 600 years before the coming of the Messiah, Isaiah drew this portrait of Him. When Jesus came, men had on the one hand a portrait, on the other the man Himself and by comparison it was easy to see that Jesus was the man that corresponded to the picture. It was He of whom the prophet was speaking. In His birth and His whole earth life, in His death and His glorious reign on earth today can be seen the fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy. Isaiah presents the lesson as though it were years after Jesus had been here and gone, and a writer who had been an eye witness could not have penned these lines in the month of His death any more accurately than Isaiah has done, and yet the prophet spoke by inspiration. This is another one of the great proofs that Jesus is the promised Messiah.

Questions for Class Use

Who wrote this prophecy? Who was Isaiah? Of whom was he writing? What man was reading this same lesson one day in a chariot when approached by one of God's preachers? What effect did it have upon him? What is the character Jesus has portrayed in this lesson? Why was the death of Jesus necessary for our salvation? What is self-sacrifice? In what ways can we be a servant of God? Give the chief reasons for the claims of Christ being rejected by men in His day.

LESSON 3—JULY 16.

“MANASSEH’S WICKEDNESS AND PENITENCE.”—II CHRON. 33:1-20.

Printed Text, 1-13.

Time. 694 to 640 B. C.Place. Judah and Jerusalem.Golden Text. “Cease to do evil; learn to do well.” Isa. 1:16, 17.

1 Manasseh was twelve years old when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem. 2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of Jehovah, after the abominations of the nations whom Jehovah cast out before the children of Israel. 3 For he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had broken down; and he reared up altars for the Baalim and made Asheroth, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served them. 4 And he built altars in the house of Jehovah, whereof Jehovah said, In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever. 5 And he built altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of Jehovah. 6 He also made his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom; and he practiced augury, and used enchantments, and practiced sorcery, and dealt with them that had familiar spirits, and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of Jehovah, to provoke him to anger. 7 And he set the graven image of the idol, which he had made, in the house of God, of which God said to David and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever: 8 neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from off the land which I have appointed for your fathers, if only they will observe to do all that I have commanded them, even all the law and the statutes and the ordinances given by Moses. 9 And Manasseh seduced Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that they did evil more than did the nations whom Jehovah destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 And Jehovah spake to Manasseh, and to his people; but they gave no heed. 11 Wherefore Jehovah brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, who took Manasseh in chains, and bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon. 12 And when he was in distress, he besought Jehovah his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers. 13 And he prayed unto him; and he was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that Jehovah he was God.

Introduction. Upon the death of Hezekiah, his son Manasseh came to the throne. Jerusalem had now grown in population, power and wealth. Judah was brought into close contact with surrounding nations because of business relations.

Explanatory. 1—Manasseh, beginning to reign at twelve years, must have been under the influence of his regents for the next six years. 2—And he did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord. He followed not in the steps of his father. He knew the reproach cast upon the heathen and upon those who had departed from the ways of Jehovah; but this had no effect upon him. He was only a boy, and the influences which were brought to bear upon his life must not have been for the best. In place of following God, he patterned after the then most powerful nation in the world—Assyria. 3—He built again the high places. His father had destroyed the idol gods; the son replaced them. The groves he made were simply wooden images. They were licentious in appearance. They also worshipped the sun, moon and stars. 4-5—He built altars. In the house of God he put the heathen gods on a par with Jehovah. 6—He caused his children to pass through the fire. This was a part of the worship of the god Moloch of the Ammonites. The valley of the son of Hinnom runs from the west to the south of Jerusalem and joins the Kidron. Near this were the fires of the city, in which the refuse was burned. Here this king attempted to make popular children sacrifice, and some practiced it. And he observed times. In this he introduced much superstition. He gathered omens from sounds, flights of birds, etc. Enchantments. Attempted to produce certain effects by the aid of evil spirits—sorcery, charms, spells, etc. Spiritualism was now at its height. 7-8—And he set a graven image * * * in the house of God. This was the Asherah, the pillar of the Assyrian goddess of love. This was done notwithstanding God’s commandment against the thing. 9—So Manasseh made Judah * * * to err. He led others to sin. Their career was worse than that of the heathen whom God had destroyed. 10—But the Lord spake to Manasseh, but he and the people listened not. 11—Wherefor the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria. The records of Ashurbanipal record the names of twenty-two captured kings; among this number was Manasseh. He was bound with chains and fetters and carried to Babylon. Nineveh was the capital. Babylon was subject to Nineveh, the capital. 12—And when he was in affliction. How natural, when his heathen gods had failed him, he now in great affliction turns to Jehovah. He now can remember the God of his fathers, and now wished he had walked in the path of his father. 13—And he prayed unto Him. This was not saying a prayer; this was praying. Manasseh being penitent, the Lord now provided for his return to Jerusalem, and Manasseh knew the Lord was God.

Comments on the Lesson

Hezekiah was a good king, and it would seem that he would have impressed himself upon his son in the twelve years before he died. The first twelve years of a person's life is the formative period. It is probable that Hezekiah, like many a busy man, gave himself over entirely to the large work that demanded his attention and neglected the training of his own son. When the boy came to the throne it is evident that his regents were inclined toward idolatry and that his advisers led the fickle youth in evil ways. How important it is to have good companions and good advisers. Every man is dependent upon these. As we look at the condition of that day and behold that Jehovah had blessed all the people that walked in his way and that evil had fallen upon those who departed from God, we wonder why all the people were not loyal to him. But why wonder at that? The same God rules today as then, and this history but reveals to us his dealings with the people, and from these Old Testament stories we can gather direction for our lives today. Manasseh learned that "the way of the transgressor is hard." And after the severest punishment had been inflicted upon him, he saw his error, faced about and came to God for mercy. So long as there is life there is hope. There is danger in delay. An opportunity was given Manasseh to repent. Many a man is struck from the earth unrepentant. Having had an opportunity he has not improved it and goes forth to meet the judge of all the earth unprepared for eternity.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Manasseh? Who was his father? How old was he when he came to the throne? How long did he reign? What form of idolatry did he accept? What punishment was inflicted upon him? What led to his repentance? What do you know of his career after he repented?

"JOSIAH'S DEVOTION TO GOD."—II CHRON. 34:1-13.

Time. 638 B. C.

Golden Text. "Remember also thy Creator in the days of thy youth. Eccles. 12:1

1 Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem. 2 And he did that which was right in the eyes of Jehovah, and walked in the ways of David his father, and turned not aside to the right hand or to the left. 3 For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father; and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the Asherim, and the graven images and the molten images. 4 And they brake down the altars of the Baalim in his presence; and the sun-images that were on high above them he hewed down; and the Asherim, and the graven images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strewed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them. 5 And he burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars and purged Judah and Jerusalem. 6 And so did he in the cities of Manasseh and Ephraim and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, in their ruins round about. 7 And he brake down the altars, and beat the Asherim and the graven images into powder, and hewed down all the sun-images throughout all the land of Israel, and returned to Jerusalem.

8 Now in the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land and the house, he sent Shaphan the son Azariah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of Jehovah his God. 9 And they came to Hilkiah the high priest, and delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites, the keepers of the threshold had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin, and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 10 And they delivered it unto the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of Jehovah; and the workmen that wrought in the house of Jehovah gave it to mend and repair the house, even to the carpenters and the builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone and timber for couplings, and to make beams for the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed. 12 And the men did the work faithfully; and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and others of the Levites, all that were skillful with instruments of music. 13 Also they were over the bearers of burdens, and set forward all that did the work in every manner of service; and of the Levites there were scribes, and officers and porters.

Introduction. It has been nearly a hundred years since the good King Hezekiah began his reign. It was for the most part a century of misrule. The long reign of Hezekiah's son and successor Manasseh, as we had seen, had resulted in the undoing of all the Hezekiah had accomplished in the work of religious reformation. The temple was again polluted. Idolatry in its most repulsive form was re-established, and had corrupted the whole fabric of society. Amon, the son of Manasseh, in his short reign of two years, continued his father's policy. With his assassination, there came to the throne a child under whose policies and reforms Judah was to enjoy its last brief respite of prosperity, before its final ruin.

Explanatory. 1—Eight years old. He was with a single exception, that of Josiah, the youngest of Judah's kings. During the early part of his reign, a regent exercised the functions of government. 2—Did that which was right. A refreshing exception in an age of idolatry and moral degeneracy. Turned not aside. In this he surpasses the best of the kings, whose reigns were marred at some period. Josiah never swerved from the straight path of duty. 3—In the eighth year of his reign. When he was between fifteen and sixteen years of age, the period so fruitful in religious decision, he personally sought to know and serve Jehovah, an experience which we designate by the term conversion. In the twelfth year. Josiah was now at the age of twenty. While no exact age is given at which a Jewish king attained his majority, he was perhaps for the first time free to act. He began to enlarge Judah. It is suggested that as the call of Jeremiah is nearly coincident with the beginning of Josiah's reformation, that the two must have worked together in their effort to root out idolatry. At least the burning message of the prophet must have greatly aided the king. 4—In his presence. The work of cleansing the country was under Josiah's personal supervision. 5—Burnt the bones of the priests. The priests whose bones were burnt were postates from Jehovah who had first been seized and put to death, as Elijah had slain the priests of Baal. 6—Sun-images. Among other objects of worship was the sun. The images were probably imitations of the sun's disc. 8—In the eighteenth year. Each of these stated epochs seemed to mark a distinct forward move on the part of the reformer—first, a personal seeking after Jehovah; second, the overthrow of the enemies of Jehovah; third, the repair of Jehovah's house. He sent Shaphan. He was an important personage with a distinguished ancestry. As the King's scribe he seems to have had oversight of important business. To repair the house of Jehovah. It had been the good part of a century since Hezekiah's house-cleaning. In that period it not only suffered from the ravage of time but pagan vandalism. 9—The money that was brought. From 2 Kings 21-4, we learn that the doorkeepers had collected this money. It was the duty of Shaphan and his aids to count it and deliver it to the workmen. 11—Which the Kings of Judah had destroyed. An evidence of the utter degeneracy of Manasseh and Amon. 13—Of the eunuchs there were scribes. The term "scribe" to designate a class, here used for the first time. This new order had probably originated in the reign of Hezekiah and these men were selected as copyists of extant portions of the word of God. And it is probably due to them that we have so full account of the prophetic messages of Hezekiah's time and that of later periods.

Comments on the Lesson

Heredity will not always explain moral tendencies, nor will environment. Here is a boy whose immediate ancestry were decidedly bad, and whose times were grossly idolatrous, but who grew up like a pure, white lily from the mire. There is not a trace or taint of the evil from which he sprang about him. At the very beginning he sought to do that which was right in the sight of the Lord. He kept before him the example of his illustrious ancestor, David, and having determined his course, he turned neither to the right nor left. There are four distinct stages in his religious progress. His eighth, sixteenth, twentieth and twenty-sixth years, become milestones in his journey toward destiny. At the first he assumes the crown with a definite purpose of bringing the Kingdom back to God. At the second, he seeks to bring himself into personal relationship with Jehovah for guidance. At the third, having attained sufficient age and experience to carry out his purpose, he threw himself into the conflict with idolatry, and only relinquishes his effort when the last pagan altar is pulled down and the last trace of Judah's shame has been removed. Then when the old order has been restored he turns to the neglected temple, cleaning it, repairing it and making it a fit place for the name of Jehovah. A succession of such men would have been able to stand defiance to the powers of the world. But he was the last of the true kings of Judah. Under the corrupt leadership of the successors the people soon relapsed into their old idolatrous customs and hastened their doom.

Questions for Class Use

How old was Josiah when he began to reign? What had been the character of his father and grandfather? What is said in commendation of the reign of Josiah? In what respect was he better than any of his predecessors? How did he show his religious purpose in the eighth year of his reign? What great work did he undertake in the twelfth year of his reign? How far was his work of reform carried? In the eighteenth year of his reign what work did he plan? Who ably assisted him in this enterprise? What is said of the workmen and their work?

LESSON 5—JULY 30.

THE FINDING OF THE BOOK OF THE LAW.—II CHRON. 34:14-21, 23.

Time. 622 B. C.

Golden Text. "Thy word have I laid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee." Psalms 119:11.

14 And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of Jehovah, Hilkiyah the priest found the book of the law of Jehovah given by Moses. 15 And Hilkiyah delivered the book to Shaphan. 16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and moreover brought back word to the king, saying, All that was committed to thy servants, they are doing. 17 And they have emptied out the money that was found in the house of Jehovah, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and into the hand of the workmen. 18 And Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiyah the priest hath delivered me a book. And Shaphan read therein before the king. 19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the words of the law, that he rent his clothes. 20 And the king commanded Hilkiyah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah the king's servant, saying, 21 Go ye, inquire of Jehovah for me, and for them that are left in Israel and in Judah concerning the words of the book that is found; for great is the wrath of Jehovah that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of Jehovah, to do according unto all that is written in the book.

29 Then the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. 30 And the king went up to the house of Jehovah, and all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem and the priests, and the Levites, and the people, both great and small: and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of Jehovah. 31 And the king stood in his place, and made a covenant before Jehovah, to walk after Jehovah's commandments, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant that were written in this book. 32 And he caused that all the people of Jerusalem and Benjamin should stand to it. And the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. 33 And Josiah took away all the abominations out of all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were found in Israel to serve Jehovah their God. All the days they departed not from following Jehovah, the God of their fathers.

Introduction. The repair of the temple, carried forward under the direction of Josiah led to a valuable discovery. In some part of the temple, not specified, Hilkiyah, the priest, found a copy of the law of Jehovah. This event has caused considerable discussion among Bible students. Two views have been urged. Dean Milman held that there were other copies in existence, but that this was the original autograph copy deposited by Moses in the side of the ark of the covenant nearly a thousand years before, and that its discovery and reading made a profound impression on the pious heart of the king. Others insist that during the persecutions of Manasseh and the efforts to suppress the true religion, all known copies were destroyed and that when this one was providentially discovered, it was the restoration of a long lost treasure. In either event the discovery led to a careful reading of the law and a renewed covenant with Jehovah.

Explanatory. 14—Hilkiyah the Priest. The work of Josiah was ably seconded by three faithful coadjutors, Hilkiyah, the high priest, Shaphan, the scribe, and Huldah, the prophetess. The Book of the Law of Jehovah. The marginal reading says "Given by the hand of Moses," and this is taken to mean that it was the original autograph copy referred to in Deuteronomy 31:24. 15—Delivered the Book to Shaphan. As the secretary of the King, Shaphan's office was important, and it was his business to bring before his sovereign all matters requiring his attention. 16—Shaphan carried the Book to the King. He brought an official report of work done on the temple, which was delivered before he spoke of the Book. 18—Shaphan read therein. As scribe, he was perhaps of few who were able to read, as reading was an uncommon accomplishment in that age when books were so rare. 19—He rent his Clothes. The King now heard for the first time the seven denunciations of the King of Israel found in Deut., Chap. 28. As he listened he rent his garments as an indication of grief, horror and repentance. He was alarmed at the terrible penalties pronounced against sins of which his people had been guilty. 21—Inquire of Jehovah for me. As the only means of communication was through God-chosen instruments, the prophets, they at once went in search of one. For some reason they came to Huldah, the prophetess. From her they learned that the wrath of Jehovah, recorded in the Book would certainly be brought on the people, but not until Josiah, whose faithfulness was recognized, had gone to his grave in peace. 29—All the Elders of Israel. Josiah hastily summons the representatives that he may lay the matter before them. Then before a great assembly of "the people, both great and small," he had the entire Book read. 31—Made a Covenant with Jehovah. The King standing before the people in solemn assembly pledged himself to fidelity to the tutes of the law, a pledge which the great assembly took upon themselves. 32—Took away all the Abominations. With the moral sense of the people, quickened by the new found covenant of the law, Josiah hastened the work of cleansing the country from the stain of idolatry.

Comments on the Lesson

The Bible has always proved itself a conscience quickener. From the reading of the law in Sinai to the proclamation of simple gospel truth in the quiet village church, its effect has been to awaken in men a sense of sin and the need of a Savior. The trouble is the Bible is too often lost. "Sometimes it is lost in the temple or church, buried under the rubbish of creeds, traditions of men, human dogmas and opinions which have usurped its place. If it were brought forth from the rubbish and read, people would be astonished. Sometimes it is lost in the home, covered with the dust of disuse, buried under the love of the world. It should be sought out, brought forth and made the man of counsel." Every great revival epoch has had its origin in some new discovery of the word of God. The revival of the Reformation was carried like fire through the forests of Germany, by Luther's translation of the word of God into the language of the people. Alexander Campbell did much toward the revival of the Nineteenth century, by calling people afresh to the word of God. The growing interest of men in the Bible School is preparing the way for another great forward movement. The Men and Religion Forward Movement, now on, is the spontaneous fruit of this new sowing of the Word in the hearts of men.

Questions for Class Use

How old was Josiah when the Book of the law was found? Where was it found? What person had the honor of finding it? To whom did Helkiah give the book? Who carried the book to the King and read it to him? What effect did it have upon the King? How do you account for Josiah's ignorance of the law? To whom did he turn for help? Who was Huldah? What was her reply to the King's messengers? What curses were to be brought upon the nation? What kindness was promised to Josiah? Who were assembled at the command of Josiah? What covenant did the King make? What further reforms did the King accomplish?

LESSON 1—AUGUST 6.

JEREMIAH TRIED AND ACQUITTED.—JER. 26:7-19.

Time. 607 B. C.

Golden Text. "Jehovah is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?" Psalms 121.

In the beginning of the reign of Jojakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, came this word from Jehovah, saying, 2 Thus saith Jehovah: Stand in the court of Jehovah's house and speak unto all the cities of Judah, which come to worship in Jehovah's house all the words that I command thee to speak unto them; diminish not a word. 3 It may be they will hearken, and turn every man from his evil way; that I may repent me of the evil which I purpose to do unto them because of the evil of their doings. 4 And thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith Jehovah: If ye will not hearken to me, to walk in my law, which I have set before you, 5 to hearken to the words of my servants the prophets, whom I send unto you, even rising up early and sending them, but ye have not hearkened; 6 Then will I make this house like Shiloh, I will make this city a curse to all the nations of the earth. 7 And the priests, the prophets and all the people heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of Jehovah.

And it came to pass, when Jeremiah made an end of speaking all that Jehovah had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and prophets and all the people laid hold on him, saying, Thou shalt surely die. Why hast thou prophesied in the name of Jehovah saying, This house shall be desolate like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without inhabitant? And all the people were gathered unto Jeremiah in the house of Jehovah.

10 And when the princes of Judah heard these things they came up from the King's house unto the house of Jehovah; and they sat in the entry of the new gate of Jehovah's house. 11 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, This man is worthy of death; for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears. 12 Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes and to all the people, saying, Jehovah sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard. 13 Now therefore amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of Jehovah, your God; and Jehovah will repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you. 14 But as for me, behold I am in your hand; do with me as is good and right in your eyes. 15 Only know ye for certain that if ye put me to death ye will bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof; for of a truth Jehovah hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears.

16 Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets etc: This man is not worthy of death; for he hath spoken to us in the name of Jehovah, our God. 17 Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying, 18 Micah the Morashite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah; and he spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith Jehovah of hosts: Zion shall be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest. 19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him to death did he not fear Jehovah, and entreat him in favor of Jehovah, and Jehovah repent him of the evil which he had pronounced against them. Thus should we commit great evil against our own souls.

Introduction. Troublous times reveal the temper of the man. Out of the storm that encompass the recreant kings of Judah before the downfall of the Kingdom, looms the splendid figure of Jeremiah. To him was committed the hopeless task of calling a rebellious people to repentance. Beginning his ministry as a prophet of God in the righteous reign of Josiah he continued to thunder God's judgment against the nation until the people were carried away into Babylonish captivity, and his voice was hushed in a martyr's death. He is called the "Weeping Prophet," but there is nothing feminine in his character or makeup. History presents few men of greater daring or moral courage. He was repeatedly thrown into prison for his fearless utterances. Persisting in his prophecies of the downfall of the city, he was cast into a "dungeon where there was no water but mire." Jer. 38-2. Tradition has it that he was at last stoned to death in Egypt. There is something of the ring of the defiance of Martin Luther at the Diet of Worms, in these words, "Jehovah sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words ye have heard. * * * A curse for me, behold I am in your hands. Do with me as is good and right in your eyes." In the lesson of today, which occurs at the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakin, his boldness and reliance upon Jehovah secured his temporary release from those who sought his destruction but it did not change their hearts or check their downward career.

Explanatory. 7—Priests and Prophets. Both these classes were supposed to represent Jehovah, but they had become mere time servers, courting favor with godless princes. 8—Jeremiah made an end. The discourse of Jeremiah is recorded in the 25th chapter. It was a fearless arraignment of the people for their vices, and a prophecy of the swift destruction that would overtake them. He was permitted to finish his discourse without interruption. Thou shalt surely die. This was the penalty pronounced in the law against false prophets. Deut. 18-20. Because he announced the destruction of the temple, they thought the message could not be from God. 10—Princess of Judah. Heads of important families corresponding to the later legislative body called the Sanhedrin. 11—Worthy of death. The decision formerly rendered by priest and prophet and the evidence upon which it was based is now presented to the princess and people for their ratification. 12—Jehovah sent me. His defense is that his message is from God and hence true. Because of their sins even the holy temple would be abandoned as his dwelling place and destroyed. 13—Amend your ways. Though the destruction in Jerusalem had been determined upon their repentance would avert the catastrophe. 14—Do unto me as is good. Jeremiah does not plead for his life. He must proclaim the word that God has committed to him at whatever cost. 16—Not worthy of death. This is the decision of princes and people as they listened to Jeremiah's defense. Their conclusion is that he was a true prophet of God. 17—The Elders of the Land. These men respected for age and learning recall the incidents of earlier history when prophets had predicted the impending fate of Jerusalem without imperiling themselves. Hence, their judgment was Jeremiah should be spared.

Comments on the Lesson

Evil are the times indeed when priests and preachers can be found who will lend their influence to the cause of unrighteousness. Those who in the days of Jeremiah sought the favor of the wicked court by condemning the prophet of righteousness, are not exceptional examples. False priests and false prophets have, in every age, championed the representatives of tyranny, intemperance and unrighteousness. On the other hand, no age so grossly bad that God has been left without witness. With an Ahab on the throne leading the people into gross forms of idolatry, there is an Elijah at the gate of the city proclaiming the judgment of Jehovah and calling the people back to his service. With a Herod in the palace defying every law of decency, there is a John the Baptist, whose voice will not be stifled even in the dungeon. With a Charles V giving imperial sanction to the corruption of the papacy, there is a fearless monk at Wittenberg that will not recant until convinced of his error by the word of God. Nor has God today, with many forms of vested iniquity seeking ascendancy, left himself without the witness of faithful, fearless men. It is to these men animated by the spirit of Jeremiah, through all the ages, that we are indebted for every step of human progress and for every triumph of the Kingdom.

Questions for Class Use

In whose reign did this lesson occur? What led to Jeremiah's arrest? What class sought his conviction? On what ground did they base their sentence of death? Before whom was his cause tried? What was Jeremiah's defense? Had he spoken against the city as charged? Upon whose authority had he pronounced judgment? What did the prophets say they might do with him? What was the decision of the people when they heard his defense? What example did the elders cite in justification of their decision?

PLAIN TALKS

With this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN the hands of editor fall to less experienced and not unwilling hands. It shall be our aim to make every issue better than its predecessor until it shall become, what we say it is already, the most virile and manly religious publication issued by any society. We realize that in order to make this not only a possibility but a reality that we must have the cordial sympathy and coöperation of a large constituency. The editors and news gatherers do not make a publication. They only put together typographically the events which the public cause to transpire. On the less can the editors of CHRISTIAN MEN expect to make the paper any better than our churchmen make possible. You will realize that we cannot record achievements unless you men bring them about. That CHRISTIAN MEN has been able, in the past, to record so many events of modern Brotherhood achievement has been because our Brotherhood men themselves wisely planned and carefully executed a set of ideas that proved profitable.

With the elimination of the monthly dues or per capita contribution towards the support of the General Brotherhood which your secretaries have been faithfully endeavoring to operate for more than two years, and which while not surrendered in the light of a mistaken conception, but rather with the hope that upon the basis of an annual offering more Brotherhoods will be affiliated and thus more contributions made for the financial support of the work, there seems to us no reason why we should not have banded together in the fellowship of the National Brotherhood many thousands of Local Brotherhoods, Men's Bible Classes or other men's organizations, whether known as Brotherhoods or not. Any group of men identified in any way with the work of any Christian Church can become a chapter of the National Brotherhood upon approval of their application for a certificate filed with the General Brotherhood Office and this upon the basis of an annual contribution towards the support of the work. It was with some reluctance that the Advisory Board, after thorough discussion, sacrificed the monthly dues. In our judgment no more democratic method of support could be conceived. But regardless of this and all other thoughts upon the subject, the General Brotherhood Office is here and its services will be yours for the asking. Its program for the present we believe is sensible and its plans workable and its purposes which strike the religious vein at every angle, appealing to all mankind. The method of affiliation is simple. Our Board wants to make the National Office beneficial to all of our churches and so easy of access that every group of men will feel that they should at once affiliate with their fellowmen. The time is coming, and that not in the far future, when we will be having great conventions of men in different sections of the country and where our men will have a voice and a hand in the making of this enterprise.

We expect to fill CHRISTIAN MEN full of readable, understandable and workable information from the penpoints of our men themselves who are doing the work. We expect to have pastors tell laymen things they ought to know and vice versa. Our policy will be constructive. If we are on the wrong trail, no one will accept correction or criticism more readily. We have a great deal to learn as each day's experience shows. We shall court the confidence of all and with your assistance hope to make of this movement, within the very near future, one of the most valuable adjuncts to the work of religious people.

An Honest Opinion

"One serious trouble here is that several years ago before the National Brotherhood came into existence the Brotherhood was started and it went in smoke and the fellows who were against the Brotherhood now were the men who were in the former one. Therefore, too, my fellows are quite slow to hold of any new proposition. I have changed my mind considerably regarding the Brotherhood. While I do not think it is by any means getting at the real man problem, yet I feel sure we will never get at it by holding ourselves aloof from whatever efforts are being made to solve them, so I have determined to give the organization the strength of whatever influence I have. I propose to have a Brotherhood in my church here as soon as I can bring it around in the right way."

The above extract of a letter from one of our foremost pastors is exactly what we have been saying for many months by voice and pen and expressing so well some things that we have felt from the very beginning that we were happy to quote from it editorially. We are finding our pastors have more judgment when they once understand what the Brotherhood is and what it hopes to be. This pastor strikes the keynote of Brotherhood success when he says that whoever is working at the Brotherhood problem is entitled to the most cordial coöperation of our pastors, for only thus can we secure it.

inate result. This is a view that we many others of our leading pas-would take. With the second state-of our pastor's unwillingness to re an organization where conditions do warrant it, we are in complete acol. We have been against ill-consid-organization. Our aim has been to aint men with the principles of Brotherhood work, but we have always ized with apprehension any organizawhere we did not believe the pas-and leaders among his men were et and soul in the enterprise and ac-uly understood its difficulties. To e a Brotherhood organization is a a more difficult proposition than to e a Bible class or anything else in he church, but when made it is worth ne. Incalculable harm has been done he Brotherhood Movement by the fact ha we are judged by the failures and hoins of all sorts of organizations that r approached being a Brotherhood ne Brotherhood basis. We could not o one moment accept responsibility for organizations that have not had a sufficient initiative to live through the period necessary to affiliate with the general body. We might have chosen to go up to Portland with a thousand affiliated Brotherhoods if we would have made the conditions sufficiently easy to get the mushroom type. Out of now nearly 150 affiliated Brotherhoods, we have less than five which have failed to survive, and a good many are now going into the third year of effective service and we believe this is a mighty argument for the basis of organization, when you realize that ninety per cent of the organizations that have really started on this basis have succeeded. In fact, in nearly every instance where the Brotherhood has been quoted as a failure, we have found that it wasn't a Brotherhood organization on our basis at all, but was some emasculation of the plan. We feel that this pastor has chosen the wise course and that ultimately he will get his Brotherhood, and when he gets it, it will be a Brotherhood indeed.

STAFFORD'S REASONS

I believe all Men's Brotherhoods, Men's Associations, Men's Clubs and Men's Classes should be affiliated with the General Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, because:

FIRST: The Disciples, to become truly effective in their plea, must practice what they have been preaching—"union!" As we stand today we are not a united people. Let all of our churches form their men into some organization, affiliated with the General Brotherhood, stand loyally by that organization and we at once have a mighty force for union. For "Christian union" is not going to come by way of the pulpit, nor by way of the women, but through the layMEN.

SECOND: The Brotherhood offers the one organized medium through which our people can push and carry to completion any given movement that may be advanced by our people, or suggested by another. Such a thing could not be done by any other organization, because it is not the province of the organizations among us; they stand for specific interests, while the Brotherhood supports all.

THIRD: The movement is so vital that it provides a virile Christianity that produces a regnant life in the individual man.

FOURTH: The Brotherhood provides for the all around training of the manhood of our men. It is the only institution that is big enough to represent every interest in the work of the church, state and school.

FIFTH: The affiliated Brotherhood interests all classes of men, from the non-Christian devotee to the strict theologian, and the bigness of it all appeals quickly to the "union man."

SIXTH: A year and a half of experience has proven that it is the most fruitful institution in the church to which I minister. Yours for the great Brotherhood,

The Portland Convention

A CONVENTION GROUP

Long (below), president; B. A. Abbott (above), St. Louis; R. A. Doan, Nelsonville; John E. Pounds, Hiram, O.; J. Y. Donaldson, Kansas City, Mo.

"We are having a great convention," was the universal comment of almost a thousand men who attended the Third Annual Convention of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ at Portland July 5th. The handsome and commodious First Presbyterian Church began to receive our men as early as 1 o'clock, and when W. E. M. Hackleman raised his baton at 1:30 more than five hundred men responded to the strain of "Help Somebody Today." Then the singing evangelists' Glee Club led in "The Little Brown Church in the Wild Wood." President Long's address will be printed in an early issue of CHRISTIAN MEN.

The farewell address of General Secretary P. C. Macfarlane and the addresses of J. K. Shellenberger, J. N. Haymaker, John E. Pounds and F. W. Burnham were masterpieces, and we have already been importuned to give them very wide circulation either in the columns of CHRISTIAN MEN or in bulletin form.

At the close of the afternoon session Judge Haymaker presented Mr. Macfarlane with a twenty-three jewel Hamilton gold watch and solid gold chain as an expression of love and esteem of the secretaries and directors. The watch is the finest that could be purchased and was a complete surprise to the recipient. After a flashlight photo the meeting adjourned to the banquet hall of the Woodmen of the World, where a most tasty banquet was served under the auspices of the local Brotherhoods of our Portland churches. The room was most tastily decorated with the Brotherhood colors and great vases of American Beauties adorned the tables. When J. N. Haymaker, toastmaster, rapped for order and asked J. H. Garrison, of St. Louis, to invoke the divine blessing upon the company of men, more than four hundred heads were bowed and all lips were silent. We should like to have had a list of those men, for it was very probably the most representative gathering of our church men that has ever been assembled at a similar function in the history of our religious movement. W. E. M. Hackleman was there with his cornet and an ocean of Brotherhood hymn books, and the way those men sang was inspiring. The meal was served by Brotherhood men themselves. The menu was delightful, and when the ice cream came along in green canteloupes fresh from the Pacific gardens, the comment was universal that there had never been a more tasty, well-ordered, splendidly served and enthusiastically received banquet at any of our previous National Conventions. A vote of thanks was given the Portland Brotherhoods for the service. On account of ill ventilation the meeting adjourned to the Grace M. E. church, where the program of the evening was delivered. Mr. Burnham's address had been held over from the afternoon for the banquet, and after he had spoken Mr. Shellenberger led in a conference on the practical issues of the Brotherhood. A feature of the evening program was the singing of the Chinese Glee Club of our Portland Chinese Mission. Twenty young Chinamen marched across from the White Temple, where the C. W. B. M. sessions were being held, and sang "I Love to Tell the Story." The effect upon our great audience of men was magical. They cheered these young men to the echo. "Do Foreign Missions Pay?" Anyone who hears these young men sing had the question answered for them. Our Chinese Mission in Portland has more than twenty Christians, members of the church.

Special Resolution Concerning P. C. Macfarlane

WHEREAS, Our beloved brother, P. C. Macfarlane, is retiring from the responsible position of General Secretary of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, and

WHEREAS, He has impressed upon the movement that positive and aggressive Christian character which it must always will retain, whatever formal changes it shall ever undergo,

THEREFORE, Be it resolved by the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ at the convention assembled, that we recognize Mr. Macfarlane as, under God, the creator of the organization; that we heartily appreciate his earnest, energetic and untiring services in this cause; that we regard the results of his work as vastly greater and more far reaching than can be measured by any visible fruitage at this time, and that we accept his contribution to the cause as constituting the substantial basis upon which further advance will be made. Be it further

RESOLVED, That we extend to Brother Macfarlane a hearty Godspeed in the work to which he now turns, and that we invoke the rich favor of our Heavenly Father upon him in whatever part of the Master's field his energies may be engaged.

Peter Clarke Macfarlane

By W. R. WARREN

I have known Macfarlane for nearly twenty years, but I can't say that I know him. I presume to write some of the things that I know and some that I only think, because he is an extremely interesting person, and probably only one other soul knows him better than I do. Peter Clarke Macfarlane cannot be classified. Possibly no human being can be, but of the mass of mankind we are satisfied to say: "German, Lutheran, Republican, Farmer, aged 53;" "English, Methodist, Democrat, Grocer, aged 46." "Kentuckian, Disciple, Minister, Bible College, aged 33." Only three points are needed to describe any circle, and most of our fancy that four or five points are sufficient to determine the character and conduct of a man. But we all admit that there are exceptions, and it is about the extraordinary men that books are written.

Whether making life a burden to the village schoolma'am in Missouri, pestering his father to death at corn-hoeing time in Florida, or marrying at nineteen and striking out for a railroad presidency and stenography in California, he has always disregarded precedents. He didn't mean to; he just could not help it. He had a riotous imagination and enough put-up energy for ten men. The task of his life, unconscious at first, but lately deliberate, has been to harness his power-given imagination and make it serve his generation by the will of God.

Of course, both the power and the purpose were given to him through his parents. His father is a Canadian-bred Scot, whose unconquerable spirit broke away from the hard limitations of his old home for the opportunities of the states. He went to California and made his modest stake, not by luck but by hard work. After a day of ore-washing in an icy mountain stream, he would spend the evening in his cabin reading the Bible and such books as Dick's "Body of Divinity," while most other miners were drinking and gambling. Returning to Missouri, he married a noble woman, who was both sensitive and sensible. Together they became, for the time and place, rich in lands and goods and, most of all, in good works. A physician's warning of tuberculosis caused the father to sell out at a sacrifice and move to Florida, where, in spite of thrift, the fortune faded away, until scarcely enough was left to remove father and mother, Clarke and Belle to California. Harley had died in Florida. Work was slack and opportunities rare. Age and rheumatism had rendered him unable to dig, but what are age and rheumatism against a Scotch will and a father's love?

However, he was not long allowed to dig. A place of modest responsibility was hunting just such a man, and he managed the "Pioneer Feed Store" to the admiration of owner and customer for many a year. A comfortable living, a cottage home in fee simple, a high school education for the children and a generous share in the support of the little Santa Barbara church were the net results of this labor, and Clarke went forth with his schoolmate bride, Emma Garfield, a distant relative of the martyr president, to—a God-appointed task.

Faith and imagination never failed. After writing from dictation all day, he typed the prodigal creations of his own brain at night, and some of them got printed in Eastern magazines. First of all he was a Christian, and magnified the office of Christian Endeavor president in A. C. Smither's Los Angeles church. To perfect himself for this Christian service he studied the books that make preachers of young men, and took elocution lessons from a retired actor. The road to the pulpit was long; his feet were already on the steps of the stage entrance to the theater. So he tried by the drama to reform his corner of the world—tried as only a very young man, with a very big purpose, could. The success he won was the success of the actor and not of the reformer—and he turned promptly to the longer way, and eventually to the longest way of all.

Brief connection with a publisher and commissions on his sales of an encyclopedia supplied the funds necessary to support the family of four until the Alameda church claimed him as its student-pastor while he finished his course in California University and the Bible Seminary.

Then came the earthquake and fire, his phenomenal nation-wide campaign for the reconstruction fund and his consequent call to become the first General Secretary of the Brotherhood. Two years and a half of this and he lays it down to go the longest way of all—the way of the pen—for the advancement of God's kingdom.

But what have Sergeant McCarty and Dan Tank to do with the promotion of righteousness and true holiness? Well, he says he must "draw the thing as he sees it, for the God of things as they are." He asks to be allowed to do what he can do while coming to the things that he wants to do. And since there are no recognized rules and regulations for the progress of genius, I suppose we shall have to let him take his own way, especially since the magazine that carries McCarty sells up to a quarter or half a million, while "The Quest of the Yellow Pearl," in the most exquisite book form that Revells could devise, has just reached ten thousand, and the "Century's Story" is coming along after this. Of course, these will go on from reader to reader. They are being translated into other tongues, and, like bread upon the water, will return continually to the author after many days. And by the success they will help him to do the great work over which he is brooding and for which he is preparing and being prepared.

Preparing. As substantial apprenticeship achievements stand the Alameda church, the reconstructed churches about San Francisco Bay and the Brotherhood of Disciples with CHRISTIAN MEN reaching 18,000 subscribers monthly. Of course, no one of these is a finished task nor was any one of them accomplished single-handed. But this is no more than to say that he is human and has worked under human conditions.

The Brotherhood Movement is now well inaugurated, and it is R. A. Long's work as well as P. C. Macfarlane's, with E. E. Elliott and J. K. Shellenberger having been such loyal and efficient lieutenants that the further promotion of the organization is confidently entrusted to them. That the Brotherhood has proved its right to exist, and has demonstrated how it can help the individual man, the local church and the general work of all the churches must stand to the credit of R. A. Long, first president, and P. C. Macfarlane, first general secretary. Brother Long has not only supplied with prodigious munificence the greater part of the promotion fund, but he has lent his genius for organization and a steadfast encouragement. Brother Macfarlane has not only traveled and spoken and written, but he has seen the vision and made it contagious, found the men for the local, state and general leadership and set them at the ak; he has opened the way toward self-support and put enough vitality into the movement to enable it not only to survive initial mistakes which all young things make, but to make uninterrupted and increasing progress in spite of these errors, especially in spite of the indifference of those who should have helped and the untility of some who should have been sympathetic.

Being prepared. How costly is the making of a man! There are too many courses in the school of life to name all, and some are too sacred to mention. Time has this big man gone down to the very gates of death, once with typhoid fever and once with inflammatory rheumatism. Four times the wife of his boyhood went into the valley of motherhood, and the last babe came back alone. This was just when he took up the great Brotherhood labor and had to transplant his broken home two thousand miles. Even the most faithful of employees fail at last in some undertakings, and Emma Garfield's devoted friend, the refined and accomplished Florence Judson, gave up her home and her profession to become mother to the four orphans and helpmeet to God's workman.

Brotherhood men will continue to count as a comrade the man who came to them "In Journeyings Oft." They may not be able to guess whether he is to create a Ben Hur or a Jean Valjean, but they know that the new character will be a man of strength and not of weakness, a son of the morning and not of the night, a child of faith and not of doubt. And though he may be preceded by more half-fit brothers than went before David into the presence of Samuel, they will await in patience the coming of the giant-slayer.

Two Good Schools

Attention is called to the announcements of Christian University, Canton, Mo., and Oklahoma Christian University, Enid, Okla., in the advertising pages of this month's Magazine. Any young man or young woman anticipating a college career or Bible education would do well to investigate the merits of these schools. We are personally acquainted with the presidents of these institutions as also with members of the faculty and have no hesitancy in giving them the very highest recommendations in their line of work. Christian University is one of our oldest schools. Oklahoma University, while a newer institution, is presided over by President E. V. Zollars to whom our Brotherhood owes much in an educational way.

Touring With the Brotherhood Train

By E. E. ELLIOTT

KANSAS CITY

The Kansas City ministers of the Christian Churches are a royal lot of entertainers, as evidenced by their meeting the early trains on June 29th and escorting the visitors about the city in auto cars of some of our business men, and ministers, and arranging for a recital on the great organ at the Independence Boulevard Church. Three o'clock saw the long train of nine electric lighted, solid vestibuled cars passing over the great bridge spanning the Missouri, and a jolly party settling themselves as comfortably as the almost distressing heat would permit. St. Joseph was passed without incident, and at ten o'clock we came to Lincoln.

LINCOLN

The capital of Nebraska, home of William J. Bryan, and a lot of other good folks. W. A.

Baldwin, State Secretary of Nebraska Missions, and William Oeschger, Chancellor of Cotner, were at the train to load some passengers. From Lincoln to Denver consumed our sleeping and waking moments until noon next day.

DENVER

George Boone Van Arsdal, pastor of the Central Church in Denver, has a long name. He is also a long man, and appeared on the scene with a sombrero the like of which would make a full blood Mexican blush. The Shirley Hotel gave us a lunch fit for kings, and then came a program and reception at the Central Church. Now the capitol at Denver cost several millions of dollars, and the dome had been recently decorated with real gold leaf, so we went up to see it. Incidentally we saw the inside of the building, with a lot of ancient ox carts and other interesting machinery of pioneer days, some stuffed bison and relics of recent age. Then came a complimentary auto trip about the boulevards and parks, with a visit to the art gallery, one of Denver's delights. But six hours are entirely too short a time to attempt to "do" the capital city of the Rocky Mountain State, and six o'clock saw us hurrying away from the photographer, with his revolving camera, at the union station, and our train took out again on the back track toward South Dakota.

The Black Hills of South Dakota loomed large and dark when Nebraska gave us up Saturday morning. The "Bad Lands" of Wyoming next claimed us, with hardly a spear of grass or a tree or a man or a wolf or an Indian or animal of any sort. Dry farming is an industry

Northern Wyoming, and here and there the desert blossomed like a rose, and pretty soon irrigation ditches began to gather about us like a great spider's web, and the green color in the fields testified silently to the effectiveness of the "water cure."

Reception Committee and Floyd A. Bash, Pastor, Sheridan, Wyo.

SHERIDAN We have a fine church in this great horse range country and Floyd A. Bash is our capable and efficient minister. The whole town, at least it so looked to us, was at the train, and marched through our cars and we were all forced into the open, and onto the platform, where our own "Singing Club" sang until "All aboard" commanded desistance.

CUSTER'S BATTLEFIELD Our next stop found us a mile away from the monument and the litter of white stones that mark the resting places of our gallant dead. Here C. C. Smith, yes, Brother Smith, of Cincinnati, the very same, told of his experience with General Custer in the War of the Rebellion.

INDIANS The several children in our party, and most of the adults, as well, saw the several score of blanket-dressed Indians who dared to show themselves as we sped through the Crow Agency.

BILLINGS We changed roads at Billings, and had a few minutes to catch visions of the thriving city that Billings already is. Brother Frank Maples, our minister there, is hard at work preparing for a meeting with Evangelist Scoville the last of July.

THE NORTHERN ROCKIES We had heard a lot about the beauties of the Rockies, and as we saw them from a distance in Colorado, with Pike's Peak a hundred miles away, they did not strike us with that enraptured feeling that cantered down the nerves of our spine and illuminated our very souls when we came face to face with them in Northern Montana. Lakes and rivers, and snow and ice, forming great glittering glaciers, lying like great white monsters ready to spring into the eternity of the mountain side as they sloped to the foothills, caught our eye through the field glass of a friend. But what's the use of our trying to describe the beauties of the mountains when better writers than we ever hope to be (and that hope is not without the confines of realization to a modest degree) have failed to transfer their full beauty to the printed page. Hence we pass on with the Irishman's comment, "Begorra, thim is some hills all right."

COMMUNION IN THE MOUNTAINS

While the Chapel car would have amply accommodated us, we chose a sight close to nature at Columbia Falls, Montana, where our train stopped for this sacred service. R. A. Long, of Kansas City, and J. N. Haymaker, of Wichita, presided as elders and the deacons were J. R. Robertson, of Independence, Mo.; F. H. Glenn, Nevada, Mo.; Arthur W. Leu, Peoria, Ill., and R. L. Cartwright, of Greenview, Ill. After reading of Scripture by David H. Shields, of Eureka, Ill., and prayer by D. Y. Donaldson, State Secretary of Missouri Missions, the offering for ministerial relief was taken. It amounted to $21.00. The benediction by Austin Hunter, of Chicago, closed the service.

EUREKA J. S. Raum, Corresponding Secretary of Montana, was holding a meeting at this growing little city, and telegraphed for us to stop and hold a service. We stopped and allowed the good folks to grasp our hands, and permitted Frank L. Bowen, of Kansas City, to make a brief but pointed address of greeting for us to the people of the city who were gathered in large numbers, completely occupying the platform and a portion of the roadway.

SPOKANE The City of Falls and Bridges was viewed by electric light of which they have a plenty in Spokane. We stopped three hours, or until midnight, and spent a large part of our time translating long telegrams from cities ahead that wanted a visit from the Brotherhood party.

WENATCHEE The greatest orchard country in the world, according to the following telegram, which came to us at Spokane:

The bugle call from the cornet of E. C. Cassidy, a Kentucky mountain boy, and graduate of Morehead, aroused us at 4:00, after just four and a half hours in bed. We turned our weather eye toward the platform. Where was the reception committee and the hundred odd automobiles that had been promised us. The strangest thing to an auto car was a long line of baggage trucks loaded to the brims with crates of the biggest, blackest cherries you ever saw or tasted. Two men were tugging at one of the trucks. W. W. Burks, yes, Burks of Nevada, M., the very same, now pastor of the church at Wenatchee, and A. A. Elmore, a business man and one of the leading members of the church in Eastern Washington. "What are you trying to do apples and cherries were safe behind the barred doors of the baggage car, we inspected the little city and the pretty church in which the Disciples worship, recently dedicated, and can say that we have not seen a church in a small city more artistic or convenient.

THE CASCADES

The clouds gathered about us as our train began the ascent, and the two giants tugging at the couplers belched other clouds and ground their wheels into the steel, as mile after mile of curve and tangent sprang past us, with here and again snow sheds, and tunnels and great high bridges, and roaring torrents, and water falls, and snow, and the ever-present drip, drip of the moisture from the rocks. Track walkers with little red flags held tightly in hand, with bed and bedding strapped to their backs and pretty shepherd dogs trotting at their heels, waved adieu and took down the track to meet the next train, inspecting roadway and track. To these emissaries of safety the traveling public owes more than it realizes.

that truck," asked F. H. Glenn. "Going to load the Brotherhood train," replied Burks, taking a fresh grip on his tool, as his patent leathers dug into the concrete of the platform. After the felter, Brother Dunbar, S. M. Martin, Mrs. Martin, Dr. E. M. Carney, and a lot of good people whose courtesies we accepted, but whose names we have forgotten or did not hear, we reached, as most of our other stopping places, ahead of time, arriving at 1:15 instead of 2:30. The committee at the station took us at once to the Commercial Club. Mr. Wilson, the Secretary, and his assistants, A. E. Augerson and J. W. Reynolds, were our pilots. Brother Reynolds is President of the Seattle Council of Christian Churches, and a lawyer, late of Pike County, Missouri, the home of Champ Clark. After a reception at the club, we were taken over more paved streets than we imagined the whole Northwest boasted, and enjoyed it hugely.

COLD WEATHER We brought our own overcoat along, but others did not bring theirs and suffered some. Even then we wished for those felt boots we used to wear down on the farm in Indiana and just think—this was the third day of July, and fire crackers were already beginning to boom in anticipation of the morrow.

THE BANQUET Seattle never does things by halves. The banquet was spread in the Commercial Club, and our eighty people went at it like cows to fodder, and the way we consumed the dainty viands you would never think we had eaten two dining cars completely out of provisions in less than five days. Then came the speeches. J. W. Reynolds is a successful lawyer, but a very modest man. That accounts for his asking us to assume the role of toastmaster. We refused at first, but, like Mary's lamb, "still he lingered near," and when the time came for the opening of the talkfest, no one knew who was to speak or wherefore. Seeing the moment for action had arrived, we arose to explain our predicament, and before we had uttered five words we found the audience wanted to make itself heard, and was not at all bashful about it. Now, in our travels we have seen some almost rude people, but the man who interrupted our little speech we had at the end of our tongue and took it right out of our mouth was none other than C. I. Sharpe, Dean of the Bible College of Missouri. The way the words roared from him resembled the declamation of a school boy. We do not recall what he said, but when he had concluded he held in our hands a pair of field glasses and a solid gold scarf pin, tokens from our party. We had no thought of having done anything to merit such expressions from our gracious party, and said our response to Brother Sharpe. However, we accepted the gifts in the spirit in which they were given and assured those contributing toward their purchase that we will obtain much pleasure from their use, even if only about the hills of Kansas City.

THE REAL TOASTS We then called for rapid fire introductions from every person present, and from then until 10 o'clock the air was vibrating with bright, crisp speeches ranging from one second to ten minutes. When President R. A. Long arose to respond to his toast, the audience broke forth in song to the following stars

The Brotherhood Special

Tune, "The Old Oaken Bucket"

To be sung when Brother Long rises to speak

How dear to our hearts is our Brotherhood leader,
Our own Brother Long whom we all so much love.
God bless him and guide him and keep him from evil,
And ever protect him and watch from above.

Chorus.

Our Brotherhood journey, oh, how we enjoyed it,
Our Brotherhood Special, for Portland we're bound,
Our Brotherhood Special, Our Brotherhood Special,
Our Father, so richly, his love sheds around.

Tough often en route, by danger surrounded,
God's hand on the throttle each Christian had plead,
All sweetest communion and joy we experienced,
All over the Cascades and Rockies we sped.

Chorus.

The Power of Jesus, oh, how we all felt it,
All through the deep valleys we wended our way,
The white clouds beneath us, the swift mountain torrents,
Strike each to our hearts of "Perpetual day."

Chorus.

In service of Jesus, our heavenly Captain,
We never will falter, we never will strand,
The one day in Heaven, with hearts all united,
We will gather together a Brotherhood Band.

PORTLAND We arrived at 6:45 on schedule time, found most of the hotels full, as usual at convention cities, and scores of folks wanting rooms, but the committee is doing nobly and no one is going bedless to sleep.

Excitement on the Brotherhood Train
Shortly before our special train arrived at Custer's Battle Field, in Montana, the roof of one of our tourist sleeping cars was discovered to be on fire from a spark from the engine. A sudden stop and a bucket of water put it out without loss and with small delay. One feature of our trip was the fast time made by our train. We arrived at Denver thirty minutes ahead of time, and all along the way had to hold back to meet our appointments for entertainment. This is a remarkable achievement, in view of the fact that it was a heavy train of nine cars, leaving Kansas City, and was already scheduled as fast as the very fastest trains upon the lines of road over which our train operated.

Too much can not be said of the splendid service of the Burlington and Great Northern railways, whose agents and representatives were so uniformly obliging and courteous. Mr. H. S. Jones, of the Burlington, and F. T. Holmes, of the Great Northern, helped to assemble the crowd, and Mr. A. D. Brown, of the Burlington, joined in getting us over the road expeditiously and in comfort. Many times on the trip the train was stopped on the main track wherever it might happen to be when the hour came for our evening devotions. The chapel car, holding one hundred people, was furnished free of charge, and was a most happy feature of the trip. For ourselves we have never taken a more delightful journey and feel that it will be a long time before we take another such trip.

The Relation of Method to Progress

Address Delivered Before the Third Annual Convention of the General Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ
Portland, Oregon, July 5, 1911

By JUDGE J. N. HAYMAKER, Vice-President

JUDGE J. N. HAYMAKER

There are no two words in our noble language more pregnant in meaning or that should command more of intellectual respect than the two words,

METHOD AND PROGRESS
I know of no two words that have more of GOD in them, and of God's dealing with the world, animate and inanimate, than these.

Method in its true significance is synonymous with law, and law rightly apprehended is but another name for God.

Progress is but a picture and a revelation of the stately steppings of God through his Universe from that far time when chaos brooded over the earth, holding in its full womb the potentialities of the future—even before the morning stars sang together—down to this present moment.

The poets who whisper to our rapt ears God's deepest and sweetest mysteries have oftentimes beautifully phrased this thought.

A Kansas poet has sung:

"A fire mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A saurian and a jellyfish
And a cave where the cave men dwell,
A sense of law and beauty,
A face turned from the clod—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it GOD."
And England's deathless bard strikes the same note in these stately lines:

"I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are broadened with the process of the suns."

Inspiration unfolds to us God's method in creation, his method in revelation and his method in the conservation both of nations and of truth.

There is no higher truth, none in which the human soul should more greatly exult and take courage than this, that we are created in the image of God, that His divine spirit dwelleth in these mortal temples of ours, and that to us is given the noble prerogative of working out our own salvation with the assurance that in so doing it is God working in us and through us to do His will and purpose.

It is that strange mystery of the lesser but more universal incarnation where "God in man is one with Man in God."

WHAT IS METHOD? Orderly arrangement, orderly classification, orderly development. It squares with Le Compté's definition of Evolution, "Orderly and progressive development by means of resident forces."

To the Christian the "resident forces" means God in the thing, and God directing the thing in its development.

In the evolution of things moral, in the universe of the heart and soul, in the realm of the spiritual, God has made us lesser Gods with resident divine force, and with skill and ability to direct the unfolding of things in their orderly and progressive development.

Oh, Men! This is a stupendous thought and one the right appreciation of which should make us stand with bared head and unsandaled feet, for it is holy ground.

God has equipped us to do His work. He expects us to do it in a God-like way; and in an unfolding and progressive way.

What relation has this to progress? I answer, every relation. It is basic. It is fundamental. It is impressed upon it. It is entwined around it. It permeates every atom of it. Idiomatically it is IT.

Method then, being God's way, and being thus related to progress, does it not behoove us as His children to walk in His footsteps, to follow His example, and to adopt and pursue right and progressive methods in order to achieve best results?

Science appreciates this great truth. It recognizes to the full that this is a world of orderly and progressive development, and that only by orderly and progressive methods can its secrets be discovered and made subservient to man. Behold its miracles.

Business recognizes it, and by means of new and improved methods of combination and coöperation, appropriating to its use all the new truths of science, has made more progress in a decade than formerly in a century.

Shall the Church, which more than any other institution or body of men, is its rightful heir, ignore it?

Shall it be chained, Prometheus like, to the rock of the past while the world moves on in advance of it?

BUSINESS IN CHRISTIANITY

I cannot help but believe that the church has lost immeasurably in potency and accomplishment by a too slavish adherence to methods which were adopted to social and business conditions of bygone ages, but which are wholly inadequate to the present time.

I cannot help but believe that it is a fearful and costly mistake to think that God has mapped out all our methods of administration and government by apostolic precept and precedent and that He has left us, His God-endowed children, no initiative and no right to avail ourselves of the auxiliaries of modern thought, modern inventions, and modern means of progress in so far as they are available for use and advancement in His Kingdom.

Who can compute the loss to the world in the past in an economic way growing out of its failure to follow approved modern methods of culture, conservation and business?

Who can compute the loss to the human race in the past in life, health and vigor in its failure to apprehend and follow the best methods of surgery, sanitation, and the prevention and cure of disease?

Who can compute the loss to the moral and religious world in the past because of its failure to follow the very best and most approved method in proclaiming God's truth to the world, in the establishment and maintenance of churches and in the development and culture of the ability, the energy and the power of God's people?

There is but one answer to these questions and that is INFINITE, INFINITE, INFINITE.

SHALL IT CONTINUE? Ah! that is the great question that confronts the church today.

Upon its solution depends largely the strength or weakness of the church in the future.

Our plea of the one creed given us by God in His holy word, of the Union of Christians upon that divine creed, of the name that is all comprehensive and acceptable to all, the name Christian—certainly right in theory and one that should take the world.

But our progress, great as it has been, is in no way commensurate with our great plea for the restoration of primitive Christianity and the union of God's people upon His holy word.

Our failure, to the extent that we have failed; our weakness, to the extent that we are weak, grows out of the limitations that we have placed upon ourselves in the business administration of this great and sacred trust committed to our charge.

OUR PROGRESS Our strength and our progress in the years to come will depend largely upon our ability and willingness to properly organize our forces and call into play such right and proper business methods as are applicable to the Master's Kingdom.

There are three words, magic words, now in vogue in the business world today and which I think should challenge our weightiest consideration in planning our religious work. They are CONSERVATION, CO-OPERATION and ORGANIZATION.

CONSERVATION The first, CONSERVATION, concerns itself chiefly with the raw material. However much present progress the world may make on any given line, if the raw material or the thing upon which progress is predicated is being exhausted, it is only a question of time until bankruptcy is the inevitable result.

For a century past our farmers have plowed and harvested, piling up temporary gain with but little thought or consideration for the oncoming generation. They have gone upon the principle of the French Revolutionist: "After the deluge;" but in these later times, wise men have observed this tendency and set in operation forces to check it—but little less than revolution, beneficent revolution, has been the result. Intensive culture, economy and efficiency in management and a wise provision for the future are now the means employed with satisfactory results in the way of temporary gain and even more satisfactory results in the way of future prospects. The land is being enriched, forests are being planted, water supplies are being tapped and all great forces of nature are being wisely employed in order that mankind may have sustenance and the earth left remaining in as good or better condition than when the crops are taken from them.

CO-OPERATION In the world of business, capitalists and leaders are finding out that it is not right morally nor more profitable financially to disregard workers in the field and shop who produce the wealth of our land, but that by coöperating with them and with each other greater stimulus is given to production and great economy is obtained in the output not otherwise obtainable; hope is engendered in the human heart and results reaped far more satisfactorily and beneficent than in the old way when independent efforts alone brought a measure of success to the individual but sowed discontent in the army of operatives and too frequently left them poverty-stricken in both means and character.

ORGANIZATION By organization militant men have combined forces in such a way that each has added to the other with a combined result that has amazed the world by the magnitude of the achievement; heterogeneity has given place to homogeneity, discord to harmony and weakness to strength.

Our coming together in this magnificent metropolis of the Pacific slope, with such comfort, such facility and such comparative cheapness is made possible because the systems of transportation have succeeded small, struggling and competitive lines of road. This great city in which we meet is possible only because of the magnificent organization of business men who are at the helm of its affairs.

If these things be true, and they are apparent to even the casual observer, should not the religious world learn lessons therefrom and as far as practicable and consistent with the teaching of the Master pattern after their example? Is there a better work for the Brotherhood than along these lines?

LOCAL NEEDS

Take it first in the local congregation and consider the need of conservation. All will concede the enormous loss of the church in the way of raw material by men who have once identified themselves with it and then drifted away. Take our own church, for example. Suppose that all the men and women who have identified themselves with the Disciples of Christ in the past century had been saved to the church, what would now be our position and condition in the religious world? I think I am within the bounds of reason and make a conservative statement when I say that our members would be twice as large as they now are and our degree of efficiency quadrupled.

The work of saving these men and women to the church is peculiarly adapted to the Brotherhood movement. Many of them drifted away because of a want of fraternity in the church with which they were once identified; many drifted away because no special work is given them to do and no special effort created on their behalf; many drifted away for want of education along religious lines, for want of identity with our world-wide missionary movements; with our benevolent enterprises and for lack of satisfying work in local matters and particularly want of that spiritual interest which comes only from participation in active and actual work of the church. Here is need of conservation; here is need of methods; in short, here is need of the Brotherhood movement.

It is perhaps too much to ask of the local church to supply these methods for such conservation, but if we have a body of select men who make this their study and to bring to the local churches methods by which this work can be done it will certainly meet a great need in our church body.

I do not mean to say that the local Brotherhood should not concern itself with methods—far from it. Its leaders should make a special study of methods as applied to local conditions and in proportion as right methods are revised and adopted will be the success of that Brotherhood.

WHY A NATIONAL BROTHERHOOD?

But I do mean to say that a parent body, a national body, is needed to specialize along these lines, and to bring to every local body the help of their profound and anxious study of this question.

If the two working together can help to conserve the raw material brought into the church through pastors and evangelists; if they can secure hearty and enthusiastic coöperation among the members of the local church, and of the local church with other churches; if they can help to organize the working forces of the church more efficiently, they will do a work that will be the marvel of men and meet the approbation of Heaven.

I covet for the Church of Christ improved methods, more efficient organization, not only in the Brotherhood, but in the Church Universal.

It is one of our supreme needs.

Understand me, I do not mean to say that the study and introduction of improved methods of church work should be limited to the Brotherhood movement far from it. It is a line of study and work that should especially challenge the Christian Statesmen of our Church—the men of larger vision who are gifted with the faculty of organization and construction.

But I do mean to say if, among other good things, the Brotherhood movement specializes in the introduction of improved methods in Church work, local in general, it will prove an enormous labor in the conservation of the work of pastors and evangelists, and in the upholding, deepening and broadening of the Master's Kingdom.

Coöperation and combination among local churches has done much, and its desirability is freely acknowledged by all, but the great trouble with it as practiced among us is lack of system, lack of coherence, lack of direction, lack of organization, and this in a large measure the Brotherhood movement will supply.

ETER
ORGANIZATION
And that brings me to my last point, the desirability, nay, the crying necessity of a better organization among us. We have accomplished much with such organization as we have had, but scarcely a tithe of what we might have done and what we should have done.

There is lack of organization, need of organization in every department of our church work.

We have among us many examples of well-organized churches doing excellent work, putting to shame the spasmodic, disconnected and unrelated work of even large churches, but I doubt if in our whole broad land there is a district of any size, to say nothing of a State, in the U. S., that is organized and doing the Master's work up to the full measure of its ability.

That there is a prejudice in some quarters against anything like perfect organization in religious work, I am well aware.

And yet, when we realize the greatness of the problem before us in the world's conversion, and the slow and labored progress we are making under present disjointed, unrelated and imperfect system, I cannot help but believe that this prejudice will slowly melt away in the great light and the crowning success of a more perfectly organized system.

He will be reckoned greatest among us who most contributes to this end.

Let us plan and work to perfect our methods along the whole line of Christian endeavor and our progress will be commensurate therewith. It will be both marked and permanent.

It is possible the Brotherhood may only contribute a mite to this great result, but it is none the less our duty to contribute that mite.

It will take time to bring our methods to perfection, great time, but what is time in the sight of God. Centuries are but pendulum strokes in his great clock, but they swing endlessly to and fro, and some great day in the future the work will be accomplished and the clock of destiny to the human race will then strike twelve.

In that great, glad time, God will look upon his redeemed and restored creation and again say, it is good:

"Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for every fate—
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait."

Let us work out our own salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God who maketh in us to will and to do His good purpose.

Why Have a Brotherhood?

Address Delivered at the Portland Convention July 5, 1911

BY J. K. SHELLENBERGER

THE MAN OF GALILEE

Has established His right to the place of leadership among men. Nineteen hundred years ago His critics sent men to arrest him. They returned without Him. Their excuse was, "Never man spake like that man." And so today, after nineteen hundred years of testing, men are saying with strong emphasis, "Never man lived like that man lived." He came to teach us how to live, and His teaching is made effective in that He taught nothing that He had not first tested in His own experience. After nineteen hundred years of closest scrutiny men have not been able to say that Jesus' experience failed to run the whole gamut of life. His solutions of life's problems prove adequate. The problems of the prophets were the problems of Jesus, and the problems of Jesus are the problems of today. The facts of human history vary with the experiences of the age; but the struggle of the human heart in the conquest of sin—the longing of the human soul for the better and the higher—are the same today as they were on Judea's plains, on Pisgah's heights, in Eden's quiet.

From the heights of the Son of God, and out of his experiences in the conquest of temptation, Jesus makes His proposals to men. These proposals are so revolutionary, so sweeping in scope that the church stands appalled before the bigness of the responsibilities these proposals entail. We say the church's problem is sin. But the word "sin" has become of such common use that we scarcely stop to appreciate its awful meaning.

Paul says that the whole demonstration of God's scheme of redemption is that we might be made to know "the exceeding sinfulness of sin." But sin is more than an individual condition. Sin consists also of wrong relationships, misconceptions, false viewpoints, false ideals and an unwillingness to be set right even though our experience in the midst of these falsities has led us into unspeakable entanglements.

THE CHURCH'S PROBLEM

Just a faint glimpse of what we mean by the church's problem as it manifests itself today:

DIVORCE

The United States grants 55,502 divorces in 1910. That means that 55,502 homes in America were blasted into smithereens in one year. And this does not even hint at the volcanic fires that are smouldering beneath the foundations of the American home ready to belch forth into flame at the least agitation.

THE SOCIAL EVIL

One-tenth of the children born in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1910, were illegitimate. And this scarcely hints at the blackness and the foulness of social life that is being lived behind closed doors, drawn curtains, and in foul dives.

AMUSEMENTS

Two million five hundred thousand people attend the moving picture shows every day in the United States. For this privilege we pay $57,000,000 annually. More than twice as many people attend the public balls every day as attend the moving picture show. And these public halls are

According to the testimony of statistics, are prolific in evil results. Nine-tenths of the unfortunate mothers mentioned above confessed to having met the fathers of their illegitimate children at the ballroom. These statistics have to do with one city only. And be it remembered that this is the city which President Roosevelt said was the best governed city in the United States.

TRAFFIC IN VICE Five thousand girls and women were bought and sold like cattle in the stalls, in the markets of prostitution in the city of Chicago in the year 1910. And these figures do not give us a glimpse of what is going on in the cities of New York and Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, New Orleans, St. Louis, San Francisco and Seattle. In Seattle alone between seven and eight hundred men lived from the profits from the White Slave traffic in 1910.

OUR DRINK BILL Quoting the Pacific Christian, "Our drink bill for 1910 reached the inconceivable sum of $2,225,000,000." This is a sum so imposingly big that it is entirely beyond the grasp of the mind. We cannot appreciate its tremendousness except by comparison. And it is for this purpose we have gathered the following facts. With the amount of money that we spent for drink last year we could have paid the gross earnings of the following twenty-six of our great railroad systems:

Santa Fe.	$ 105,000,000
B. & O.	90,000,000
Can. Pac.	95,000,000
C. & A.	13,250,000
C. & N. W.	74,000,000
C., B. & Q.	80,000,000
C. & G. W.	10,000,000
C., M. & St. P.	64,750,000
Rock Island.	62,250,000
Big Four.	82,000,000

Erie.	51,750,000
G. N.	94,500,000
Ill. Central.	57,750,000
Lake Shore.	45,500,000
Mich. Central.	28,000,000
Mo. Pacific.	44,250,000
N. Y. Central.	97,500,000
N. Y. & Hudson.	64,250,000
N. & W.	35,000,000
Nor. Pacific.	74,000,000
Pa.	315,500,000
So. Pacific.	135,000,000
Southern R. R.	57,250,000
Frisco.	53,000,000
Union Pacific.	90,250,000
Wabash.	29,000,000

and have had $265,750,000 left. Out of this remainder we could have paid every dollar of the internal revenue and had a big nest egg left.

Once more, out of our drink bill we could have bought every church building in our land—Catholic and Protestant—real estate, buildings and furniture, and have had $993,000,000 left. And out of this magnificent remainder we could have added $1,500 to the salary of every preacher, priest and rector in the whole United States and still have had $740,423,000 left. Out of this remainder, at the average prevailing price advertised in our journals we could have bought every seat in the United States Senate and placed therein a man to our own liking and still have had $735,823,000 left. And out of this remainder we could have paid every cent of the debts of the following States: Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon and California, setting them free to begin new lines of graft and still have had $8,057,000 left.

INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS And following these over-towering problems come the agonizing and sometimes terrorizing industrial problems, with their entailments of strikes, bitterness, hatred, poverty and suffering, all of which we have no time to speak. This is the church's problem.

We are not saying that it is up to the church to attack these one by one and solve them in isolated attempts. That is not the church's business. The church's business is character building and vision clearing. Our purpose in mentioning these appalling statistics is that we may see how we are "straining out the gnats and swallowing the camels"—how we are permitting ourselves to see with warped visions—how we spend such enormous sums for the satisfaction of an appetite, the destruction of character and the damning of life, and half-way justify ourselves in doing it. At the same time, we are dragging our railroads and trust companies before the United States Supreme Court, charging them with taking too much money for their services. Maybe they are. We are not saying that they are not. What we are saying is, that it is up to the manhood of the Church of Jesus Christ to get the manhood of this land to realize that we are looking through colored spectacles, through bad lenses that warp our vision and distort appearances—to see that we are looking from false viewpoints and consequently drawing false conclusions—to get men to realize that the present motive of life is profits rather than service, and that the goal of life is the possession of machinery that produces profits rather than the building of the Kingdom of God.

RECONSTRUCTED MESSAGE

Our present task is the reconstruction of our message — gaining the Christ concept of life. Jesus' proposals are antithetical to present day conceptions. Were we to take Him seriously and to actually put into practice His suggestions, it would work a complete social revolution. And in order for the Kingdom of God to come, a complete revolution is absolutely necessary.

Jesus' message was not theological, but sociological, much as we may dislike the term. His message was a message of relationships and not of philosophies. The two most constant and pregnant thoughts in all of Jesus' message were Fatherhood and Brotherhood. No system of philosophy or mental attitude can bring about either Fatherhood or Brotherhood for these are the names of relationships. That man should recognize God as his Father and every man as his brother, and so conduct himself, is the resume of all that Jesus said to the world. Such a condition, once realized, He named the Kingdom of God. And the consummation of this Kingdom He laid upon us as our supreme task.

As His means unto the realization of the Kingdom of God he suggests to us proper ideals and proper methods. And this in turn becomes the suggestion of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ. A clear and distinct recognition of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man stands at the beginning of the covenant which Brotherhood men have all taken. Then follows a call to these Brotherhood men to recognize the "ideals of Jesus Christ for the individual and for society" as their own life ideals. This brings us to Jesus' viewpoint of life and gives us an outlook that is in harmony with the kingdom purposes. And then follows in our covenant the call to men make the method of Jesus our method of life. This, put into a word, is simply compelling yourself to stand in the other man's shoes and establishing relationships from the other man's standpoint. The Golden Rule we call it in our covenant; and in it promise "to make an earnest effort to observe this rule in all of our dealings."

HEART TASK Hence we need but remind you that this is not a head, but a heart task. It is not demand for greater intellect, but for more heart power. There was a day when men would measure a man, they placed the band around his wrist. That was the age of Hercules. Then came the day when they measured the size of his head. That was the age of Shakespeare and Bacon.

"Were I so tall to reach the pole
And grasp the earth within my span;
I must be measured by my soul:
The mind's the measure of the man,"
Watts. But the day is at hand when he who would be greatest must measure most around the heart. Love is the true standard of orthodoxy and the measure of real greatness. What is needed today then is not a greater intellect, but a purer heart. Our present task is calling for men who have seen the face of Christ and whose hearts have been touched, whose lives have been quickened, whose vision has been clarified, whose loyalty to the Kingdom purpose has been aroused, and whose pulse beats in harmony with the great Father heart of all the universe. THIS, MY BRETHREN, IS THE PRESENT DAY TASK OF THE BROTHERHOOD.

What can we do, and how shall we do it?

ARMY MOBILIZED

First, we must mobilize the army. And this are we doing. The men are being aroused today as never before. The growth of the past year has been all but phenomenal—not in numbers, but in spirit. One year ago the Brotherhood movement was being criticised both in State and National Convention. Critics had grown so bold as to all but have resolved themselves into enemies. Today the spirit is changed. In every Convention in which we have been present there has been a spirit of earnest inquiry and genuine sympathy. This is the strongest testimony of the worth of the Brotherhood that could be given.

OUR BUSINESS

The business of this army is not primarily to raise money that can be footed up in columns and be reported to our National Conventions; but to build men to enlist in the growing army of the King of kings. Fifty years ago our sisters began to organize. For half a century they have marched in serried columns with well lined front. They have taught us the magnificent possibilities of sane organization—that it is possible for men or women to organize in the Kingdom of God, not for the sake of authority, but for the sake of efficiency. And the grandest product of our Christian Woman's Board of Missions is not the splendid sum of money that they have been able to send to the mission field, but the strength and glorified character of the woman herself who has become the flower and the glory and the heart of our local congregations. This is the task and the purpose of the Brotherhood—not alone to raise money for the mission field—it will do that and more; not alone to take better care of the poor and the unemployed on the local field, it will do that and more; not alone to financially equip our Sunday-Schools and churches from kindergarten to adult department with the latest and best apparatus available, it will do that and more. The supreme task of the Brotherhood is to grow character within the men who will do these things out of the largeness and the pureness of their hearts, and who will be able to go out into the world and fill the positions in our courts, at our bars of justice, our superintendents' offices, our positions of responsibility of whatever description, and make their decisions from the standpoint of the Christ and do their work in view of the kingdom purpose.

TRAINING MEN The only way to train men and to build within them such character is to simply train them. The only place to attack the great world problem is the place where it exists—on the local field. Let us go home and gather our men together no matter how small the number. Let us sit down as in a fire-side council. Let us pray our way into a clearer viewpoint of the problems that lie in the way of our local churches, and make our attack then and there. And when once your men are organized in the local church may I beseech you to fully affiliate yourselves with our National work. It is said by some of our good men—and men whom we honor and respect for their splendid achievements—that they see no need of affiliation with a National organization. They tell us that having looked over the proposed program of the National Brotherhood they find nothing there that they are not already working out; and since there is nothing, as they feel, that the National Brotherhood has to give them in suggestion or method, there is no need for their affiliation. They tell us that they do not care to make a contribution to the National Brotherhood for simply the maintenance of an office that seems to give them nothing in return. Should there be those before me today who have made this criticism or have even felt it in their hearts, please allow me to call your attention to just a few things. For instance you have your men organized. They are doing definite things for the kingdom. There is not a call for the missionary offering on the calendar of the church to which your men do not respond. They care for their pastor's salary; they visit the sick; they help the unemployed; they lift the local burdens and encourage the work in every way. But there are eight thousand churches among the Disciples of Christ. Only about one-third of these eight thousand pay any attention whatever to the call of missions, and are as negligent to the other demands as they have been to that call. Only the faintest portion of our churches are aroused to the value of our federated civic reform. In 1909 the negroes of the South gave more to the treasury of the National Reform Bureau than all the "Disciples of Christ" put together. This is our excuse then for coming to the churches who are already strong and well organized. Will you not give your fellowship, your example and your influence through our National organization to the multitude of churches who have not yet caught the vision of possibilities in organized work? The motive of Christian service is not gain, but service. The Master said long years ago, "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." It is not doing violence to the mind of our leader to say today that the church that saves its life shall lose it and the church that shall give her life for the life of others shall find a larger life. This is what the National Brotherhood has to offer you. It appeals to you for your hearts and for your service. It proposes to you a manly and difficult undertaking and makes no apology for doing so.

It pleads with you for your means, your money and your influence, and believes it will not be disappointed in the year to come. This Brotherhood must be our Brotherhood, and it can only be so when it becomes a child of our support and our careful fostering. Let us not grow weary then in well doing. Our numerical growth may not have been so large as we originally expected, but we believe that it has grown commensurate to the possibilities within the laws of God and the short time that it has been organized. Let us remember that a Brotherhood cannot be created. It can only be grown. And it will grow just as fast as you and I are able to plant the seed and irrigate the soil and care for the harvest. It is up to us.

And now we close with this familiar legend: It was said of the Master, in the days when legends grew, that when He ascended upon high He was met at the gate by a company of angels. "Tell us," said Gabriel, "of your experiences now," And then the Master began. He told of His birth, of the modest home in which He lived, of how He grew from boyhood to youth and youth to manhood. He told of His yearnings for pain and His visions without, of His baptism and the Voice from on high. He told of the honors men gave Him, of the crown they would have placed upon His head. He told of His disciples' desertion, of the bursting of His heart for His brethren, of the sweat drops in Gethsemane, of the blood-stained cross on Calvary, of the darkness of the tomb and the breaking of the light on that Lord's day morn. And then He told of the cloud that came to bear Him away to glory, and said, "I now am home again to be with my Father."

Gabriel once more replied, "What provision, my Master, have you made for the continuation of your work since you have come away?"

To which the Master answered, "I chose twelve men, men of low degree. To them I gave my charge and promised my spirit, but alas, one has already proved a traitor."

Then said Gabriel, "But why did you not choose the men of high degree, the men of influence and of wealth?"

"I called them, but they would not come," was the sad reply.

"But suppose those eleven fail to do Thy will, then what of all Thy sacrifice and work?"

And then, says the legend, a tear rolled down the Master's cheek and fell at His feet. His chin dropped upon His breast as He sadly shook His head and said, "Then, it's all a failure. There is no other way. But they will not, they will not fail."

And so, my brethren, the Master has committed this great world task to you and me. Our church and our community will be just as bad as we will let it be. It will be just as good as we will make it. The task is ours. If we fail the Kingdom fails. If we win, the Kingdom wins. There is no other way.

I REALLY DON'T YOU THINK that your men ought to become members of the Brotherhood? Others do, why not you? How? A postal card asking for that ORGANIZATION PACKAGE brings the answer.

DO IT NOW

Wireless Whispers

We have copy of program of the Sixth Annual Convention of the Pecos Valley Sunday-School Association, held at Roswell, N. M., June 16th to 18th, showing an address upon the Brotherhood Movement by Frank Talmage, our pastor at Greenfield, N. M.

* * *

After our forms had closed for the July magazine, word came of the election of C. N. Kinney, of Des Moines, as Chairman of the Men and Religion Forward Movement Committee of One Hundred, of the Capitol city of the Hawkeye State. Brother Kinney is president of the Iowa State Brotherhood, president of the University Place Church Brotherhood, interested in city missions work in Des Moines besides being a very busy professor in Drake University. We understand that he holds several other offices, including that of State Chemist, but with it all finds time to devote to the affairs of the Kingdom. As we were departing for Portland, we received a letter from him which we hope to publish almost entire in an early issue.

Iowa Convention

At the Convention of the Iowa Christian Missionary Society, at Ottumwa, June 20th, the following State officers were elected: C. N. Kinney, President, Des Moines; R. E. Reggand, Secretary, Des Moines; Fred Randay, Treasurer, Ames. The following District officers were elected: Northwest District, H. F. Ritsl, our minister at Boone; Northeast District, R. E. English, a business man of Marshalltown; Southwest District, Geo. Roberts, pastor at Osceola; Southeast District, J. O. Boyd, Attorney, Keokuk, and Central District, Fred S. Barnett, Des Moines.

A splendid men's session was held with one hundred and fifty men present. Addresses were delivered by W. J. Williamson, St. Louis, Baptist minister of note, and J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary. It was voted a delightful time and plans are laid for a season of activity the coming year.

Oklahoma State Convention

The Convention this year was held at Enid and A. R. Spicer, General Member No. 30 and pastor at Lawton, was elected President of the Oklahoma Brotherhood for the ensuing year. Brother Spicer is a man among men and is demonstrating his man handling ability by the work in his own church. Upon recent occasion, with J. H. O. Smith, of Oklahoma City, as the chief speaker, what accounted the biggest and best thing of the kind ever held in Lawton was the banquet of the Christian churchmen. The new S. President plans to hold fifty Men's Rallies in Oklahoma before next convention and has 250 business men at the next convention. A statement which comes to us over his own nature sounds like business and we have faith in Brother Spicer's ability to do what he sets out to perform.

The Brotherhood Luncheon at the First District Convention, Lanark, Illinois

About fifty men and their women friends gathered together in the First District Convention Brotherhood Luncheon at Lanark, Ill., June 14th. Wm. B. Clemmer, of Rockford, was toastmaster. C. C. Carpenter, of Princeton, responded with felicity to the toast—"What a Man Like." O. P. Ellis, of Walnut, followed in the same vein. The address of the occasion was delivered by J. K. Shellenberger, guest of honor, in his own strong way. Brother Shellenberger also spoke for the Brotherhood in the evening session of the convention through the grace of the C. W. B. M., where the session it was.

The practical outcome of the meeting will doubtless be the organization of a L. B. District C. at Lanark under the leadership of the pastor, J. Edward Cresmer.

A Message From the Great Northwest

We had a great time last evening with our men. For some time past we have had no organized Brotherhood but unaffiliated. They have been doing pretty good work, but want to do better. We invited Joseph L. Garvin, of Seattle, to come as our guest of honor and 35 of our men gathered to meet him. After a sumptuous banquet in our banquet room we adjourned to the auditorium, had a few songs, and Brother Garvin was introduced by our President, Dr. Richardson. I can assure you that Brother Garvin woke our men up at the same time gave us just the information needed, showing what to do and what not to do and furnishing the necessary inspiration to do right, then what we ought to do, to affiliate. So you will hear from our Secretary, W. E. Buffum, in that connection.

A New Church in New York City

Several members from the Second Church of Crist, Brooklyn, moved into the Ridgewood Hights section, Borough of Queens. The attention of the Disciples Missionary Union was called to this splendid suburban section.
After a complete investigation, they found a promising field, rapidly growing, without any church service in the English tongue. They decided at once to enter the field. January, 1910, an interesting Bible School was organized, and November of the same year, Robt.
Wtchen, having completed his course at the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., was secured to take charge of this mission work.
November 28th, 1909, a mission church was organized with 10 members and regular church services conducted. An old real estate office building was rented in which to carry on the work, the church membership increased to 22 and a splendid Bible School of 175 was built up. A well located lot on the corner of Forest Avenue and Linden Street was secured at a cost of $3,600, and a neat temporary frame building costing $2,000, was erected and dedicated April 30, 1911. The formal dedicatory service was held at 3 p. m., a large audience was present, many from our other churches in the city were present. Brother W. L. Fisher, Pastor of the First Church, Manhattan, preached the dedicatory sermon and other deacons assisted in the service. With the larger equipment for service, and the untiring labors of the pastor, an efficient Christian service will be rendered in this section of the city, and the church will soon grow to self-support.

A Message From Bolenge

I've come up here to Lotumba for an extended vacation and am head over heels in work. Up here away from the worries of an old station, I'm getting along well. I'm getting more joy out of this work than I thought possible. Last Sunday we took the public confession of twenty-seven and baptized them in the water of the Momboyo. One young man whom I baptized came into the water his heart pumping so hard and fast that I could see his ribs rise and fall. He went forth a smiling lad. Every day brings other men and women to have their names written as those seeking knowledge of God. Men from the interior villages are coming in constantly asking for teachers, saying: "Why do you pass us by?"
One chief came in with about sixteen fine young men saying: "White man, my people have never heard of God and His Son; I've heard of him a few times, but my people haven't. Won't you have pity on us, come to see us and leave us a teacher?" We are too busy here trying to get a decent place to live and we are too few to make these trips. Our funds are not sufficient to send out the teachers.
We must listen and show our helplessness. Is it possible, with our million odd people, that none, or very few, will volunteer to help us?
Isn't it possible to find some doctors to help us?
At this time we have none on the field. Are we praying earnestly for laborers to gather in the harvest for the Lord?

Yours in His righteous cause.

CHAS. P. HEDGES.

A World Atlas of Christian Missions

The Student Volunteer Movement will publish shortly a World Atlas of Christian Missions. In this Atlas will be found all material concerning the non-Christian World in the "Statistical Atlas of Christian Missions" presented at the World Missionary Conference in Edinburgh, June, 1910, and in addition there are added maps and information concerning missionary work in all other parts of the world, all having been corrected and brought down to date. The "World Atlas of Christian Missions" has been edited by Dr. James S. Dennis, author of "Christian Missions and Social Progress," Professor Harlan P. Beach, of Yale University, and Mr. Charles H. Fahs, Editorial Secretary of the Methodist Foreign Mission Board, who were also the editors of the Edinburgh Conference Atlas. It contains a directory of the missionary societies of the world, a classified summary of missionary statistics, and twenty-five maps showing the location of mission stations in all parts of the world. The maps have been prepared under the direction of Professor Beach by John G. Bartholomew, the well known map maker of Edinburgh.

For many years this Atlas will be the standard work of its kind in the English language. It will not only be recognized as a standard Missionary Atlas, but including as it does maps of every part of the world, it will meet the needs of the average reader for a general atlas. In fact it has marked advantages as a general atlas because of the missionary information which it contains.

The price of the Atlas will be $4.00 net, carriage extra. Through the kindness of friends whose contributions make the publication of the Atlas possible we are able to offer the book to those ordering in advance for $2.75, plus the cost of carriage and wrapping.

All orders should be addressed to W. P. McCulloch, Business Secretary, Student Volunteer Movement, 125 East 27th Street, New York City.

C. T. Morris

The above counterfeit presentment is of C. T. Morris, of Indiana, Missouri, Georgia and Pennsylvania, organizer of the Brotherhood of American Yeoman and staunch friend of CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine. To our lady readers we will remark underneath our breath that Brother Morris is not married, at least he was not at the time our information was gathered and his address at last accounts was Carlisle, Pa. We first heard from Brother Morris in Los Angeles, where he was a member of the First Church. After California he turned up at Peru, Indiana, from which point he sent us a handsome club of subscribers to CHRISTIAN MEN. He did the same at Ottawa, Ill., New Castle, Pa., Webster City, Ia., Argos, Plymouth, Nappanee, Ind., Milton, Jersey Shore, Pa., Savannah, Ga., Augusta, Ga., Washington, D. C., Lynchburg, Va., Philadelphia, Pa., Baltimore, Md., and we may have missed several places where he did us valuable service, but all in all, Brother Morris has sent us more subscribers than any one man outside of our own force of secretaries. We are happy to present his pleasant features to our readers and to give public acknowledgment of his valuable services to the Brotherhood Cause. We hope before many months have a corps of Brotherhood workers Brother Morris' type at work in different sections of the country presenting the story of the Brotherhood and CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine to groups of men that they will gather and enlist their personalities and power in the work of the Kingdom.

The Automobile Parade at Joplin

On the 30th of January Joplin entertained the largest company of men at a Team Work banquet that was had at any of the 39 points touched by the group of world-wide speakers. Not satisfied, however, with this achievement, they decided to eclipse the Team Work banquet upon the occasion of the Third Missouri District Convention held in Joplin on May 1st. J. W. Perry, who covered himself and his committee with glory January 30th and received the combined congratulations of all our National Societies, was also chairman of the second event and it was so important from the standpoint of practical accomplishment that we asked him how it was done.

He sends us the above photograph of one of the 51 automobiles that were in the Team Work parade and the following very full account of the affair.

Mr. Perry says:

"I thought of this project several days ago then telephoned Brother R. A. Long at Kansas City and asked his opinion. Mr. Long said he thought it was a capital idea and that it would help to make the banquet a success. I asked Mr. Long to come down and help our parade, but he had already arranged for a trip East and could not come. I then selected for the best machine in the community, photograph of which appears above, and also secured the service of all the largest autos in our city, and if it had not been for the Shriners' Convention at Pittsburg, Kansas, we would have had not less than 75 machines in the parade. To tell you exactly how we made this parade and banquet a success, would say that it was by the united efforts of all forces of the churches and the surrounding churches and the automobile owners, who were our friends. We went in for 500 men and although we were disappointed in not having quite that number, we believe that we could have a banquet and parade in another two or three months in this district with 1,000 men attendance if we can arrange an outdoor place suitable for the occasion.

"In short, to give you my opinion of the reason for the success of the Joplin meeting will say that we went after it expecting everybody to turn out. We used the newspaper freely, paying for the space and finally the editor began to take notice and gave us a nice write-up of the parade and invited all of the automobile owners to line up with us. The project cost us considerable money, but we did not hesitate to advertise and put our time and money into it for the reason that expected to make good and did so. I believe the reason that more of our meetings are not successful is because we do not expect a large number and do not go after the arrangements like we expected it."

Oklahoma Christian University Prospers

Oklahoma Christian University has just closed its fourth session. The fourth annual commencement was held in the University Chapel Tuesday night, May 30th. The address was delivered by A. McLean, of Cincinnati, Ohio. The Baccalaureate Sermon was preached the previous Sunday by O. L. Cook, of Hutchinson, Kansas.

Sixty-five young people graduated from the various departments. Eleven of the number received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, three the degree of Master of Arts, one the degree of Bachelor of Divinity and one the degree of Bachelor of Oratory. This makes a total number of 31 degrees conferred by this young institution.

The entire enrollment for the year is 357. This is only a fraction under 10 per cent increase over last year. All departments show marked growth, but the largest increase is in the College of Liberal Arts, where the growth is 40 per cent. Fourteen different States, the Dominion of Canada and Australia are represented in the enrollment.

The ministerial department enrolled 85. Forty of the ministerial students supplied 65 churches with preaching in the vicinity of Enid. Three hundred dollars has been raised, mainly by the students and faculty, to place a living link evangelist, through the Oklahoma Christian University Missionary Society, in the field. This evangelist is to work in the territory contiguous to Enid. His special work will be to hold meetings with the churches that are now without preachers and place with them a student from the University. Through this means it is hoped that a great many more ministerial students will be supplied with preaching.

In completion of the original contract entered into by the citizens of Enid and the University, the University within the past year received $18,000 from the city of Enid, $12,000 of which is in property.

Through the beneficence of a number of our brethren, $30,000 has been secured during the past year in gifts. This money is being used for the liquidation of the debt, which has hung over the institution from its beginning. As the college is now coming out from under the debt that has been a burden, it is feeling a sense of relief that heretofore it has not experienced.

Brother R. A. Long, so well and favorably known for his princely gifts, has offered $5,000 toward a $100,000 block of permanent endowment. The next aggressive movement will be to secure this $100,000.

The school is now recognized as a prominent factor in the educational interest of the Southwest. It is competing in athletics, debate and oratory with the leading schools of Oklahoma and is winning more than its share of victories. It is drawing many students from the high schools which is giving an air of maturity to its student body. In four years this institution has won a place both in our Brotherhood at large and among the colleges of the Southwest.

O. N. ROTH,
Chancellor of O. C. U.

Ohio Brotherhood State Convention

By a Staff Contributor

The third annual Convention of the Ohio B. D. C. was held at Portsmouth, Ohio, May 23. The State Brotherhood Committee is to be commended for its excellent planning and managing of the program. There were three sessions—10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. The morning session was given to business and conference. Here is the gist of the Secretary's report:

In the early part of the year it was decided to send a letter to all the churches of the State, recommending that the fifth Sunday in any month be observed as Men's day, and that an offering be taken, one-half to go to local work and one-half to State work. * * * A card was also sent with this letter asking for certain information regarding the local Brotherhood, and whether the special days would be observed. One hundred and twenty-three cards were returned, 29 promising to observe the day. So far as we have been able to get returns, the pastors who observed the days are enthusiastically in favor of their continuance. As a means of raising money, however, they did not prove the success hoped for. However, the Brotherhood closes its year free from debt, having made its expenses proportionate to its receipts. Had more money been received much more work could have been done.

Three meetings of the State Board were held during the year.

Aside from the regular work of the committee, the President has visited many Brotherhoods throughout the State, and helped in the organization of some.

We have nine Brotherhoods affiliated with the National organization, and eighteen unaffiliated. Besides a large number of Men's Clubs, and organizations differing in character. It is the hope of the committee that the day is not far hence when all these organizations will be bound by strong ties to each other and to the National organization.

The afternoon session was in the auditorium at Millbrook Park. Here Judge J. Z. Blair of Adams County bribery fame, gave a matchless address. His array of facts were stupefying. He gave us a vision of the church's task, such as few of us had seen before. Like a prophet in the wilderness he cried, "Repent ye," and the audience trembled at his words, feeling that their tasks were worthy of the heroism of gods as well as men.

This address was followed by one from J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary B. D. C. This address was given to the articulation of the men of the church to the appalling problems cited by Judge Blair. We all came away feeling that the Brotherhood was little by little giving men a vision of a "man's job" in the building of the kingdom.

Then Tom Pinkerton, Joe Tisdall and Tom Lowe led us to the ball game. One side beat; but we refrain from praise or blame, for discussing a ball game is like discussing politics. There are rooters when you would least expect.

The day closed with 6 o'clock lunch and a short business session. Resolutions were adopted commending the work of the past year, recommending affiliation of all men's organizations with National organization, recommending the use of programs published in CHRISTIAN MEN, and a definite program of activity for the State of Ohio; also the financial support of both State and National organizations.

The spirit of the day was excellent. Earnest inquiry and serious attention pervaded the atmosphere of every session. The men of Ohio are interested in the Brotherhood fact; they are entering into the Brotherhood spirit. Some are demanding the preservation of individuality; but this demand is nowhere pushing itself into anarchy. The letters on the Eastern horizon of the Brotherhood world spell SUCCESS.

HURRAH FOR OHIO!

The Ontario Initiation Service

By Will I. Schafer, President L. B. D. C. 368

We feel here that we have made a hit and have attracted many that we would not have been able to reach otherwise, and while we have not yet had time to perfect it, we believe we have the idea and hope to see something of this nature adopted throughout the Brotherhood.

Our aim throughout is to exalt the Christ, and to this end we have as far as possible taken the characters and teachings from the New Testament.

First, it is distinctly and emphatically understood that we are to call each other by our first or given name only. We have five officers and a team consisting of fifteen men, the officers being known as King, Prince, Scribe, Publican and Prophet, in lieu of President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer and Chaplain. The fifteen men on the team are Chief Guard, Chief Conductor and Inside Guard and twelve men representing the twelve Apostles, each of the Apostles wearing diagonally across his breast the name of the Apostle he represents and in his left hand carries a banner, on which is inscribed an attribute of character which we have chosen from Gal. 5:22, namely: Love, Long-suffering, Kindness, Goodness, Faithfulness, Meekness, Self-Control, and have added for the other three Loyalty, Fraternity and Hospitality.

The operation in part is as follows: candidate after qualifying and with the proper ceremony enters and, after certain marching maneuvers, is halted before the King, who determines whether he has come voluntarily, and then instructs him to be taken before the Prince for examination. Among other things the Prince asks him if he is willing to become a member of the Brotherhood, its teachings being Love, Joy, Peace, etc. Answering in the affirmative, he is instructed to be taken before the King and the Apostles for instruction. The King, after a short talk, introduces the Apostles, each in their turn, and they each have a short talk, impressing upon the candidate the importance of cultivating in his life the attribute of character which he (the Apostle represents). For example, the position of the team is as per diagram, the King, introducing Peter, says: "This is Peter, the Apostle, who learned self-control." Peter steps out and takes the candidate by the hand and says: "My Brother, the lack of self-control brings many humiliations; you study to know your weak points and let us help you to overcome them." King then says: "This is Philip, the Apostle of Loyalty." Philip proceeds the same as Peter and says: "We desire that you be loyal to Christ and all the obligations of the Christian Brotherhood." And so on, the Apostle John coming last. He says: "You have been told of Loyalty, Fraternity, Hospitality, Self-Control, Meekness, Faithfulness, Goodness, Kindness, Long-Suffering, Peace and Joy, but all these are nothing without Love. To be an ideal Brotherhood man you must emulate the spirit of the Master, who said 'Love one another as I have loved you.'" The King then instructs him to be taken before the Prophet, who says: "Will you try to live to these principles as laid down by the King and the Apostles?" Answering in the affirmative, the Prophet instructs him to be taken before the altar, where the King will take his obligation and give him the sign of the order and pass words. At a sign of the gavel, all the members rise and join in the march around the altar, singing "Loyalty to Christ." The King then descends from the throne and takes his obligation, which consists of the Brotherhood Covenant and a further obligation with reference to fraternity and keeping the secrets of the order. A second verse of "Loyalty to Christ" is sung as all march to their seats. Recess is declared and the candidate is made generally welcome. After which we give him the second degree, which is all good, wholesome fun, nothing rough or questionable, but as jolly as the first degree is impressive.

Now, I have tried to give you a general idea of our work, and, as I have said, it is far from perfect, but I am sure it has been a great attraction here. Our Sunday-School in the last six weeks has increased from 240 to 280 and we attribute this in part to the activity among the men.

The Brotherhood at State Conventions

Oklahoma

The Oklahoma State Program Committee values in the value of men's work. This was evidenced by the fact that they had made two plans upon the program for the presentation of the Brotherhood work, one at the beginning and one at the close of the convention. Evidently the committee expected to catch the tide of going and coming.

The Secretary arrived at the convention at six o'clock in the morning on June 1st and immediately had himself ensconced in a seat until he heard his name called as being due on the program. Someone made a motion immediately that inasmuch as the Oklahoma men were intensely interested in men's work, that the address be deferred a few minutes until the crowd could be gathered in from the lobbies and yard. This interest was continued in men's work throughout the convention. At every turn the Secretary was questioned as to methods of men's work, what others were doing, and the difficulties of organization under certain conditions. The interest was of sufficient nature to warrant the attempt of a third meeting, so on the evening of June 1st, the Secretary succeeded in making arrangements in the College dining hall for the men to sit down all at one time and at one table. It wasn't a banquet, it was simply the men eating supper all at once. About seventy-five men gathered at the table and the supper was turned into a conference. No long speeches were made and many helpful suggestions were offered. F. D. Macy, of Bartlesville, told how he began his work and what his men were doing. J. H. O. Smith, of Oklahoma City, told of the possibilities of men as they were working it out in his city. Four local Brotherhoods are already organized in Oklahoma's capital and two more about to be launched. A. R. Spicer told how they started a men's work in Lawton and how the strongest business men in the city of Lawton were still talking about their first meeting and said they considered it one of the most significant late events in Lawton, and many others asked questions and offered suggestions. At the conclusion of this conference, a State Committee was appointed, consisting of A. R. Spicer, Lawton, Chairman; J. M. Miller, Vinita; F. H. Hargrove, Hobart; Ben M. Edwards, Chandler; Leroy M. Anderson, Ada, and R. J. Perky, Oklahoma City, associates.

This committee began business immediately before they had left the convention decided to hold a number of sectional state rallies during the year, in which it was hoped to bring the Brotherhood work to the attention of the majority of Oklahoma churchmen during the next year. Also they set definite stakes toward arranging such a program for another year that will give men's work a prominence in the convention that will make it worth while for laymen to attend the convention. Thus they expect to have the largest attendance of men at the next convention that they have ever had. The men on this committee are live wires but we are glad to say they are not the only live wires there are in Oklahoma.

We believe that the Oklahoma work is in the best condition at the opening of this year that it has ever been and that the men are getting thoroughly aroused and great things can be expected from them another year.

On the evening of June 2d the Secretary again made an address which closed the convention program.

Michigan

On the afternoon of June 6th, the Secretary landed in Traverse City, Mich., with tears in his eyes. Some of the Michigan men supposed that he was weeping for sheer joy. The fact was that his eyes were full of Iowa sand. Having gone to the doctor and passed through the operation of an eye bath, he was ready for business.

At six o'clock about sixty-five men gathered around the dinner table at the Friend's Church. The North as well as the South are intensely interested in men's work. An interrogation point was on every Michigan man's face. Men are no longer harshly criticising the Brotherhood Movement. Neither are they saying there is no place for the Brotherhood. From East to West and North to South the busiest, most aggressive and wisest pastors are saying "The Brotherhood is needed. It is no longer a question of whether we ought to have a Brotherhood, but that the Brotherhood is a fact and that the masculine forces of our churches are lying in wait to be used." This was the sentiment of the Michigan men, par excellence.

Adams and Arthur, of Grand Rapids; Bellingham, of Benton Harbor; Deming, of Henderson; Tomes, of Kalamazoo; Prof. Coler and Hopkins, of Ann Arbor; Canby, of Traverse City, and a great host of others whose names do not come to mind just now, are already greatly interested. The State Committee was appointed, of which O. E. Tomes, of Kalamazoo, was made Chairman; M. H. Girard, Battle Creek, and C. E. Pickett, of Petoskey, associates. These men also, like Oklahoma, are planning state sectional rallies and are familiarizing themselves with Brotherhood work from the organization standpoint, for the purpose of effecting as many Brotherhood organizations in the State of Michigan another year as possible.

Proceedings of Meetings

Proceedings of directors' meeting held on the Brotherhood train July 2d, 1911, enroute to Portland Present: R. A. Long, T. W. Grafton, J. N. Haymaker, P. C. Macfarlane, J. K. Shellenberger and E. E. Elliott.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Elimination of monthly dues. This matter was discussed at great length and on motion of Judge Haymaker, seconded by Brother Grafton, the requirement of the National Constitution relating to monthly dues of five cents per month per member was eliminated and in their stead it was ordered that Brotherhoods, Bible Classes and other men's organizations be affiliated with the General Brotherhood on the basis of an annual offering towards the support of the work.

The Brotherhood Covenant. At this juncture the following brethren were called into consultation: D. Y. Donaldson, F. L. Bowen, D. H. Shields, C. M. Sharpe and Austin Hunter. The question considered was "Is the Brotherhood Covenant a bar to the progress of the Movement and does it in any way interfere with the affiliation of our men's organizations with the General Brotherhood." It was unanimously decided that the Brotherhood Covenant was an ideal towards which any group of men could well direct their thought and attention, therefore no change in the Covenant was suggested.

Meeting adjourned five o'clock p. m.

R. A. LONG, President.

E. E. ELLIOTT, Secretary.

Proceedings of meeting of Advisory Council held at Portland, Oregon, July 6, 1911

Meeting convened at 8:00 a. m., the following persons being present: R. A. Long, President; C. M. Chilton, Vice-President; T. W. Grafton, R. A. Doan, Frank Nase, Directors; J. K. Shellenberger and E. E. Elliott, Secretaries; M. E. Baker, Ohio; A. M. Haggard, Iowa; J. L. Garvin, Washington; D. H. Shields, Illinois; Wallace Payne, Kansas. Present by request, P. C. Macfarlane.

Upon motion duly seconded the following names were placed in nomination for officers and directors of the Brotherhood to serve until the Louisville Convention, to be held in the Fall of 1912, or until their successors may be appointed.

President, R. A. Long; Vice-President, J. N. Haymaker; Recording Secretary, T. S. Ridge; Treasurer, F. J. Bannister; Directors: T. W. Grafton, R. A. Doan, C. M. Chilton, Frank Nase, W. Palmer Clarkson, D. P. Gribben, Robert G. Frank.

Note: The foregoing names were presented to the Convention at the morning session, July 6th, and unanimously elected.

DEATH OF F. J. BANNISTER'S SON

News of the death of the son of our National Treasurer was announced and, on motion of Brother Baker, a committee consisting of Brothers Macfarlane and Long were appointed to prepare suitable resolutions and forward to the bereaved family.

ELIMINATION OF DUES

After a very exhaustive discussion it was unanimously moved that the monthly dues of five cents per month per member, being the per capita contribution towards the expense of the General Brotherhood, be eliminated and in their stead per capita affiliation of Brotherhoods, Men's Bible Classes and other men's organizations identified with our churches on the basis of an annual offering towards the support of the work.

BROTHERHOOD DAY IN THE CHURCH

It was the sense of the meeting that our churches everywhere should observe the first Sunday of those months having five Sundays as Men's Day in the Church and that suitable preaching and other services be arranged to conform to the day. It was suggested also that churches, Brotherhoods or other organizations of men not affiliated with the General Brotherhood would be glad of the opportunity of making an offering towards the support of the General Brotherhood on that day.

FINANCING THE BROTHERHOOD

Brother Long reiterated his statement made to the directors for a gradual lessening of his financial contributions to the work, and it was the opinion of the Council that the Secretaries of the General Brotherhood secure financial cooperation from a large number of our men on the following basis:

General Members—$1.00 per year, including Magazine.

Advisory Members—$5.00 per year, including Magazine.

Sustaining Members—$10.00 per year, including Magazine.

Consulting Members—$50.00 per year, including Magazine.

Centurion Members—$100.00 per year, including Magazine.

Life Members—Initial payment of $500 or more.

On motion duly seconded the above memberships were concurred in. Meeting adjourned 10:00 a. m.

R. A. LONG, President.

E. E. ELLIOTT, Secretary.

Portland Pencilings

ROSE FESTIVAL This annual event had been over some days but the roses were in their sublimest beauty all during the Convention. Porches were covered, arbors groaned beneath their weight, walks and boulevards were hedged with roses, roses to the right of roses to the left of us, roses in front of roses on the dining table, roses in our room, vases of roses at every Convention session, while both men and women adorned themselves with roses at all times.

BANQUETS The Portland Convention, like many of its predecessors, was the occasion for many reunions. First of all came the Brotherhood Banquet with more than four hundred men side by side in the hall of the Woodmen of the World. Here were more roses, but the roses, beautiful as they were, did not make the Brotherhood Banquet famous. The persons who made the banquet possible were the Brotherhood men of our Portland churches, especially those of the First Church, with George Kepler as Commander in Chief. He was assisted by a number of men whose kindly names we looked upon but whose names for the present we have forgotten. They made the arrangements, decorated the hall in Brotherhood colors, prepared and served the banquet in a way that brought credit to themselves and to those who partook of it. Oh, yes, the women were there, too. Back behind the main doors was a group of ladies marshalled by one who is not unknown even among Brotherhood men, Harriet E. Moorehouse, President of the Sisterhood of the Disciples of Christ, an ideal woman's organization in the First Church at Portland.

ANNUAL AND THE SECRETARIES' BANQUET This came later in the week but was more largely attended than expected. Addresses were made by all the Secretaries present. The report of the Men's Work Committee was adopted and officers were elected for the ensuing year consisting of Geo. W. Muckley, President, and George Cahill, Secretary.

UNIVERSITY AND COLLEGE BANQUETS Every noon and evening was occupied by one or several of our universities or colleges in this fashion. We were permitted to attend the affairs of the Eugene Bible University and Eureka College and though cordially invited to attend others, we were compelled to forego those pleasures.

JOINT PRAYER MEETING FOR MEN Mr. Long led the men's prayer-meeting Sunday morning at seven o'clock and imagine his surprise at the arrival at the place of meeting at three minutes before the hour announced to find the several hundred of them, already gathered singing songs and praises to the King.

It was a touching service and one hour was altogether too short. At this meeting Mr. Long made a proposition to the Foreign Christian Missionary Society to the effect that he would pay one-half the salaries of twenty-five new missionaries for two years if the Brotherhood at large would raise the other one-half. Steps were taken at the Convention to meet Mr. Long's offer.

FOREIGN MISSIONS It is seldom one has opportunity to stay at home and visit a Foreign Mission, but it was our good pleasure to attend a reception given by the Chinese Christian Church of Portland. Here we saw the natives from babes in arms to gray heads, with many fine looking young men and women in between. Refreshments were served and Chinese coin souvenirs were distributed.

JAPANESE CHURCH Prof. Guy and Brother and Sister Erskine took us to the Japanese M. E. Church for service Sunday night. It seems the affair had been widely advertised and more than fifty Japanese men and a few women were there to greet us as we entered the door together with Mrs. Madden and the balance of the American-Japanese delegation. The Japanese are a very polite people as we very soon found from the number of bows that were made. The service was conducted entirely in Japanese and while not understanding a word it was very interesting. The minister read from the Japanese Bible beginning at the back of the book and reading from the top down in a vertical fashion, the last line first. Old familiar hymns were sung in Japanese from a Japanese hymn book. Prof. Guy, who spent twelve of the best years of his life in Japan gave a thirty-minute sermon and then Brother Erskine preached for half an hour more. About this time Brother Madden arrived from his appointment at the Colored Church and he had to talk for a while. It was along about 10:30 when the chairs were pushed back to the wall and tea and Japanese cakes were served. During the reception a young man came to Mr. Guy and said he wanted to make the good confession after hearing his sermon.

JUST BEFORE THE PLUNGE

S. M. Perkins, Davenport, Iowa, the man who named the Brotherhood; Finis Idleman, Des Moines; D. Y. Donaldson, Missouri; F. W. Burnham, Springfield, Illinois; H. J. Reynolds, Camp Point, Illinois; A. I. Zeller, Cuba, Illinois, et al.

AN ICEBERG PLUNGE

All our lives we have doted upon a plunge in the majestic Pacific and it was with a great deal of anticipated pleasure that we boarded the train for the 125 mile journey to Clatsop Beach. Even up to the time that we donned bathers' attire our joy was almost boundless, but when we boldly dashed into the white breakers along with Fred Burnham, of Springfield, Finis Idleman, of Des Moines, and D. Y. Donaldson, of Missouri, and a few others from everywhere, we suddenly found that a plunge in the Pacific on the 4th of July may be a pleasure in some localities but not in Oregon. The breakers every one were labeled with the brand of arctic icebergs from whose embrace they had lately been released, and after a roll in the hot sand and a second attempt in the icy water, we hied ourselves to the warm salt of the natatorium finished our ablutions. A. I. Zeller, of Illinois and J. R. Robertson, of Missouri, were seasick. Zeller, we understand, had to go to bed at the hotel. For ourselves we gathered some driftwood and explored the shore for a few minutes and took ourselves back to Portland satisfied.

THE TRIP HOME

Our overcoat had been a constant companion since Montana but we did not need it in Oregon, where we stopped at Harney River among the strawberries and apple trees and at Baker City where we spoke to the church folks upon the subject of the Brotherhood. In Ogden, Utah, the Western wind came from the Wasatch Mountains as from a Missouri cook stove. Salt Lake City was cool. We visited the Tabernacle and heard the grand organ play, saw the former home of Brigham Young and many of his wives, also heard what a fine place Salt Lake City is and some other things that space forbids our mentioning. We came through the Royal Gorge in broad daylight and enjoyed every minute of the journey from Salt Lake to Colorado Springs. The Garden of the Gods passed beneath our feet and the cable car drew us up to the apex of Mt. Manitou.

PIKE'S PEAK

Did you ever climb Pike's Peak on a burro in the rain? Well we did, and would advise you to confer with the weather prophet before you attempt it. When we started out it was in a cloudless sky that we reached the Summit House on Pike's Peak, but we had hardly gone half a mile until clouds lay all around from their hiding place behind Pike's Peak and began to shower us with a most pleasant rain. The great oil coats strapped behind each saddle seemed ample protection where we arrived at the "Half-way house" we were thoroughly drenched. Some of our party had to go to bed while their clothing dried. For ourselves we sat around the fire, made friends from everywhere and thought of home and loved ones. As the rain continued and promised not to abate we took the next train back to Manitou. Here we stayed under shelter for several hours, finally descending into the valley along with the raindrops.

THE BROTHERHOOD OFFICE

During our absence the rearrangement necessitated by change in secretaries has been attended to and we find upon our new desk a handsome bouquet of flowers, "Greetings and best wishes from the office force," which makes us aware that we are back.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

Every father plans for his son to be better than he is as a man, but as a father be you making it easy or hard for your boy to be so.

—O—

The vital question is not how to win the boy, but how to win to hold.

—O—

Boys should be taught how to spend money, if they would be taught how to save it. They should be able to pass a candy shop without spending the nickel in their pocket.

—O—

Do you know that every boy's room should be his castle, that you should not enter without rapping.

—O—

Show a boy that he can make something practical out of a tin can and some nails or spools and you will teach him resourcefulness.

—O—

Just remember that the average boy has as much energy as a small steam engine. There must be a safety valve somewhere. Help the boy to use that energy in the right way rather than let him go the wrong.

—O—

They said he was an amazing liar—it would have been amazing if he had been anything else under the circumstances.

—O—

BY EDWARD D. GOLLER, TOLEDO.

Seventy-five per cent of the boys in our Sunday-Schools never become Christians nor members of the church.

—O—

Boys are as easy to save as girls, if you will not treat them as girls, or men, or savages.

—O—

You can do this special work for boys as well as you can do any other religious work, if you really care for saving the boys, and give it the same attention you give other things.

—O—

Prejudice and indifference only stand in the way of seeing a million boys brought to Christ and trained in Christian service this year.

—O—

Folks who follow the line of least resistance—do the easiest things—never climb very high nor do much for the world. Most workers side track the boys because they think the problem is hard.

—O—

Over five million men in this country today are making the lodge a substitute for the church, and the church is most to blame.

Going Down the Valley

H. C. VERL WILSON

The Brotherhood Movement and the magazine CHRISTIAN MEN never had a more consistent friend than H. C. Verl Wilson, whose picture appears herewith and who laid off the armor of this life at Peru, Indiana, a few weeks ago. Verl Wilson was more than ordinarily successful in the winning of men. He made this apparent in his pastorate at Lima, Ohio, where, after organizing a men's class of four or five regular members, he worked up an enrollment of a hundred and twenty-five in a hundred days, and maintained an average attendance above fifty for years, after which he organized the class Brotherhood work.

He was pastor at Peru, Ind., but a short year. His Bible School work here was successful, but he did not rest with that. Local Brotherhood No. 331 was an early achievement and has done consistent work to the present time. A letter from the secretary E. L. Merkel, speaks in most feeling terms of the death of Pastor Wilson, and of the severe trials through which other members of the organization have passed, but writes that they are clearing the way for better work. At the time when we are mourning his loss, news comes that the Loyal Men's Class at Lima, Ohio, which is the class referred to above, still holds first place in the county in enrollment and attendance.

Brother Wilson was a man who loved his work. He was a man whom men loved, and his going away leaves a place in the ranks that is hard indeed to fill, and it is with a sense of personal loss that we chronicle his going here.

1. The Social Value of Church Extension or the Value of a Church Building to the Community.

(1) Its financial value—increases the worth of property, etc.

(2) Its civic value—makes the organization of the forces of righteousness possible.

(3) Its society value—furnishes a place for the communities' social functions to be held.

2. The Missionary Value of Church Extension or the relation of the Church Building to Mission Interests.

(1) It becomes the school-home where missionary truth is taught and a place where missionary offerings are taken.

(2) A gift to Church Extension is to plant a missionary tree (church) that will bring forth its fruit (missionary offerings) in its season and its leaf (its local influence) also doth not wither.

3. The Domestic Value of Church Extension or the Spiritual Value of the Church Home to the Family (Congregation) in the Household of Faith.

(1) Our first birth—physical—occurring most always in parents' homes.

(2) Our second birth—spiritual—occurring most always in the church.

(3) A further comparison of the homes and an elaboration of the home idea of the church building.

A Supposition: Brother A, an elder of the Church of Christ in the town of B, in settling up all his earthly accounts, preparatory to his departure for the home above, found that he had $5,000.00 to invest in the cause of Christ. Brother A throughout life believed thoroughly in and helped to maintain all the missionary, benevolent and educational interests of the church; but when he came to make out his last will and testament the method of investing this $5,000.00 became very perplexing. Brother A had a sincere desire to invest his last $5,000.00 where it would be of greatest use to all the interests of the kingdom of God for the greatest number of years to come. He spent much time and earnest thought on the matter, taking up one by one each of the interests of the Church of Christ as a possible field to invest the entire amount. He also considered distribution of it among all of the interests, but he finally decided that he would come the nearest to his purpose by establishing a Name Loan Fund in the Board of Church Extension.

Upon the above supposition debate the following questions:

Resolved, That the best way to invest $5,000.00 in the interests of the Kingdom of God is by establishing a Name Loan Fund with the Board of Church Extension.

Helps: "A History of Church Extension," by Geo. W. Muckley; "A Name Fund in Church Extension," "Loyalty to the Loyal," Chas. S. Medbury; "Business in Christianity and Christianity in Business," by A. B. Phillips. See annual report in December, 1910, Business in Christianity, and growth of the F. M. Drake Fund.

These helps will be furnished by the Board of Church Extension on application to G. W. Muckley, 603 New England Building, Kansas City, Missouri.

Resolution.
Resolved, That the Missionary Committee be instructed to set on foot plans immediately whereby every member of our congregation may be interested in Church extension to the extent of making an offering on the First Lord's Day in September.

Resolution.
Resolution:—The hymns should be missionary and aggressive in spirit. Put life to your music. It pays. Your men enjoy wide-awake meetings as well as you. Notify the one who is to lead in prayer a few days in advance so that he may prepare. It takes concentration as well as consecration to pray effectually. Let him who reads the Scripture be thoroughly familiar with the portion to be read. Insist that he choose it in harmony with the thought of the program.

Business.

From Roll Call to receiving of members. Make your business snappy. Never allow it to lag. Insist on written reports, so that time is not used in useless floundering. In receiving of members have them stand and repeat after you the covenant. Then let someone lead in a short prayer of consecration.

Just a word of general introduction from the President and you are ready for Recess.

Recess and Social.

This is the logical time to meet your new member. Instead of extending the "right hand of fellowship" formally, let everyone welcome him (or them) informally. Social Committee see that introductions are general; then if lunch has been prepared, serve it. While the general good feeling is flowing freely, it is a good time to begin your program.

Cultural.

Try to have inspiring music in order to unify your men's minds. Spiritless music has killed many a program of good possibilities.

In the first address is room for the exposition of your own experience. Whether in city or country your residence property is of more value if it is within reach of churches. Here is room for a good story.

1. The churchless community.
2. The organization in a rented hall.
3. The church in its own home.

Furthermore, one does not need to read extensively but rather to draw on his own vision and experience, following the suggestions of Brother Booth in order to make an interesting and instructive talk. Call your men's attention to your own church's experience and you have material for a splendid talk.

Let him who makes the second address impress thoroughly the thought of Brother Booth. Drive home this question: Is Our Church a School of Church Extension? Has Our Congregation Seriously Looked Into the Merits of this Work We Are Considering Tonight?

The third address is self-illuminating. This is a splendidly wrought out program. Our whole Brotherhood is indebted to Brother Booth for his careful planning. We will make good by making full use of it.

In order to prepare fully for the debate, send to G. W. Muckley, as mentioned in program, for literature on the "Named Loan Fund." It will cost you a postal card only and the energy to write your request. To the negative we might suggest Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Hospital, Libraries, etc., in which $5,000 might be invested. This promises a lively debate.

I.—Devotional.

He who reads the Scriptures suggested should study these passages as well as their cross references. One cannot do so without feeling the attitude of Jesus to social movement. In fact the success of the church and the building the kingdom are but social movements. The constant desire for better things is the secret of the kingdom's success. The ever-present opposition of conservatism is the secret of constant conquest. The necessary for moral forces. The proper reading of the Scripture will awaken the minds of the men.

The one who leads in prayer can scarcely do so until he, too, has felt the truth in the Scripture lesson.

II.—Business

The reports of your committees will afford a touchstone as to whether your congregation is alive to the social movements of the age. If it is not, now is the time to begin.

Let the appeal for new members be an appeal to the heroic in men for their association in helpful service. To reach and enlist busy men the appeal must be more than simply to "join."

III.—Recess and Social.

Let the conversation be directed to the thought of the Scriptures read and the minds of the men will be ready and anticipatory to the program.

IV.—Cultural.

For the first address one ought to read Rauschenbusch's "Christianity and the Social Crisis." It can be found in almost any public library. The chapter "The Present Crisis" will be found charged with the material that is wanted.

For the second address the "American Year Book," 1910, will be found exceedingly helpful. It is a mine of facts. Also "The World Almanac," 1910, is rich.

For the third address the magazine "Survey" is exceptionally good, especially the numbers published in April, May, and June, 1911.

The amusement question presents a serious problem. Puritanism seems today inadequate. There is an inherent demand for amusement in the human heart. Shall our amusements be commercialized and brutalized or shall they be spiritualized and regenerated? If the latter, then the church must know the facts and supply the power to do it.

V.—Open Discussion.

After all our attitude is dependent upon a clear knowledge and a loving heart. The church has been "judge" a long time. Has she thus succeeded? If not, then why not try "brothering." Not Jesus' method. Judge or brother—which?

LESSON 2—AUGUST 13.

“JEHOIAKIM BURNS THE PROPHET’S BOOK.”
—JER. 36.

P. H. WELSHIMER

Printed Text, Verses 20-32.

20 And they went in to the king into the court; but they had laid up the roll in the chamber of Elishama the scribe; and they told all the words in the ears of the king. 21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll; and he took it out of the chamber of Elishama the scribe. And Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes that stood beside the king. Now the king was sitting in the winter-house in the ninth month: and there was a fire in the brazier burning before him. 23 And it came to pass, when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, that the king cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was in the brazier, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was in the brazier. And they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king nor any of his servants that heard all these words. 25 Moreover Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll; but he would not hear them. 26 And the king commanded Ebrahmeel the king’s son, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Adbeel, to take Baruch the scribe and Jeremiah the prophet; but Jehovah hid them. 27 Then the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah, after that the king had burned the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying, 28 Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burned. 29 And concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah thou shalt say, Thus saith Jehovah: Thou hast burned this roll, saying, Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast? 30 Therefore thus saith Jehovah concerning Jehoiakim king of Judah: He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost. 31 And I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity; and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah all the evil that I have pronounced against them, but they hearkened not. 32 Then took Jeremiah another roll, and gave it to Baruch the scribe, the son of Neriah, who wrote therein from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the book which Jehoiakim king of Judah had burned in the fire, and there were added besides unto them many like words.

Time. Jeremiah was prophet from 626 B. C. to the destruction of Jerusalem, 586 B. C. Jehoiakim reigned eleven years, from 608 to 597 B. C.

Place. Jerusalem, the temple courts and the king’s palace.

Golden Text. “The word of our God shall stand forever.”—Isa. 40:8.

Introduction. In the third year of Jehoiakim, Nebuchadnezzar had been besieging Jerusalem. He made Jehoiakim his vassal and carried away a few prisoners. Among the number was Daniel and his companions.—Daniel 1:1, 2. At this time the father of Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, died. Nebuchadnezzar left Jerusalem to secure the throne of the Babylonish empire. Jehoiakim now began a revolt, which was followed by aids by the Chaldeans. A fast was proclaimed by the people as a means of protecting them from the impending dangers. Jeremiah had been prophesying for twenty years, but the people had given no heed to his teaching. His warning of repentance had fallen on deaf ears. The Lord now commanded the prophet to write the substance of his prophecies. Baruch was selected as his secretary, and the prophecies were placed on parchment. In the month of December, the fifth year of Jehoiakim’s reign, when a public fast had been proclaimed and the people were alive to their danger, Jehoiakim sent Baruch to the temple to read the book to the crowd assembled. But few people could read; the copies of the law were few, hence this was the only way of getting the knowledge to the multitudes. The son of Gemariah heard the reading, and went where the leaders were assembled in council and told them all he had heard. Baruch was sent for, and unrolling the scroll, he read to the council. The message so affected this council that they determined to have it read to the king. With this our lesson begins today.

Explanatory. 20—And they went in to the king, into the court. Baruch and Jeremiah were hid, then the princes having also hid the roll, told what they had heard to the king. 21—And Jehudi read it. The king was interested and sent Jehudi to bring the roll, which he did, and read it, not only to the king but to all the princes. 22—In the winter house. It was December; the king was sitting by the brazier. 23—The king cut it with a pen knife. When Jehudi would read three or four leaves the king cut them with his knife and threw them on the fire. 24—They were not afraid. The king and the servants had no fear. While displeased with the statements of the prophecy, they did not seem to fear the Lord in destroying His word. 25—Made intercession. There were some who had a conscience. These believed in the report and tried to prevent the king from destroying the scroll. 26—The king commanded. He decided to have Jeremiah and Baruch taken in charge, but Jehovah hid them. 27-28—Then the word of Jehovah came to Jeremiah. You cannot defeat God. You may destroy the parchment, but the Power that gave the first can give the second; hence Jeremiah is told to write again. This time he will add to what was written in the first. 29-30—Thou shalt say to Jehoiakim. Everything written in the prophecies concerning the coming of the king of Babylon would come true. The destiny of Jehoiakim was here predicted. 31—And I will punish. All the evil prophecies were to be brought upon Jehoiakim and the people of Judah. This was because they would not repent. 32—Then he took Jeremiah another roll. The first destroyed, Jeremiah sits down to dictate another to Baruch, and he writes all the words that were contained in the first and added many words.

Comments on the Lesson

Repentance would have saved the king. When a man knows the truth and follows it, it is not, or has the chance to know it and is too stubborn to accept it and follow it, it is not difficult to foretell his destiny. Jehoiakim thought by destroying the words of the prophet he would destroy their force. He forgot that the God who gave those thoughts to the prophet was the Living God and that His judgments were altogether righteous and that His power was not allayed by destroying some parchment on which His word was recorded. His act reveals the character of the man. It shows Jehoiakim to have been hot-headed, rash, unthinking, a man easily provoked; but Jehoiakim is not the only man who has wielded the pen knife recklessly. There is many a man today just as foolish, who, in reading the Scripture, finds something which does not suit him, and by refusing to preach it and practice it, he practically cuts it out. There are a good many people who would cut out repentance; others would like to cut out baptism. Some would draw a knife through missions; others through service. There are some who would cut out the Lord's Supper. And after each one has used his knife, what kind of a Bible would we have left?

Questions for Class Use

Who was Jeremiah? When did he live and where? What was the nature of his prophecy? Who was Baruch. Who was Jehoiakim? Why did Jehovah tell Jeremiah to write his prophecy? What was the occasion on which Baruch read it? What effect did the reading have on the people? Why did Jehoiakim destroy the prophecy? Did the destruction of the manuscript thwart the power of Jehovah? Give instances in which men recklessly attempt to destroy the power of the Word today.

LESSON 3—AUGUST 20.

“JEREMIAH CAST INTO PRISON.”—JER. 37.

Printed verses, 4-21.

4 Now Jeremiah came in and went out among the people; for they had not put him into prison. 5 And Pharaoh's army was come forth out of Egypt; and when the Chaldeans that were besieging Jerusalem heard tidings of them, they brake up from Jerusalem.

6 Then came the word of Jehovah unto the prophet Jeremiah, saying, 7 Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, Thus shall ye say to the king of Judah that sent you unto me to inquire of me: Behold, Pharaoh's army, which is come forth to help you, shall return to Egypt into their own land. 8 And the Chaldeans shall come again, and fight against this city; and they shall take it, and burn it with fire. 9 Thus saith Jehovah, Deceive not yourselves, saying, The Chaldeans shall surely depart from us; for they shall not depart. 10 For though ye had smitten the whole army of the Chaldeans that fight against you, and there remained but wounded men among them, yet would they rise up every man in his tent, and burn this city with fire.

11 And it came to pass that, when the army of the Chaldeans was broken up from Jerusalem for fear of Pharaoh's army, 12 then Jeremiah went forth out of Jerusalem to go into the land of Benjamin to receive his portion there, in the midst of the people. 13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, the captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he laid hold on Jeremiah the prophet, saying, Thou art falling away to the Chaldeans. 14 Then said Jeremiah, It is false; I am not falling away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him; and Irijah laid hold on Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes. 15 And the princes were wrath with Jeremiah and smote him, and put him in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe; for they had made that the prison.

16 When Jeremiah was come into the dungeon-house, and into the cells, and Jeremiah had remained there many days; 17 then Zedekiah the king sent, and fetched him; and the king asked him secretly in his house, and said, Is there any word from Jehovah? And Jeremiah said, There is. He said also, Thou shalt be delivered into the hands of the king of Babylon. 18 Moreover Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, Wherein have I sinned against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison? 19 Where now are your prophets that prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land? 20 And now hear, I pray thee, O my lord the king: let my supplication, I pray thee, be presented before thee, that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest I die there. 21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded, and they committed Jeremiah into the court of the guard; and they gave him daily a loaf of bread out of the bakers' street, until all the bread in the city was spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the guard.

Introduction. After the burning of Jeremiah's prophecies, Jehoiakim reigned six years. He was succeeded by Jehoiachin, his son, a youth who was a weakling and whose reign lasted but three months. The storm clouds had been gathering, and now they broke with vengeance while this boy was on the throne. The Chaldean army now closed about Jerusalem and Jehoiachin quickly surrendered. How true the prophecy, Jer. 36:30: "He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David." Jehoiachin was held in Babylon a prisoner thirty-seven years and then released.—2 Kings 25:27-30. In Ezekiel 1:1-2 we learn Ezekiel was carried prisoner with him. Ten thousand people were carried to Babylon. The king's wives and officers were among the number. Also vessels of gold and silver from the temple and palaces.—2 Kings 24:12-16. Zedekiah, the brother of Jehoiakim, was placed on the throne by Nebuchadnezzar. He was the last king of Judah and reigned eleven years. The nation plunged into sin more deeply under his reign. The leading men had been carried into captivity, and those who were left now filled offices and purchased the properties of the ones who were carried away at almost their own price. Thus they were filled with pride, became conceited and vain. Jeremiah was still pouring forth his prophecies, and Ezekiel, still a captive on the river Chebar, was sending back messages to the people of Judah.—Ezek. 1:1-3; 3:1.

Explanatory. 4—Now Jeremiah came in and went out. Jeremiah had been prophesying forty years. He still had his liberty. 5—Then Pharaoh's army. Zedekiah had ignored the advice of Jeremiah and had rebelled against the Babylonish empire.—2 Chron. 36:13. He had refused God's help. In verse three we see that Zedekiah sent for Jeremiah and asked him to pray to the Lord for him. Nebuchadnezzar had for a long time besieged Jerusalem. Famine and pestilence were doing their worst in the city and now when Pharaoh's army comes forth from Egypt there is temporary relief as the Chaldean army withdraws to meet the Egyptian forces. 6-8—Thus saith the Lord. Jehovah sent Jeremiah with a statement to the king, saying that Pharaoh's army would return home and the Chaldeans would come again and burn the city with fire. 9—Deceive not yourselves. They were not to be deceived in thinking the Chaldeans would never return. 10—Though all the army should be wounded they would rise sufficiently to burn the city. 11-12—Then Jeremiah. During the brief time the Chaldeans were fighting the Egyptians, Jeremiah went to receive his portion in the land of Benjamin. His home was at Anathoth, three or four miles north of the city. He knew the Chaldeans would return; hence he was simply getting that which belonged to him that might be used as a means of subsistence during the attack, which would soon come. In the midst of the people. The people had suffered; there was now a frantic rush from the city walls to the country. 13—When he was in the gate of Benjamin. The north part of the city through which one would pass in going to the country of Benjamin. Here a sentinel laid hold of Jeremiah and accused him of going out to join the Chaldeans. He had prophesied the Chaldeans would destroy the city, and now they accuse him of being in league with them. 14—Then said Jeremiah. He was positive in his utterances. The accusation was false, but he could not convince the sentinel, hence he was taken to the prince. 15—Were wroth with Jeremiah. The princes had long been angry with him. He had not been in sympathy with them. He had called them rotten figs.—Jer. 24. 16—Into a dungeon. They took Jeremiah to the house of Jonathan, a scribe. This was used as a prison. Under this building was a subterranean cistern. Jerusalem had many such. Here Jeremiah was placed. In the next chapter you can form an idea as to the horribleness of this dungeon when we learn that they let Jeremiah down with cords. This was a dungeon of mire, and when they pulled him out it was necessary to let down to him old, rotten rags that he might place them under his arms where the cords would cut the flesh. 17—Zedekiah, the king, sent. After many days the king sent for Jeremiah, and secretly, that none might know about it, in his own house, said, "Is there any word from the Lord?" Jeremiah answered, "There is," and told him he should be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. 18-20—Jeremiah had a face-to-face and a heart-to-heart talk with the king and asked wherein he had offended and why he had received such treatment? He asked to show him the prophets who had promised safety. Then Jeremiah asked to be freed from the dungeon, lest he die there. 21—Then the king commanded. Jeremiah was now placed in a court of the prison and was daily fed bread of the bakers' street until all the bread was exhausted.

Comments on the Lesson

Jeremiah is one of the most conspicuous and notable characters among all the prophets. He has been called the weeping prophet. By this we must not take it that he was chicken-hearted. He was one of the most courageous and most positive of the prophets. He not only knew some things, but he knew that he knew them. He believed what he believed. He was sure of himself. He never wavered. He never doubted God. Never for a moment was there any thought in his mind that his prophecies would not be fulfilled, for he knew Jehovah, who spake to him. No prophet was more dramatic than Jeremiah. One time he broke an earthen bottle before the people and cried, "Thus will the Lord break this people and this city." Even the prison cell or dungeon, with all of its mire, vermin, hunger and suffering could not weaken him. To the very last he stood firm.

Questions on the Lesson

Who was Jeremiah? How long did he prophesy. Where did he live? Name the king that reigned during his time. Who succeeded Jehoiakim? Who placed Zedekiah on the throne? What kind of people were left in Jerusalem when the 10,000 were carried away? Why did Nebuchadnezzar withdraw from Jerusalem? What did the people do during this brief time, while the Assyrian army was fighting the Egyptians? Why was Jeremiah arrested? Where was he imprisoned? Why did Zedekiah send for him? Where was he later imprisoned?

LESSON 4—AUGUST 27.

"JUDAH CARRIED CAPTIVE TO BABYLON."—JER. 39.

Printed text, verses 1-10.

And it came to pass when Jerusalem was taken 1 (in the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and besieged it; 2 in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, a breach was made in the city), 3 that all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, to-wit Nergalsharezer, Samgarnebo, Sarsechim, Rabsaris, Nergalsharezer, Rabmag, with all the rest of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 And it came to pass that, when Zedekiah the king of Judah and all the men of war saw them, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, through the gate betwixt the two walls; and he went out toward the Arabah. 5 But the army of the Chaldeans pursued after them, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon to Riblah in the land of Hamath; and he gave judgment upon him. 6 Then the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah. 7 Moreover he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him in fetters, to carry him to Babylon. 8 And the Chaldeans burned the king's house, and the houses of the people with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem. 9 Then Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard carried away captive into Babylon the residue of the people that remained in the city, the deserters also that fell away to him, and the residue of the people that remained. 10 But Nebuzaradan the captain of the guard left of the poor of the people that had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields at the same time.

Golden Text. "Be sure your sin will find you out."—Num. 32:23.

Introduction Read also 2 Kings 25; 2 Chron. 36; Jer. 52; Lam. 4; Ezek. 12:10-13; Jer. 33:3-5. We have been studying the successes and failures of Judah. Every king who came to the throne had a chance to succeed if he worked according to God's plans. For forty years Jeremiah has been warning the people and trying to check them in their disobedient career. At the time of this lesson the prophet is in prison and Ezekiel had been carried into captivity. Zedekiah was anxious and had sent for the prophet Jeremiah that a secret consultation might be held.

Explanatory. 1—Came Nebuchadnezzar. He was king of Babylon and made it notable in his forty-three years' reign. He began a siege against Jerusalem in the eighteenth year of his reign. The siege continued for one and a half years, from December, 588, to July, 586, B.C. The walls of Jerusalem were well built. The city was strongly fortified. It required a great army and all the implements of war of that day to successfully besiege it. The city then had a population of probably some 20,000 people. For that number of people to spend a year and a half within the walls was a great privation. The fourth chapter of Lamentations gives an accurate picture of the conditions. The greatest hope on the part of Nebuchadnezzar lay in starving the people to submission. A great army about the walls prevented food from being carried to the besieged. 2-3—In the eleventh year. A breach was made in the walls of the city. All the princes. The princes came in and sat in the middle gate. These were the generals and high officers. 4—Then they fled. Zedekiah and all the men of war fled by night, passing out through the king's garden, through the gate which led to the ruins. It was the road that went from Olivet to Bethany and on to Jericho. 5—The Chaldean army pursued after them. To be sure, they would not permit their prize to escape in this manner. They caught Zedekiah, the king, and took him over to Nebuchadnezzar, who was then at Riblah, and who passed judgment on him. Riblah was situated upon the Orontes, twenty miles north of Damascus. It was about two hundred miles northeast of Jerusalem. Zedekiah had been placed upon the throne by the king of Babylon, who had now rebelled against him. He had taken the oath of allegiance, but had been traitorous to the one who had saved him. 6—Slew the sons of Zedekiah. What a painful sight! The last thing the king's eyes beheld was the assassination of his sons and all his nobles. There were his advisers, his friends and his own boys dying before his eyes. 7—He put out Zedekiah's eyes. Then the king's eyes were blinded, and bound in chains he was carried to Babylon. This was prophesied by Ezek. 12:10-13 that Zedekiah should be left in Babylon a captive and live there and die there and yet never see the city. How true this prophetic utterance. 8—And the Chaldeans burned the king's house. Not being content with carrying the people captive and capturing the king and slaying the nobles, the Chaldeans returned and burned the king's house, the houses of the people and broke down the walls of Jerusalem. 2 Chron. 36:19 we learn they burned the house of God. 9—Then Nebuzaradan, the captain of the guard, carried away captive. The remnant of the people that remained in the city were carried captive by this captain to Babylon. In the three campaigns, 14,600 persons had been carried away; 832 were carried away after the city was destroyed. 10—Left the poor of the people. This captain of the guard left the poorest of the people in the land. They were permitted to cultivate the fields and the vineyards. The walls of the city were destroyed, the chief buildings were burned, and the vessels of brass, the gold and the silver and all the utensils of the temple were carried away. Nebuchadnezzar was not forgetful of Jeremiah and ordered him to be well cared for. He was taken out of the court of the guard and taken to dwell among the people.

Comments on the Lesson

This lesson teaches us many things, but it is worth while if it only taught us this one thing—that it pays to do right. While the king sat on his throne wearing his purple and living sumptuously, Jeremiah was down in a dungeon. Now Zedekiah sits in Babylon, blind, his children are dead, his nobles are slain, his throne has fallen, his palaces are in ruins, his city destroyed, the walls are down, his kingdom gone, and he, with a horrible group of memories, sits in darkness looking at the pictures of the past. To him there is no future. The present is as black as midnight, and the past is but a collection of mistakes; where is Jeremiah? The man who for forty years spake the word of God, but who was laughed at, derided, treated with scorn and contempt, hidden from an angry king, imprisoned in a dungeon—where is he? He has been taken from the prison cell; kindly has the treatment been to him. He now dwells among the people. Jeremiah always did right, and it always pays. "Be sure your sins will find you out." They always do. How dearly Zedekiah paid for his folly. Through all the days and weeks and months he spent within the walls of his own city he beheld the people dying on every hand of privation, the cries of little children filling the air begging for bread was pitiful, and in the night time, with his men, as he flees from the city out across the hills and through the plains, what misery to think that for the last time he is leaving the city. Zedekiah knew the right course to pursue, but refused to pursue it. "The way of the transgressor is hard." It takes more than strong walls and an army of men to make a strong defense. "God and one man are stronger than all the world beside." May each one look upon the life of Zedekiah today and learn his evil example. May all who have sinned against God humbly ask for pardon and bring their wills into submission to His will, and the blessing which God confers upon the obedient, penitent believer will be his.

Questions for Class Use

Who was king during the fall of Judah? How long did he reign? When did Judah fall? What army besieged it? How long did the siege last? Where was Jeremiah at this time? Where was Ezekiel? In the various sieges how many people were carried captive? What were the people who remained in the land given to do? What happened to Zedekiah? How were his sons treated? What became of Jeremiah? What prophecy did Ezekiel make concerning Zedekiah and Babylon? Name three great lessons which this lesson teaches.

LESSON 1—SEPTEMBER 3.

REVIEW.

Golden Text. "Depart from evil and do good; seek peace and pursue it."—Psa. 34:14.

Introduction. This quarter deals entirely with the kingdom of Judah. Our first lesson was "Isaiah's prophecy concerning Sennacherib." It was given somewhere about 700 B. C., at the close of Hezekiah's reign. Our last lesson was, "Judah carried captive to Babylon," 586 B. C., making a stretch of about 114 years. During this period we have studied the lives of some of the grandest and meanest of men. The great characters which stand out as mountain peaks are Isaiah, Jeremiah and Josiah.

Lesson Subjects

- I.—"Isaiah's prophecy concerning Sennacherib."—Isa. 37:14-38.
- II.—"The suffering servant of Jehovah."—Isa. 52:13; 53:12.
- III.—"Manasseh's wickedness and penitence."—2 Chron. 33:1-20.
- IV.—"Josiah's devotion to God."—2 Chron. 34:1-13.
- V.—"The finding of the book of the law."—2 Chron. 34:14-33.
- VI.—"Jeremiah tried and acquitted."—Jer. 26.
- VII.—"Jehoiakim burns the prophet's book."—Jer. 36.
- VIII.—"Jeremiah cast into prison."—Jer. 37.
- IX.—"Judah carried captive to Babylon."—Jer. 39.

Questions for Review

Let the class be divided into two groups and use these questions in the group drills. It will be interesting to see which group can stand up the longest.

I.—In what kingdom did the lessons of the quarter occur? With which are these lessons more generally concerned—the country or the city? Where was the kingdom of Israel at this time? Who was Isaiah? Who was Sennacherib? Who was Hezekiah? What kind of a king was Hezekiah? What can you say of Hezekiah's belief in prayer? How did the Lord answer Hezekiah's prayer?

II.—Who is Isaiah's suffering servant of Jehovah? What did Isaiah prophesy concerning the exaltation of Jesus, his visage and form? What is meant by sprinkling many nations? What prophecy was made concerning Jesus' death? What of its fulfillment? Why did it please the Lord to bruise him? Why was Jesus rejected of men?

III.—Who was Manasseh? Who was his father? How old was Manasseh when he began to reign? What was the chief evil he committed? Did he ever repent? What do you know of his latter days?

IV.—Who was Josiah? How old was he when he began to reign? How long did he reign? In whose ways did he walk? What great reforms did he inaugurate?

V.—Where had the book of the law been lost? Why were there not many copies at that time? Who found the book? What was the occasion of finding it? What effect did the finding of it have upon the king and the people? How can we lose the book, today?

VI.—Who was Jeremiah? How long did he prophesy? What was the burden of his prophecy? What is he sometimes called? Was he a strong or a weak man? Where was he imprisoned? With what was he charged when placed in prison? What became of him when Jerusalem fell?

VII.—For what was Jehoiakim noted? What prophet wrote during his reign? Who read the law to him? How did he treat the word of the law?

VIII.—Where was Jeremiah cast into prison? Why? How did he get out of the dungeon? What effect did his interview have upon the king, Zedekiah?

IX.—When was Judah carried captive to Babylon? Who was the king of Judah? Who was king of Babylon? How long did the siege last? Tell something of the conditions within the walls of Jerusalem during the siege? In what direction did Zedekiah and his men flee when leaving the city? What became of Zedekiah's sons and his princes? How was Zedekiah treated? What has been his attitude toward Jehovah? What became of the few people that were left at Jerusalem?

Subjects to be Discussed in Connection with this Lesson

Let talks be given on the character and life of Isaiah and Jeremiah, the folly of Jehoiakim, the devotion of Josiah; "Be sure your sins will find you out." Let this be illustrated by lessons drawn from the quarter's study. Also, "The way of the transgressor is hard," can be given similar treatment.

Volume 6 KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, SEPTEMBER, 1911

Number 3

PLAIN TALKS

September is the month in which our churches generally take the offering for Church Extension, when contributions are made for the building of church houses upon the frontier. But there is also another phase of Church Extension work that has grown up with the system and that is the establishment of representative Church Buildings in our great cities; for instance, there is the First Church in San Francisco, which was destroyed by the earthquake in 1906; the Board of Church Extension made a loan of $12,500 to replace this Church in a community made up of representative citizens of the Golden Gate Metropolis. Twelve Thousand Five Hundred Dollars is a small amount when compared with the millions that are being poured into Trinity Church in New York City, for instance, or some of the other immense piles of stone and mortar that our own and other religious bodies are building or have already constructed. But this amount of money, small as it may seem, did the business in San Francisco. Now by special arrangement this money will not be returned for at least five years; in fact, none of it will be returned until the end of the fifth year; from then on until the close of the tenth year the First Church in San Francisco has agreed to return one-fifth of the principal with interest each year.

JACKSON AVENUE,
KANSAS CITY

In Kansas City the Jackson Avenue Congregation lost their building by fire; they received some insurance money which they deposited in the bank preparatory to putting up another modest building; the bank failed, and when its affairs were finally wound up the Jackson Avenue congregation received the magnificent sum of Forty Cents on the Dollar. With this amount they went to work upon a $50,000 building; by stint of energy the Congregation raised the first year an amount of money which together with the salvage from the bank failure made $35,000; they needed $15,000 more, which they could not obtain from local banks. The Church Extension Board loaned them $15,000, which, by the way, was the second large loan granted by the Board of Church Extension up to that time, the first being a $15,000 loan to help erect the 169th Street Church in New York City. This was three years ago; today the debt is considerably reduced, being but $9,000, instead of $15,000; the balance will be paid at the rate of $3,000 per year, and this is not an isolated case, excepting as to amount of the loan. A five hundred dollar loan often does as much good in the small communities as a fifteen thousand dollar loan in a city, and is handled in very much the same way. It provides a Church home for the people; they take a pride in worshiping in it and in paying for it, just as a young householder does in the purchase and maintenance of a house to live in.

THE CASE OF

HOW BROTHER-HOODS MAY HELP

Among the one hundred and forty Brotherhoods during the past year some of them have already found out all about Church Extension; others of our Men's Organizations have not followed the different programs which are outlined each month in CHRISTIAN MEN and about all they know regarding Church Extension is what they may have read or heard occasionally from the voice of their Pastor. To all of our Men's Organizations, Men's Bible Classes, and, in fact, to every man who reads CHRISTIAN MEN, it is suggested that if you have never had a meeting with your men where the subject of Church Extension was under investigation and discussion, such a meeting will abundantly repay for all of the effort you can put into it, and the returns in disseminated information will be far greater than any similar returns upon almost any other great subject. Especially is this true just at the present time, when the offering for Church Extension is to be taken in every one of our Churches; and even in those churches which have the budget plan or the weekly offering for Missions and Benevolences, you cannot know so much about this very vital subject. We would not urge the observance of Church Extension program one whit more than we would urge other programs, but we do urge the consideration of the subject of Church Extension just at this time. Brethren, don't neglect this opportunity. See the August number of CHRISTIAN MEN, page 40, for an up to date Church Extension program;—then read the articles by Geo. W. Muckley and John L. Booth in this issue.

The Church and Social Service

The Commission on the Church and Social Service, which includes such men as Prof. Walter Rauschenbusch, Jacob Riis, Prof. Graham Taylor, Shailer Mathews, Charles Stelzle and others of like name and note, urge the observance of Labor Sunday preceding the first Monday in September. The Commission believes that Labor Sunday affords an appropriate opportunity for the ministers and churches to give recognition in an impressive way to the cause of labor and recommend the serious and increasing service of this day. It is recommended that each minister preach to his own people on the morning of Labor Sunday with reference to the Social Problem of the Church, especially as it has to do with the life of working people. The regular morning service should be used to impress the congregation with the seriousness of business before the church, of meeting and of solving by the Gospel, the great and pressing questions of the social order. It is also urged that ministers and churches in the various cities enter heartily into the observance of Labor Sunday by holding a mass meeting on Sunday night in one of the churches or in such other place as may seem best. Any pastor who has not made a public presentation of the situation of the Christian Church to the Industrial situation ought to make this a statement for such an occasion. Both employers and employees should be invited to the services. Brotherhoods, Men's Bible Classes and other men's organizations can be utilized advantageously in this regard and especially church members who are also member of labor unions. Attention is called to the program for Local Brotherhoods on page 40 of CHRISTIAN MEN for August, where in this most vital subject is treated. Complete information may be had by addressing the Secretary of the Commission, Mr. Charles S. MacFarland, 1611 Clarendon Bldg., New York. An attractive program for use in the local church is furnished at $1.00 per hundred. The program is complete, the responsive readings and hymns being printed in full and it constitutes a much more effective order of service than could be gotten up for considerable local expense. The program in its attractive cover illustration, also serves as a souvenir of the service.

The Cover Picture

This month we show upon the cover page the features of a negro—Jacob Kenoly. We have no apology to make for departing from conventional custom and giving place not only to his picture upon the cover, but in honoring his work as a Captain of Industry on the printed page. C. C. Smith, who has grown gray in the work among the negroes under the auspices of our C. W. B. M., writes of Jacob Kenoly from the depths of his heart. Bro. Smith is a deep student of human nature; he analyses the negroes who are chosen to lead in the work at Edwards, Mississippi, and knows them through and through. Many of them would make our white brethren blush when devotion to their fellowmen is measured against our own. The story of Jacob Kenoly is full of human interest and harrowing experience. Whether or not another of his own race is raised up to take his place, we anticipate the work inaugurated by Jacob Kenoly has already attained such momentum that it is impossible to any more than temporarily retard its progress. Jacob Kenoly, though a negro, was still a man, and underneath his black skin there beat a heart that was filled with the spirit of Brotherhood—devotion to his fellowmen. A hero has fallen. Who will take his place?

Our Finances

Let us have a word together about the support of this Brotherhood movement. We are wondering whether the men of the United States are fully appreciating the attempt that one of our great men is undertaking in behalf of the men of the Christian Church. Have you ever thought it through that Brother R. A. Long is one of the leading business men of the United States? As such he necessarily looks at everything that he does from the business man's viewpoint, which is but another way of saying that if he felt that this Brotherhood movement was not in some measure or other a good paying proposition he would not continue to pour his money into it as he has. The fact is, Brother Long believes in the tremendous possibilities latent within the men of the Christian Church. He feels that if he can be an instrument in the hands of God in the arousing of these possibilities, he shall have done a master work for the Kingdom. He does not know that we are writing thus, and much less desires it.

BROTHERHOOD
OUR BROTHERHOOD

But he also feels that in order to do this work he must have the support and fellowship of the men whom he would arouse. This is why the earnest appeal is made to the rank and file of the churchmen to make their investments in Brotherhood work along with Brother Long. This Brotherhood will never succeed as it is destined to succeed until it becomes our work. It is better for the Brotherhood to have thirty thousand men giving one dollar each than to have one man give thirty thousand dollars. But we have not been able to find the thirty thousand, but believing that a goodly number would eventually be found, who would share the responsibility and fellowship with him, Brother Long has continued his loyal and munificent support. So we have been making continuous appeals to men to give in smaller sums, ranging from $500 down to $10, in order that the fellowship of support might be enlarged and that this man of God who is carrying such tremendous loads in the interests of the Kingdom, may not feel entirely alone in this great work. He wants your fellowship in this work as sincerely and as seriously as he wants you to join with him financially. There is no other way to express your fellowship except by arousing your men on the local field and joining Brother Long in the support of this great work.

DROP A LINE TO THE BROTHERHOOD OFFICE SAYING THAT YOU ARE GOING TO BECOME A LIFE MEMBER OR A CONSULTING MEMBER, OR A TEN-DOLLAR LEAGUER.

It is a glorious thing to see a man of large means consecrating that means to the Kingdom of God. When out of his hard earned accumulations he gives a Bible Chair $50,000, or a College $125,000, a Hospital half a million, and a Brotherhood Movement $50,000, we of the rank and file laud him for his deeds. But many still have an inward feeling that these men of large wealth are duty bound before God in a way different from ourselves to give of their means for all of these benevolent enterprises. Let us remember that we are all men; each has his personal responsibility; that out of my insignificant means I am expected to give proportionately just as large amounts as these men of wealth are expected to give. Every man loves fellowship. You and I cannot live without it. The man of great wealth is just as hungry for fellowship as the man without a dollar. If we would encourage the man with his millions to give of his large wealth for the uplifting of his fellow man, the alleviating of suffering, and the building of the Kingdom of God, let us join with him in the giving from our small stores. This is not that he may find it necessary to give large money, but that he may feel the stimulus that comes from the heart touch of men who appreciate the work that he has undertaken, and are of like mind with himself.

Let us encourage our men of large wealth unto still larger giving by joining them in the giving of our small gifts.

The Past and Future of the Brotherhood

Address of President R. A. Long, Third Annual Convention, Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ,
Portland, Oregon, July 5, 1911

ROBERT A. LONG

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION:—
Again it becomes my pleasant duty to meet the men of our churches gathered from far and near to confer regarding the things of the Kingdom, to recount to you another the great things God has done for us, and to plan for new advances. The past year has been the best year in the history of the Brotherhood Movement. It was to be expected that this would be true. The very youth of our movement argues that. Each year might be expected to see a wider dissemination of knowledge of the Brotherhood program, a keener appreciation of the possibilities and advantages afforded by the Brotherhood, and an increasing number of practical demonstrations of its results.

It is with these results that I propose to concern myself in the address of the afternoon.

It is no easy task to create a Brotherhood that will make a practical approach to our ideals in any given local church, to arouse our men from lethargy and indifference, to get them out of deep-set ruts of semi-idleness, to open their eyes to the vision of practical service that men ought to fulfill in every church, to train them for such service and then engage them actively in its behalf. The Brotherhood officers are not responsible for the state in which the men of our churches are today. We are not responsible for the fact that it is a slow and difficult work to translate these ideals into living organizations within the congregation. We are not responsible for the fact that it takes a long time to set forth a new ideal and get it clearly apprehended, nor that years are required for men to slowly appreciate the possibilities of the ideal and to understand that they owe it an obligation, nor that it takes yet other years to train the men for the discharge of the obligation when once it has been assumed. These things are in nature; they are inherent; they are the measure of our task.

While it will be recognized that in the very necessity of the case but a small percentage, indeed, of the work is done by a self-effacing organization like the Brotherhood should ever pass into our records in figures that live and glow before the eye, yet the very fact that to thousands of our people the Brotherhood Movement is an unjustified, as well as unrealized ideal, makes it incumbent and proper that there should be offered at a convention like this some evidence of progress. In other words, by its results actually accomplished, the Brotherhood Movement must stand or fall.

The first results are in the general field. We have emphasized the fact that church work is a man's work; that there is no duty which Jesus Christ laid upon his church that is not a duty worthy of the attention and energy of a man. We have said this in the organization addresses of our secretaries in hundreds and hundreds of our churches in the last three years. We have voiced it in the convention of all our state organizations. We have trumpeted it through the columns of our magazine, CHRISTIAN MEN. We have said it again and again in the thousands upon thousands of separate pieces of printed literature which have gone out through the mails. In every case we have coupled this emphasis with some hint as to the proper methods by which manhood could be aroused and interested in the problems of the local church. It cannot be that all this emphasis, all this crying up of manhood, all this pointing of men to the field of action has been without result. Indeed, we know that it has not been without result. We have been able to observe, through our general office, a quickening of interest on the part of the men who were coöperating with us in the work of our Foreign Christian Missionary Society, in the work of our American Christian Missionary Society, in the extension of our Board of Church Extension, and our boards of benevolence, as well as in our educational work.

We have been able, through our general organization, to help in bringing into existence and in calling to the attention of our people the great Men and Religion Forward Movement. Through our Brotherhood Volunteer Movement, in two years we have succeeded in recruiting for the ministry and the mission field approximately one hundred and twenty volunteers. The cost of the Brotherhood Movement, up to the present time, has been something like $50,000. Assuming, for the sake of argument, that it had done no other thing than to enlist these volunteers, is there anyone here that thinks the cost not justified? It is not fifty years since $433 was a very low price for a slave. Even though ministers are held very cheap in some quarters, I cannot help voicing conviction that if this were the achievement of the Brotherhood Movement, it would have amply justified itself.

As a matter of fact, this is only one of the smaller ways in which the Brotherhood has been able to render service. Take our contribution to the Bible school work. The Adult Bible Class Movement was up and going with considerable momentum three years ago, when the Brotherhood Movement was launched, and yet wherever the Brotherhood Movement has gone there has invariably resulted a quickening of interest in Bible school work. This has manifested itself in two ways. Classes already existing have been strengthened, and by the adoption of Brotherhood ideals and programs of service, by which they have been enabled to broaden their knowledge of the work of our missionary societies, they have also had put into their hands programs and plans of activity which have made their work more effective and their life more permanent.

The testimony of R. A. Doan, of Nelsonville, Ohio, is invaluable. He has said, referring to the addition of the Brotherhood features to his own grade Bible class, which was itself so successful that it might have seemed to wait for nothing:

"The Brotherhood is developing our men in a way that our class never did. It gives them confidence in speaking. It allows us to get close to each other personally. It is teaching us to pray, both privately and publicly. And as a logical result, it is interesting our men, not only in our local work, but in men in other places. The hearts of our men are beginning to include the men of the world."

Not only has this been true, but we have been successful through erhood organization in calling into ience a number of great classes. As amples of this, I quote only a few:

Another achievement of the past year helps largely, in my own thought, is of a working agreement with the School Field Workers' Association, the terms of which cultural programs the Brotherhood, with the plans of ve which they involve, are recom-nded to all Adult Bible Classes. A mittee is provided on permanent re-ship, and it is further recommended at Adult Bible Classes become a part th Brotherhood Movement, and that monthly magazine, CHRISTIAN MEN, be the organ of the entire Men's ovement among us. This means, furthermore, the closer coöperation be-ee the state Sunday-school men and erhood men, and that we will iv to serve each other.

When I come to consider things done locally, Local Brotherhood No. 272, of the North Side Church, Omaha, comes into my mind. This Brotherhood, now two years old, exists in a church which,
up to the present, has had no building.
The membership has grown steadily until it now totals fifty-nine. They meet regularly on Sunday morning at the Bible school hour, both as a Brotherhood and as a Bible Class. It is the testimony of their pastor that this organization has done much to make the church a larger and more vital force in the community, and through the Brotherhood they have been led to a greatly increased participation in missionary offerings and in all the offerings of the local church. Frequently this organization has taken charge of the church services, with credit to themselves and glory to God. They observed the week of prayer and evangelism with house to house meetings, which resulted in at least two men won to Christ.

In Eldora, Iowa, we have had a small Brotherhood, where the average attendance at the meetings throughout the year was only nine, and yet this small organization raised and disbursed nearly $200, most of which was expended in fraternal aid.

The Brotherhood of Ashtabula, Ohio, now in the third year of its life, has grown from small influence and much discouragement, and through one reorganization, to a period of great vigor, when it is responsible for a Brotherhood Bible Class of more than two hundred, the second largest Men's Bible Class in our entire Brotherhood, and they have crowned their achievements with the purchase of a dwelling house at a cost of $5,000, which is being fitted up especially to care for the social and religious life of the men of the church. In front of the building is the sign, "Brotherhood House."

At Belmar Avenue, in the east end of Pittsburgh, a Brotherhood organization, less than six months old, has eighty members, fourteen of whom, at last reports, had been won into the church through the Brotherhood. The pastor of this church gives the Brotherhood work a large share of the credit for the progress which this congregation has made in the last six months, including freeing itself from the incubus of debt.

The united Brotherhoods of Peoria, Locals 301 and 329, inaugurated the plan of building a church in a day, and erected the first structure. Since that, these buildings have gone up all over the country, the idea originating with the Brotherhood Movement, and many times executors of the plans have been Brotherhood men. This work reached its climax recently when the Brotherhoods of Galesburg and Knoxville, Ill., joined in a great Scoville tabernacle, building it in a day.

In the Northwest we have noted the achievement of Local Brotherhood No. 276, North Yakima, Wash., in providing a great fellowship banquet at Christmas time, when more than five hundred men of the city sat down together.

Local Brotherhood No. 300, Pasadena, Cal., writes us that they are planning to have their own living link on the foreign field another year.

The pastor of the South Lawrence Avenue Christian Church, Wichita, Kan., reports to us that their offering for foreign missions was $190, of which their Local Brotherhood, No. 252, contributed $50.

One enthusiastic young Brotherhood man has secured more than $200 for the Comrades of Paul fund. Part of this money has already been loaned to a young man, who is now in school preparing for the ministry.

Local Brotherhoods have done kinds of things. They are sending men away on vacations, filling in while they are gone; they are rescuing men from the gutter, and supplying food and coal in needy homes, and even putting hay in the mangers for the horses.

The Brotherhood at Marshall, Iowa, has opened the doors of a new church. Other Brotherhoods write that they are to do similar work this summer.

Local Brotherhood No. 334, Indianapolis, has built a church in a day and installed its own president as pastor of a growing congregation.

And so the list might be added indefinitely, yet it must be understood that all the time that the most important work of any Brotherhood organization is the quiet, steady pull for God and Jesus Christ, which the organization exerts upon the men within its ranks. The church debt paid off at Belmar Avenue, the Brotherhood House occupied at Ashtabula, or a church built in a day at Peoria, while they may be the most striking and concrete examples of the efficiency of these organizations, are no means the best things they have done. What these organizations have aimed at and stood for is rather the thing to be considered.

I am struck in this connection by a letter which reaches me from J. Oram, pastor of the "H" Street Church, Washington, D. C. This is a small, poorly-housed congregation. It has a small and effective Brotherhood, which today enters its third year of life with splendid vigor and confidence. I

"In all our two years of experience we have made no effort to build a Brotherhood or do things with a view ad hurrah. Our idea is to make the Brotherhood boost the church, by active, practical helpfulness in all religious work."

With a hundred and forty affiliated local Brotherhoods to choose from, I have presented to you an instance or two as samples only. It should be stated that of these one hundred and forty Brotherhoods, we have possibly ten which have not thrived. We are in communication with the pastor or officers, and in every instance they feel that the failure was a local one, or that, in other words, the plan did not work because they did not work the plan.

Now the inferences I shall draw from the cases cited are these: In the first place it will be noticed that I have mentioned Brotherhoods from all over the United States. The Brotherhood Movement will make good in San Francisco, and it will make good in Portland, as indeed it has, and it will make good in Philadelphia, or anywhere else that it is given a chance. In other words, the Brotherhood Movement can be made to succeed anywhere that there are men with a Christian purpose prepared to undertake its responsibility.

In the second place, it will adapt itself to local conditions, and bear the kind of fruit that is wanted or needed. The active Brotherhoods are doing something in behalf of missions, something in behalf of the Bible school, something in behalf of civic and cultural work, something in behalf of devotional and spiritual building, something in behalf of the boy, something in behalf of general service to the local church.

As I see it, we are in the position of the rancher who has his soil and his trees and the water, and who has learned by experimentation what fruits will do best. He knows now that all he has to do is to plant the fruit, turn on the water and cultivate it. True, it takes a few years for the nurseries to produce stock enough to plant all the valley, and a few years for each new orchard to come into bearing, but when finally all the ground is under cultivation, the result is not more certain than when it has been successfully demonstrated what the first trees would do. After that first determination, the rest was a mere matter of mathematical calculation, a mere multiplication of trees upon the floor of the valley.

So it is today with our Brotherhood work. These local results of which I tell you are the reports from the experimental farm. We have a few Brotherhoods scattered over the country at work. The total number is, as I have said, something less than a hundred and fifty. Could you multiply this by ten and think what the result would be? Sixty volunteers for the ministry this year. Multiply it by ten and you have six hundred. A few hundreds of dollars in our Comrades of Paul fund, helping young men through school. Multiply this figure by ten years, square it by the increasing ratio of possibilities of this fund, and you can see that we shall soon have thousands upon thousands of dollars annually pouring into this treasury for the education of young men for the ministry. Multiply our one hundred and fifty Brotherhoods by ten and consider what fifteen hundred Brotherhoods would be doing.

This multiplication is our task for tomorrow. It is the duty with which you have charged us, and an obligation which we humbly, prayerfully and, we trust, courageously, undertake, and in our intense anxiety for success, in order to spread His gospel throughout the ends of the earth, we in turn ask you to make it possible for us to perform, by your own loyal and hearty coöperation.

A Statement

From the Disciples of Christ Attending the Silver Bay Conference of “The Men and Religion Forward Movement.”

We, the undersigned representatives of the Christian Church from different parts of the Nation, in attendance at the Silver Bay Conference of “The Men and Religion Forward Movement,” consider it our high privilege and imperative duty to make known as widely as possible to the men of our beloved Brotherhood our opinion of this Movement, after this close contact with it, and to give a few brief suggestions about how our Christian men may be effectively connected with it.

We are amazed at the wisdom and amount of work done, which is shown in the program before us, and in the report of work already done in many centers throughout the Nation, and in the great sweep of the Christian effort already planned, which is to be carried out over the Continent. The phases of the Movement—Evangelism, Bible Study, Missions, Boys’ Work, Social Service, Community Extension—provide a range appeal and a range of service which commands the assent of our judgments and the enthusiasm of our hearts.

This great Movement is pervaded with loyalty. It is full of intense loyalty to Christ. The Christian Church is excited.

The ten great Christian Brotherhoods of the Nation are all a part of the Movement, as are these great and splendid organizations — the Gideons, the Young Men's Christian Associations and the International Sunday-School Association. Business men, lawyers and physicians are giving their trained ability to help on this Movement; and a host of men of experience and training in Christian work are giving the whole or a part of their time.

We cordially endorse the Men and Religion Forward Movement. We commend it to our brethren everywhere. In this most general and most widely organized evangelistic movement, that our nation has ever known, our beloved churches, with their great historic record in evangelistic enterprise and achievement, should take their proper place of cordial coöperation and great power.

Among the coöperating Christian Brotherhoods and other organizations of Christian men, we note with glad appreciation that the Brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ has its proper place.

We earnestly recommend a speedy organization in every church wherever practical of a Bible Class, Brotherhood, or some other organization of men, if not now existing, and that these relate themselves to the Movement. Such organizations will greatly help to conserve the results.

Literature about "The Men and Religion Forward Movement" will be sent to those whose names may be furnished from any Christian Church, to E. E. Elliott, J. K. Shellenberger, General Secretaries of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, R. A. Long Building, Kansas City, Mo.

We greatly rejoice in the privilege of delightful fellowship that we Disciple men of different congregations have had at the Silver Bay Conference, and we covet for others the privilege of participation in the further progress of the Movement. Also that they will not overlook RALLY DAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1911.

The Men and Religion Forward Movement. What Is It?

By ROY B. GUILD, Executive Secretary

ROY B. GUILD

Executive Secretary, Men and Religion Forward Movement

On May 18, 1910, a small group representing various religious organizations of Christian men, met in a hotel in New York. A common interest brought them together. In August another group spent two days in a hotel in Niagara. In October, 262 picked men representing 72 cities and 33 states and provinces of North America, were together for two days at Buffalo. The interest was still the same, but more intense. "How can more men be brought into the church, and how can those who are in the church be aroused to such activity that we shall have a mighty crusade that will result in making this a better world?"

Since that series of meetings the eyes and ears of the people of the United States and Canada have been greeted with increased frequency with the phrase, "The Men and Religion Forward Movement." Now from every side there comes with steadily increasing urgency the demand "What is this Movement?"

It is a simple recognition of the fact that conditions that maintain today must not be tolerated. It is a part of the general interest manifested in all social and political circles. It sees the evil and is disturbed by it; it sees the remedy and is aroused to action. The true dynamic of social and political improvement is a spiritual force, active or latent, in every man; that force which prompts and helps every man to make the most of himself. This movement deals primarily with this force. Therefore, in a single sentence we can say that this is an effort to so relate every man to the life of Jesus Christ that, so far as he is concerned, a better condition already exists, and so far as he touches others, he will help them in the upward trend. It does not deal in beautiful generalities, but is most specific in saying that complete manhood will be the result of a man's accepting all that Christ offers him, and his giving all that he has to others. Impression and expression are the two keywords.

The uniqueness of this movement is not in this emphasis. The fundamental features of it are as old as the Christian religion. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself." All that goes into the construction of an aeroplane is as old as the hills. Only the combination is new, but it is the combination that makes it unique. So that which is unique in this movement is the combination, or combination, for there are two. The first is of force, the second is of message. We have had a great deal of discussion about church union. Here we have some of the first of that discussion. Moved as by ce spirit, the Brotherhoods of nine denominations and three great interchurch organizations, the International Sunday-School Association, the Gideons, and the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Associations, join hands and hearts in an effort to hasten the realization of the Kingdom of God on earth. This unity of action at once caught the popular interest, yet to those who are in the work it seems perfectly natural. Without discussion of creed, ritual or polity, they plunged into the common task. The appeal is to the whole men. The five great themes, Boys' Work, Bible Study, Evangelism, Social Service, Missions, looking to the working out of the general ideal of religious impression and religious expression to the last detail.

To understand this movement which is so evidently gaining in momentum both in cities and in rural districts, we must first know some of the purposes that are in the minds and hearts of those who brought it to the present stage.

THE PURPOSE Several facts should be taken into consideration: The first is that while the church is being severely criticised, here is a Movement correlating the masculine forces of the continent, centering in a committee known as "The Committee of Ninety-Six," composed of representative men from all parts of the United States and Canada, and from all communions. This Committee has accepted the responsibility of a Campaign which will reveal more fully than ever the real power of this great institution. Surely this is a declaration of faith that must encourage all who love the church. It is a splendid token of vital strength.

These men believe that for Christian efforts to bear permanent fruits they must be related to a tree that abides.

Much good is done by independent workers, but it is like a Guerilla warfare. The real victory must be won and followed constructively by organized forces. Hence the ringing resolution at the Buffalo Conference: "We emphasize our belief in the Church of Jesus Christ as the one instrumentality appointed by Him for the salvation of the world." As the state exists for the people, not vice versa, the welfare of the people is bound up in the welfare of the state. So the church exists for the people and its permanency as a means, not an end, insures future blessing. For this reason the Brotherhoods and the interchurch organizations combine that what is gained for this generation may abide for the next through the Church.

Another fact connected with the purpose of this movement is the recognition of the individual and of the coöperative work of each Church. In its own fold and field there are certain responsibilities that rest upon each Church, such as the maintaining of worship, of Christian education, of persistent Evangelism. Alas, this has too often been the only work attempted. There have been those who instead of saying with Wesley, "The world is my parish," have said, "My parish is the world." No person can live unto himself and develop to full manhood. It is in his social relation that full individuality is realized. So the Church of today must come to its full power by a life of real fellowship.

How many, many pastors have known of existing wrongs but felt it was useless to assail them alone, and could not gain real coöperation of other churches? In every city success can come in performing certain tasks only by united effort. This Movement aims to awaken a spirit of earnestness by which each Church shall do its best in its own and in the common task.

Another fact that is having great influence is the insistence that the term "Christian Work" means much more than some have been accustomed to think. If men are to be won and held, they must see that there are many things for them to do which are worth while for their own true selves and for others. It is a noble purpose this of hallowing every act which helps one nearer to God or makes the way surer for another, whether it is kneeling in prayer with face turned up to the Father, or whether it is compelling the owners of buildings to tear away walls that God's own daylight may penetrate the disease-infected tenement. Let the humblest act in the service of others inspire the Laborer and let it bring a glory into his life of which he was unconscious because he did not know he was "went about doing good." This purpose alone is enough to justify this Movement.

Another outstanding purpose is that of conserving the results. One of the large appropriations in the budget is for the committee that is carefully investigating methods of every character of religious work, for and by men and boys. Pastors and other leaders all over the continent are coöperating with this committee in the preparation of a book which during the campaign will be placed in the hands of every interested worker. Inasmuch as many pastors and churches have had marked success in planning and carrying out work locally, we can readily see the value of acquainting others with these facts, by putting them into permanent form. On Conservation Sunday, April 28, 1912, each church thus supplied with information will be asked to prepare for a five-years' campaign.

THE PLAN

What of the plans by which these purposes are to be realized? Organization seems to be necessary in this day, yet scientific efficiency demands that it be limited to what is necessary. In thinking along this line leaders determined that no new thing shall be created if what is needed already exists. For this reason the "Committee of Ninety-Seven" is only a Central Committee, not a new body to be maintained. It hopes only to give power to the machinery already in place, and thus to the Brotherhoods in the various communities and the three interchurch societies to constitute the permanent structure in the plan. Their representatives form the Committee. The men thus chosen have evidenced a keen sense of responsibility. At their first meeting in Chicago, sixty-two of their number were present, coming from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Southernmost states. At that first meeting these men gave one-third of the $125,000 needed for the budget, another evidence of their interest and confidence.

This committee believes that the participating organizations ought, so far as possible, to make this work their work. As a result, the International Sunday School Association will set apart three of its ablest men at its own expense for the campaign from September, 1911, to May 1913. Each Brotherhood is arranging to make the same contribution of its secretaries. The coöperating Missionary organizations, namely, The Laymen's Missionary Movement, The Missionary Education Movement, The Home Mission Council of all home boards, and the Home Base Committee of the Conference of Foreign Missionary Societies, each furnishes one man to look after the Missionary Campaign, this being supplemented by speakers from the individual societies. The International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations has from the beginning contributed the services of the Campaign Leader, the Promotion Secretary and as the Cam

gn advances will give more. This is a wonderful proof of the coöperation that exists, of the economic basis of the plan. The Central Committee urges that this policy of creating no new organization be followed in each city or community. If it is deemed necessary to improve some social condition, seek to do it through such organization as has been formed for such a purpose and in coöperation with those who are familiar with the task, unless organization and workers present an utterly helpless situation. If they cannot be electrified, electrocute them and go on. No new machinery, but greater power for what is.

The next item in the plan is the Campaign. How shall the message of this Movement be given? About ninety cities have for one reason or another been chosen for convention cities. These will be visited during the year by teams of Socialists in Bible Study, Boys' Work, Evangelism, Social Service, and Missions. These men, contributed by participating societies or employed by the Continental Committee, have been chosen from different parts of the English-speaking world because of their ability in one particular line of work. These men will remain in a city for a week conducting Conferences on the various phases of religious work. Ten days will be given to Conferences, the evenings to platform meetings for men, treating in this way the same subjects. In large cities there will be five meetings each evening, a different subject being presented at each meeting.

Each city thus visited agrees to give special emphasis to masculine Christianity for the year. During this time the Eight-Day Conference and Campaign will be conducted. Each city thus visited agrees to do for the surrounding country what the Committee of Ninety-Seven expects to do for the Continent. This latter work delegated to the Auxiliary Committee is already showing results that more than justify the plan. The most important feature in this Movement is this year's work for which each local Committee is responsible. It is a fundamental principle that if a town is to be evangelized, if its social conditions are to be changed, the work must be done by those who are interested—the residents. The help from without cannot furnish much more than inspiration and information. Hence the Eight-Day Conference and Campaign at some time during the year. The latter will inevitably fail of full success without the former.

Besides this Campaign the Continental Committee is calling to its support all agencies by which the minds of men may be reached. Realizing how many leading magazines have been working for the improvement of social, industrial, political and religious conditions, it was natural to turn to them for coöperation. It has been a source of inspiration to those bearing the burden of this undertaking to see how these moulders of public opinion have promised their assistance. In the latter part of September, many of these periodicals and magazines, secular and religious, will contain articles and editorials germane to this Movement. This has all been done, not because the editors wished to help any particular group of workers, but because they wish to see things done, and believe that the greatest good can come through a social program supported by those who are possessed of a deep religious fervor. It is hoped that this Campaign by the press may reach down to the last publication that is at all concerned for the manhood of North America.

One more great fact in this plan is that it depends in a large measure upon every man who catches a vision becoming a part of the Movement and a promoter of it. Only a limited amount of work can be done directly under the hand of the Continental Committee. Already many large cities which cannot be included in the list of convention cities have obtained the literature and are forming their own Committees. This can be done by the smallest community or by the cross-roads church. Every earnest minister and layman can work more effectively during the coming year because of the knowledge that the Movement is general. It was for this reason that the press was enlisted as thus the idea and the ideal may be imparted to the last man.

THE MESSAGE We cannot go further into this plan which is wrought out in detail in the "Program of Work." We must speak now of the Message. At the outset we can say that it is as comprehensive as the purpose and the plan. Boys' Work, Bible Study, Evangelism, Social Service, and Missions. We begin with the boy. The best way to win a man is to catch him when he is a boy. As seventy per cent of the boys in their teens are lost to the Sunday-Schools, it is evident that we have not got hold of the man at the right time. If we solve the boy problem of today, we solve the man problem of tomorrow. So we begin with a program of Christian Education that is as broad as his nature and need. We must deal with him as a boy, not as an infant or a full-grown man. The most successful men in North America are helping to frame that message and to make plain the best methods. That Message must in each case be adapted to the boy, so that in a way this will be a Campaign by itself. Perhaps it would be better to class the boy as an objective rather than as a subject matter.

The boy and the man to be won to the best life, must hear a voice that has greater power than the voice of any man, the voice of God. There is no way in which men have heard that voice so understandingly as through the Bible. The Campaign must be a mighty effort to persuade men to study that Book. There is no question about its being the best seller of today, and so is in the hands of the greatest number of people. Adult Bible Classes have been a great success. The Movement wishes to aid this, and still more to develop the individual and family interest. The greatest loss to the religious life today is the neglect of the family altar. The rush and confusion of the day have crowded out the few minutes when the father, as the high priest, joined with his family in a brief consideration of the truths which have given to us the great men we have had. The morning paper and the factory whistle have taken the place. The constant seeing and hearing of the best passages of the Bible leave a wealth of truth in the mind that later is as a bulwark in temptation, discouragement, or sorrow, and a mighty weapon in every conflict of right with wrong. Not so much a knowledge of the Bible is desired, as that the knowledge be turned into action, and become a real force in life. We may not be able to agree upon the traditions and theories that gather about the Book, but we can all read in hearty unison its great Messages from a loving Father to His needy children. The aim of the Movement is that every man shall so learn the gospel story that he can work out for himself the program of Jesus Christ.

The Bible is the Message of God to Man. Linked with this Message must be the work of Evangelism. As by inducing men to study the Bible we cause them to hear the voice of God, by Evangelism we persuade them to heed that voice.

Evangelism must pervade every department of the Movement. It must be the very life of it. It is the keystone of the arch. The good news of a Redeemer and of a redeemable world gives the pr-

for Social Work, Boys' Work, Bible Study and Missions. The moment we see this word and what it stands for, we choose the one factor by which we may succeed. This Movement puts the first responsibility for Evangelism upon each church. The reproach that has sometimes been connected with this word has been due in part to evangelistic meetings in which individuals and churches have hastily adopted a plan by which it seemed possible for them to fold their sails and enjoy great revival meetings. The strangers to the community tried to do their work. A reaction is inevitable when the human instrument that has been used of God to awaken men has been withdrawn before these new-born men are become strong enough spiritually. The real work that makes for permanency must in the great majority of cases come one by one by the pastors and members of the local churches. This first emphasis is laid here and calls for an all-the-year effort to persuade men to accept the good news that God wants men to live with Him in fellowship with Jesus Christ.

On the other hand there is a large and definite place for the union Evangelistic effort. Success of the highest character can be obtained in great mass-meetings when they are sustained by the support of individuals and our churches. When a true messenger of God from without may prove a great blessing to the community. This movement contemplates just such campaigns seeking to lead the companies into battalions for the assaults upon the indifferent and the souls who apparently are not reached in the usual ways. By this twofold plan why should not thousands, yes hundreds of thousands respond to that "spirit which beareth witness with our spirit that we are the heirs of God, joint heirs with Him in Christ Jesus, if so be that we suffer with Him that we may also be exalted with Him."

When there is a reaction after a successful evangelistic campaign, we may be sure it has been due, in part, to the fact that the spirit filled man has not been directed to the performance of some appropriate task. The average church has an officer for every available post who, as a rule, does not care to be disturbed whether he toils or slumbers at that post. "What shall the new convert do?" asks the earnest pastor. He does not know the Bible well enough to teach in the Sunday-School where there is great need of teachers. "The spirit is given to profit withal" and if work is not done, the fire dies down, for work is the fuel to the spiritual fire. This Movement, as has been intimated already, looks upon all phases of social work that makes for a better society as Christian work. Earnest men and women have gone forth to work outside the church because as they saw the world's need, as they heard the command, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," they had to do something. The result is that today we speak of "The Church and Social Work" as though things apart. Yet more than ninety per cent of social workers received their inspiration from the Church and are members of it. Future workers must come from there, say the social leaders. In reality the true church of Jesus Christ and true social service are inseparably yoked together in the great commandment given by our Master.

At the conferences on Charities and Correction, held in Boston, June, 1911, the Church became a subject on the program for the first time. At the first general session of the Church and Social Work Section, in Tremont Temple, over two thousand were present and manifested the most intense interest in the discussion of the place of the Church in Society. Old attendants said it was the high water mark of all conferences. The full social program will not be carried out save as it is pervaded by the purest religious passion. Hence at the meeting of the Religious Education Association held in Providence, that dean of social workers, Miss Jane Addams, declared that Legislation and publicity will not suffice, that the day is past in England and America when there was the demand for absolute separation from religion because it seemed to lack reality. She closed that address with a stirring appeal to the Church to enter into a real coöperation. Surely here is a task that will attract the strong, red-blooded, spirit-touched man and make him feel it is worth while to be a Christian. In fact this is the only hope of society. Every community, from the city, crowded with its millions to the scattered farming districts, has its social, political and industrial evils which are patent to all, and which challenge the Church. The leading social experts of North America are in this Movement, have sent a ringing message to the men of North America, and have prepared for the "Program of Work," a chapter full of definite suggestions as to what to do and how to do it. One has said he approved this Movement because it put the man who stands for individual salvation and the man who stands for social salvation on the same platform. Let us do better than that. Let us have every man a well balanced combination of the two. It may be we can begin with only a sympathetic relation but let us not rest until the most extreme evangelistic workers and the most extreme social workers see the need of each other. Thus the Church will fulfill its mission of individual and social salvation.

Missions is the next theme in this Message. It is inseparable from the preceding, for it is impossible to draw a line between Missionary and Social Work. The most successful social settlements in the world are the Foreign Mission Stations which antedate all the well-known social settlements of North America. Their success is due to social work and Evangelism. First in the plan is the hospital, charity work, the school and the workshop. First in the purpose is that men shall know the love of God revealed in Jesus Christ made plain to non-Christian people by the humblest service that can be rendered with an explanation of why. It is a most natural thing to have listed in the Missionary survey that being made the question as to how many are working in social settlements. This is nothing new. It goes back to the beginning when One stood up and read His commission to his neighbors in Nazareth: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captive, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." The One thus commissioned at the close of His earthly career both before His crucifixion and after His resurrection, commissioned us in the significant words: "As the Father hath sent me, even so send I you also unto the world." The missionary and the social worker alike find their authority for their work in these words. The combination of the Men and Religion Forward Movement must be the working out of this great social and mission program.

Home and Foreign Missions today are as inseparable as the preceding theme of the Message. With the millions of non-Christian people under the flags of the English-speaking races, with devotees of every phase of religious faith in the confines of our continent, with whole arms men and boys of no religious faith, this task challenges the imagination, the courage, the confidence of every man who believes at all in the reality of the Kingdom of God on earth.

The Message to the Missionary Committee from the Coöperating Committee sets forth the relative importance of this part of the Movement.

Only a movement which incorporates its central purpose the world mission of Christianity, its mission to all the life of each land and to all the lives of every man, can have access to the sources of adequate power. The work that is to be done can be done only by men with whom and in whom Christ works in the fulness of the strength which God communicates to men through Him. And we believe that such working on His part is promised and possible on one condition, namely, that men will undertake with Him a world task and conceive the work of the Christian Church as a work for all the need of the world at home and abroad. We cannot hope to do our work in the life of a single man or boy in America except by the power of a Gospel, which demands our application of it to every human need and un-Christian condition in the United States, and our offer of it to the whole non-Christian world.

Jacob Kenoly, Captain of Industry

By C. C. SMITH

Jacob Kenoly was born near St. Louis, Mo. When a young man he made his way to Georgia. From that State he went to the Southern Christian Institute and worked his way through that school. There he received his education, industrial training and ideals. One ideal, gained there, became the ruling principle of his life: "I owe all to Christ and I can only pay that debt by doing good to my fellowmen; I owe my debt to my people in Africa, who never heard that God loves them and Christ died for them."

The story of his making his way to Africa unaided and going back into the jungle and teaching, in a little hut, the white boys for thirteen months, is familiar to many. Here, for weeks at a time, he was prostrated by the jungle fever, and he was finally persuaded by an intelligent negro in government employ to come near the sea coast. Here he found a partial civilization among those negroes who had been colonized from the United States, and here in the basement of an old, disused building in Scheffelin, Liberia, Africa, he began his work for the uplifting of these. One of Jacob Kenoly's students, writing of this early period, says: "It was very dark in this basement. Our teacher thought at one time he would lose his eyesight, his health was very poor, and he did, indeed, look like a skeleton, but he wanted to do something for the boys and girls of Africa. It was in this dark basement that the Liberian Christian Institute came into existence, though it had not received its name."

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions heard of these faithful efforts and adopted the little mission in 1907. The government taking note of the work, deeded the Board two hundred acres of land. On this land he at once built for himself a little house, his only tools being an axe and frow. He split the boards from the trees. This was the first sided and shingled house in that part of Liberia. In this building he conducted his work for two years. As the number of pupils increased he taught the smaller ones in the forenoon, the grown pupils in the afternoon and had a singing class at night. In this building he organized a church of ten members and here they partook of the Lord's Supper on the first day of each week.

Soon he built a larger building for his school work, and for this he raised about $400 there. The Christian Woman's Board of Missions furnished the zinc for the roof and the doors and windows. These were bought in England and shipped to Monrovia and then carried by the school boys on their heads a distance of thirty miles. There is no sawmill in all that section and so Jacob hired men, whose trade it is to saw the lumber from the trees. A box of tools was sent to him from the United States by the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and with these and the help of his school boys he completed a school building 35 by 50 feet and two stories high.

Speaking of his work for the year 1902 Jacob Kenoly says: "We reached sixty in attendance at day school, eleven in night school, fifty in Sunday-school, fifty-three in temperance society. We have organized a little church which has eleven members."

I think I can give no better idea of this work of Jacob Kenoly's than by quoting from a letter written by him in January, 1910. In this quotation you will be able to read much "between the lines," as it were. I quote:

"We have five different kinds of people to deal with in school. The Americo-Liberians wear clothes, but the other tribes are naked people; but they all wear clothes in school. The Bassa tribe lives in this place, the Pessy tribe have their home fifteen days' walk from here into the interior. They are one of the most despised by the other tribes and are made slaves in this country. The Congo tribe was captured in the Congo country by the Spanish slave traders, but was captured by the Americans and brought to this country. Sometimes it comes my duty to show them that our tribe is just as good as another. The more they come to the light the better they can see this.

"About forty days' walk into the interior are two cannibal tribes, called the Harah and Boozy. I have two boys in school who have their teeth filed to point like a nail. This is their custom. They can speak English some.

"Some weeks ago a native man brought two native boys and gave them to me. He said he wanted them to learn civilized habits. They were given to me naked. One's country name was 'Blupluo' and the other 'Sav.' We named them John and Lewis. They are beginning to speak some English. We made clothes for them on the machine which was sent to us by a good sister in Iowa. They feel quite at home here."

A gun and ammunition was sent to Jacob Kenoly from Milwaukee, W. This he has used in killing great snakes and wild beasts and in getting for himself a supply of meat. He has discovered that with a seine he can obtain plenty of fish in the sound which back up the river from the ocean. This seine net has been sent by the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. He wishes to raise stock on his land and some money for this purpose has also been sent by the Board.

One of the first to come to Jacob Kenoly's school was one James Rundles, name, whose parents were of the Congo tribe. He made such rapid advancement both in the letter and the spirit of his work that Jacob wrote of his great desire to have him sent to the Southern Christian Institute to be trained there and rn as a missionary to his people in Africa. Money for his passage was furnished by a Sunday-school class in Indiana, and August 2, 1909, he embarked from Monrovia, Liberia, Africa, as a steerage passenger for the United States, and reached the Southern Christian Institute early in November, 1909, having been over three months on the way. He is a fine specimen of young negro manhood and has taken hold of his work at the Southern Christian Institute in splendid fashion.

The above, while being a wonderful work on its own account, shows, too, the value of the Christian and industrial training the Christian Woman's Board of Missions is giving negro boys and girls in this land. Turn one of our trained boys loose in a jungle amid savages and he hews out a new civilization and takes the Christ ideal to all who come under his influence. A sister writing from Washington, D. C., says: "If our Southern Christian Institute had only produced Jacob Kenoly it would be worth what it cost." For whether we measure his work by his conception of duty, or his perseverance in reaching his goal, or his resourcefulness amid difficulties, or his patient endurance of suffering, or his unselfishness in thinking only of the good of others, or his humility in seeking no honor for his own achievement, or his wisdom in winning the confidence of a barbarous people, or his sublime faith in God, by which he clung to Him in very dark hours—Jacob Kenoly leads us all.

Now the question is, shall all this sacrifice and labor of love and noble endeavor be lost? Shall we not build largely on the foundation thus providentially laid for us? Would it not be a shame to allow Jacob Kenoly's work in Africa to fail for lack of helpers? As it is now, this mission hangs by a single life and that life in constant danger. Others should be sent to him and his work rapidly enlarged. Liberia is holding out her hands for help.

A Postscript

By MRS. ANNA R. ATWATER, President C. W. B. M.

In the light of the present the above from the pen of C. C. Smith seems almost prophetic.

On the 9th day of June, 1911, Jacob Kenoly, with eight of the boys and men of the Missions, was out in a small boat to catch fish for the large family of fifty boys whom he kept and fed. It was necessary to open the mouth of the lake, which they did. Then the current bore the little boat out into the ocean, where it was turned over. Three of the men reached land, but our faithful Jacob Kenoly with four of the boys went down.

Just a week before Dr. Royal J. Dye, on his journey from the Congo, had left Jacob and had sent the Board an earnest appeal for more helpers and a larger equipment for this Mission in Liberia. He told of the faithfulness of our missionary; of the love and devotion of the school and the little congregation for their noble leader and of the opportunities there for a grand work.

As we consider all this, we repeat the questions asked above: "Shall all this sacrifice and labor of love and noble endeavor be lost? Shall we not build large on the foundation thus providentially laid for us? Would it not be a shame to allow Jacob Kenoly's work in Africa to fail for lack of helpers?"

Liberia has one million and a half yet to hear the Gospel story. The call is to all who hear.

The Ten Finger Exercise

George W. Muckley, Corresponding Secretary Board of Church Extension, shows how the money works, coming and going, in the Church Extension Fund. For more than twenty years Secretary Muckley has been going up and down the country telling our people how $2,500 will build ten churches in five years, thus doing the work of $6,221. We have asked him to reduce his figures to the printed page and he has kindly consented to do so.

THE EDITORS.

What $2,500 will Do Working Five Years in Our Church Extension Fund

INTERESTING PLAN

It is intensely interesting to watch money repeating its usefulness in this Fund, as it comes and goes from year to year.

First: Get the Church Extension Plan well fixed in your mind. Whatever amount the Board loans, the rule is that the loan shall be paid back one-fifth each year. As fast as these different amounts are returned to the Board at Kansas City, they go right out again to help build other churches. There are always appeals on hand for the Board to answer.

You are now ready for the illustration:

WATCH IT WORK

Suppose we lift $2,500 out of the Fund and watch it work for five years, starting the money January 1, 1900, in five loans of $500 each, as indicated on the thumb and fingers of the left hand.

January 1, 1901, one year from the date the loans are made, each of the five churches pays a note of $100, thus returning $500, with which we build the "6th church," indicated by the $500 on the thumb of the right hand.

January 1, 1902, by the same plan $500 comes back from the payment of the second notes of the first five churches, also the first note of $100 returns from the "6th church," making $600 returning at the end of the second year to build the "7th church."

January 1, 1903, $500 is returned by the first five churches on payment of their third notes, the second $100 returns from the "6th church" and the first note of $20 from the "7th church," making $720 with which the "8th church" is built.

January 1, 1904, $500 is returned from the first five, the third $100 from the "6th church" and the second $120 from the "7th church" and the first note of $144 from the "8th church," making $864 with which to build the "9th church."

At the end of the fifth year $1,037 returns to build the "10th church."

Add all the amounts on the ends of the fingers and you have $6,221 as the work due in five years by the money constantly recreating itself; $2,500 more than doubles its working power in five years. Of course, some churches must use the money longer than five years. But to offset this, as many return their money before the five years expire.

NAMED LOAN A Named Fund in our Church Extension work is $5,000 or as much more as the donor desires to make it. A separate account is kept of each Named Fund and a separate annual report made to the donor. All loans are made from this Fund to help build churches and are paid back into the Fund in five equal annual installments. The interest at four per cent is kept in the Fund and compounds itself semi-annually. As soon as enough money is accumulated from new gifts, interest and returns from loans, another loan is made. The money is constantly recreating its work by coming back and going out again in loans to help weak and struggling churches complete their first church building. Money more than doubles its work every five years. For example, we showed that $2,500 will do the work of $6,221 in five years, building 12 churches with loans of $500 each, as illustrated above.

THE PROOF

Thus the F. M. Drake Loan Fund has built 76 churches since February, 1889, and has done the work of $32,695 and earned $4,534 of interest, though Brother Drake gave only $1,200 in 1889 and $380 each year until he paid $5,000 in 10 years.

Our Brotherhood and Men's Classes should teach the church how money works in our Church Extension Fund as it goes and comes, as shown in the "Ten Finger Exercise." It is a most interesting study. It is arithmetical and geometrical progression combined with perpetual motion.

FURTHER PROOF

That the Ten Finger Exercise is not a mere mathematical fancy in our Church Extension work, it should be remembered that 854 churches of the 1,437 aided have paid back all of their loans and that there has been returned to the Board $1,166,000 on loans since the beginning. This money has all gone out to build churches again and yet not half of the demands have been answered. The $871,000 in the permanent Fund has all gone out once. The $1,166,000 has been reloaned. This makes $2,037,000 of loans which has helped to build 1,437 churches. It might be thought that this Fund of $871,000 is large enough to answer our needs. The man that says that has not considered the fact of our growth as a religious body, nor has he the proper vision of our future growth. Counting District, State and National Home Missionary Societies, together with City Evangelization Boards, we have 127 Home Missionary agencies organizing churches every week that need help to build; 206 of these organizations have asked for help this year and only 59 of these appeals have been answered.

FUND TOO SMALL

Though Church Extension money repeats itself rapidly, as shown by the Ten Finger Exercise, yet it does not prove that the Fund is large enough. The Methodist Episcopal Church, North, has expended more than $12,000,000 in Church Extension work, erecting over 18,000 buildings. Yet that communion is not growing as rapidly today as is our own. The Congregationalists in the days of their growth expended $4,000,000 in Church Extension work, erecting over 6,000 buildings. The Presbyterians expended over $6,000,000 in erecting 7,000 churches. The Methodist Church, South, said that before they started their Church Extension work they lost 75 per cent of their evangelistic results. Every business man who has faith in our plea, and who has caught the vision of our growth, will delight to help get information to our Brotherhood organizations and to the Adult Bible Classes and to every man in the church, before Church Extension Day. In the above ways the men of our churches can help the preacher and the Sunday-school Superintendent to get good results on Church Extension Day. The month of September should be most sacredly devoted to Church Extension by the preachers, the Sunday-school Superintendents, Presidents of our Brotherhoods and adult classes. The Board asks that the Sunday-schools will donate one of their Sunday morning offerings and tell the children about Church Extension. The Sunday-school offerings will go into the Sunday-school Loan Fund and should be sent separately.

WHAT ISAAC ERRETT SAID

When the Church Extension work was started in 1888, Isaac

Errett wrote an editorial in the Christian Standard stating that a $50,000 Church Extension Fund would be sufficient. Twenty years later Robt. Moffett, Secretary of the Home Board, said that $100,000 would be needed. The demands continued to come for money to help house homeless churches far beyond the ability of the Board to answer and our Brotherhood set a mark of a quarter of a million in 1900. We secured that amount and the Kansas City Convention of 1900 said that we would need half a million in 1905. We secured that amount by the San Francisco Convention and now the Brotherhood has set the mark at a million. We still have homeless churches numbering more than 500 whose appeals come up to us from our own brethren anxious to establish churches that stand for the Primitive Gospel once for all delivered to the Saints. September should be sacredly devoted to Church Extension.

Two Million Dollars

In our Church Extension Fund would not be sufficient to meet the growing demands upon our Board of Church Extension, and yet we have not reached the one million mark. We lead in evangelism among all Protestant bodies, but are far behind the procession in our church building enterprises.

Where the Pastor Falls Down

By the Editor of "The Interior"

What Do You Do in Your Church When the Preacher Falls Down?

turn HIM OFF?
turn the preacher off and get another.

That might be fair if the pastor's job was just one plain job that one set of qualifications was sufficient for. Then when he failed in that one line, you'd be justified in saying, that it was all off—he had missed his calling.

As a carpenter can't fit two boards together, he'd better go and heave coal; fitting boards is about all there is to carpentering. So with most occupations, they are single, narrow lines.

But the business of being a preacher is different; it's about a hundred lines dropped up into one man's task, and it's beyond any decent and human requirement to expect any one individual to come out with a hundred per cent success on all of them.

Just give a minute's clear and honest thought to what a variety of abilities a minister's position demands of him.

PREACHER QUALITIES
He needs to be a smooth, fluent orator. He ought to have not merely words, but ideas, too; he very decidedly needs to be a thinker. He needs a lot of book knowledge—theology, philosophy, history, and the like,—but it won't do for him to read books all the time; people won't stand for him unless he is also very much of a "mixer"—perfectly at home among men.

And of course the modern preacher should be an organizer—masterful as a general in fitting people into the places where they belong. He doesn't dare however to show a bit of a general's spirit of command; he's bound to handle people wholly by persuasiveness—which takes enormous persuasiveness. The preacher should be an acute, accurate, discreet business man—in order to keep the church "temporalities" out of tangle. And above all he must be a spiritually minded man, though at the same time it is highly important that he must not be visionary; people will not listen to him if he is not practical.

Just see what a tremendous bundle of qualities you've got. You could make a lawyer, a politician, a business man, a teacher, a settlement worker, a popular lecturer, an author, a philosopher, a man around town, a military commander, all out of that combination, and have a lot of qualities left over to distribute along a whole line of occupations from family physician to church janitor.

Yet you're supposing that you've hired the whole combination in the pastor of your church and are expecting to get the benefit of each of these various elements of strength—all out of one man.

DUE FOR DISAPPOINTMENT
But you won't. Somewhere in the list you're due for a disappointment. If your minister's a great preacher, it's more than likely he won't be very strong on organization. If he's a gentle, comforting pastor, he may very probably be a good deal lacking in the pulpit. If he is a deep student, he may be awkward out among men. If he's a hearty good fellow to meet, he may impress you as not very deep intellectually or even spiritually. Some day before long you'll find a weak side to him.

The question is, what are you going to do about it when you make the discovery? Follow the ordinary way and hint to the preacher that it's time for him to move on?

Well, you'll not better the matter that way; the next preacher will have his weakness, too.

And you'll do a rank injustice to the man you drive away. No man should be driven out of a pastorate for his defects of ability. There are only four good reasons for shoving out a preacher—his being lazy, being silly, being selfish, or being morally crooked.

When a minister lacks honor, self-sacrifice, industry or horse sense—any one—he's not fit for anybody's pastorate.

DEFICIENCIES
CURABLE

But all other deficiencies but these are curable. Many of them the preacher himself should be able to cure. But all the shortcomings that the minister either can't or doesn't cure—these are up to his church to take care of.

Every church when it calls a new pastor, ought to watch narrowly to see where he is going to fall down. But not to get a chance to complain—God forbid. When the pastor falls down, then the Brotherhood has discovered where it can help him.

THE OPPORTUNITY FOR YOUR MEN

If the preacher shows up inefficient in organizing the people for work, then that's the signal for the men in the church who are strongest in the knack of organization to turn in and line up the membership for effective re-

If the pastor seems to get tangled and befuddled when money matters are dealt with, then let men used to handling dollars step forward and get the money worry off the pastor's mind.

If the pastor is slow and timid in calling on strangers, and diffident in meeting new comers, let the folks who have easy social graces go in strong for friendly visiting and hand shaking.

If the Sunday-School lags or the prayer-meeting is dull, and the pastor doesn't seem to know what to do about it, let the Brotherhood boom these affairs with their own effort.

If the pastor falls down on his preaching, it's harder for the Brotherhood to fill in that defect—which, by the way, is reason enough why the pastor ought to try specially hard not to fall down there. But even poor pulpit work a live Brotherhood can do a great deal to remedy.

They can all be there and can lie down hard; that will inspire the preacher. They can praise his best abilities: that will encourage him to cultivate his most valuable gifts. They can lift detail matters off his shoulders; that will leave him more time for study. They can give money for books and conventions; that will freshen him. And they can pray for him; God only knows what that will do.

Finally, here's a rule for a going and growing Brotherhood:

Count on your pastor's abilities as a chance. Count on his inabilities as your chance.

Special Day for Men and Boys. Be Sure to Observe It

Church Extension and Patriotism

By JOHN H. BOOTH, Assistant Secretary Board of Church Extension

JOHN H. BOOTH

ILER A PATRIOT The man who builds a church is a patriot. When the servant of the centurion lay in the centurion, hearing of the power of Jesus to heal the sick, sent elders of the Jews to Jesus requesting that He would heal his servant. The argument advanced by the Elders why Jesus should so favor the centurion by healing his servant was. "He is worthy that thou shouldst do this for him for he has loved our nation and himself built us a synagogue." If the building of a church in those ancient days was a proof of a man's love for his country, is it not one of man's highest expressions of patriotism? It has even been thought that the man who shoulders the musket and goes forth in defense of his country is a patriot, and many are they who have done so and deserve the title. But "peace and the greatest victories of the world have been those quiet victories of peace wrought by the pioneer preachers, missionaries and Disciples who have preached the gospel of Christ and made its power permanent in the land by building the house of God. No laurel wreaths have crowned the heads of these patriots and no marble shafts commemorate their

PIONEER PREACHERS deeds, and they need no such things, for world-movements of today, world-wide missions, the sentiment for arbitration and universal peace, the temperance crusade, and civic righteousness are indestructible monuments. The house of God is a social institution as much so as is the school, the court, the jail, and the asylum. It is of value not alone to the few but to the whole community in which it is built. No man, if he be a lover of the good, whether professed Christian or not, desires to move into a churchless community.

CHURCH IN DEMAND The church, is therefore, in demand. It increases the value of property, makes business staple and prosperous, places a check upon all wrong and makes possible not only the good but the organizing of the forces of good, so necessary in conducting campaigns against any community wrong. Therefore, the man who builds the church is the community's first citizen and greatest benefactor, for he has made possible an institution that materially and spiritually benefits all. These lines may be read by those upon whose hearts rests the burden of a church debt or the raising of money to build a new church. There should be no feeling of timidity on the part of such in going to every person who lives, or owns property, or does business within miles of the church and asking him for financial aid because it is asking only for a share of the wealth which the church has or will create. The man, if he be able, who does not give the church a square deal when it benefits alike himself and his countrymen, deserves the Rooseveltian title "Undesirable Citizen."

THE GREATEST AGENCY

The greatest church building agencies in America are the Boards of Church Extension. Our own Board of Church Extension has built, since its organization in 1889, nearly fifteen hundred churches in as many communities in our land. It is a patriot. It raises American money, one hundred cents of every dollar of which, to invest in and make possible an American institution, whose purpose is to establish and make permanent the highest material and spiritual benefits of our nation. Some of our spell-binding politicians talk of the glory of the nation as if it was found chiefly in our standing army and great navy; and of patriotism as if it had to do with the maintenance of such things. The shame of it is, that it is not alone Fourth-of-July oratory, for our national representatives are appropriating every year from hard earned savings of American citizens one hundred and twenty millions for the keeping of the army, one hundred and sixty millions to maintain the navy and twenty-four millions for the building of two new dreadnaughts this year. Think of it! Twenty-four millions for dreadnaughts this year! How lop-sided we are as a Christian Nation! We have today in our Brotherhood, from latest reports, about five hundred homeless congregations, two hundred and six of which in the past months have made applications to the Board of Church Extension for help. Every one of these churches is working and some pitifully in need of help, because of a lack of funds only sixty applications have been granted up to August 1st. If every tax-paying Disciple of Christ will give as much this year to Church Extension in the September offering as he will give to build dreadnaughts, not only the two hundred and six congregations that have asked for help, but every homeless family in our household of faith, can be moved from basement and barn, theatre and hall, schoolhouse and dug-out, into comfortable and respectable homes of worship.

HOMELESS CHURCHES?

Why not make this possible with a great offering to Church Extension in September? It would mean more to America and the world now and in the future to come than all the dreadnaughts ever built. Every Disciple citizen who loves his country and his Christ "should think on these things." May the Christ, our great Intercessor, as He approaches the Father in behalf of the Christian citizen, say of him as was said to Him of the centurion of old, "He is worthy that thou shouldst do this (forgive his sins) for him, for he loveth Our Nation and himself helped build us Our Churches."

The Portland Press on the Brotherhood Convention

The following account of the Brotherhood session is clipped from the Oregon Journal, and is presented here to show the impression made on the newspaper world by the Brotherhood session:

Anxious to hear details of the remarkable work that has been accomplished by the Brotherhood during its thirty years of life, all the delegates who could find entrance attended the session this afternoon in the First Presbyterian church. The Brotherhood has a membership of 10,000; its constituency includes 200,000 men and its representatives have come from nearly every state in the union with the exception of New England.

REGRET IS EXPRESSED.

With great regret the audience heard of the intention of the General Secretary, P. C. Macfarlane, to give up his work that he may enter exclusively into the field of literature. Mr. Macfarlane gave up a pastorate in California to become the Brotherhood's General Secretary at the time of its inauguration three years ago. Its growth and its influence have been phenomenal since that time.

RETIRING SECRETARY HONORED.

P. C. Macfarlane, of Kansas City, retiring General Secretary of the Brotherhood, was presented with a gold watch and chain by the officers, directors and secretaries of the Brotherhood at the meeting yesterday afternoon. Judge J. N. Haymaker, of Wichita, Kan., made the presentation speech. Secretary Macfarlane responded, briefly thanking his fellow-workers for their coöperation while he held office. He will continue his ministerial work after a short rest and vacation at Monterey, Cal.

The donors of the watch were R. A. Long, President; C. M. Chilton, Vice-President; Thomas S. Ridge, Recording Secretary; F. J. Bannister, Treasurer; Burris A. Jenkins, Robert G. Frank, Frank Nase, R. A. Doan, Thomas W. Grafton, J. N. Haymaker, M. M. Cochran, J. K. Shellenberger, Miss Vinnie Brake, secretary to Mr. Long; Frank Lauder and E. E. Elliott.

18,000 LETTERS MAILED.

"E. E. Elliott, Assistant Secretary of the Brotherhood, in his annual report, said that since the last convention, held at Topeka, Kan., last October, 9,000,000 pages of association monthly have been printed and 50,000 copies of tracts circulated. During the nine months 18,000 personal letters have been mailed and 50,000 circular letters.

"A constitution for a Boys' Brotherhood has been drawn up, and a movement is on foot to place it on a permanent footing. There are now 140 local Brotherhoods affiliated with the National body, 45 being added in the last nine months. There are also 236 local bodies not affiliated. In 495 churches the question of organization has been taken up, but not consummated.

MANY MISSIONARIES VOLUNTEER.

"The second Sunday in January was observed as Brotherhood Volunteer day. Mr. Elliott said 75 volunteered for mission work, as compared with 50 in 1910.

" 'Today's Work Today,' was the topic upon which General Secretary Macfarlane spoke. He narrated how J. Pierpont Morgan came to contribute $1,000,000 to the lying-in hospital in New York City. He was to speak one night, and in walking to the hall had occasion to pass through a narrow street, where he came upon a poor woman with a bundle of sweat-shop clothing under one arm and a babe in the other.

"‘How old is that babe?’ he asked.

"‘Four days, sir,’ was the response. He tossed the woman a half-dollar, and passed on his way.

"‘But the next day,’ continued Mr. Macfarlane, ‘he telephoned to one of the largest architects in the metropolis, and ordered a hospital large enough to accommodate all women unable to have proper attention at that critical period of their lives.’

MORGAN’S CHARITY PRAISED.

"‘That is the spirit of the Brotherhood, to help humanity,’ said the speaker. ‘The Brotherhood covenant sets a high standard, but high standards are the way to Jesus Christ.’

"J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary, delivered an address on ‘Why Have a Brotherhood?’ He spoke of the large number of divorces, saying the families were being undermined. He also spoke of the white slave traffic and of the sale of liquor, saying it is a man’s job to cope with these evils.

"Assistant Secretary Elliott reported at the banquet in Woodmen of the World hall last night that the deficit of the Brotherhood last year was $15,000, and was met by R. A. Long. He said five cents a month a member is too little to support the work of the Brotherhood and urged all to adopt the plan of contributing $10 a year a member.

"After the banquet the men marched in a body to Grace Methodist church where F. W. Burnham addressed them on ‘Christian Men in the Church.’

THREE TOPICS DISCUSSED.

"The evening session followed immediately after Mr. Burnham’s speech. The themes were. ‘What is the Brotherhood For?’ ‘The Brotherhood’s Relation to the Devotional Life of the Member’ and ‘The Value of Affiliation with the National Brotherhood.’ The speakers were Rev. T. W. Grafton, of Kansas City; Rev. C. M. Chilton, of St. Joseph, Mo.; R. A. Doan, of Nelsonville, O., and M. E. Baker, of Hiram, O., President Long closing the discussion.

"Mr. Doan related the experience of a saloonkeeper of his city, who, when the saloons were closed, found himself without employment, and being unable to work, was reduced to penury. The Brotherhood supplied him with coal, provisions and clothing, said Mr. Doan, and invited him to church, to which he reluctantly responded, but has since been thankful."

Secretarial Whereabouts

Since the Portland Convention, Mr. Shellenberger has been filling appointments and attending conventions on the Pacific Coast. A detailed report of his trip is crowded out of this issue. He and President Long did a great piece of work in a financial way in Southern California. The writer has attended the Laymen’s Missionary Conference at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, the Bible Conference at Bethany Park, Indiana, the Nebraska Convention at Bethany, issued the August and September numbers of “Christian Men,” and attended to an accumulation of office detail and correspondence the end of which is not yet.

Wireless Whispers

Hay Fever Time

The United States Hay Fever Association announces its Annual Convention at Bethlehem, N. H., Wednesday, August 30th. The booklet which accompanies the call gives details concerning the objects of the association and interesting references to exempt places, treatment, experiences of members, etc.

Dr. Osler says that women are more subject to hay fever than men. Perhaps the suffragettes will soon come into full power and control the best organized vacation affliction this country affords. Suffragette homes for sneezing sisters will doubtless be considered at the convention."

So writes P. F. Jerome, Secretary, 125 E. 24th St., New York.

To the Editor.

DEAR SIR:—I am sending herewith advance copy of the Annual Booklet of the United States Hay Fever Association. I am sure it will be a matter of interest to your readers. You would note the date of the Annual Convention, which meets on Wednesday, August 30th, at Bethlehem, N. H.

The booklet will give you other details concerning the objects of the association and interesting references to exempt places, treatment, experiences of members, etc.

Dr. Osler says that women are more subject to hay fever than men. Perhaps the suffragettes will soon come into full power and control the best organized vacation affliction this country affords. Suffragette homes for sneezing sisters will doubtless be considered at the convention.

Appreciating any notice you may give,

Very truly yours,

P. F. JEROME,
Secretary.

P. S.—Send marked copy to the Secretary.

What Our Brotherhood is Doing in Des Moines

By C. N. Kinney, State President

We dedicated our Grandview Mission Church, which was being promoted by University Brotherhood, in spite of all opposition and drawbacks, yesterday. There was great enthusiasm and splendid feeling and coöperation, and we almost cleared the project of debt in a few minutes of time. This is a great triumph for the Brotherhood work in Des Moines, as everyone feels. This makes the second mission that our Brotherhood has established, equipped and maintained during the last three years, which shows the work that our Brotherhood has accomplished. It has been marvelous and of inestimable value to the churches of Des Moines. Brother Idleman says our Brotherhood has been of great inspiration to him, and his work, as well as to all the people of the Central Church, in what we have accomplished through our local organization. The charter which you sent us was received and the cards distributed yesterday, and we added ten or a dozen names to the list. I want you people to know what a splendid Brotherhood program we had at Ottumwa at the State Convention. It was certainly fine, and many splendid compliments were given Brother Shellenberger's fine address at the banquet hour. He is surely growing in his field of work splendidly. I wish you would express my appreciation of Brother Macfarlane's work, in his retirement, to him. I hope you are all planning to be present at the Silver Bay conference, as we are anxious to have the leaders present at this conference.

Men In Office Not All Crooked

District Brotherhood Formed by the Christian Churches of Northwest Indiana

"There is too much condemnation of men who are in public life," said Congressman E. D. Crumpacker, of Valparaiso, in the course of his address last night at the Brotherhood banquet of the Christian churches. "We lose patriotism when we come to regard all men in public life as crooked grafters. It is true that there are some who are not honest, but it should be remembered that a bottle of ink will turn a whole barrel full of water black.

"A man in politics ought to be just as candid and honest as he is in other walks of life. One who gets votes by misrepresentation is no better than one who gets money by false pretenses."

Judge Crumpacker was introduced by Rev. N. H. Trimble, who presided at the dinner, as the "Lonely Republican, or how it feels to be great."

How It Feels to the Judge.

The tenth district congressman, who is the only Republican from Indiana in either branch of congress, replied to this introduction, that it was, indeed, a novel sensation to be the only Republican. He found it very easy to fill the part, for all there is to do is to embarrass the other fellow who is now responsible. The minority in congress cuts no ice any way.

Judge Crumpacker, who has been a deacon for many years in the Christian church at Valparaiso, spoke eloquently of the growth of his church in recent times in Northwestern Indiana. Referring to the plans for a great Christian church in Gary, he said that just met his view. He would like to take part in its dedication. "And I know what that means," he added, "for I have been to a number of church dedications in my time."

Two Hundred at the Dinner.

Some 200 men attended the Brotherhood banquet, which was held in the basement of the Ogdon building, now serving as church quarters until the new edifice can be erected. There were visitors from Valparaiso, Whiting, Hammond, Michigan City, Lowell and other nearby places. Many came in autos, while trains brought others. The dinner was served by the ladies of the church.

In starting the after-dinner talks, Rev. Trimble awarded a number of banners, which had been won by the churches at Tolleston, Glen Park and Gary.

Rev. Cecil Sharp, the "Hammond Whirlwind," began the formal exercises.

A Splendid Success.

He spoke of the splendid success that had crowned the efforts to bring the church workers of the district together, and suggested that similar dinners be held once a year, a suggestion that was subsequently embodied in a motion that was adopted unanimously. He regarded the dinner as the beginning of bigger and better things in the Calumet region. He spoke of the need of a fine church at Gary, where dinners for a thousand might be held when the magic city came to contain 300,000 people.

Garry L. Cook said that at Indianapolis it might be possible to get a couple of dozen men out to a church dinner as compared with the 200 present. "Gary," he said, "is a truly remarkable burg."

Gary's Reputation.

Capt. H. S. Norton spoke of the industries of Gary and their vast magnitude, and yet he said all this did not make a good city. It was the people who made the city. He feelingly spoke of the high reputation the Gary schools had attained, and said he hoped for the time when Gary would be known as a God-fearing, Christian community, with a reputation as high as that of its schools.

Broad Church Work.

Rev. Claude E. Hill, of Valparaiso, who preceded Capt. Norton, pleaded earnestly for broad church work in the upbuilding of the cause in the Calumet region.

Then Judge Crumpacker was introduced as a loyal member of the church, who was a regular attendant of the Valparaiso church, and who had served as deacon for many years. Judge Crumpacker was received with great enthusiasm, and made an eloquent plea for honest work, whether in trade, in the crafts or in the church.—Gary Tribune.

Flesh and Blood of Brotherhood, L. B. D. No. 329.

By Arthur W. Leu, a Third Year President

EDITOR'S NOTE—The author of this article was a passenger on the Brotherhood train to Portland. Incidentally, he mentioned that the Brotherhood the Howett Street Church at Peoria was caring for the services of the church during the pastor's absence on his vacation. We asked Mr. Leu if he would not tell us how it was done, and the article which follows is just as it came from his pen and is much more valuable by reason of its being first hand information from men who have delivered the goods.

ARTHUR W. LEU
Peoria, Illinois

We have only the morning services to take care of. In the evening services we unite with two other churches in our vicinity to hold tent meetings under the auspices of the Ministerial Association. Our plans for the morning service are brief: Two men are appointed to speak on some subject, which they choose themselves, for about ten minutes. These short talks, along with some special songs and the communion, will constitute our morning services.

In this manner we save the Church the expense of securing an outside speaker, but of far more importance is the development of our own men. This is the Brotherhood stronghold. Its work cannot be measured by numbers or amounts. It penetrates right into the heart and center of our Church work by developing its men.

Another incident of recent date. You will remember of my telling you on our Portland trip that the Church had secured some of the chairs of the Main Street Theater. These chairs had to be fastened to the floor and three of the fellows set a night to do the work. When they arrived on the scene of action there were no less than fifteen fellows there who had heard of the job and had come over to the Church to help.

These are but instances that show what the Brotherhood has done for Howett Street. Three years ago they were unthought of. As you know, for a number of years Rotchford and myself about constituted the working end of the "man-side" of our Church. I mention this merely to show the contrast. When we first spoke of organizing an independent church we wondered whether or not we could secure men enough to constitute our official board.

Now, however, things are very much different. A person coming into our Church after three years of absence would hardly recognize it. We have a fine bunch of fellows—fellows who can do things and this has been largely brought about through our Brotherhood. Mr. Rice has often spoken of the great change in the masculine side of our Church and how it has helped him in his work.

We have been running a series of debates at our regular monthly meetings on such subjects as "Socialism," "Woman Suffrage," "Restriction of Immigration," etc. The fellows take splendid interest in these debates, at the close of which three minutes is allowed each man to express his views on the subject under discussion and there is hardly a man who does not avail himself of the opportunity of expressing his views and sometimes it becomes necessary to call them at the end of their time.

Another Letter from Bolenge

At the end of the first quarter, this year, we have baptized one hundred and seventeen (17). We have larger classes than ever seeking to learn more of God and his love gift, Jesus Christ. Our work is more prosperous than ever. From all sides comes the same cry, "Send us preachers to teach us of God." If our force were twenty-four on the field instead of twelve, we could make preachers out of almost every convert. What a great power that would be! But we must lose this great force, because when we reach our limit we must halt. Everyone is working to his limit now and soon the four large churches and our samer must be taken care of by nine missionaries.

Brother Rains says every missionary should have his first year, at least, for language study alone. But our work has reached such proportions that every new man is put to work at once. This is necessary, because first, our other missionaries are very few, and second, we can't see some one overworked when we can help. This hinders our progress in language study. But what can we do? I'll tell you what you good people may do, send us about twelve more missionaries at once, having three doctors in the number.

Yours in His righteous cause,
CHAS. P. HEDGES.

A Brotherhood Class Picnic

By T. D. Barnett, General Member 404 of Toledo, Ohio

Talk about a picnic, say! We had it yesterday as guests with the Gleaners (a class of young ladies) of the Pastor's Helpers (wives of the B. B. C. organized). A continued round of pleasure and so much to eat, dinner and supper. We played ball also, a regular game. The Married Men vs. the Single Men. Five innings, score 13 to 15, the married men leading. Who said we could not "come back." We have a list of over twenty subscribers to CHRISTIAN MEN, but will wait until the middle of August before sending them in, making an effort during the time to secure fifty or sixty to begin with the September issue, at which time we hope to take up the regular Brotherhood programs and enlist as many in the National Brotherhood organization as possible. We have an enrollment of 112, began January 1st with 33. Our goal is 200 by September 1st, Lord's Day. We have two Brotherhood members and six home department members who are exempt from class attendance; 52 present last Lord's Day and about 75 June 25th.

The National Drink Bill

The following appalling news item concerning the consumption of spirituous and malt liquors appears in the American Grocer of July 12th. The American Grocer enjoys a reputation for accuracy in reporting government statistics and the figures here presented can be relied upon:

"The total consumption of all spirituous and malt liquor has been remarkably steady, almost stationary for the five years, 1906-1910, inclusive. The per capita in 1910 was 21.86 gallons, against a yearly average for five years of 21.89 gallons and 21.71 gallons as the annual average for three years, 1908-1910. Certainly the liquor traffic is being held in check, for there has been no increase during the past five years.

RETAIL COST OF BEVERAGES.

"The following estimate of the retail cost of beverages, used as stimulants, has been compiled yearly by the American Grocer since 1882. The quantities entering into consumption are those reported by the U. S. Bureau of Statistics.

"The following tables are based on the yearly average for three years, 1908-10, as it more fairly represents the quantity annually consumed and the cost than would the figures for any one year.

CONSUMPTION OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

"Malt liquor, imported and domestic.	$ 909,072,257
Spirituous liquors, imported and domestic.	573,206,487
Wines, imported and domestic.	116,642,672

Total alcoholic beverages. . . . $1,598,921,416

IN CONCLUSION.

"It is generally conceded that alcoholic liquor is a good servant, but a bad master; that it is the parent of innumerable crimes, destroys homes, injures the physical condition of the people. For these reasons a constant campaign is waged against the use of spirits. Is it not a source for congratulation that for the past five years any increase in the consumption of liquor has been checked, thus giving encouragement to the foes of the spirituous drink habit and warranting further continued effort to decrease the use of such beverages as debauch humanity and add enormously to the cost of government?"

Reasons For Affiliating

"WHY should our men affiliate with the General Brotherhood movement," is a frequent question put to our secretaries by many of our pastors and brethren throughout the country. This vital question is best answered by the men who have tried the Brotherhood movement, and we have prepared this little bulletin of "Reasons," written by pastors and Brotherhood Presidents themselves, with the hope that our churches throughout the land will take up in real earnest the affiliation of their men with the General Brotherhood, and thus promote the formation of one of the greatest religious armies of the Twentieth century. Read carefully, ponder frequently, consider prayerfully, is the prayer of the officers and directors of THE GENERAL BROTHERHOOD OF DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

Kansas City, Mo., June 1, 1911.

Reasons For Affiliating

What the National Brotherhood Does

By J. D. ARMISTEAD.

The National Brotherhood

maintains a general office and secretaries, clerks, stenographers, and equipment necessary to propagate the movement.

Stirs up men to activity in all departments of our churches.

Develops large classes of men for Bible study.

Promotes general church interest.

"Team work Campaigns."

"Comrades of Paul."

Men for the ministry.

Student aid fund.

Participates in great interdenominational movements for "Men and religion."

Publishes a strong masculine religious journal of information and inspiration.

The Meaning of Cooperation.

By affiliating we have a part in what the National Brotherhood does.

If our men do not affiliate with the National Brotherhood, all others have the same right, and hence no National life will be possible.

Through the National Brotherhood we are lent a helping hand in time of need, and when strong, we return the loan by assisting others who are struggling with the M. Problem.

To be without the National Brotherhood means a severe handicap.

We should cooperate for the opportunity for good to be done, the benefits of the large fellowship afforded by the National life, the greater self-respect when living not for self but for others.

QUESTIONS.

Are we self satisfied, willing to receive and not to give?

Are we willing to be provincial in these days of world-wide ideas?

Will we place the fabled God Terminus the heights of the Blue Ridge Mountains and feel that wisdom will die with us? Are we willing to be isolated, to know nothing of others?

Have we no pride in seeing reports of our own work?

Does the Brotherhood at large know that you have a Men's organization in your church?

LOCAL AIMS NO BAR TO AFFILIATION.

Our Local aim at this writing is "civic righteousness." Affiliation will help us in this sort of work, as in all other aims. Civic righteousness must be supported by religious instruction and conviction.

Affiliation does not interfere with our local membership or program, but rather adds to the effectiveness of our committee work and programs, and offers help where we need it. "Civic righteousness" is best promoted by cooperation of church Brotherhoods, and Local Brotherhoods are best promoted by the scientific methods of the National Brotherhood.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Affiliation will turn the Men's club into a prayer-meeting. Answer—The probabilities are your men will be edified and inspired by occasional Men's Prayer-meetings. A well rounded Brotherhood will not run to either extreme, but rather will develop the social as well as the religious side of man.

Affiliation will cost us some money. Answer—Things worth while cost money. A National Brotherhood that is worth the name takes money to properly operate it. Men are attracted to something in which their money is invested. Men identified with the church ought to be inspired to give money to support all the institutions of the church. The National Brotherhood is one of the agencies that is doing this inspiring work, and the expenditure of time, energy and money in Brotherhood work is reflected in every department of our work, Local, State and National. When our men are inspired to go under any proposition, they perform the task "In a man's way."

We can operate our Local Brotherhood without incurring the monthly dues."

Answer—Yes, a Brotherhood can get along without the wise guidance, and careful oversight of the National Brotherhood, and many of them are doing so, but they are missing a very vital factor in their progress, in that they receive only such assistance as may come to them through the columns of CHRISTIAN MEN (If the men read that sterling paper) or that they gather otherwise, and this in the end is not satisfactory. When the Christian Business Men's Association was launched at the Detroit Convention, many Brotherhoods were organized, only to die without this direction from the National office, which they need exceedingly all along the way, and more especially in their early days. The Brotherhood that feels it can get along without the National Brotherhood is like unto the church that feels that it can get along without the assistance of any of our great National Societies. A church can do Home or Foreign Missionary work without the aid of the A. C. M. S. or the Foreign Society, but it will not do such effective work as it will to give the Foreign Board or the Home Board the money necessary for their operation, and allow them to utilize the expert agencies they maintain for this very purpose in carrying out the Great Commission. The National Brotherhood helps organize the men of the Local church for active service at home and abroad. The church men who feel that they do not need this affiliation for their own benefit ought to feel that they need it for the benefit of "the other fellow" who may need it in a decidedly different way. If you are doing effective work among men in your church without being affiliated, you can do better and more effective work by being affiliated. Then again, the National Brotherhood should be the agent of your men, in Brotherhood missionary work, so that the good impulses of your organization may be carried to the thousands of other men who will profit by your experience, and the small monthly per capita contribution of your men is for the maintenance of the National office, and to make this work possible. Here is where the spirit of Brotherhood prevails in the highest sense. If your men want to be a part of this great Brotherhood, they will want to share the expense with their fellows, and no true Brotherhood man will want to be a part of anything that costs money without standing by it loyally in a financial way. The National Brotherhood takes church men and educates them up to the point where they understand what the National Brotherhood is and stands for and then they come in and help send the word on to other church men who have not caught the vision of Brotherhood.

Boy City Talk

The Boy City Camp

"Then the little Hiawatha
Learned of every bird its language,
Learned their names and all their secrets,
How they built their nests in summer,
Where they hid themselves in winter,
Talked with them whene'er he met them,
Called them, "Hiawatha's chickens."

God's great out of doors. Oh, what joys to be found in the wild woods and in the sparkling, dancing water of some lake or stream. This is surely the boy's true heritage. It means health and happiness. What boy's whole being does not thrill when camping out time is talked about. All boys should get in close touch with nature, and all boys' clubs should plan a summer outing. Nature paints more beautiful pictures than man ever dared and yet how few see, let alone appreciate.

A boys' camp need not be a loafing place, as many of them are. There should not be an idle moment and such is the way the Boy City camps are conducted. Rest comes in change not in idleness. Boys who have the opportunity of getting close to nature are broader and better boys. At a camp there is much freedom and here, too, they can cast aside all conventionalities. Oh the happiness of the barefoot boy. It is good, too, for him to get back into being wild for awhile and the desire to do so is born in him, having been implanted in his very being. Truly, it is "the call of the wild."

Part of the boys' work in any church is to have a summer camp. There are two Boys' Clubs in Kansas City, named Boy City, who arranged to have a camp together. One of these clubs is in the Jackson Avenue and the other is in the Independence Avenue Christian churches. There was some difficulty in securing the right kind of a place and the camp site that was finally selected was found accidentally.

About twelve miles from Kansas City, Kan., on the Leavenworth Electric line there is a little station named Loma Vista. There is a woods close by and Marshall creek flows past or rather through the woods on its way to the Missouri. In these woods once lived the Wyandotte Indians and we camped on their camping ground and drank from the springs that they drank from and played Indian and Scout on the same hills and in the ravines where once the little Indian boys played hide and seek, or hunted for wild game.

There were sixty boys with us from to time. The first week there were in thirty-five boys. The second week twenty and the third week twenty boys. The was spent in swimming, volley ball, cr and Indian scouting. Every evening the gathered around the camp fires and sang and told stories.

Every Sunday afternoon a service was on the hillside. At these meetings the sang Sunday-school songs and sometimes boys spoke or one of the leaders gave lesson. Several times the boys would solos or duets.

Chas. B. Hahn, the leader of the Work in the Independence Boulevard Ch and Moses Young, the leader of the Work in Jackson Avenue, were the dire of the camp.

The boys who camped were divided as follows: 34 from the Independence Boulevard Christian, 19 from the Jackson Avenue, 1 the Linwood and 2 from Topeka, Kan. had about sixty adult visitors while in can.

It costs something to take a party of camping and be with them three weeks. Sn who read these lines may be interested knowing just what it cost to run the camp for what the money was spent.

Some Rules of the Game

¶ You never know a boy until you live with him. Take him camping some and you will know what kind of a boy he is.

¶ Boys do not like to have mothers make over them in the presence of company especially is this true when a crowd of other boys are around.

¶ You will notice that the boys who are bluffers and bullies with the little fellows are usually afraid of the older boys and in the dark.

¶ It is a good thing for a boy to get away from home and be homesick. He usually find that it is not so easy to get along with other fellows as with his parents, who give up to them.

¶ Just remember that a boy would rather be the leader of his gang than be president of the United States.

¶ A boy with all muscle without an educated mind to direct, or a heart to guide is the worst kind of an animal to turn loose on the world. Do not develop a pugilist.

¶ There is no kind of soap that can wash out the filthy stories and pictures that get into a boy's heart. See to it that the boys have good clean company.

¶ Broken limbs can be mended but no power but the blood of Christ can reach the soul of the boy who has gone wrong.

¶ Be sure that you and your son are not strangers.

¶ Boys must be reached to be helped and they must be reached in the sphere in which they live. Any other way is all Greek to them.

¶ Deny the boy his companions and you will spoil him. Many a boy has gotten off the track because of lonesomeness and because he was hungry for love and sympathy.

¶ Remember, too, that Christ cares for the working boy.

¶ The boy should have a place of his very own. He should be permitted to fix up some place just as he chooses where he can feel that he is king of a kingdom. He should have some corner in the house away from where he has to be careful—don't touch—be quiet, and many other "don'ts."

¶ Find out what a boy's day dreams are made of and you will be pretty apt to find a way into his heart, and perhaps make those dreams realities.

The day dreams of the average boy today are of sports and going out into the world to make his way. He does not care to dream of fairy god-mothers who might some day drop a pot of gold into his lap.

Do not make fun of the boy who straps stilts to his legs to make himself tall—never tell him that stilts will not carry a heavy load; that there must be a more solid foundation.

Some boys are all bluff outwardly and are always “shooting hot air” (talking big), while others are so everlastingly touchy that should you poke your finger at them they would cry, or get mad.

Interpretation.

In the Devotional part of this program let the leader conduct a service of special prayer for the Bible School. The Brotherhood should remember that it is not only a brotherhood, but also a fatherhood. Let the men pray for a vision of a well-equipped Bible School—one that is serving the community in gaining a knowledge of God’s Word.

Let the Scripture reading be carefully selected, read in a way that carries a message. Let nothing hap-hazard and impromptu.

Let the music be such hymns as have a real message to them. Ragtime songs may tingle one’s nerves, but they do not arouse strong, manly emotions.

Conduct your business in a business way. Write all reports. If your committees have no reports, it is proof that they are not working. Insist on work done, of which it will be worth while to make report.

Make your Recess a social time. If your membership has been at work, then there will be new members to welcome. If the social committee has been at work they will see that this recess is made profitable as well as enjoyable.

Your cultural work is, after all, the chief end of your meeting. See that the addresses are assigned in plenty of time for speakers to make ample preparation. For material on first address, look up article, “Robert Raikes,” in good encyclopedia. Also write Robt. M. Hopkins, Carew Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, and R. P. Shepherd, 1221 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., for suggestions. Consult libraries on Sunday-School literature.

A good teacher in public schools would be a good one to handle the second address. Whether or not your school should take up the Graded System of Lessons, will be decided when you see the pedagogical value of the graded lessons. A good psychologist will see their value at a glance. Enlist the best talent in your community, as well as the man who needs to be developed.

For the third address, one will have to consult the back numbers of our Sunday-School journals and magazines. “The Adult Monthly,” of the David C. Cook Publishing Co., Elgin, Ill., has some good things. Also literature published by Christian Publication Society, 1221 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo.

For the last address, let the speaker look your Bible School problems square in the face, and sincerely and intelligently answer this question. The advancement of the Kingdom is what you are called to for.

Clinch the program by setting in the machinery that will realize visions.

Interpretation.

In your devotions pray for a clean for Christian Men to attend primaries a strong sense of Christian responsibility as to citizenship.

In the business session and reception would only repeat what is said in former interpretations.

In your cultural part of this program room for splendid work. Give the address to one who knows politics; let him emphasize the fact that many of our existing evils are due to the fact that, otherwise, good men become citizens when they have not enough interest to attend primaries, and vote religiously when election comes. See Rauschenbusch's "Christianity and Social Crisis," Chap., "What To Do." Also T. C. Hull's "Social Problems in the Light of Christian Ethics."

For the second address read Shuman's "What Would Jesus Do?" and "The Fixation of Philip Strong."

Careful and practical observation in the field will give the debaters all the material they need for a good discussion. The resolution speaks for itself.

Try These Programs

They may be cut to suit your local needs, or otherwise amended. But try them, brethren. The result will be incalculable good to your whole church, and especially to your men themselves. Some more and better ones next month.

LESSON 2—SEPTEMBER 10.

"DANIEL AND HIS COMPANIONS."

—DANIEL 1:8-20.

Temperance Lesson.

P. H. WELSHIMER

8 But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the king's dainties, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. 9 Now God made Daniel to find kindness and compassion in the sight of the prince of the eunuchs. 10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your food and your drink: for why should he see your faces worse looking than the youths that are of your own age? so would ye endanger my head with the king. 11 Then said Daniel to the steward whom the prince of the eunuchs had appointed over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: 12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse to eat, and water to drink. 13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the youths that eat of the king's dainties; and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

14 So he hearkened unto them in this matter, and proved them ten days. 15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer, and they were fatter in flesh, than all the youths that did eat of the king's dainties. 16 So the steward took away their dainties, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse.

17 Now as for these four youths, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. 18 And at the end of the days which the king had appointed for bringing them in, the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar. 19 And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king. 20 And in every matter of wisdom and understanding, concerning which the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and enchanters that were in all his realm.

Time. The lesson begins 605 B. C. It covers a period of three years.

Place. Babylon, on the Euphrates.

Golden Text. "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth."—Rom. 4:21.

Introduction. Jeremiah and Habakkuk were prophesying in Jerusalem when Daniel was carried away, and Ezekiel was his contemporary in Babylonia. He was on the river Chebar, southeast of Babylon. Read the first seven verses of the first chapter of Daniel. Here we have an account of his being taken to Babylon. Nebuchadnezzar's father had just died. He now hastened from the siege of Jerusalem back to Babylon to become king. In the third year of Jehoiakim's reign, Jehoiakim and many of the treasures of the temple were carried into the land of Shinar. The king spake unto Ashpenaz, the master of his eunuchs, to bring some of the city royal, well-favored and sound youths; those who were filled with wisdom and knowledge and understanding the sciences, that they might be taught in the learning of the tongue of the Chaldean. Daniel and three companions were selected from the number who had been taken away. A certain portion of food from the king's table, including his wine, was to be given them, and at the end of three years they were to make their appearance before the king. The names of these young men were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah. Their names were compounded with the name of God. Daniel meant God is my judge; Hananiah, Jehovah is gracious; Mishael, this is as God; Azariah, Jehovah is a Helper. Their new names were connected up with those of royalty and of idols. Daniel's was Belteshazzar, favored of Bel, a Babylonian god.

Explanatory. 8—Daniel purposed in his heart. Literally "laid it on his heart;" that he would not defile himself with the king's meat, that is, with the food that came from the king's table. Ashpenaz was the prince of the eunuchs. The young men were under his charge. To him Daniel made his appeal, with the request that he might not defile himself. Here was both a test of faith and of courage. To eat the king's food would mean to transgress the Jewish law, as to food, and would be a repudiation of the religion of Jehovah. The eating of rich food, such as swine, was forbidden by Jewish law. Lev. 11. The heathen also consecrated their meals by offering a portion to idols. To partake of this food appeared to Daniel and his companions as participating in idolatrous worship. 9—brought Daniel into favor and tender love. Daniel was doubtless a lovable person. His kindness and faithfulness, firmness and courage could not but help win him the admiration and respect of the prince of the eunuchs, who was his overseer. 10—I fear my Lord the King. In three years the young men would stand before the king. If their faces were pale and their bodies weak, then the prince of the eunuchs would be brought to account for not having given them the proper care and food. He believed that the food prescribed was necessary for their strength. Others were receiving this food and the overseer believed they would thrive, while Daniel and his companions would weaken. 11-13—Then said Daniel. He spoke to the chief butler, who furnished the food. It would seem the prince of the eunuchs was willing for the change, but did not want to bear the responsibility, and yet wanted to please Daniel. Pulse and water. The term stands for vegetables. This was surely the simple life—a vegetable and water diet. Then let our countenances be looked upon. Here was a fair test. After ten days of trial on a vegetable diet, these four young men were to be compared with those who had eaten the king's meat and had drunk of wine. 14-16—So he consented, and at the end of ten days, the four vegetarians were in better condition than the others. The test having been successful, their diet would now be vegetables and water for three years. 17—Gave unto them skill. God blessed these four youths. First they received the blessing that comes directly from obedience to natural laws; second, God was with them in a special way, and Daniel was given to understand visions and dreams. He doubtless learned science, was well versed in literature and in the philosophy of the Chaldeans. All four had this learning. But Daniel was given the power to understand visions and dreams. 18-19—The prince of the eunuchs brought them in. At the expiration of the three years, the company of boys in training were brought before Nebuchadnezzar and he communed with them. None could compare with Daniel and his three companions, and they were selected to stand before the king. They became advisers and were numbered with the leading officers of his kingdom. He found them ten times better than all magicians. On ordinary matters they were better informed, gave better counsel and in everything that required especial wisdom, they were far superior to the most learned class of that day.

Comments on the Lesson

The early religious training of these four youths helped them to form a purpose. It had planted them on a sure foundation. The Jews have taught all people the great lesson of the early training of the child. Nothing else is quite so helpful to the boy as to have good home influences. It must be remembered they were now a long ways from home, in a strange land and among strangers, but they were not forgetful of the home training. They took a decided stand. Only those who stand definitely on a proposition are safe. The man who hasn't any purpose and who is unstable, becomes the subject of many temptations. Each young man strengthened the other. It was easier for the four to stand together than for one to stand alone. When Jesus sent his disciples forth they went by twos. Each one strengthened the other. While these boys were positive and firm in the stand they took, they did not make themselves disagreeable, but in their kindly manner, won the love and admiration of the prince of the eunuchs. We can disagree with people and still retain their friendship. The prince of the eunuchs demonstrates the value of a friend. We would not get very far in this world were it not for our friends. A man will talk about being self-made and also about being independent. The independent man moves slowly and the self-made man cannot be found, for we are all products of the forces that play about us.

Questions on the Lesson

Who was Nebuchadnezzar? Who was Jehoiakim? How did Daniel and his companions come to be in Babylon? Who were the prophets in Judah at this time? What prophet was prophesying in Babylonia? What was Daniel's proposition? Why did he make it? Where was the harm in eating the King's meat? To whom did Daniel go with his request? What diet did he follow? In what way was Daniel blessed above his three companions? Why did he receive favor from the chief of the butlers? Where was Daniel born? What is meant by standing before the king? Why were the names of these four boys changed?

LESSON 3—SEPTEMBER 17.

"DANIEL'S COMPANIONS IN THE FIERY FURNACE."—DANIEL 3:13-28

13 Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. Then they brought these men before the king. 14 Nebuchadnezzar answered and said unto them, Is it of your purpose, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, that ye serve not my god, nor worship the image which I have made, well; but if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image which I have set up? 15 If ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that god that shall deliver you out of my hands? 16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego answered and said to king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we have no need to answer thee in this matter. 17 If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; he will deliver us out of thy hand, O king. 18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace seven times more than it was wont to be heated. 20 And he commanded certain mighty men that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace. 21 Then these men were bound in their breeches, their tunics, and their mantles, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. 22 Therefore because the king's commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego. 23 And the three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

Golden Text. "The Lord is my helper and I will not fear what man shall do unto me"—Heb. 13:6.

Introduction. For a study of the important events transpiring between the lesson of last Lord's Day and today, one should read the second chapter of Daniel. In this chapter Nebuchadnezzar had his dream. He forgets it. His wise men cannot recall it, nor could they have explained it had they been able to recall. Death is pronounced on all the wise men of the land. Daniel hears of it and asks permission to stand before the king. With his three companions he prays to God for a recall and an understanding of the dream; then appearing before Nebuchadnezzar, explains the vision. Daniel's God is now glorified and the young man is honored. He is given many presents and made ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief governor over the wise men of Babylon. At the request of Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, his three companions, were appointed over the affairs of the province of Babylon. At the time of our lesson today, Jerusalem had been destroyed and the Jews were held in captivity in the Babylonian empire. Jeremiah remained in Jerusalem and Zedekiah and Jehoiakim were captives in Babylon. Nebuchadnezzar was now desirous of consolidating his whole kingdom. His campaign against Egypt, Syria and Arabia had been successful and upon his return he builds a golden image, sixty cubits in height, and makes a great religious festival. Owing to the various countries and races represented in his kingdom, there was but very little unity and there was danger that at any time his kingdom might break in pieces. He now endeavored to bring all these together through the power of worship. The Jews had had a common center at Jerusalem, so here at the capital, Nebuchadnezzar set in place a great image, expecting all to rally 'round it. Babylon itself was one of the most beautiful cities in the world. Here the image was reared to the Babylonian god, Bel 'Melrodach. What a figure it was, ninety feet in height and nine feet broad. Here on a certain day came the officers richly attired. What a motley gathering it was. People of all tongues and tribes; sons of every clime. In all the tongues it was announced that when the bands would strike the signal they should all fall down and worship this golden image, and if they would not fall down they would be cast into a fiery furnace.

Explanatory. 8-12—*Certain Chaldeans * * * brought accusation against the Jews.* No doubt the three men who had been raised to popular favor with the king were objects of envy on the part of the Chaldeans, as they were not in love with the Jew, or any other foreigner, for that matter. Their attitude would be closely watched, and especially in a high place. The position they had taken might prove disastrous to the worship of the Babylonian god, and a report was made to the king. 13—Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury. Angry because his laws had been transgressed, his word ignored. He doubtless felt these men were under obligations to him for what he had done for them. Their actions would bring discord and defeat the very purpose of the gathering. His word was supreme and must not be ignored. 14—Is it true? or as the Revised Version puts it, 24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste: he spake and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. 25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt; and the aspect of the fourth is like a son of the gods. 26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace: he spake and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, ye servants of the Most High God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego came forth out of the midst of the fire. 27 And the satraps, the deputies, and the governors, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, that the fire had no power upon their bodies, nor was the hair of their head singed, neither were their breeches changed, nor had the smell of fire passed on them.

28 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and have yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

"Is it of purpose?" that is, have you meant to do as you have done? He could not receive why these men would refuse his command, knowing his power. 15—Now if you are ready. If you will obey from this on, the past will be forgiven; otherwise, the fiery furnace was to be their doom. Nebuchadnezzar had not reckoned with God or he never would have said, "Who is that God that shall deliver you from out of my hands?" 16—Answered and said to the king. What courage these three young men had. They were not afraid to even face the king and defy his words. There was only one thing for them to do, and that was to be true to Jehovah. 17-18—If it be so. If we are cast into the furnace, God is able to deliver us, but if he doesn't see fit to do so, we will suffer death rather than disobey to your decree. 19—The form of his visage was changed. Nebuchadnezzar was not angry that his very face was changed. He lost all control of himself. He was in the habit of doing this. When his wise men could not recall his dream, he ordered them put to death. When these three young men refused to worship his God, he ordered them killed. He orders the furnace heated seven times more than was their custom. 22—He commanded most mighty men. He selected the strongest men, from whom they could not escape. These bound the three men and cast them into the fiery furnace. 22-23—When the mighty men came to the furnace with their three worshipers of Jehovah. The flame of fire slew them, but the three God-fearing men fell down in the midst of the burning, fiery furnace. 24-25—And the king was astonished. Astonished because he now saw four men walking in the midst of the fire, and the form of the fourth was like the Son of God. 26—Then Nebuchadnezzar came near. He called the three young men from the furnace. He now called them servants of the Most High God. 27—Saw these men. The princes, the governors, the captains and the king's counsellors; all the great men of the kingdom saw these men step forth. The fire had not touched their bodies, not even their hair was burned. 28—Then Nebuchadnezzar spake. He must certainly have something to say. He said, "Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego." He recognized that God was with them and that his angel had been sent to deliver them. He had recognized this same Jehovah when Daniel interpreted his dream, but soon had forgotten it. He was now made to recognize this God again. 29—I make a decree. It was his decree that every people, nation and language who should speak anything amiss against the God of these three young men should be cut in pieces and their house destroyed. And the three young men were promoted.

What a commotion a few men can make. Because these three young men were true to their convictions, all this trouble came about. But they were right and could not agree to yield, though the king had given commandment. Here was where God's law was greater than man's. When God says one thing and man says another, there is but one thing to do—follow where God leads. These young men showed their courage in the time of a great test. It sometimes takes a crisis like this to reveal the true man. It is no effort to worship Jehovah when that worship is popular, to go to church when everybody else goes when you have a good house in which to assemble and listen to good sermons and hear fine music and be surrounded with friends and a multitude of people of a common faith. But when you must have uncongenial surroundings, and it takes an effort to attend church services and when it is unpopular to be a follower of Jehovah, or as in the case of these three young men, it means punishment and possibly death to do so, ah, then it is that old faith is tried. These young men were above a bribe. Many men would have said, "I am under obligations to the king; by him I have been elevated to this high place; I must do his bidding to hold my job; after all it will be only a little thing to do, and while I am doing it I will have the outward form of worship I will not have the spirit; in public I bow to his order where everybody else is doing it; in private I will worship Jehovah." But this was not the reasoning of the true men of God. They were not deceptive nor traitorous. They had convictions and stood by them. The early teaching back in the Judean home was again bearing fruit. God was watching above His own. That same God loves and cares for us today. His eye is constantly upon us. If He took note of the three Hebrews, will He not also behold us today? And while God may not see fit to release us always from our hands, yet He knows us and always doeth that which is best for us. We are to commit our ways unto the Lord. "All things work together for good to those that love the Lord, who are the called according to His purpose."

Questions for Class Use

Give the contents of the second chapter of Daniel. Give the names of the three young men who were cast into the furnace. What was their position in the kingdom of Babylon? Why had Nebuchadnezzar erected a statute of gold? In whose honor was it built? What decree went forth from the king? Who reported the attitude of the three young men to the king? What effect did this have upon Nebuchadnezzar? Did their deliverance from death affect him? What new decree went forth? What can you say of the character of Nebuchadnezzar?

LESSON 4—SEPTEMBER 24.

"DANIEL IN THE LION'S DEN."—DANIEL 6:10-23.

10 And when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house (now his windows were open in his chamber toward Jerusalem); and he kneeled upon his three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime. 11 Then these men assembled together, and found Daniel making petition and prayer before his God. 12 Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's interdict: Hast thou not heard an interdict, that every man that shall make petition unto any god or man within thirty days, save unto thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. 13 Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, who is one of the children of the captivity of Judah, doeth not thee, O king, nor the interdict which thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day. 14 Then the king, when he heard these words, was sore displeased, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and he labored till the going down of the sun to rescue him. 15 Then these men assembled together unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that according to the law of the Medes and Persians, that no interdict nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed. 16 Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee. 17 And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that nothing might be changed concerning Daniel. 18 Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting; neither were instruments of music brought before him: and his sleep fled from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. 20 And when he came near unto the den to Daniel, he cried with a lamentable voice; the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions? 21 Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live forever. 22 My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, and they have not hurt me; forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt. 23 Then was the king exceedingly glad, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he had trusted in his God.

Golden Text. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them."—Psa. 34:7.

Introduction. Read Daniel 4 and 5. Chapter four gives us the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, and Daniel interprets it. Later the prophecy is fulfilled and Nebuchadnezzar eats like the ox and is again endowed with reason and wisdom and takes his place on the throne. Chapter five gives us the handwriting on the wall and the capture of Babylon by Cyrus, the Mede. There is nearly fifty years between the lesson of last Lord's Day and the one of today. Daniel is now a man between eighty and ninety years of age. The end of his exile is near at hand. Darius had set over the kingdom one hundred and twenty satraps. Over them were three presidents, one of whom was Daniel. Daniel was distinguished above them all because he had an excellent spirit, hence he was placed over the entire realm. This aroused jealousy on the part of the others and thus they sought an opportunity of bringing him into the contempt of Darius. But he was faultless. Then they said, "We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it concerning the law of his God." They then met with Darius and informed him that all the officials had conspired together and desired to establish a royal statute and demanded that whosoever should make a petition of any god or man for thirty days, except of the king, shall be cast into the den of lions. And Darius signed the writing and the interdict.

Explanatory. 10—Now when Daniel knew. The writing signed, Daniel went into his house and followed his usual custom of kneeling three times a day with his face toward Jerusalem, and gave thanks to God. This was not for show nor to be contrary. It was only his custom, and the king's edict could not change him. 11—Then these men assembled. They were watching Daniel, and knowing his faithfulness expected him to do just what he did. 12—They came near and spake before the king. It was the boast of the Medes and Persians that their laws changed not and were always enforced. 13—Then answered they and said. The charge is now preferred against Daniel. 14—The King was sore displeased. The law had been passed and must now be enforced, and the king was exceedingly sorry to see Daniel punished. He was a valuable man in his kingdom and he labored through all the day to spare him. 15—Then these men assembled and said. They constantly held before the king the fact that laws could not be changed. This was a goad unto the king. On one hand was his best friend, with whom he was dealing; on the other the sanctity and honor of the law was at stake, and back of that was a foolish law, foolishly made, and the selfish, jealous men who prompted the king. 16—They brought Daniel and cast him into the den of lions. According to the custom of the Orient, this was done on the evening of the same day. The king had faith in Daniel's God to deliver him. 17—A stone was laid upon the mouth of the den. This was the door through which the animals were put into the den. 18—The king * * * passed the night fasting. The king was grieved over the loss of Daniel. There was no music that night, neither was there sleep in the king's chamber. 19-20—And the king arose at midnight, and went in haste to the den of lions. He expected to find Daniel alive, hence his call, "O Daniel, etc." 21-22—Then said Daniel. He gave God the credit. It was God's angel who had been sent to close the lions' mouths. 23—Then was the king exceeding glad. From 24-28 we learn the king had brought before him Daniel's accusers, and they were cast into the den of lions, with their children and their wives, and their bones were broken. And Darius sent forth a decree to all the peoples of the nations in all the earth "that in the dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear the God of Daniel, for he is a living God, steadfast forever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end." And Daniel prospered, both in the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus, the Persian.

Daniel was the most honored and the most distinguished of all the Jews in the Babylonian empire at this time. By virtue of his position, his intelligence, wisdom and favor of the Lord, he was known to all and was looked upon as a pattern which the others would imitate. What a terrible thing is envy. It was through this that the king's decree was made, that anyone praying to any other than himself for thirty days would be cast into the lions' den. Doubtless Daniel's accusers laughed and rejoiced when they saw he had been brought into the disfavor of the king and when the door was opened and Daniel was cast into the pit, they thought their evil purpose had been accomplished. But in a few hours Daniel is out, restored to his position and has demonstrated the power of his God, while his accusers with their wives and children were crushed, mangled and killed by the very lions which they had expected to destroy Daniel. Daniel had convictions and adhered to them. Notwithstanding his position and his debt of gratitude to the king, he would not bow to any other than Jehovah. How great a man was Daniel. Today, many a man casts aside his religious convictions and neglects the church for a few paltry dollars, for the sake of a man or a company of men, for the sake of social or business standing. Such a one is always the loser. The man who stands by the right because it is right is always the winner.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Daniel? How long had he been in Babylon? How did he come to be in Babylon? Who was the king at this time? How old was Daniel? What was his position in the kingdom? Who suggested the worship of the king, and why? What of the men who suggested this worship? Why was Daniel cast into the den of lions? Why did he pray toward Jerusalem three times daily? How was he delivered from the lions? What effect did his deliverance have upon the king? What became of the men who laid the trap for Daniel? Can you recall any other instance in Old Testament history where a similar thing was done?

LESSON 1—OCTOBER 1.

"THE PROPHET EZEKIEL A WATCHMAN."—EZEKIEL 3:12-21.

12 Then the Spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me the voice of a great rushing, say, Blessed be the glory of Jehovah from his place. 13 And I heard the noise of the wings of the living creatures as they touched one another, and the noise of the wheels beside them, even the noise of a great rushing. 14 So the Spirit lifted me up, and took me away; and I went in bitterness, in the heat of my spirit; and the hand of Jehovah was strong upon me. 15 Then I came to them of the captivity at Telabib, that dwelt by the river Chebar, and to where they dwelt; and I sat there overwhelmed among them seven days.

16 And it came to pass at the end of seven days, that the word of Jehovah came unto me, saying, 17 Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me. 18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thy hand. 19 Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. 20 Again, when a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteous deeds which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thy hand. 21 Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous man doth not sin, he shall surely live: because he took warning; and thou hast delivered thy soul.

Time. Ezekiel was carried into exile 597 B. C., when 10,000 were carried to Babylon with Jehoiachin. This prophecy was written 592 B. C., five years later. The book of Ezekiel was written at Telabib, on the river Chebar, in Babylonia. This part was a message especially to the Jews remaining in Jerusalem and for the exiles in Babylonia.

Golden Text. "Hear the word of my mouth and give them warning for me."—Ezekiel 3:17.

Introduction. Ezekiel means, God strengthens. He was a priest and a prophet. He began to prophesy about the age of thirty. He was married. Ezek. 24:15-17. Let the reader read carefully the first three chapters of this prophecy. The first half of the book, chapters 1-24, was written in four years preceding the final siege of Jerusalem. The prophet endeavored to influence the Jews to turn to God and be saved. He coaxed, invited, pleaded, brought, commanded, threatened, scared, did everything possible for a man to do to help them, but all in vain.

Explanatory. 12—Then the spirit lifted him up. In the first chapter we have a description of the vision which appeared to the prophet. God spoke to the prophet, commanding him to preach to the captives. A book was handed him, which he was commanded to eat, symbolical of the fact that he was full of the Word of God, hence duty was upon him to deliver the message to the people to whom he was sent. In chapter 2:2 we learn the spirit possessed him, and his mind was lifted up beyond his surroundings. I hear behind me. It seemed to the prophet he was now carried away from the throne, and a voice sounded as the voice of a great rushing. 13—The noise of wings. The throne was supported at each corner by living creatures, and beside each one was a wheel. A noise was made by the wings of the living creatures and wheels. 14—So the spirit lifted him up. Under this impulse, he began his task. In bitterness. The prophet was now in full sympathy with Jehovah, and with Jehovah he was sharing the feeling against Judah and her sin. 15—Overwhelmed. He now came to the people in captivity. Righteous indignation and his deep sympathy with the people overwhelmed him. For seven days he was silent. 16-17—Son of man. God used this title in addressing the prophet. This was not a distinctive title. It simply means one of the human race. By using this expression, a great contrast is manifested between the heavenly and earthly. A watchman. He was also a prophet. And as both a watchman and prophet, it was not his to be silent. Therefore, hear the word of God, warning. 18-19—When I say unto the wicked. This watchman saw the coming danger. He had been commanded to warn the people. If he did his duty and they refused to give heed, he was free from their blood. But if he refused to warn, their blood would be upon him. It was not for him to be concerned as to whether they gave heed or not; it was simply his to do God's bidding, then would he be blameless. 20—His blood will I require at thy hand. If a man shall die because he has not been warned, the sin will still be held against him and his righteous deeds shall be forgotten, but the one that refused to warn him must give an account for his blood. 21—Thou hast delivered thy soul. The prophet's soul will be delivered when he warns the righteous that he sin not.

Ezekiel's vision brought him into full sympathy with God and helped him to see the awfulness of sin and the need of sounding a warning that might be for the salvation of Judah. That the impression might be as effective as possible, symbols were used. When the task had been given and the prophet had gone to the field of action, he was so overwhelmed with the sense of responsibility and so startled by the condition of the people that for seven days he was silent. These were not days for silence or inaction, but they were the days in which ringing messages should have been given to the people, arousing them to a sense of their sin and danger. It is always difficult to create "hunger and thirst for righteousness" on the part of the people. When the people do not feel their sin and have no desire for a better life, it makes the work of the messenger the harder. The watchman of the city, from his point of vantage, sounds the alarm when an enemy approaches. While his trumpet sounds not, the people sleep in peace, knowing they are safe. Should that watchman sleep or be bribed to sound no alarm, he is held responsible for their blood. If he should sound a warning and the people disregard it, then the fault lies not at his door. He cannot decide whether the people will give heed or not. His whole duty is to warn. Every Christian is a watchman. We are not commanded to Christianize the world, but to evangelize it. We can decide whether it shall be evangelized or not. It remains to the ones to whom the evangelization is given to decide as to the Christianization. We evangelize when we preach. Men are Christianized when they comply with the preaching; therefore it is not to reason whether the people will give heed or not to our message. We simply have to deliver the message, then we are free. It is God's desire to save all people. How wonderful are the means which He employs to reach the people. It is interesting to study the Gospel with this thought in view. Some are reached by love, others by fear. And there is that in the Gospel which can appeal to the various temperaments found in the world. We are not only to study the Book in order to be a workman not to be ashamed, but must also study mankind that we may know the message which will reach and win.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Ezekiel? Where was he born? Where did he do his preaching? What was the burden of his prophecy? How was he called to be a prophet? When was he carried into captivity and where? What is the duty of the watchman? Give a practical application of this lesson.

HEART TO HEART

MESSAGE FROM A FRIEND
A letter from a friend of long standing, living far out on the edges, in the morning mail—a voice from a heart that is struggling for self-expression, and to find solutions for life-problems. Loyalty and anxiety are the prominent notes of this letter. Here are a few characteristic sentences:

"With all of its imperfections the church is the best thing on earth, even though it does give so much of its time to running the machinery. What is the remedy? Is the Brotherhood solving the problem? Is it developing the idea of method of MANLY service?"

A PERTINENT QUESTION INDEED

If the Brotherhood is simply inventing another piece of machinery to consume some of our men's time regardless of manly results it is unworthy serious attention. We join with our friend in saying "The church is the best thing on earth, even with all its imperfections." It is the consciousness of this fact that has made the Brotherhood throw its forces behind the whole church rather than attempt to organize itself into a department of the church. The Brotherhood does not want to be known as a segment of the church in competition with other segments, fighting to secure an individual footing and to maintain an individual existence. It wants to be the masculine element of the church associated, trained, articulated, and active in the interests of this "Best Thing On Earth."

CHURCH MASCULINITY DEFINED

IDEAL
CONDITION The ideal social condition of which men are dreaming—paint it in what words you will—is the same thing that Jesus saw when He mentioned the "Kingdom of God." The Church is the nucleus of this social community—the center around which this Kingdom must gather.

The church is the generator of righteous forces that ramify throughout the social world. The church is society's incubator of righteousness. It is the mainspring that drives the moral machinery of the Universe, while everyday experience is the balance wheel. Little by little are we coming to realize this. Redemption of society is the church's task.

To really make the church all this—to make her the effective force for cleaning up the earth, alleviating the ills of life, wiping away tears, inspiring hope, placing ideals, energizing men, the Brotherhood has set itself.

A SUPERHUMAN
TASK "A superhuman task" did I hear someone say? Of course it is. No one denies that. It ever has been a superhuman task. Jesus knew that when He said, "I'll be with you always even to the end." But the Brotherhood is not daunted because of the bigness of the task. Its very bigness is our inspiration, working arm in arm and shoulder to shoulder with the man of Galilee is intoxicating to a righteous frenzy. Yes, the Brotherhood is giving men the "idea of Manly service."

JESUS'
METHOD But is it giving men "Method?" It is not inventing any method. It only touch the smallest segment of masculine forces if it did. The Brotherhood is emphasizing the value of Jesus' method. "Whatsoever ye would have men should do unto you do ye even so unto them." This is Jesus' enunciation of an adequate and only method and is His command issued from the highest peak of moral experience and informed vision. His method is effective and His command final.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things (that others are seeking) will be added unto you," is His announcement of the Ultimate life purpose, and the "Golden Rule" is His method of realization.

The Brotherhood is incessantly and urgently bringing men face to face with this purpose and method.

IS THE METHOD
PRACTICAL? We are in a crisis greater than which the world has never passed.

This crisis is neither Philosophical nor Theological. It is a social crisis. And crisis it is, too. This crisis can be analyzed into three grand divisions

1. The child problem.
2. The sexual problem.
3. The industrial problem.

THE PROBLEMS The child problem includes child labor, child rearing, orphanage, slum, educational environment, sanitation, penal, reformatory and child directive problems.

The sexual problem includes the marriage and divorce evils, the social white slave traffic, voluntary prostitution (which is comparatively light compared with compulsory), amusement question, adolescent education and training, Christianizing of the public schools and ethicizing of sexual intelligence.

The industrial problem includes the relation between labor and capital, between foreman and gang, between judge and defendant or plaintiff, between landlord and tenant, between producer and consumer, between legislator and constituent, between yourself and whomsoever you may have industrial relations.

And we have not drawn the picture complete. It can't be done. The vision is spherical, one mind can see but one at a time. But the Golden Rule finds its way to the solution of all these problems—finds its way through all its ramifications. Should everyone treat the other fellow's child like he would like the other fellow to treat his child were conditions reversed, there would be no child problem. Should every man treat the female members of his fellow's house the way he'd like to have the other fellow to treat the women of his own household there would be no sexual problem. Should every employee treat the employer like he would like the employer to treat him if conditions were reversed, and employer treated the employee, there would be no labor problem. The Golden Rule in the hearts of landlord and tenant solves the tenement question,—in the hearts of the people solves the people's problems. It does not annihilate the demand for justice, it makes genuine heroism possible.

This is the method the Brotherhood is emphasizing. It must be started first among the members of the local church, from which it will eventually radiate and ramify. Cake and pie, milk and doughnuts, funny and jolly songs, feeds and fests, only the rippling of the stream—the music of the hearts happy in service. The water that turns the wheels is the love deep down in men's hearts that leads to true heroism—that makes the Kingdom of God first in purpose and the Golden Rule their rule of relationship.

Brethren, life is intoxicating when seen from Jesus' viewpoint and lived according to His method. The church becomes an irresistible force for everybody's good, a great heart seething with sympathy, a conquering army spreading peace and prosperity in its wake, when given the Christ-intended place in your life and mine.

A Frank Inquirer

"We are in receipt of your literature concerning the organization of a local Brotherhood, and beg to say that we see and feel very intensely the need of such an organization, but now, we are puzzled as to just what course to pursue.

"Briefly stated, the conditions are as follows: Building and equipment, new and modern, with large room for the men. Bible School class numbering about twenty-five with about a dozen average attendance. No class organization, consequently no name or motto. Several of Church Board not in Bible Class and some few afraid of the present course of International Lessons. Think possibly could enlist most all of the Board in the Brotherhood Movement.

"Now, would you advise trying to organize the class first or taking up the work of the Local Brotherhood as nearly as possible in its entirety. Think we can start off with fifteen or twenty members for a Brotherhood and perhaps twenty-five. Kindly let us have a few minutes of your time as to the best way out of the situation. We MUST organize something that will reach more men. There are perhaps fifty loose men who ought to be brought into the work within six or eight months with the proper effort. Wish we had one of your workers down here for about five hours, would certainly use him well in a needy cause."

What do you think we told this inquirer? We told him that we would suggest the Brotherhood organization first, for the reason that we have found that where the Brotherhood is organized first, the Bible Class organization comes along a little later and is stimulated and strengthened because it has the Brotherhood to tie to and help it grow.

Our SECOND REASON for advising the Brotherhood organization first, is, that where the Bible Class is organized first, the visions of a larger service which is held up to the Brotherhood men is often times obscured and it is much harder to get a Brotherhood after the class organization is established.

Our THIRD REASON is, that who have tried both, like R. A. Doan, Nelsonville; Geo. P. Rutledge, of Philadelphia; S. G. Buckner, of Ashtabula and a score of others whose names of similar weight, endorse this view. we are not "hide-bound" upon the question of whether a group of men should organize into a Bible Class and call it a Bible Class, or whether they should begin at once to be a Brotherhood. It is purely a matter of expedition and utility. Many Bible Classes today would be further advanced had they caught the vision of Brotherhood in the beginning. The vision which embodies Bible study is one among other Brotherhood features. We hope to see a great awakening of the Brotherhood way among the organized classes in the very near future.

What Welshimer Thinks

Relative to the action of the advisory board of the Brotherhood at Portland—I am mighty glad to know the action taken. I think now it will be very easy to line up the Men's classes of our Bible Schools with the Brotherhood work. We shall be very glad to do so here in Canton. I think it is a wise move. It does not necessitate a separate organization and saves the difficulty of having so many wheels within a wheel. Very soon we are going to organize all of our Men's Classes into a United Brotherhood organization, which will be very strong, I am sure, and we shall be glad, as you suggest, to take an offering once a year for the Brotherhood work.

A. L. ROACH

Why Organize A Brotherhood?

BY ARNO L. ROACH

President L. B. C. D, No. 1, Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo.

In four words, I will hope to impress you with a foreword of our responsibility and determine you to assist in the perfecting of our organization so that Local Brotherhoods may develop their constituency into active Christian men; may prove an inspiration to every struggling church and may be an encouragement to our great national organization.

The words I desire to emphasize as the occasion for Brotherhood existence and the necessity to insure success are first "development."

DEVELOPMENT

Every thoughtful Christian must admit that the great masculine force is comparatively inactive in church work. There is little or no effort to inject into church activities the same principles applied to our business activities. We introduce every modern innovation into our commercial life and content ourselves to let the women do the church work. This has so long been the order that it is little wonder that we are confronted with the query, "Why do not more men attend church services?"

Inactivity means retrogression; continued rest results in rust. We profess to follow Christ, but we often follow at too great a distance to discern His foot-steps.

We find that Jesus at twelve was about his father's business. We are told to work while it is yet day. We are constrained to grow in grace and knowledge. We should be zealous in good works. We must not bury our talents. We realize all of these urgent calls to duty we have failed largely in the past. I want of my second word, definiteness.

DEFINITENESS

What could be a more inspiring slogan than "A man's work in a man's way?" Why is a man not ready to enlist in such a worthy endeavor? We must all appreciate that no great achievement ever came to fruition through aimless effort, where work is carefully planned and then the plan is worked, accomplished results.

The General Brotherhood gives us a definite plan, and if we properly affiliate and coöperate we could become a part of a great organization which is sure to develop us in Christian service.

We are not limited in our activities and yet the work is so classified that every department of church work is strengthened and effort is made to enlist the individual in earnest endeavor for the accomplishment of the tasks to which he is especially fitted. This program gives every man a work and shall result in Bringing recruits to the Ministry.

Building up the Sunday-School.

Developing home and civic righteousness.

Adding to our church, missionary and benevolent funds.

Training up the child in the Boys' department and every other Christian agency for good.

to accomplish in an effective way, the varied and essential tasks that only dare attempt in the largest way, induces my third word, devotion.

EDITION We too often depend upon worldly means to accomplish divine ends. When the Bible supplies the basis of procedure we are admonished to study the Scriptures. True, when the church comes into its own and is thoroughly alive spiritually, there will be no occasion for the Brotherhood, as a separate organization, since all men will in practice the Golden Rule and the first commandment will be our realization; but the fact that the church is not meeting the occasion emphasizes the need and demands of our most earnest endeavor.

We must never feel that our mission is of social ends or that the function of the Brotherhood is to entertain or to minister to us. It is essentially a religious organization and we above all things must minister to others.

We must not feel that our success depends upon our members, but our consecration. Christ labored faithfully for but an apparent inconsequential group, but these humble Apostles have through his teachings been able to controvert the religions of the world and to establish a new order of things.

We must never apologize for our existence. We cannot succeed with a half-hearted mission, but if we possess the passion of the Christ and enter into the field white unto the harvest with absolute acceptance and faith in my fourth word, divinity, success will crown our efforts and Christ will be enthroned in the hearts of men. A religious organization that does not exalt the Christ can never attain a worthy end. A faith that does not accept the Christ as both Lord and King, cannot lead men to most noble achievement. Whenever as individuals we feel the need of development sufficiently to encourage us to attempt "A man's work in a man's way," and are willing to follow definitely a general plan in the accomplishment of this noble purpose, devotedly trusting to the Divine leader in all things, the Brotherhood can hope to be that great instrument in the development of Christian men that will help the church of Christ to approach the divine ideal.

James Harvey Garrison

BY W. F. RICHARDSON

Down in the Ozarks, fifty years ago, a few days after the memorable firing of Fort Sumpter—the signal for the outbreak of our Civil War—the little town of Ozark was stirred with excitement as it had never been in its history. The streets were full of armed men,—neighbors and relatives,—for the time separated into two hostile groups, about evenly divided in sympathy between the North and the South. The Southern sympathizers had announced their purpose to raise a Southern flag, and the friends of the Union had gathered to prevent it. For a time it looked as if there would be bloodshed. While the feeling was at its height, a lad of nineteen mounted a goods box, lifted his voice in an appeal to the crowd, urged them to be calm and self-possessed, and to abstain from all acts of violence, whatever the provocation might be. "We are neighbors and friends," he said, "and one hostile shot fired today will involve the killing of many who have lived together as friends and neighbors. I beg of you, Union men, not to resist with violence the raising of this Southern flag here and now, but to raise a pole higher than this building and unfurl the Stars and Stripes upon it, manifesting your loyalty in that way." His advice was followed. The pole was raised, and from it streamed the starry banner. The goods box beneath it, surrounded by hundreds of armed men, the big boy stood and urged the people to stand by the Union and the old flag, and if they had any wrongs to be righted, to right them under the banner that had led Washington and the heroes of the Revolution to victory and to independence. The day passed without conflict, and the sunset gleamed upon a community where the principles of peace and brotherhood had triumphed over the heated passions of men. And the boy of nineteen had proven himself a man, and a true follower of the Prince of Peace.

For more than forty years that youth, whose features speak from the cover page of CHRISTIAN MEN, has been standing in the midst of the hosts of those who are fighting under the banner of the Christ, pleading for union and coöperation in every effort to advance the kingdom of righteousness, and to redeem the world for which Christ died. No man among the Disciples of Christ has exercised a more potent influence for harmony in our own ranks, and for unity throughout the entire body of Christian believers. His clear conception of our position and plea; his absolute sincerity and frankness; his rare unselfishness and modesty; his courage and patience in the face of frequent attack and constant misunderstanding; and his breadth of vision, have given him the confessed leadership among the hosts of our communion who are seeking by candid discussion and cordial coöperation to lead the Christian world to the acceptance and practice of the unity for which Christ prayed.

Brother Garrison was born near town of Ozark, in Christian County, Missouri, on February 2, 1843, and therefore soon round out his seventy year. He grew to manhood in that community, sharing in the simple and staid life of a rural people, where man counted for more than money, and honor was more coveted than honors. He received the best education afforded by the schools of his vicinity, attending first district school at his home, and later near where Billings, Mo., now stands, taught by a teacher from the East. Later the same instructor started a high school or academy, in Ozark, and his pupils followed him there.

While his mind was receiving the culture of the school-room, young Garrison's heart was being touched by the love and mercy of God, and in his fifteenth year he became a Christian, and united with the Baptist Church, to which his parents belonged, and for which through all the succeeding years he has cherished a true and abiding affection. He prepared himself for the calling of school teacher, and entered upon that work while yet a young lad. He taught one year successfully, and had engaged on his second year, when the Civil War broke out, and with many other of the boys of Old Missouri, he felt it to be his duty to enlist in the service of his country, which he did in the very beginning of the war, in 1861.

His record as a soldier is one of honor. Wounded in the battle of Pea Ridge, Arkansas, in March, 1862, his wound was no sooner healed than he was again in the ranks, and received the same year, on September 15th, his promotion to the rank of Captain, being then only twenty years of age. Serving throughout the entire war, he was mustered out of service at St. Louis, in the summer of 1865.

gladly turned from the pursuit of which he ever viewed as at best a necessity, to that of peace, in which found the truest joy and deepest satisfaction.

Desiring to still further fit himself for the highest possible degree of usefulness, entered Abingdon College, Illinois, in fall of 1865, graduating from that institution in the summer of 1868. Among the honored alumni of that college, which afterwards merged with Eureka College, Brother Garrison holds a place of prominent regard. As a student he commanded the respect of his teachers and the high esteem of his fellow-students both for his ability and diligence in the work of his classes, and his charming and genuine personality, which drew and held him, in strongest bonds of friendship, all who came to really know him as he was.

Two most significant experiences, and fraught with far-reaching consequences, are to our subject, during his college course. The first was acquaintance with the Disciples of Christ, under whose auspices the college was conducted, and with the history of their endeavors in behalf of the union of the Christian world, through the restoration of New Testament Christianity, in its fundamental teaching, its divinely commanded ordinances and its Christ-inspired life. He found himself in hearty accord with the new view of the Scriptures and the Church that came to him through this acquaintance, and in the first year of his college life united with the Christian Church.

The other new experience, scarcely less sacred or potent, was that of finding in a classmate, Miss Judith Elizabeth Garrison, the partner of his affections, hopes and ambitions, whose life, united with his own, should fill out the measure of their mutual endowment for service to the world, and give to both the strength and wisdom demanded by their arduous tasks. In the divine economy it seems to be ordained that human lives attain their noblest ends only when thus paired in sweet and chaste union, wherein husband and wife find in each other the sympathy and fellowship of hearts that feel a like affection and are absorbed in a common trust. This union proved all that the highest ideal of marriage could suggest, and the home then established has been one of unbroken confidence, increasing affection, and a large and generous hospitality.

In the autumn of his graduating year, Brother Garrison was called to Macomb, Illinois, to serve as co-pastor with the sainted J. C. Reynolds. The intimate association then formed between the two men continued until the death of Brother Reynolds, a few years ago. It was during this pastorate that Brother Garrison entered upon the work to which he was to devote his life, and in which he was to attain to eminence and power. Brother Reynolds was editing a small religious monthly known as The Gospel Echo, and, discovering the gifts that his co-pastor possessed as a writer, solicited his fellowship in that work. This partnership began January, 1869, and continued for two years.

In March, 1871, Brother Garrison, having seen the need of a larger center from which to send out his messages for the kingdom, purchased Brother Reynold's share in the paper, and moved it to Quincy, Illinois. At the same time, he secured control of The Christian, then being published at Kansas City, Mo., and consolidated the two under the name of Gospel Echo and Christian. It was at this time that the writer first became acquainted with Brother Garrison, being employed in the printing office where the paper was published. The friendship then begun has proven to the writer one of the sweetest and most valued of his life.

For about three years the struggle by which this young editor maintained his paper (now a weekly), was such as could have been possible only to one who felt that his message was given him of God, and must be delivered at any cost to himself. Unsparing of his strength, he would preach every Sunday for churches within reach of Quincy, hold frequent evangelistic meetings, and edit his paper between times, never failing to furnish copy to the printers on time, and rarely if ever issuing the paper a single day late. The money he received for preaching went to the support of himself and his family, and often to make up deficits in his printing bills, which were always met promptly. We in the office were wont to wonder many times how he could make ends meet, knowing how slender was the income of the paper, and how inadequate the pay that young preachers received for their services. But a closer acquaintance with the home that the passing years brought to some of us, revealed the secret, in the prudent economy, cheerful sacrifice and Christian consecration shared by the two souls whose rare affection and confidence made even their hardships a mutual joy.

The beginning of larger prosperity for this venture in religious journalism came with the year 1874, when the Christian Publishing Company was organized, and the paper moved to St. Louis. The name was changed to The Christian, and Brother J. H. Smart, if we mistake not, became associated with Brother Garrison in its conduct. In 1882, The Evangelist, which had been published first in Oska-loosa, Iowa, and later in Chicago, was combined with the Christian, and the two names united in the title so familiar to the Disciples of Christ. Brother B. W. Johnson became associated in the editorship of the paper, and his splendid gifts contributed much to the growing favor with which it was received by the Brotherhood.

The years that have succeeded are for the most part a familiar story to our people, among whom Brother Garrison has been a prominent figure in their assemblies, and to whom his pen has brought its constant message of instruction and inspiration. Twice has he left the editorial office to resume pastoral work, spending the years 1881-2 in Southport, England, and 1885-6 in Boston, Massachusetts. But he retained his connection with the paper, as editor, during both these pastorates, and never looked upon them other than a temporary avocation from his life work. Yet both of these pastorates were fruitful in results, and the memory of them abides as a precious heritage with the churches he faithfully and efficiently served.

The coming of the next New Year will mark the forty-third milestone in Brother Garrison's editorial journey, and the eye of his vision is not dimmed, and the arm of his achievement has lost none of its strength or skill. Besides his abundant labors in the editorship of his great paper, and his constant public services in conventions and elsewhere, he has ever found time to preserve much of his best thought in books which will find place in the permanent literature of our people. Among these his devotional books have perhaps proven most popular, which is the very highest testimony that could be given to the lofty spiritual plane on which his life has moved. "Along with God" is a classic in devotional literature, having passed through about twenty editions, and is selling now as rapidly as ever. "Half-Hour Studies at the Cross" is a worthy companion for the closet hour. A recent bibliography of our literature shows Brother Garrison to have been the author of not less than en works of sufficient scope to require volume each, and of many smaller productions, pamphlets and tracts, all of which possessing permanent value and interest. His "Story of a Century" is the short history of our movement ever written, and his work on "The Holy Spirit" will hold a high place in the literature on that great subject. Besides his writings, he has edited several volumes of great importance, to which his contributions have been among the most forceful and illuminating.

His life and work here so inadequately sketched are worthy of far more effective treatment, and more appreciative dedication. But the writer has sought to restrain his pen from inscribing all that his heart would have dictated, lest he should seem to be eulogizing rather than praising. It is difficult to measure the worth of such a life to the generation which shares its activities. During much of this half century of active service, the heavy burdens have been borne by a body familiar with pain, and a heart acquainted with grief. Few are aware of the many difficulties under which these years of fruitful ministry have been accomplished. But He knows, and will measure the crown according to the love and sacrifice that has won it. A host of friends and brethren are praying that many years may remain for this true and tried servant of Jesus Christ to minister in spiritual things to his brethren, and to enjoy increasing confidence and affection at their hands. Ever true to the Word of God and the Plea of the Disciples of Christ, and always kind and appreciative in his treatment of any who might differ from him, his influence will continue to be, as it has been for all these goodly years, a leaven of truth, righteousness and fraternal love among us. May the setting of his earthly sun be long delayed.

Men and Religion Campaign

GEO. H. COMBS

Representing the Christian Churches on the National Missions Committee, Men and Religion Forward Movement.

Below we show the dates for visitation of the special teams of MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT. This will be the most significant and gigantic religious campaign that has ever been undertaken by any religious group since the days of the Apostles. The hearts of thousands of church men will be touched and their life purpose quickened, and thousands upon thousands of men and boys will be brought into vital contact with Jesus Christ. This is the most wonderful opportunity for our plea that has ever presented itself in the history of the Restoration Movement, and especially is it a momentous opportunity for the Brotherhood Movement to take active hold upon the Brotherhood of our churches and begin to teach them what the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ really is.

By some method we must lead all the men of our Brotherhoods to see the importance of attendance at the Conferences in these cities where the teams will be. Conventions will be held every Tuesday and Wednesday during the campaigns—that is, two days of each cam-paigh will be in the nature of a convention, and that is the place where the teams will “hit hard” on the program. If teams are not to visit your own city but do hold a campaign in a city within one hundred or two hundred miles of your city, town, village or community, your Minister and several of your men, including your Sunday-school superintendent and chairman of the official board, the Brotherhood President or President of your Men’s Bible Classes, should attend the Convention on Tuesday and Wednesday. BRETHREN, there ought to be no FAILURE in this regard. Every Christian Church that is worthy of the name ought to be represented, so that when the Convention is over you can return to your home filled and thrilled with the stirring messages received at the Convention, and you will then be prepared to begin active work in your own church and community. Whatever else you do or do not do between now and Christmas, please attend a Convention of the MEN AND RELIGION FORWARD MOVEMENT closest to you. Other dates will be announced soon. Send for the literature and get ready for active personal participation in the affairs of the Movement.

D. Y. DONALDSON

“The Call of Home Missions to Men”

BY D. Y. DONALDSON

Secretary Missouri Christian Missionary Society

Personal contact, and eye to eye information of religious conditions, brings one to feel the stress and urgency of local needs. Under the stimulation of this direct contact, multitudes have made princely gifts, and many have made heroic sacrifice, to establish the church and evangelize their local community. No effort could be more reasonable. No work should be more commendable.

The Poetry of Missions,” the story of the foreign field, with its thrill and heroic appeal, has stirred multitudes; and while we have heard but the distance echoes of this Macedonian cry, yet hundreds of men and women have given themselves to this great field, and the church has given its hundreds of thousands of dollars to establish the gospel in heathen lands.

But lying between the local church and foreign lands is a great uncultivated and neglected field. In our anxiety to develop the local church and to enter the foreign field, we have blindly passed by the home land. These good things we should have done, but the latter should not have done.

We believe that just as the Oriental preachers against our “Adjective Christianity” and demands the “Substantive Christianity” instead, so we should insist on substantive missions and the elimination of adjective missions; but until a time comes in which this fond hope may be realized, it becomes necessary to put our ear close to the ground and hear the clear and stirring call of home missions. The native impulse of every American is to give himself, and if need be his life, to his country's call. It is only necessary to see conditions as they are and the patriotism of every American Christian will give prompt and adequate support to the cause of the home land.

AS GOES MISSOURI
SO GOES AMERICA

Conditions in Missouri may be taken to represent the most favored developments of American Christianity. With this in mind, note the following:

I. Sixty-five per cent of Missouri's population is neither Protestant nor Roman Catholic. Add to this great majority the large number of Christians in name only, and the situation is appalling.

II. There are 1,800 Christian churches in Missouri. On June 1, 1911, 500 of these 1,800 churches were without pastors.

III. Only 393 of the 1,800 churches gave to state missions in the year June 1, 1909, to May 1, 1910, and still a smaller number has contributed to state missions the present year, while only about 400 Christian churches of Missouri can be found on the combined records of all our missionary societies.

IV. There are tens of thousands of foreigners in our Missouri cities and on our farms, and not a single Christian mission to serve them, or a Christian minister to preach the gospel to them in their native tongue.

V. There are 157 Christian churches (on our records) in Southeastern Missouri and less than one dozen ministers to serve them.

VI. There are fifty counties south of the Missouri River in this state, in every one of which are to be found conditions of ignorance and poverty that equals the widely advertised mountains of Eastern Kentucky and Western Virginia. There is the same need of schools and religious leaders among this sturdy people, with the absence of feuds and moonshine, that is found in the mountains of Kentucky.

VII. In twelve counties in this state we have but thirty-three Christian churches, and the aggregate membership is only about 1,000.

There is probably no religious communion in the state that has improved on the sum total of our record. If these conditions prevail in Missouri, what words can describe the situation in our less favored sections.

Let it be remembered that our children go out from our Christian homes to make their homes in the midst of conditions herein described; and if they find no church influence where they go the most of them are lost to all Christian activity. If we move from our st church to a new community we are r than likely to meet the same condit and too often fall away.

THE CITY CHURCH

Have we counted the m tudes of small and st gling churches that are sponsible for the work of a great ch in their populous community? Have reckoned with the fact that less than out of four of our congregations is gaged in missions? Have we reale what the multitudes of foreigners, wi foreign religion or no religion, mean our churches and to our state? E we asked the reason for the dearthl ministers, or have we given suffici thought to the solution of these pl ems? Have we known the vast e with its multitudes who are ignorant without adequate means or leaders? Have we realized that 65 per cent of population are unchurched?

MISSIONS A MAN'S JOB

With sober refleco and with our eyes to the home field ripe t the harvest, let us be up and at this g neglected work. This is a man's o This challenges the nobility of Chrisa manhood. May we witness the win and effective response in an unpre dented awakening in the study of h missions and in multiplied gifts for h great work.

Men and the Bible School

BY ROBERT HOPKINS

National Bible School Superintendent

ROBERT HOPKINS

HCO
these two words! The most significant feature of the modern Bible School is the fact that strong men are taking hold of this service as never before in the history of the church. These mammoth parades that are witnessed in state, national and world's conventions are no display, they are truly a representation of that new and powerful masculine element, which is being introduced everywhere into this teaching service.

AN EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION
School men are entering the Bible School and the institution becomes more and more a genuine educational service, with trained teachers, classified pupils and graded lessons. Business men are entering the Bible School, and the service which formerly stood without recognition in the business circles is raised to its proper dignity in this regard, it becomes a training place for Christian citizenship. The preachers are taking their rightful place in the church's sanest evangelistic agency, and thus coöperation with God is secured from the very beginning for the nurture and training of child life.

WHAT PRESIDENT
TAFT SAYS

Men from all the walks of life are here, and why should they not be? President Taft recently said: "No matter what views are taken of general education, we all agree, Protestant, Catholic and Jew alike, that Sunday-school education is absolutely necessary to secure moral uplift and religious spirit." With the abolition of the family altar and the banishment of the Bible from the public school, we are wholly dependent upon the Bible School for the teaching of true morals and religion.

MEN NEED IT

Once again, men need the Bible School, with its touch with young life, its devotional Bible study, and its rapidly growing spirit of helpfulness and service. Modern Bible study is completely transforming the adult life of our churches and bringing to all a new conception of Christian activity. A simple and yet comprehensive form of organization has proven successful in sending tens of thousands of men out, each in search of his brother, and in creating a medium of service and fraternity, that had it existed hitherto, would have made wholly unnecessary many other organizations both within and without the church. Christian men are coming into their own powers and possibilities; the Bible School has ceased to be the mere "nursery of the church," and with its milk for babes and strong meat for men is becoming the church at work, providing both food and exercise for all.

THE BIBLE FIRST

No better form of activity could possibly be undertaken by any group of men in the beginning of Brotherhood work. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things will be added unto you," is never more true than when applied to men's work in the church. Brotherhood programs, Brotherhood fellowship, all the features of Brotherhood of man without the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. His saving grace will not avail. Brotherhoods endeavoring to exist without vital contact with the study of the Bible are much less successful than those putting their shoulders beneath the wheel of progress in the Bible School. The Bible School needs the men—men need the Bible School. The Brotherhood join hands with the Bible School. Brotherhood indeed!

Sermonettes

BY ERRETT GATES

The only kind of doctrine that is worth while, relates to deeds, not theology, liturgy, or homily.

It is easy to defend Christianity, not by referring to Libraries, but by referring to deeds.

We will always have theology, liturgy and homily, in some forms, but emphasis will be laid upon deeds.

The world is getting more religious; theology, liturgy and homily are disappearing.

Religion is the doing of good.

So long as there is a person in need there is a field for religious work.

Men will believe in Christianity when it is practiced as Christ practiced it.

A man is not even a good citizen unless he believes in Christianity.

The time will come when the sermon will disappear and in its stead will come personal teaching in the home, the place of business, and on the street.

There will never be another creed made.

There never will be many more great sermons preached. A preacher will take his place as a leader of the people,—going about doing good.

In place of building great cathedrals we will build hospitals, orphanages, and old peoples' homes, and send Medical Missionaries to heathen lands.

Whenever we begin to practice the Brotherhood of man, man will acknowledge the Fatherhood of God.

Fifty-Seven Varieties of the Golden West

BY J. K. SHELLENBERGER

is like Heinze's pickles—fifty-seven different varieties; every one of them marketable. This variety of climate ranges from that of Greenland to Dante's Inferno, and California has men and women suited to every variety. No matter whether hot or cold, the native invariably says, "Finest climate on earth."
 There is a knocker in that great state who did not discover him. Out from Philadelphia a few miles along the Pennsylvania railroad, is a great shoe firm's sign. It reads thus: "Our best advertisements are worn, not read." So California's best advertisement is not on paper, but in the hearts of her people.
 California is bounded on the north by fiery-headed Shasta, whose countenance is frozen, but not forbidding. On the east by the Sierras; they were there when California became a state. On the south by a barbed wire fence with a barnyard gate opening into Mexico. On the west by China and Japan. Above by sky of perpetual blue and beneath by geological faults that slip just often enough to keep things moving.

Utah's best crop is babies, California's best crop is boosters, and her boosters show the goods. Boosting is a disease—the worse you are affected the better you feel. It puts lime in your backbone and steel in your nerve. It transforms sand dunes into garden beds and cactus plains into orange groves. In six weeks' time the secretary became in-voluted and has carried the germ back to Kansas City. Don't be alarmed, no danger of your catching it from these pages; California is the only place where you get it. But when once you catch it it sticks for life.

God was good to California. He gave her everything, from the ice of Alaska to the blazing sun of Africa. And Californians make use of the whole great gift. California raises cows, sheep, horses, mules, goats and yellow-legged chickens; wheat, oats, rye, barley, beets, corn, beans, and succotash; figs, thistles, oranges, lemons, peaches and cream;
 roses, geraniums, fuchsias, et cetera, ad infinitum. The people grow fences out of geraniums, shade their houses with roses, and screen their porches with fuchsias—all to save expenses. California grows enough eucalyptus trees to make oil sufficient to rub down a crippled nation. Think of riding through a bean patch twenty miles long! Brethren, that's some beans! California grows spuds (scientific name, "potatoes") two crops on the same ground every year. They say it rains in California, but the only umbrellas the Secretary saw were growing along the streets for shade. California has a peculiar kind of soil. They call it adobe.
 When it is wet it is gummy; when it is dry it is a brick. There are only fifteen minutes that it is in condition to work, and that is while you are eating your dinner. But that soil produces some of our most luscious fruit. California's front yard is the Pacific Ocean. There she frolics, bathes and goes fishing.
 Think of catching a three hundred pounder with a hook and line! That sounds fishy, but if you were in California you would believe it. When you have been out there you will believe anything, for it is all true.

CALIFORNIA'S MEN

But California's best asset is her men and women, and their largest asset is their magnanimous spirit. California is aggressive. She knows a good thing when she sees it. Present a sound proposition to California and she has the nerve to take hold of it. California wants the best that is going and gets it. She believes in the future, not only of the state, but of the Kingdom of God. California believes in the Brotherhood. She said so, not only by word of mouth, but by actual financial support.

CLINK OF

Two thousand seven hundred and eighty dollars is her answer to the Brotherhood's appeal. At the Long Beach Convention one hundred and twenty-seven men gave $1,102. C. C. Chapman—the irrepressible Chapman—led with $500. It took but a few minutes for the others to make $602 in $50, $25, $10, $5 and $1 pledges. At San Diego in a mid-week meeting they gave $378.66. One hundred and fifty of this came from Dr. Woods, of Missouri, balance from San Diego Church. J. G.

THE CHALLENGE

Warren, of Los Angeles, said he would give $250 if we would raise $2,000 in California. We accepted his conditions.

and started out to find the remainder. The church at Ontario gave $120 about five minutes, Brothers McCann and Barton each giving $25, others $1, $5 and $1 each. Then we went up to San Francisco. In banquet of the Brotherhood churches $838 more was given in just a few minutes. Of this amount W. B. McQuoid, of San Jose, gave $100; San Jose Brotherhood, $50; First Church San Francisco, $50; West Side Brotherhood, $50; other Brotherhoods and individuals giving smaller amounts, until the splendid total was the final result. And these men were happy in their giving. To use the words of one of the men: "An investment in Brother-

...hod work means an investment in the ...sement of our men. And when the
...are once aroused giving money for
...evolence and Missions will no longer
...n the peanut basis."

It is a wonderful Movement for the men and the whole Church. Let us finance it. California men have given

The Significance of the Brotherhood Emblem

BY D. G. DUNGAN

The Brotherhood Emblem

Colors—Red and Gold

It is a trite saying that no stream will rise higher than its source and it is equally true with respect to human life whose source is God. Applying this principle to the Brotherhood movement we can truthfully say that no organization will surpass its tenets or rise higher than its aims. This being true how necessary that the ideals of the men should be both lofty and holy. From this standpoint it would seem that the Brotherhood movement had been guided by divine inspiration in the putting of the covenant as well as in designing the emblem for never was a frat pin or lodge pin made that so fully and beautifully portrays the aims, ideals and principles of any order.

The Body of the Badge is Red

This stands for blood and life with all that they mean—flesh, muscle, bone, sinew, heart, head, brain, genius, ambition, energy and life pulsating with vitality, joyous with expectancy, optimistic with hope. These are the chief constituent elements of the men who are to be worthy of a place in this imperial movement. The Brotherhood was never created to appeal to any other specimen of a man. And why? Because it is an organization and you can not organize a corpse, nor can you send a battle thrill through the sleeping bones of a cemetery by giving a bugle call to mark time. They have no enthusiasm to appeal to, they are insensible to sound, they have no heart to be thrilled. No more was the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ calculated to appeal to the flabby, soulless moss-back, the antiquated mollicoddle or the cadaverous type of a man that lacks a capacity capable of being and doing. If you are a man who sees in life an opportunity to help somebody you are the kind of stuff for which the red of the emblem stands.

Encircling the Pin is a Rim of Gold

Gold has always stood for the highest expression of consecration and sacrifice, itself teaching the lesson of purification of affliction in the refining fire. Furthermore it has always been one of the most acceptable gifts to God as the Temples of Israel were adorned with it from the golden spikes on the roof to the Holy of Holies in the secret place. Thus we have this lesson that the manly life of today must be set apart, to the will of God. May I ask you what good is life if its consecration is withheld? As the river is comparatively of little worth until its rolling flood is consecrated to great ends such as generating electrical energy and sending this power broadcast to bless civilization, or used in turning spindles and grinding grain and doing a thousand tasks, no more is this life of ours worth until it is cheerfully laid as a living sacrifice wholly and acceptably to God upon the altar of service.

The Letters B. D.

In these two letters and the things in which they stand we find the channels of blessing through which this consecrated life will find direction and inspiration. The first is Brotherhood. This is a big word, yet so far as the church is concerned it is a lost word which has for centuries been stricken from the vocabulary of the church's creed. And this, too, in spite of the fact that the New Testament is full of its teaching. Its absence in the church today is due fact that the church has overlooked the teaching of Brotherhood in her search for reaching on the Fatherhood. And she is still on the trail. A result of this is that creeds, doctrines, opinions, have been multiplied into infinitude to the neglect of the real mission of the church of Christ, which is the work of teaching, healing and redeeming sinful humanity. How timely! How opportune how providential is the coming of this movement whose key note is Brotherhood with its God-like slogan and its humanitarian creed. I take it that her presence among men is to be the voice of Christ that shall call the church down from her abode in the clouds of speculative theology to the earth, where men suffer and sin, that she may begin her heavenly ordained mission of caring for everybody and saving the soul. Then discipleship is our next slogan.

This movement emulates the life of discipleship and magnifies the place and office of teaching in the scheme of man's redemption. In other words it stands for salvation by education, which is in perfect harmony with the church within the circle it labors. It pleads for the discipleship as shown by Peter, James, John and Paul, who were followers of the Master teacher. He who said "Learn of Me, I am the way, the truth and the life."

The letters B. D. are embraced with the letter C, and all are united with the cross. This voices the teaching that both Brotherhood and Discipleship find their perfect exemplification in the life of Jesus Christ, the one altogether lovely. As the mariner at night selects a star from which he takes his reckoning, so with man, he must keep his eye on the bright and morning star that shines more and more unto the perfect day.

At the top of the emblem is a star shedding a ray of glory. This beautifully represents the abiding presence and blessing of our God and His Christ. For certain heaven will bless that order among men that is doing God's will in their generation.

Can you think of anything loftier than an organization of men striving to embody in their life the principles taught in this emblem? I can not, and the best of it all is the ideals are high enough to command all the consecrated powers of body, mind and soul and still the aims are not too high to be attained. Every man can be a true brother and Disciple practicing the Golden Rule and this is the sum total of a perfected life.

The Brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ—Its Value to the Individual Congregation

BY DR. FRANK TALMAGE

TOO SOON The Brotherhood among our people, in organized form, came none too soon. For many years there was need of some thing among our men, by which their combined and aggregated influence for righteousness should quicken every enterprise of the church. The "Brotherhood" has come, and I am glad of it. The National movement has made history faster than any other movement we have inaugurated.

FOREIGN SOCIETY

Our Foreign Missionary Society was for long years in the toils of a lethargy of which we have reason to be ashamed, but under judicious management and consecrated leadership, it is making wondrous strides forward, and is beginning to enlist numerous friends and supporters.

HOME BOARD

Our Home Missionary Society for American missions has not thus far, with all the progress it has made and the good it has wrought, met with the sweeping enthusiasm that so great and good a cause merits. In my humble judgment it stands easily at the forefront of all our great enterprises, and a mighty awakening in its favor, even yet, must come.

CHURCH EXTENSION

Our Church Extension work has not had a rapid growth. Its progress has been necessarily slow. It has had superb leadership from the start, and while it has done much, it might have done more, if so great and powerful a factor in building and saving churches had enkindled the enthusiasm it has always deserved.

MINISTERIAL AID

In 1895 at the National convention at Dallas, the "Ministerial Relief" movement was launched. From that time to this it has been in almost a dead calm. A ministry so great, so tender, and so loving, ought to have touched a popular chord, but it has failed to arouse much interest, and has never from its inception commanded the support to which it is entitled.

Along comes the THE BROTHERHOOD "Brotherhood" and without waiting to be nursed, springs at once into almost full manhood at a bound. In years it is still a babe, in what it has already accomplished it is a man, and very much of a man at that. The idea of the Brotherhood came from the Sisterhood. For years before the plan took shape the women of the church had their Aid Societies and their C. W. B. M., which stands for "Count Women Before Men." Our women were not slow to learn the value of coöperation among their own sex and take advantage of it. Their systematically organized work speaks for itself, and it speaks with eloquence and power.

THE C. W. B. M. PATTERN

The Brotherhood came to do a work not done to enter a field unoccupied. It built no man's foundation, but on its own. Its need was apparent and paramount. A movement that tends to enlist the men of the church in greater activity in the interest of Jesus, our King, is to be commended and welcomed, and such a movement is this "Brotherhood," whose coming was so opportune, so suddenly popular, and so sweepingly successful. It has a great National scope. It has business in every State and Territory; in every county and precinct, and every school district; in fact, wherever the church has gone and men are found. It does not claim to be the church but it does claim to stir up its "pure mind by way of remembrance." It makes a good prompter. We have remarked its interest in every great offering among our people this year. It got very busy just before the March collection and sent out trumpet calls to every man to do his duty. It did the same thing before the May offering. It is spurring the men up to what they owe God in holy service. There is not a enterprise among us of any kind that looks to the glory of God, in which the Brotherhood is not interested in its promotion. It rallies, conserves, utilizes and makes forceful the work of men in the Church of God. We are asked to particularize somewhat and show the value of this great ally to the individual congregation.

THE VALUE OF A BROTHERHOOD

It is valuable in a social sense. The men of the church need to know each other. Too often they are almost fingers, save when they see each other church or at some of its functions. The Brotherhood brings them together in a more intimate sense than in the regular meetings of the congregation. They come to know each ONE EACH OTHER other by name and by occupation, and meet together on a commune level. The church is a family, united by a common tie, possessed by a common interest. Every man in this family ought to be counted on, depended on for some service for our Heavenly Father. Too often, alas, a man is simply a member, with his name on the church roll of nothing more. The preacher hardly knows him, the majority of the brethren do not know him, and the coming of any member that will cause them to know him surely will be welcomed. The Brotherhood in the church can bring this about. This social SOCIAL TOUCH touch of the men in the local congregation will add much to its vital force, to its unanimity, and to its influence in the community. There is something every man in the church can do to advance its interest and honor our God. Many an element of strength is never called out because of this lack of properly knowing each other. Politicians have long recognized the absolute necessity of the men "getting together."

 Whenever they desire to see a favorite measure carried out, or a favorite candidate elected there is no man so poor or so humble whose voice and help are not invoked. Put the Brotherhood in a local congregation. Get every man into it.
 Occasionally have a spread or a banquet if desired, and it never comes amiss, for there is any body of human beings in this world who enjoy good things to eat, to my brethren. The sisters are not my vision in this address, being probably behind the scenes in the preparation of the edibles, and my word for it, your men in this social function are put in better fettle for aggressive work than by any means heretofore suggested. This social phase being conceded as a result of a Brotherhood, let me advance to my next position.

It is valuable in a BUSINESS VALUE business sense. The social phase brings out the business sense of the men in your church. A church cannot be successful that ignores this vital help. There are many things to look after which a preacher cannot attend to, and which he possibly wouldn't better if he did. Preachers, as a rule, are not business men. I may be answered that the work of the deacons is to look after the temporal or business affairs of the church. We concede this, but how often is it done so well that it cannot be improved. The Brotherhood would include the deacons, and what they could do would only be with helpers whose assistance would be invaluable.
 There are numbers of men in the community who never attend church services.
 The Brotherhood would pay special attention to this class and do their utmost to secure their presence and see that they were welcomed when they came. I might specify a dozen things which this band of men in the church could attend to in better shape than it is done today in most churches in this country. Am I going too far when I say that there is no chance of failure
 THE CHANCE OF SUCCESS but every chance of success in the combined wisdom and work of the men in our churches. I believe in my heart that the Brotherhood in the church would stimulate and encourage the minister by taking from his hands a thousand details he must of necessity look after, and leaving him free to prepare better sermons and make a fuller proof of his ministry.
 A round dozen of such men in any church at any place could take that place for Christ. We have too often failed to win a community to the simplest and yet greatest plea the world ever heard, not because of any weakness in the preaching, but because of the indifference and lack of soul-absorbing interest of our men mainly. The time has come when every man in the church must stand up and be counted. The elders and deacons have their respective places of trust to fill as well as the minister. They, as well as he, will welcome such help as a devoted body of brethren could give. The Sunday-School superintendent has long pined for the encouragement of our men in his arduous position. The Brotherhood not only believes in the Sunday-School, but works in it. The day of the Sunday-School mainly for women and girls I hope has forever passed. The great problem for discussion, as to how to keep our boys in the Bible School after they came to be old enough to smoke a cigarette, has perplexed many philosophers, but the solution has been all the time that the men did not go to Sunday-School, and so the boys followed their example and thought themselves too manly to go. Brethren, the Brotherhood will make men of our boys and give us greater Bible Schools than we have ever had. Have you noticed that almost simultaneously with the advent of this revival among our men has come this great movement of teacher-training work in our Bible Schools? Interest our men in all the work of the church and there is no sphere of activity that will languish—I call all this business; business for the King and in the King's name. The Brotherhood can promote it all. Give the men a chance. This body of men is also to the individual congregation: Valuable in a missionary sense.

MISSIONARY VALUE The church was instituted as a soul-saver to save us and them that hear us. The great object in the world is to save the world. "Christ came into the world to save sinners." In His absence it becomes the church's especial mission. No activity in other lines will compensate for lack in this. The splendid house of worship, the eloquent preacher, the attractive choir and the polite and courteous membership all count for nothing in God's eye with missions left out. The coming into the local church of the Brotherhood means an enkindling of enthusiasm and a great revival of interest in missions. What men can do for missionary work when they have the wish to do it is seen in the Laymen's movement which attracted so much attention in our principal cities. The most hopeful sign of the coming triumph of the church and the return of our Lord is the awakening of our men to mission. In past years the work of pressing the claims of missions in the local church has largely depended on the preacher and a few others, be it said to their discredit, have not shown the interest they should have in so magnificent a work. The preacher will have to be interested if the men of his church are, or he will have to seek some other field of labor, or some other vocation, which would be better for him and for the church. The Brotherhood of any church will liven up the missionary spirit, and make the apportionment possible or even surpass it. Try it, enlist your men and see, and you will be gratified at the result.

THE CAUSE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS The arousing of our men along all the lines of activity in the cause of righteousness leads us to believe that the church is returning to the Christianity of the early days, and surely making way for the union of God's people. It certainly a favorable indication when we consider that the converts of the church in the Apostolic age were largely men. It became necessary at the beginning for many good reasons that men should be selected to carry out the purposes of Heaven. Twelve men were commissioned and sent forth. At Peter's second sermon in Jerusalem in Solomon's porch, we read in Acts 4:4: "Many which heard the word, believed and the number of the men was about five thousand." Albert Barnes thinks the word men here was used without regard to sex, but T. J. J. Faucett and Brown say: "Males, exclusive of women." The great point that all will concede is that the blessed gospel in that age did win manly men and multitudes of them. As they are coming to the front now are not the old days coming back? With their manliness, their business judgment and their consecration to our Savior in this generation may we not hope that the sin of division among the churches, which is an expensive and shameful waste of men, money and time, will receive a rebuke such as it has never received before, and that the prayer of the Lord Jesus in the 17th chapter of John is nearing its answer? Will not the arousing of these same men in missionary endeavor have a growing tendency towards the uniting of all our legions against a common enemy and the unfurling of a flag which the remotest nations of the earth shall see, and in which they shall all rejoice?

Our hearts are gladdened by the marvelous omens for good seen on every hand—in the student's volunteer movement; the uprising of the laymen in missionary work; the awakened interest in the study of the Word of God in the Bible Schools; in the banishment of the saloon from many of our states, with its death knell ringing in our ears; in the increasing desire for oneness among all the people of God. We have much to be grateful for in these opening years of a new century. And this "Brotherhood" of men in our churches!! Rally around it, my brethren. Bid it God speed in its mission of lending a strong and vigorous arm to the support of every enterprise that shall honor Jesus Christ and bring all who love Him to know as never before the truth and beauty of that simple trinity of words: "We be brethren."

A Message to the Social Service Committees of the Men and Religion Forward Movement

We believe that the Men and Religion Forward Movement offers to the Christian men of America an unparalleled opportunity to express the growing social consciousness in the church. There has never been a time when the men in the great Brotherhoods and in the church at large have been so eager in the matter of social service. We believe that they are simply waiting to have someone direct them to a definite task.

The fact that the leaders in the Men and Religion Forward Movement have given social service so prominent a place in the proposed campaign indicates that they are alert not only to the need of such work, but that they appreciate its importance in connection with a movement which is to touch the whole life of America's manhood. It also shows that these leaders have rightly interpreted "Social Service" when they characterize it as being distinctively "religious." Such an emphasis makes plain the fact that it is just as important for men to get right with men as that they "get right with God." It is laying stress upon the second great commandment—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," which Jesus said was like unto the first—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

Because this movement has in it such a comprehensive appeal we give it our hearty support. We bespeak for it the endorsement of all social workers who may hitherto have been indifferent to the church, because they have felt that the church has not been concerned about the burdens which have been crushing those unfortunate members of society to whose interest they devote their lives. We value this movement because it gives all the workers in the social field an opportunity to come face to face with one another and with the workers in the church. We believe that out of the conferences and discussions and mass meetings will come a greater appreciation of the needs of our common humanity; that the workman and the employer of labor will see each other's problems with clearer vision; that the practical service in attempting together to meet the pressing social questions of the day will make us understand that while we may not agree in non-essentials, nevertheless we have in common the desire to share the purpose of Jesus and to help bring in the kingdom of God.

We recommend that at the very outset of this campaign the social service committees of the various cities call conferences of the local social workers, for the purpose of becoming familiar with what is already being done in their cities by these specialists in the field of social service, and for the further purpose of acquainting these workers with the proposed campaign of the Men and Religion Forward Movement and enlisting them heartily in it. The Social Service Committee should seek to obtain from these social workers a list of subjects which in their judgment should be presented to the local community, either while the campaign is in progress in the city, or previous to this time, in order that greater interest may be aroused in the entire matter of social service. It should be understood, however, that the committee must exercise its own discretion as to which subjects are to be given prominence in this presentation to the public.

We would also recommend that the local committee inform itself with reference to the great national social service movements, seeking such information as will give its members a broader outlook upon the whole field of social work, so that the program adopted by the local committee may be well proportioned, and without partiality to a particular interest.

Regarding Christian Men

Say! the August number is a dandy and if I don't succeed in organizing a bunch of men here I miss my guess. Of course I expect to go along with it and help it all I can, and I think the two of us will make it go.

I wish you would send me, just as soon as possible, that organization package.

Those Denton Collars

When H. A. Denton went to become pastor of River and Jay St. Church, in Troy, N. Y., he made such an impression on the community that one of the Collar Makers, Van Zandt & Jacobs, named a collar for him. We are just in receipt of a complimentary box of the Collars ourselves. They are pretty "nifty" and as pleasant to wear as other "Triangle" Collars which Van Zandt & Jacobs manufacture. Van Zandt is a Brotherhood man, and "Denton" Collars are good collars.

Nebraska Convention

H. E. SACKETT
State Brotherhood President

There were seventy-five men present at the Brotherhood session of the Nebraska State Convention held at Bethany Park. The Brotherhood Banquet was addressed by Chancellor Wm. Oeschger, of Cotner University;

L. C. Oberlies, State Bible School Superintendent; C. M. Chilton, national director of the Brotherhood and pastor of the First Church, St. Joseph, Missouri. Expression of the greatest confidence in the success of the Brotherhood movement was universally expressed. A campaign in the interest of the work in the church will be undertaken this fall in conjunction with the Bible School work. The evening session R. P. Shepherd made an address which was full of "brass tacks" and gave hope to publish at least a portion of it in the early issue of CHRISTIAN MEN. A chorus of fifty voices, led by two of our leading evangelists, Rockwell and Baird, of the Scoville Company, furnished music. The officers were reelected, as follows:

H. E. Sackett, president, Beatrice.
J. B. Strode, vice-president, Lincoln.
C. A. Mangum, secretary, Omaha.
J. C. Lucas, treasurer, Fairbury.

A Brotherhood Paper at Toledo

Over in Toledo, O., at the Central Church they have a Brotherhood Bible Class which issues a weekly paper called The Brotherhood Bible Class Weekly. It does not say who the editors are, but T. D. Barnett, general member and all around Brotherhood man, has a finger in it somewhere. Cramful of information and inspiration, it is good to read and makes us want to visit the class and participate in its affairs. They are considering becoming a chapter in the National Brotherhood. The editor says: "We are securing a club for CHRISTIAN MEN. Hand the president your subscription." Their class yell is:

Lack-a-boom, Back-a-boom,
Zip-Bing-Bang,
Ting-ga-lang, Ting-ga-lang,
Ling-a-ling, Ga-lang.

It seems they have a number of poets in the class and over at the last of the editorial they have another yell:

Rah! Rah! Rah!
Ree! Ree! Ree!
What's the matter
With the B. B. C.?

Another very apt announcement is as follows:

GENTLEMEN

Take Off Your Coats and Be Comfortable
"Thirty-five members absent last Sunday.
Does your section look after its absentees?"

ought to get busy and look after the fellow. Some may be sick. Some may have been had you called them by 'phone. Some may have been new men who feel just a little timid. Let us make a special effort to keep in touch with the new men."

In Line for Battle

A few weeks ago the Issue printed an appeal to the voters of Jacksonville that was issued by the State St. Presbyterian Church of that city. Another Jacksonville church, the Central Christian, has made an appeal to her voters to be active opponents against the saloon in the contest that is likely to be waged.

The liquor interests covet Jacksonville. It was one of the first large cities of Illinois to abolish the saloons under our township and precinct local option law, and the saloon men have a special grudge against this city, which has been fittingly called the Athens of the West—a city of homes, churches and schools. The Central Christian Church has a membership of 296 voters. This appeal was signed by the elders and deacons, thirty-four in number, among whom are four bankers, one physician, four farmers and twenty-five business men. The signing of this document by the business men is especially significant. Jacksonville business men in general have found that the passing of the saloon has made better business conditions for them.

To the Members of the Central Christian Church, Jacksonville, Illinois.

We, the officers of the Central Christian Church, selected by you, the members, to advance the Kingdom of God and the reign of righteousness in our community and the world, subscribe our names to the following resolution and request:

The church and the saloon are unalterably antagonistic forces in the community; the one cannot prosper without detriment to the other.

A follower of Christ, to be well pleasing to Him and consistent, can take but one stand, viz., for the church and against the saloon.

An effort will be made this fall to bring to the reign of the saloon with its accompanying evils, viz., gambling, graft and immorality of every sort.

We subscribe ourselves as opposed to the retention of the saloon and will do all in our power as Christians and citizens to prevent its retention.

We call upon the membership of the church to take this only consistent stand and help us in every way in the coming contest; we cannot serve both God and Mammon.

Knowing that a vote for the saloon makes such voter share in the responsibility for the crime and suffering that follows from such traffic, we ask our voters to keep their hands and souls clean from such fearful responsibility.

Unanimously signed by the officers of the Central Christian Church.

Summer Meetings Successful

By Harvey Peake, Secretary

Special to Christian Men

The big Brotherhood of Central Christian Church, New Albany, Ind., has kept right on with its work during the summer months. The June meeting was a splendid one in every respect and was addressed by J. M. Hughes, pastor at Jeffersonville, Ind. Ice cream and cakes were served.

The July meeting was held in connection with the other Brotherhoods of the city, at the Glenwood Park Chautauqua, on Brotherhood day. This meeting was in charge of Charles B. Scott, of the Central Christian Church Society, and was addressed by Dr. College, of Chicago. Upon this occasion there was an audience of four thousand people present.

The August meeting was held in the basement of the church and was addressed by R. L. Bussabarger, pastor of the Park Christian Church (who made a report of Brotherhood day at the Portland Convention), and B. F. Cato, a former pastor of this church. After the program a watermelon feast was served, to the delight of those present.

It is the plan of this Brotherhood to arrange a charity fund for the purpose of relieving the needs of such worthy poor as may be found by the minister or members of the organization during the winter.

The membership of the Brotherhood now numbers 143.

Brotherhood Testimony

L. B. D. C. No. 373 Endorses Pastor

To Whom It May Concern.

We, the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ at Vinton, Ia., gladly recommend Brother D. G. Dungan to all the churches of Christ and all Brotherhoods everywhere. As Brother Dungan is now entering the general evangelistic field as preacher and singer we wish to testify as to his qualifications for this work. For two years he has been with us and we have learned to love him as a man, minister and religious leader. He is a great leader and teacher for the young men of any community. He has certainly been a live wire among the men of Vinton and surrounding country. Brother Dungan is a great preacher and personal worker. As a chorus leader, soloist and cornet player, he has unusual talent. We therefore heartily commend him to all the churches who are looking for an evangelist.

Our prayers shall follow him in the splendid work he is doing in bringing men and women to Christ.

Passed by unanimous vote of the Local Brotherhood No. 373, Vinton, Ia., July 17, 1911.

Pittsburgh Pastor's Plan

J. W. Underwood is minister of the Belmar Christian Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., home of L. B. D. C. No. 335. Brother Underwood is somewhat of a genius in church work, and in a recent issue of the Belmar Church bulletin he says: "Having read many criticisms against the church, with regard to vital questions of the day, we decided to ask the men and women in the pew, store, shop, etc., to assist in the preaching. Write briefly your sentiments on the following subjects and drop in the basket, hand or send to J. W. Underwood, 7241 Race Street, and he will arrange the material so as to avoid repetition and deliver your thought to the people. Then, if you desire to speak on the subject, an opportunity will be given you. The Brotherhood has decided to follow up these addresses each following Monday evening in an open debate. You will be given a hearing."

The following subjects are announced for consideration:

"The Pittsburgh Plan."

How will it advance the cause of righteousness?

"Social Conditions."

Which is the best method of procedure: to preach the Gospel to the unfortunate and criminal classes and seek to save them in spite of their bad social surroundings, or first seek to destroy the system that largely causes the conditions?

"Capital and Labor."

The Irwin coal field strike and what should be the attitude of the church as regards the same.

"Socialism."

And how it will help the struggling masses.

"The Liquor Traffic."

What has it done for humanity? Should it be regulated by law or prohibited?

"Christian Unity."

Or how can all denominations unite in one body and what would be the result as regards the social conditions?

Devil Takes Vacation? NO!!!

Realizing that the devil takes no vacation, Local Brotherhood No. 253, of Washington, D. C., took no vacation this summer. It never has yet and hopes it never will. A. A. Ackerman is the president.

Brotherhood Takes Charge

A good Brotherhood is started with about twenty enrolled at Olympia, Wash. While Pastor Orreck was away holding a meeting the Brotherhood had charge of the meeting Sunday evenings. There were three speakers:

First address, "The Brotherhood and Its Relation to the Sunday-school;" second address, "The Brotherhood and Its Relation to Church Affairs;" third address, "The Brotherhood and Its Relation to Christian Union." There was also special music by a trio. At the regular monthly meeting talks were made on the subject, "Experiences in My Life That Have Helped Myself and Others." W. E. Haynes is chairman of the Program Committee.

Regarding Brother Power's Picture

Mr. E. E. Elliott,
Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Bro. Elliott.

You have a fine picture of F. D. Power on the cover of CHRISTIAN MEN for July. It occurs to me that Bro. Power's picture ought to hang on the wall of every preacher's study and every church in the Brotherhood. I think I have not seen a better picture of him than the one you print. Why cannot CHRISTIAN MEN run off several thousand of these on a good card? Nearly every preacher and church would want one. There are thousands of homes in which for years they had read Bro. Power's articles in our various publications who would be delighted to have his picture grace their walls.

With every good wish for your work,
Sincerely,

P. H. WELSHIMER

Fine idea, Brother Welshimer, and we will be glad to furnish these in mailing tube ready for framing for 15 cents in stamps to cover cost and mailing. Send in your orders, brethren.

The Brotherhood in Minnesota

By G. F. Anderson

The Brotherhood here in Fairmount, Minn., wish to call the attention of other Brotherhoods that here in the beautiful Southern Minnesota is a Local Brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ that extends a welcome hand to men and works for the upbuilding and progress of this wonderful movement among men. This is a comparatively young church society, but we have been able to get a strong foothold and believe that in the near future we will have as good a Brotherhood as can be found anywhere in the West. We have as yet no church building of our own, but the day is not far off when this work is to be put up before the committee for consideration, and there is no doubt but that a building will be erected and we shall meet for our work under better conditions than what we have at present. The Brotherhood movement is something that has been needed for a long time, and we welcome it with a hearty good cheer, feeling that success is sure to come with it.

On Fire in Washington

"Dear Brother Elliott:

"I thank you very much for the instructions in regard to the duties of the Secretary. We planning GREAT things. We are planning a big time for next Wednesday night. We have more members and expect to have more up next meeting. I wish you would send twenty-five more Local Brotherhood Cards, have the twenty-five you sent me filled out. Our aim is one hundred members by the 1st of February. I feel as if the Brotherhood is just what the men are looking for. We have a man for our President; he is one that can be depended on; in fact, all the officers are brothers (except the Secretary). Hoping you will send the cards soon, I remain as ever,

The Moninger Memorial

At the Indiana Bible Conference it was suggested that the Bible Schools and individuals who were friends of the lamented Herbert Moninger establish a Chair of Bible School Pedagogy in Bethany College—Mr. Moninger's alma mater—as a fitting memorial to his work in his life. The suggestion was ably seconded and a committee was appointed, consisting of Prof. W. B. Taylor, Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va.

H. Welshimer, Bible School editor of CHRISTIAN MEN and pastor at Canton, O.
Walter Ainslie, of Baltimore.

Newton Miller, Buffalo, N. Y.

Justin N. Green, Cincinnati, O.

Grey Morgan, Paris, Ky.

Wm. S. Medbury, Des Moines, Ia.

It is proposed to raise twenty-five thousand ($25,000) dollars for this proposition. The readers of CHRISTIAN MEN, we feel, are heartily in accord with the idea. Herbert Moninger, in addition to his other traits, was a general member of the Brotherhood and contributed toward its financial support from the beginning. His friends will thus make possible a chair at Bethany College that ought to exist in each of our colleges.

Contributions should be sent to President T. E. Bramblett, Bethany, W. Va.

Concerning Moody Institute—Interesting Figures From Annual Report

The Men's Department, Howard W. Pope, Superintendent, had 413 men that enrolled; 30 completed the two years' course of study, an increase of sixty-six per cent; 100 had a previous college or theological training and 200 or more a high school or equivalent training. 29 have gone to other institutions for further study; 50 have entered the pastorate; 37 have gone into evangelistic work, and 25 have entered missionary work.

The financial report shows that at the end of twenty-five years the Institute has assets to the value of more than three-quarters of a million dollars. This includes the new building for women, erected and equipped at a cost of $235,000.

The reports indicate that the 700 students cost $150 each for all purposes in connection with their training. Within the year the annuity fund has been increased by the amount of $27,925. Plans are under consideration for erecting an Administration Building to cost $250,000, and for securing funds for the wider development of all parts of the work.

During the year under the direction of E. A. Marshall, Instructor in Missions, a miniature village has been constructed, giving a typical illustration of East Indian life; also an illuminated relief map of Palestine, said to be the largest in the world.

Missing the Mark

The ordinary conception of what a Brotherhood should be has as many advocates as there are hues in a rainbow. This applies not only to the National Society, but also to the Local Brotherhoods. Recently A. L. Roach, President L. B. D. C. No. 1, of Kansas City, sent out the following letter to Committeemen of his Brotherhood:

"You have been honored by being elected as a member of one of our Standing Committees.

"This position carries with it a responsibility.

"Your heartiest coöperation is necessary that the work of your committee may be most effective.

"What have you personally added to the effectiveness of this work?

"A meeting of each committee should be called at least monthly by the Chairman.

"Reports of such meeting should be reduced to writing and presented to our regular meetings.

"If you are not 'active' come out Monday night and receive an inspiration.

"Thirty minutes will be given Monday night for suggestions by the members of our various committees as to our local needs.

"What do you consider a worthy task for us to undertake? We never glory in the small task. Aim at something worthy, Brotherhood No. 1.

"We have a responsibility. We are men. We will meet this responsibility as becometh men."

THIRTY-NINE men responded on a stormy night, and Mr. Roach, in writing the next day, says:

"Too many labor under the misconception that our work is some form of cheap amusement, endured for the sake of religion.

"This is illustrated by a number of echoes from last night's meeting. One good brother suggested that we should have a series of lectures by eminent men on different forms of architecture, including Venetian, Grecian, etc. Another equally enthusiastic brother is very anxious to have a series of debates on commonplace subjects, while a third proposed a lecture on the Antiquities of the West, when really the Church of Christ of the Northeast is the thing that needs exalting."

Local Brotherhood No. 1 Issues a Weekly Paper of Which the Fol- lowing is an Extract

The ruling passion to the Christian should be the passion for SERVICE.

The Brotherhood presents you avenues of systematic SERVICE which should interest every consecrated man.

Fifteen of our best men constitute our Social and Courtesy Committee and their SERVICE is appreciated.

Seven able Christians represent our best interest as a Civic Committee and their opportunity for SERVICE is measured only by their ability.

We have a committee of nine consecrated men for Visiting and Fraternal Aid and Christian SERVICE gives vitality to church work.

Our Brotherhood Bible Class is manned by a committee of eight efficient men whose SERVICE is telling in an effective way in our entire church life.

Seven capable business men are designated as our Employment Committee and have before them a valuable SERVICE to our work.

The Boys' Committee is "doing things" in an effective way and directing the SERVICE of a number of our most capable brethren.

If all members of Local Brotherhood No. 1 will lend their helpful ministry and Christian SERVICE in active coöperation with our various committees, our church will be led in higher and richer SERVICE to the end that God may be praised and humanity helped.

Interesting Program.

Presence of 100 men wanted.

Will you be one?

Monday night.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

¶ Boys seldom disappoint the fellow they know.

—O—

¶ The boy who is a man before his time is a nuisance.

—O—

¶ A boy's religion must be fraternal, his chums must be in on it.

—O—

¶ Any boy will run from a policeman if he has a chance and no one can blame him for it.

—O—

¶ Christ said, "Except ye become as a little child ye can in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

—O—

¶ A toy becomes a real game to the boy when it teaches him how to use his imagination as well as the toy itself.

—O—

¶ Parents make a mistake in trying to educate boys for some place in life for which they have no liking or talent.

—O—

¶ It is a crime for fathers to let their sons go out into the world unwarned of the great dangers that surround them.

—O—

¶ Bicycle races, looping the loop, auto races are means of making delinquents of would-be actors in modern adventure.

—O—

¶ A religion that has lots of action in it wins the boys. God is a working God and this thought should be taught to the boy.

—O—

¶ Boys want to enthrone their fathers in their hearts, but there are too few men who seem to make any effort to take that place.

—O—

¶ Remember that a boy is not a man. Remember, too, that just a little bit of sorrow in a boy's life seems like a mountain to him.

—O—

¶ There are many boys who are bad because they are sick. They need pills more than any other kind of discipline. We need to be a little careful in our judgment.

¶ Fathers should realize that the ages between ten and sixteen especially are full of the gravest possibilities for future blessing or sorrow.

¶ The game of blocks is the best game in the world, it teaches the boy how to use his brains and hands. What he builds is his own creation.

¶ Boys do not have to sow "wild oats," and big folks make a grave mistake when they think that a boy must do so before he becomes a man.

¶ Our modern civilization has robbed the boy of his birthright—the birthright to run errands—get in the coal and wood and a hundred little duties.

¶ Only in rare cases should a parent take up a child's quarrel. The children of friends the next. This is not so with may be at odds one day and be the best grown up folks.

¶ There are very few boys who do not care for what others think. They may say they don't, but down deep in their hearts they do. Just look into a boy's heart sometime and see.

¶ Do not keep the boy at his books all the time. Remember that he must set his books aside sometimes so that his lungs and muscles can be exercised to make him a real man someday.

¶ Remember that ginger is the boy's favorite spice. You will find a generous supply of it in all his play and work if he is a real boy. He likes to go on a hike in the winter because he enjoys defying the elements.

¶ The commercial age in which we are living, where the feverish desire for easily gained riches is characteristic, has had a great influence upon the boy. It has made most of them feel that they must be on the top without working to gain the goal.

¶ A boy wants to know what lies beyond. Not long ago I visited an art gallery with some boys. One boy in the party was always ahead of the others and every time he saw something that he had not seen before, came running back to tell me about it.

¶ Be a boy over again in spirit if possible; remember the beauties of boyhood, the shady nooks along the streams where were found the swimming hole, all the boyhood hoodoos and the charms connected with them, aye, forget the mad rushing stream of humanity and be a boy just for your boy's sake.

Boy City Talk

How We Won One Boy

By Chas. B. Hahn

It was one of those days when boys, and big boys too, for that matter, sought the warm sun. Outside it was rainy and cold. Many boys had gathered in the club room. I think I can safely say that on such days boys are rebound by devil leaders more often than on bright sunny days. However that may be, I know that this little fellow of whom I am about to tell sort of played hide and seek at the door.

He came to the door in the morning, opened cautiously and then closed it when he saw me look that way. Again later I noticed that he opened the door a little farther. It seemed as if he were wondering if he should come in and if he were getting the lay of the land. But he closed the door without coming in to see what the boys were doing. It was late in the afternoon he came again; this time he came inside. One boy saw him and called to him, asking him to come into the room.

He came in slowly, looking about as a stray animal, wondering (I thought then) just when he would be caught and devoured. By and by he came close to the table where I was playing a game with several of the boys. He watched us for awhile. I spoke to him when he came up to the table, and then for his benefit I talked to all the boys. While talking to the fellows my words were for him alone. I wanted him to know me.

After awhile he wanted to play a game with me. Oh, how his heart responded to the company and the love I showed him. I could tell he was being won. I knew, too, that as we played and I talked with him he was studying me and was passing his judgment upon me. It must have been good, for when he left he said he would come again.

During our conversation I asked, "What kind of a boy are you, anyway?" For a moment he looked at me and then answered:

"My folks say I am bad, but then it isn't my fault."

Surprised at his frankness, I asked him what he did that was wrong and why they called him bad. He seemed to be a pretty square boy in talking to me and in his game.

"Well, you see, it's this way," he said. "My ma and pa are not living together and I live with each one of them a part of the time. I sometimes stay at my aunt's or at my grandma's. All of 'em try to boss me. One tells me to do this, and another something else, and really, mister, I don't know who to mind."

It was a pity that such a condition should exist, yet that boy came back many times, and, I hope, found a new note that helped him on his way, handicapped as it was.

I was glad that I had won him for the club. Would you call it hypnotism that I used? Aye, I call it the power of love. Love will win the boys where clubs and coat collar discipline will fail. I won that boy because I set out to win him. His laughing eyes, the dimples in his cheeks, the freckles on his face, the cap on the back of his head, all proved that he was a real boy. Real boys are easy to win. Tell them a real live story. Tell them that you know them and prove it by telling something you know about a boy and see if you do not win him.

(Ask your State Secretary for material.)

VII.—Closing.

Song.

Benediction.

Interpretation.

For the Devotional, Business and Social parts of the program use your own initiative to the largest possible advantage. No two fields are alike. Your Brotherhood will only begin to grow when the men who have been made responsible for a certain work feel that responsibility and work conscientiously. Let every item in every part be carefully planned, and your opening sessions will be a success.

Cultural.

First address, "Our State."

Let this be a rehearsal of the history of your state. True patriotism and religion are closely linked. Every citizen ought to be proud of his citizenship. Not only the history, but also the wealth and commercial and political possibilities of your state should be emphasized. Make yourself and your men feel your state's opportunities for and the responsibilities to the Kingdom of God within our nation.

Second address, "Evangelistic Opportunities." Secure a good map of your state. A railroad commissioner's map can be had for the asking. See your county clerk or auditor. Then write your State Secretary for a list of evangelistic opportunities. Get also a list of churches in your state. Then locate the churches now established by pinning a blue bit of pasteboard at the proper place. Let red pasteboard be pinned when the opportunities appear.

Third address. Find out from your Secretary how much money your State must have to complete its proper work this year. Also learn what is the amount expected of your local church. Inspire your men with the state's needs and possibilities.

Discussion.

State the question something like: "Resolved, That our State Society ought to become a part of the American Christian Missionary Society." Write the A. C. M. S., Carew Building, Cincinnati, O., for information as to what the Missouri and the Indiana Missionary Societies have done toward "unification." They will be glad to furnish you the desired information.

Clinch your evening's work by definitely deciding on what the Brotherhood will do for State Missions on the first Lord's Day in November. Then arouse your Missionary Committee into determined action. Do it.

Dr. Hall has suggestions covering a wide field. Let the program and civic committees meet and jointly decide what phase is most advantageous. Then prepare for the meeting carefully.

Bible School Lessons for October

American Revised

Prepared by P. H. Welshimer

LESSON 2—OCTOBER 8.

“THE LIFE-GIVING STREAM.”—EZEK. 47:1-12.

And he brought me back unto the door of the house; and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward (for the forefront of the house was toward the east); and the waters came down from under, from the right side of the house, or the south of the altar. 2 Then he brought me out by the way of the gate northward, and led me round by the way without unto the outer gate, by the way of the gate that looketh toward the east; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

When the man went forth eastward with the line in his hand, he measured a thousand cubits, and he caused me to pass through the waters, waters that were to the ankles. 4 Again he measured a thousand, and caused me to pass through the waters, waters that were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and caused me to pass through the waters, waters that were to the loins. 5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass through; for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed through.

6 And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the bank of the river. 7 Now when I had returned, behold, upon

Time. This prophecy was written B. C. 572, near the middle of the seventy years' captivity.

Place. Written at Telabib on the river Chebar, in Babylonia.

Golden Text. “Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.”—Rev. 22:17.

Introduction. Read Rev. 22:1-5. This prophecy of Ezekiel was written to the exiles scattered throughout Babylon. Its purpose was to prepare them for their return to Jerusalem. It was thirty-six years before they returned, but it ever served as an inspiration during those years. Ezekiel was one of the young men carried to Babylon when Nebuchadnezzar conquered Jehoiachin. He was a mighty prophet. His prophecies are divided into four divisions. Today's lesson lies in the last division. We have here the glories of a redeemed nation. Read Ezek. 34; 36:28-38, written shortly after the exiles reached Babylon after the destruction of the city and the temple. Ezek. 37, the valley of dry bones. Ezek. 40-47, a vision of restored worship, written 572 B. C. Today's lesson gives us a picture of the river of salvation. It is a picture of what the Gospel does when men accept it and practice it.

Explanatory. 1—*After they brought me * * * and behold waters issued from under the threshold of the house eastward.* This is a figurative lesson. An angel opened the eyes of the prophet and here painted a picture which revealed to him the glories that were to be. A valley lay from near the Jerusalem temple to the Dead Sea. The source of healing waters was 200 feet above the Mediterranean, and the surface of the salt sea is 1,300 feet below it. The imagery of Jerusalem and the country surrounding it helped to shape the thought of the vision. 2—There ran out waters on the right side. The stream was small at the beginning but increased gradually; almost unnoticeable at the beginning, but mighty at the end. —a thousand cubits. Nothing special about this; simply to indicate that the river grew in width. 4-5—*To the ankles * * * to the knees * * * to the loins * * * waters* to swim in, a river that could not be passed over. This is a picture of a broadening stream, the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other. 8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue forth toward the eastern region, and shall go down into the Arabah; and they shall go toward the sea; into the sea shall the waters go which were made to issue forth; and the waters shall be healed. 9 And it shall come to pass that every living creature which swarmeth, in every place whither the rivers come, shall live; and there shall be a very great multitude of fish; for these waters are come thither, and the waters of the sea shall be healed, and everything shall live whithersoever the river cometh. 10 And it shall come to pass, that fishers shall stand by it: from Engedi even unto Eneglaim shall be a place for the spreading of nets; their fish shall be after their kinds, as the fish of the great sea, exceeding many. 11 But the miry places thereof, and the marshes thereof, shall not be healed; they shall be given up to salt. 12 And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow every tree for food, whose leaf shall not wither, neither shall the fruit thereof fail: it shall bring forth new fruit every month, because the waters thereof issue out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for food, and the leaf thereof for healing.

which gets both broader and deeper. This was symbolical of the fact that the kingdom, upon returning from exile, would be exceedingly small and insignificant, but it would grow in strength and power and influence. And this prophecy was fulfilled. 7—Very many trees. This showed the river had life-giving power. 8—*Go down into the desert * * * into the sea*. The Dead Sea. The desert and the Dead Sea were typical of the condition of the exiles. This is also the condition of men without God. This new river of the prophet was to change the desert into a garden. The waters shall be healed. They were salty. To the exiles would be to make pure, so that life would be sustained in them. 9-10—*Everything that liveth * * * shall come and shall live*. That which had been a maker of death and dry fit for death shall be a sustainer of life. 11—*A miry place * * * shall be given to it*. Not having an outlet, these places which gathered the overflow shall remain salt. All trees for meat whose leaf shall not fade. New life God would bring to these exiles. They would be a new people. The life-giving stream would make the change. Old tendencies would be abandoned and new hopes, new desires and new aspirations would be theirs. So today, "The Gospel transforms the deadness of the sinful heart into the fullness of spiritual blessing and activity in righteousness."

Comments on the Lesson

Israel was now in training, in exile. The new day of which the prophet spoke was fifty years in the future. He belonged to the "society of optimists." He was a great encourager. He held before the people the possibility of redemption. The figures he used in describing the prosperity that should attend the people when they would return to the promised land would have a tendency to rivet their attention and to make the prospect more beautiful. What a blessing is water. So frequently Jesus used it in teaching his great truths—"Life-giving water." "From their bellies shall flow living water." In Revelation it is also a favorite figure. Where water is there is life. Where it is not, there is death. Great tracts of land, once barren, are now blossoming as gardens, through irrigation; so the Gospel is rightly compared to a stream of water. "The Gospel river has become the mightiest stream of influence in the world." "Wherever the Gospel goes, there always springs up and flourishes churches, schools, hospitals, libraries, better homes, more healthful surroundings and comforts and conveniences for happiness and health." It is said that Moffat and Livingston sat on a hillside in Africa, and as their eyes surveyed jungle and plain, they pictured to one another meadows and green valleys, prosperous homes, churches and school houses. They saw it all in the mind's eye, because the Gospel stream could not flow through the land without these blessings following. If we believe these things—and we do—it is not high time that all Christian people will manifest the spirit of a true patriot and will show something of the heroic, in endeavoring to increase these streams until the whole round world shall be as one garden of the Lord and everybody shall be happy in Christ. It is God's will that none shall perish. He is ready to send forth the streams that will carry the blessings, if we will but equip ourselves to receive them.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Ezekiel? When was he carried into captivity? To whom was he a prophet? What was the burden of his prophecy? When did he prophesy the lesson of today? What is the purpose of figurative language in the Scripture? When was this prophecy to be fulfilled? What is the practical application of the lesson?

LESSON 3—OCTOBER 15.

"THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY."—EZRA 1:1-11; 2:64-70.

Printed text, Ezra 1:1-11.

1 Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of Jehovah by the mouth of Jeremiah might be accomplished, Jehovah stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, so that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing saying, 2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of the earth hath Jehovah, the God of heaven, given me; and he hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah. 3 Whosoever there is among you of all his people his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of Jehovah, the God of Israel (he is God), which is in Jerusalem. 4 And whosoever is left, in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, besides the freewill-offering for the house of God which is in Jerusalem.

5 Then rose up the heads of fathers, houses of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, even all whose spirit God had stirred to go up to build the house of Jehovah which is in Jerusalem. 6 And all they that were round about them strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, besides all that was willingly offered. 7 Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of Jehovah which Nebuchadnezzar had brought out of Jerusalem, and had put in the house of his gods; 8 even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah. 9 and

Golden Text. "He retaineth not his anger forever because he delighteth in mercy."—
N. 7:18.

Introduction. Thirty-five years have passed since our last lesson. Jeremiah had p prophesied that after seventy years the Lord would bring the people back to Palestine. Even th name of the king who would permit their return had been prophesied. The exile had ba for the purpose of discipline. Idolatry was broken. They had a great appreciation for th value of worship. They became diligent students of the Scriptures. As an outgrowth o this, we have the establishment of the synagogue and its schools. During the captivity th Scriptures were carefully guarded and transcribed by people who were afterwards known a he scribes. The representatives of the divided kingdoms now united and the nation was
o. They were made one through suffering. It had been said, "And I will make them one n on." "And one king shall be king to them all, and there shall be no more two nations, n her shall they be divided into two kingdoms at all." The exiles had not all been in B ylon, but were scattered throughout the empire. Having come in contact with other p oles, they had broadened and came back home with new ideas.

Explanatory. 1—Cyrus, king of Persia. Nowhere in the Scripture can we better see th hand of God among the nations than in the lesson of today. Cyrus, the Persian, having g ually approached the city, after many battles in its vicinity, turned the waters of the E hrates into canals and permitted his soldiers to march through the bed of the river into th very heart of the city. Here the gates, through carelessness, had been left unguarded, a they marched in upon the people. Massive walls had been erected on both sides of the st am as protection, but when drunk and careless the enemy easily took possession. The f eigners in Babylon were angry at the Babylonian king and welcomed Cyrus. They were g ll to help place the city under his control. Cyrus permitted the people to go back to th r own countries, and in place of the foreigners becoming enemies, they were now friends a allies. Cyrus feared the growing power of Egypt and was glad to send the people back to Palestine to build up the waste places and make it the center of defense in the campaigns a g nst Egypt. Plutarch says that "Cyrus, in wisdom, virtue and magnanimity, seems to h e surpassed all kings." 2—Thus saith Cyrus. The proclamation that the Lord had comm ded him to build a house in Jerusalem was good tidings to all the people. 3—Who is th e among you? Those who went were to volunteer. They were given the privilege of g o g back if they desired, but there was work to be done when they got back home. Were th willing for the task? 4—Whosoever remaineth. That is, whosoever is living among th captives. They are given the authority to raise funds, which are to be used for the b uding of the temple and for his own support. The best men would naturally go. It was a f ting time. 5—Then raised up the heads of the families. The distinguished men of the r en were stirred so that they arose to return to Jerusalem. 6—All them that were about th. All the people remaining, such as Jews, Babylonians and others strengthened them a r helped them with gifts. 7—*And Cyrus * * * brought forth the vessels.* Nebuchadn ear had preserved these sacred vessels for selfish reasons, not that they might again be u s in worship. Cyrus returns them to the people going to Jerusalem. The gifts they r eceived were numerous. When they arrived at Jerusalem they contributed $400,000 in gold a n silver for the temple. They had 435 camels, 736 horses and 6,965 animals bearing the b uens. These carried women and children, the temple treasures and the belongings of th exiles. 8-11—We have here an account of the wealth that was brought back. Ez. 1:64-65 it recorded that 50,000 people returned, 42,360 of whom were householders and the balance s erants.

Comments on the Lesson

God's word shall not return to him void. Judah learned her lessons when in captivity.
Sh had some mighty fine examples of loyalty to Jehovah while in a distant land. While m ay of the people hung their harps on the willows and wept by the rivers of Babylon and r esed to sing the songs of the Lord in a strange land, there were some of the finest s p m e n s of manhood filling high positions in the kingdom that were just as loyal to Jehovah a s he needle to the pole. These furnished great examples for the people. The Babylonian k i n g as he looked upon his stone walls lining the river, felt secure and was not fearful of C y s being able to capture the city; but how easily God can overrule the strongest plans a n purposes of men, and in the least unthought of manner bring about his desired results.
I t u s e l e s s to fight against God. Men know it: why, then, are they so careless? And why s o many attempts to go against his plans? While the people knew that the prophets were s a y g seventy years ago that Judah should be peopled again and the waste places be made g l a little did they dream then that the people into whose land they were being carried would fill their pockets with gold and silver and even give them beasts of burden to assist them home again. They came up to their home land through tribulation. By this route we come up. Tribulation is to the soul of man as fire to the iron.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Cyrus? Describe his capture of Babylon. What strategy was performed? Looking at it from a worldly standpoint, why would Cyrus consent to the Jews returning? Wherein can the hand of God be seen in all these movements. Is God still governing the affairs of nations?

LESSON 4—OCTOBER 22.

“THE FOUNDATION OF THE SECOND TEMPLE LAID.”—EZRA 3:1; 4:

Printed text, Ezra 3:8; 4:5. Read Ezra 4, 5, 6.

8 Now in the second year of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the rest of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem, and appointed the Levites, from twenty years old and upward, to have the oversight of the work of the house of Jehovah. 9 Then stood Jeshua with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of Judah, together, to have the oversight of the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites. 10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of Jehovah, they set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites the sons of Asaph with cymbals, to praise Jehovah, after the order of David king of Israel. 11 And they sang one to another in praising and giving thanks unto Jehovah, saying, For he is good, for his lovingkindness endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised Jehovah, because the foundation of the house of Jehovah was laid. 12 But many of the priests and Levites and heads of fathers' houses, the old men that had seen the first house, when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy: 13 so that the people could not discern the noise of the shouting for joy from the noise of the weeping of the people; for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

1 Now when the adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the children of the captivity were building a temple unto Jehovah, the God of Isreal; 2 then they drew near Zerubbabel, and to the heads of fathers' houses, and said unto them, Let us build with you; for we seek your God, as ye do, and we sacrifice unto him since the days of Esarhaddon king of Assyria, who brought us up hither. 3 But Zerubbabel, and Jeshua, and the rest of the heads of fathers' houses of Israel, said unto them, Ye have nothing to do with us in building a house unto Jehovah; but we ourselves together will build unto Jehovah, the God of Israel, as king Cyrus the king of Persia hath commanded us. 4 Then the people of the land weakened the hands of the people of Judah, and troubled them in building, 5 and hired counsellors against them to frustrate their purpose, in the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even unto the reign of Darius king of Persia.

Place. Jerusalem and vicinity.

Golden Text. “Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise.”—Psa. 100:4.

Introduction. When the exiles returned they found Jerusalem and the surrounding cities in ruins. The streets were choked with debris and the walls and gates had been levelled to the ground. The small cities now became their dwelling places. They were surrounded with a mongrel population. Within three or four months after their arrival, having prepared their homes, they arranged for a religious service. They built an altar for burnt sacrifice on the highest point of Mt. Moriah. They celebrated the annual festivals and they made their freewill offerings for the temple and its service.

Explanatory. 8—*Second year * * * second month.* This was the year after their return. Their homes had been prepared, worship had been started and preparation was now made for the foundation of the temple. Zerubbabel, a civil ruler. Jeshua, a high priest. These authorities united in this service. From twenty years old. Young men who were strong. They were to be overseers. 9-10—Laid the foundation of the temple. This great celebration was about the same as one of our corner stone layings. Priests and their apparel. The priests wore blue and scarlet and purple robes. See Exodus 31:10 and 39:27. With trumpets. Used to summon the people together. The sons of Asaph. Asaph was a great choir leader in the time of David. The term sons applies to those who did the singing named after him. After the ordinances of David. David had organized a choir for temple service. They were now following that custom. 11—Sang together by chorus. Responsive. He is good, etc. “These words first appeared as a doxology at the close of the psalm.”

written by David and sang at the bringing of the ark to Jerusalem." 1 Chron. 16-24.—eloubet. See Psa. 106, 107 and 118. All the people shouted. An expression of their great joy and happiness. 12—Ancient men that had seen the first house. These were men who had seen the temple which had been destroyed B. C. 586, fifty years before this. This temple was larger than the first. Ezra. 6:3; 1 Kings 6:2; 2 Chron. 3:3-4. They contrasted the two temples in Judah. The old was far more magnificent than the new. Haggai 2:3. Zech. 10. The old associations were gone, the ark and sacred fire which belonged to the first temple. They could not help but think of the olden days, which to their minds were surrounded with a halo. Many shouted aloud for joy. Those who had never known the first temple and whose life had been spent in exile were joyous. To them this temple was grand. It was the house of God. The nation was to be saved. It was the dawning of a new day. —Could not discern the noise. It was a noisy occasion. Joy and sorrow intermingled, but the sorrow was the kind that moves toward happiness. It is a good thing to occasionally be moved to tears. 1—Adversaries. The Samaritans and foreigners from Babylon, Persia and Elam. 2—Came to Zerubbabel, etc. The request was to help build the temple. They based their claim on the ground that they also were seeking God and that they sacrificed unto him, but their worship was mingled with idolatry. At heart they were not friends, but adversaries. They desired this union for political, social and financial strength. The liberal giving of the Jews to the temple had left the impression that they were rich. The Jews were real patriots and could not form any alliance with this people to undermine the foundation of their nation. 3—Ye have nothing to do with us. The authorities and the people united in this answer. But we, ourselves together will build unto the Lord, the God of Israel. In union there is strength. This was the task given to the returned exiles, and they would perform it. 4-5—Weakened the hands of the people. The enemy weakened their hands by bringing persons to attempt to cause the Babylonian authorities to interfere with their plans. They were slandered and lied upon. Until the reign of Darius. In 521 B. C. During this time Haggai tells us the people built beautiful homes and cultivated their farms, but by spending overmuch for their own houses and lands and neglecting the house of God, they lost some of their enthusiasm and zeal. "The double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." Ezra, 5th and 6th chapters, give us an account of the change in affairs when Darius became emperor in 521 B. C. He followed the policy of Cyrus, and the temple was hurried to completion, which was accomplished in four years.

Comments on the Lesson

Two things are necessary to the happiness and prosperity of any nation—good homes for the people and religious worship, which prepares for service. The exiles first prepared their homes. They did not wait until the temple was completed, but on the highest point of Mt. Moriah, where today stands the well-known "Dome of the Rock," they built an altar and offered incense. Every morning and night the people saw the sacrificial fires ascending. This was an aid to their worship and consecration. Along with their worship must be manifested their liberality. They gave of money and material for the rebuilding of the temple. A man's religious life can sometimes be weighed pretty accurately by the way in which he gives to the support of God's work. "These people built their new altars on the old foundations and their new forms on old principles." The Psalmist says, "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house," that is, those who have regular habits of worship and who make their own home God's house. The blessing of daily worship is undervalued in these days of hustle and bustle. These people did not undervalue the power of music. The orchestra idea is 3000 years old. What singing they must have had. There were solos, responses, choruses and refrains. All that would give inspiration to the great service. Beware of unholy alliances. To be united with their adversaries would have resulted in a complete downfall. Two great preachers arose in these days—Haggai, an old preacher, and Zachariah, a young one. Both these men urged the people to arise and believe. Their great plea was to put God first. These following statements made by the young preacher Zachariah, are worthy of a place on the wall of every home: "Not by might nor by power but by my spirit, saith the Lord." "Who hath despised the day of small things." "In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses holiness unto the Lord; and the pots in the Lord's house shall be like the bowls for the altar."

Questions for Class Use

Who was Zerubbabel? Cyrus? Jeshua? Darius? What is meant by "sons of Asaph?" When did the first Jews return from exile? Who were the enemies of the returned exiles? Why did they offer to help rebuild the temple? Why was their offer declined? Why were only those over twenty years old to be selected to help in the work? What caused the old people to weep and the younger ones to rejoice when the foundations were laid? Compare the first and second temple. Why was the work delayed? How long was the temple rebuilding? What two great preachers arose at this time? What was the burden of their message?

Golden Text. "The Lord has done great things for us; whereof we are glad."—Psa. 126:3.

Time. It is unknown when the Psalm was written, but in its spirit belongs to a return from exile.

Introduction. Someone has said, "Let me write the songs of a nation, I care not who makes its laws." The character of people is largely determined by the songs they sing, and the songs help to form the character. An official song book has been completed for use in the British navy, containing patriotic selections. In the darkest times the French army was inspired by "La Marseillaise." We know the value of our "Star Spangled Banner" and "America" in our own country. These Psalms were the great songs of Judah. Many a martyr has gone to his death with a courage sustained by the singing of a Psalm. No finer sentiment is found anywhere than that contained in the Psalm which we study today. When we study the 85th, let the others indicated above be carefully read.

Explanatory. 1—The chief musician was the choir leader. The sons of Korah, the name of the choir, taken from Korah, one of David's chief musicians. Thou hast been favorable unto thy land. This was manifest in the bringing back of the captivity. Great things had been done than they had expected. Of this the prophets had sung, but the people had been disbelieving. The capture of Babylon by the Medes and Persians; the permission of the people to return, the protection given them in the four months' journey through the desert—all helped to impress the fact that God was in the movement. 2—Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people. Cancelled it; taken away. Cover all their sin. As something has been covered up, blotted out, hidden. 3—Taken away all thy wrath. Turned * * * from the fierceness of thine anger. God had shown His displeasure in the punishment that had been inflicted upon the people. His pleasure is now shown in restoring them to their country, their homes and all the blessings attending them. 4—Turn us. Not satisfied with temporal blessings, they desired complete forgiveness and a deep spiritual life. They longed for that true fellowship with God. 5—Wilt thou be angry? The anger of God had been seen in the captivity, in the permitting the destruction of the temple, etc. They now longed for the restoration of the temple and the return to the glory of the city of Jerusalem. 6—Revive. Quicken, to give new life. The safest, happiest man is the one who can rejoice in God. 7—Grant us thy salvation. This was their prayer. It should be the yearning of our hearts today. 8—I will hear. Listening for the answer. Too many pray and never expect an answer. The returned exiles prayed and waited for God to speak. Let them not return to folly. It is useless to ask God for blessings and then to put ourselves in such a position that blessings cannot be given. Our actions often defeat our petitions. 9—Thy glory may dwell in our land. They longed for the glory, for the presence of God, as it had been shown among them in olden times. This was realized in the coming of the Son of God, but they did not understand then. 10—Mercy, truth, righteousness and peace. What more could be desired? Let these reign in your life and all is well. This makes a perfect character as all the virtues are in harmony. 11—Truth shall spring out of the earth. It shall be found in the lives of men. 12—Our land shall yield her increase. Haggai 1:5-11 tells of the curse of the land as a punishment for their sins, but now when righteous they will prosper and "our land shall yield her increase." 13—Righteousness shall go before Him. When we follow we will make no mistake. Our ways shall be ways of pleasantness and our paths paths of peace.

Comments on the Lesson

It is a great soul who recognizes the guiding hand of God in everything. It is a comforting thought. What a dreary old world it would be if the thought of God were eliminated and we were left to chance or accident. It is always consoling to know that "our Father knows." These exiles knew what it was to suffer. After their banishment the home land, though laid waste, looked good to them. Every spot was sacred. The chief thought in their minds was getting right with God. They had now learned that they succeed best and are crowned with happiness who have God's favor and walk in his peace. For this they loved. The happiest man is he who can look towards the heavens and say to his Father, "It is all right between you and me"; who can then look into the face of every man he meets and say, "It is all right between us." Such a one is strong and has no fears and no remorse. What a thought for each today that no matter what the sin may be, forgiveness will be granted. There is pardon, blotting out, covering up and forgetting forever for each one. This is the mercy of God. This is His grace. It is ours to accept or reject. You have a debt of $10,000 against you; you are unable to pay and are liable to be cast into prison. Your creditor comes along and asks you to receive the cancelled note—that your debts are forgiven and he makes you free. Would you accept it? Would it be necessary for men to plead with you, to coax you, to reason with you, to get you to act? Would you not be happy and always grateful to the man who had forgiven? Then why not be just as reasonable towards Jehovah? "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." We are debtors; God offers to pardon. Will you comply with the conditions? They are within reach; accept the pardon.

Questions for Class Use

When was this Psalm written? What is the purpose of the Psalms? Who was the great Psalmist? What is the value of the Psalms to us today? What is the advantage of having our children commit the choice selections among the Psalms? What does this Psalm teach us concerning prayer?

LESSON 1—NOVEMBER 5.

"ESTHER PLEADING FOR HER PEOPLE."—ESTHER 4:1-5; 3.

Printed text, Esther 4:10-5; 3.

Then Esther spake unto Hathach, and gave him a message unto Mordecai, saying: 11 All the king's servants, and the people of the king's provinces, do know, that whosoever, whether man or woman, shall come unto the king into the inner court, who is not called, there is one law for him, that he be put to death, except those to whom the king shall hold out the golden sceptre, that they may live: but I have not been called to come in unto the king these thirty days. 12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

Then Mordecai bade them return answer unto Esther, Think not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews. 14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then will relief and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place, but thou and thy father's house will perish: and who knoweth whether thou shalt come to the kingdom for such a time as this? 15 Then Esther bade them return answer unto Mordecai, 16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens will fast in like manner; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law: and if I perish, I perish. 17 So Mordecai went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

1 Now it came to pass on the third day, that Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the entrance of the house. 2 And it was so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that she obtained favor in his sight; and the king held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre. 3 Then said the king unto her, What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be given thee even to the half of the kingdom.

Time. Esther became queen 479 B. C. Haman plotted B. C. 474.

Place. Shushan, the winter capital of the Persian empire, twenty-five miles north of the Persian Gulf.

Golden Text. "The Lord preserveth all them that love him."—Psa. 145:20.

Introduction. The story of Esther belongs between the sixth and seventh chapters of Ezra; between the first and second return of the exiles. This story of Esther is one of the most fascinating in the Old Testament. Read the entire book. You will find "truth stranger than fiction." The husband of Esther, Ahasuerus, also called Xerxes, was the king of Persia. This is the man whom Themistocles defeated at Salamis, near Athens, October 20, 480 B. C. Xerxes was the son of Darius. He came to the throne 486 B. C. and ruled twenty years. He made great invasions and aimed to be master of the world. Almost any encyclopedia will give one a good insight into his life and works. It is necessary to know of his life and peculiarities to have a thorough understanding of the story of Esther. It is said Xerxes was known for his beauty, but he was proud, self-willed, amorous, reckless of human life, impetuous, changeable, vainglorious and licentious. Chapter 1 gives an account of the great banquet, to which Xerxes had invited the noblest of the Persians. His wife at the same time entertained the ladies. In their drunken revelry she was ordered to appear before his guests to reveal her beauty. She refused, and because of this was deposed from being queen. Chapter 2. The fair young maidens of the realm were brought to the palace at Shushan. Here the king selected a maiden to be queen instead of Vashti. An old Jew named Mordecai, who had been carried into captivity under Nebuchadnezzar, had been adopted as a father to his cousin, Esther. This beautiful girl was selected as the wife and queen of Xerxes. Chapter 3. Haman was promoted to first place in the kingdom, next to the king. All the servants bowed to Haman except Mordecai, and through Haman's instrumentality the king issued a decree whereby all the Jews should be put to death. He did not know that his wife was a Jewess. This decree was to go into effect on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month. Chapter 4:1-9. Mordecai rent his clothes and put on sackcloth and ashes. Weeping he sat before the king's gate. Throughout all the provinces there was weeping among the Jews. Esther heard of Mordecai's plight and sent Hathach to have an interview with him. This servant carries the news to Esther of the decree, also the request of Mordecai to appear before the king and if possible to spare the lives of the Jews. With this our lesson begins today.

Explanatory. 10-12—*All the king's servants and the people * * * do know.* It was a serious thing to appear before the king. He was a man of moods. If his sceptre was not extended, it meant death to the intruder. Esther would be taking her life in her hands to comply with Mordecai's request. 13-14—Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther. Here are four reasons for her acting: 1 For her to escape the massacre would be impossible; 2 She had probably been made queen for this very purpose; God was behind it all, and that being true, her visit would be successful; 3 Not only she, but her friends would be massacred if the decree is not stayed; 4 Here was a great opportunity to save her people. 15-17—*She accepted the mission. Go gather * * * all the Jews that are present at Shushan.* Here was worship. She relied upon God. Those whose lives were in danger were to help her. There was power in concerted effort. If I perish, I perish. Here is determination. She meant to do her best for her people, regardless of the results for herself. Mordecai could not approach the king, but he could do what Esther bade him do. He could be as a bell to assemble the people together, to take part in the great fasting and prayer. 5:1-2—Esther put on her royal apparel. She looked as beautiful as possible, and now stands before the king as he sits on his throne. No sooner had he caught sight of her than the golden sceptre was extended and her life was safe. 3—Then said the king unto her, "What wilt thou, queen Esther?" Anything she would ask was to be given, even to the half of his kingdom. We have a very incomplete lesson unless the student will read the remaining chapters of the story. By further reading it will be shown how Mordecai was honored, Haman humbled and finally put to death on the scaffold built for the execution of Mordecai. The Jews were saved, Haman's ten sons were put to death, and the feast of Purim in commemoration of the event was established, and there was joy among all the Jews throughout the colonies.

Comments on the Lesson

No other lesson in the Old Testament reveals more perfectly the providence of God than does this one. In it we behold the workings of both good and evil forces; through it there can be clearly seen the hand of Jehovah. The king furnishes us an example of a man who could not think for himself and was influenced by a lot of worldly advisers. His is also a striking example of how a man will make a fool of himself when he is drunk. Mordecai was a shrewd, faithful and independent man who got his reward in due time. Be careful how you make gallows for other people. Haman swung to death on the one he had built for Mordecai. How a little thing can sometimes spoil one's happiness and prosperity. Haman would kill Mordecai and all the Jews because this old Jew refused to bow to him. How easily God can overcome evil with good. How useless for men to attempt to defy His power and change His plans. We do not think of attempting to run an electric car without a trolley. Who would attempt to send a locomotive across the country without a steel track on which to run? The river moves on swiftly and smoothly and is controlled when within its channel. When over the banks it is uncontrollable. How easily and without any thought the ball and socket joint of the thigh work when the ball is in the socket, but O! what pain how helpless, when dislocated! In all these things certain laws must be observed. There is a place for everything. So, with the soul's race in life, find the place God has selected for us, get on the track prepared for us, and thus, by complying with His laws, we have the promised blessings. Any other attempt is futile.

Questions for Class Use

Who was the husband of Esther? Of what kingdom was he king? How did Esther come to be his wife? Who was Mordecai? His relation to Esther? Who was Haman? Why was the decree issued that the Jews should be put to death? What was the folly of Haman? What his punishment? What is the practical lesson we get from Haman's career? Wherein is the providence of God shown in this lesson?

THANKSGIVING MONTH

November is here with its snows and
lov. Vacations are over and activity eign supreme. What we have done or ailed to do is paled by the promise of near things in the future.

VE THANKS We pause to give thanks for what we have—for om—for family ties—and for the huh—yes, the Church is the best institution on earth still, although commerce and politics overshadow its doorway and cause some to think and a few to say that religion is retrogressing.

UR WORKSHOP A glance into the religious workshop reveals powerful progress in the Church. All departments are flourishing in spite of temporary drawbacks. Our schools and colleges report unprecedented attendance this year.

OFFERINGS

The offerings of our Foreign Society were some thousands of dollars in excess of last year, and more progress on the field is reported. The work in our homeland goes steadily on with leaps and bounds.
New territory is being invaded on the frontier and work is being established and strengthened in our growing cities.
Sad indeed is our failure to bring our Church Extension offering this year up to the high standard which its crying need demands, and as a result many

HOMELESS CHURCHES

homeless congregations will remain in upstairs halls and rented quarters for a season.

Time yet remains for our men to put their hands deep into their pockets and raise the offering this worthy work should have. The C. W. B. M., with its efficiently managed institutions at home and abroad, orphanages, hospitals and mission stations, its Bible chairs and training school, is a shining example of pluck and grit, and ought to shame us men into doing our real duty toward those organizations in whose management we have a voice. The great Sunday-School movement with its adult class activities is a challenge to Satan, and with the Men and Religion Forward Movement are heralds of a new day in the Church of Jesus Christ. Our

THE C. W. B. M.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL

BENEVOLENCE

Benevolent work in the hands of sterling business men and women continues to thrive, but how much—oh, how much greater should be this work. We hear suggestions for the Brotherhood movement on all sides. Insurance, hospitals and orphanages, old folks' homes and the like—work now done by the lodges and secular organizations are thrust before us as specific tasks. These we should do, and more. Every field of activity opened to church men should be most royally supported. Thanks be to God that these tasks loom large upon our horizon and quicken our determination to give to the 400,000 men of the Churches of Christ a program of activity that will test the very mettle of manhood. We do not need more machinery, but do need power applied to the machinery we now possess.

THE CALL HOME

Some great men have gone to their reward

this year—Power, Moninger, Kenoly, McGarvey. Their lives were an inspiration, their memory a benediction. Who will take their places? Christmas cheer will pervade our homes and fireplaces next month. What will our men's organizations and Bible classes do to keep cheer to cheerless hearths this year.

MEN FOR THE MINISTRY

In January comes the call for volunteers for the ministry and mission field.

Hundreds of pulpits are vacant and the doors of many churches are closed for want of gospel emissaries. This subject should lie heavily upon the heart of every man among us. Men for the ministry and a large student aid program will be emphasized in our January magazine. Get ready to observe these programs. A better paid ministry should be the aim of us all. Let us pay our ministers so they may live as the best men in the communities, which they are. Brethren, let us be truly thankful for what we have, but let us have a thought for those bereft of the comforts of life. The programs for Brotherhood and men's classes published in this issue are worthy of observance. We need more than ever to continue in prayer and sympathetic coöperation.

We Thank Thee

FOR a place to work and the strength to serve; we thank Thee. For the friends we have and those we are yet to know; we thank Thee. For the burdens so heavy they make us strong and for the tasks so difficult they keep us alert; we thank Thee. For enough to save us from want and for the spur of need inciting us to increasing toil; we thank Thee. For those loving us so well they impose no conditions and for those we so love that we exact no surrenders; we thank Thee. For these all we thank Thee; and for all the others unnamed, a great host; we thank Thee. And more: for the spirit that is thankful; we thank Thee. And most of all; for Thyself and all Thou art to us; we thank Thee—God of our passing days; we thank Thee for all that now is and for all that is yet to be.

Death of J. W. McGarvey

J. W. McGARVEY

J. W. McGarvey is dead. This startling announcement will be received with profound regret by readers of CHRISTIAN MEN, many of whom were acquainted with this eminent man either in person or by reason of his utterances from the printed page. J. W. McGarvey was a preacher of rare abilities and a writer whose pen flowed as freely as his mind thought, with judgment and power. It is a singular thing that of all the men whose characters have been depicted in CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine two should have passed to the Great Beyond during 1911. Herbert Moninger, whose boyish countenance beamed from the cover of our magazine for September, 1909, but recently stepped across the line; and now we are called upon to mourn the loss of Brother McGarvey.

At this writing we are not in the possession of the details surrounding his going away, and certainly we were not prepared for the information. It has only been a few days since we received a letter penned with his own hand; the tracings of the pen indicating the infirmities of age, but the words speaking from the white page gave no hint of uncertainty. Behind those trembling fingers was J. W. McGarvey the man, firm and steadfast. While his hand trembled, and likewise his voice, and a slight imperfection in his organs of hearing, he was, if anything, more powerful a spokesman through the printed page at the close of his successful career than at any time in his successful history. J. W. McGarvey educated more preachers than any teacher alive today among the Disciples of Christ. Men who sat at his feet in Lexington are now preaching the gospel throughout the world. Only God himself can measure the good resulting from the life of this man.

We join the bereaved family in sincere sympathy, and can only say that it is our earnest prayer that every man who ever knew J. W. McGarvey, or heard his voice, or read his pencilings is a better man by reason of such contact. Brother McGarvey died on Friday, October 6, at his home in Lexington.

The Morning Mail

Each day we receive numerous letters from Pastors who are struggling with the Brotherhood problem,—one that means a religious awakening among the members of the Local Church when once they undertake the work in real earnest. One pastor writes thus:

"This Church has never had a real organized Brotherhood among the men (we have among the women), but I am about half way convinced, if I could fully convince the other fellows it would be a pretty good thing for us to wake up, and start things a-going; I want to be sure of my ground and work in the staying qualities somewhat, before beginning."

We are certain that this Pastor will get a Brotherhood, and when he gets it it will be a Brotherhood indeed.

Men and Religion Campaign

MOVEMENT EXPLAINED

The Men and Religion Forward Movement is an attempt on the part of the churches of America, to arouse the manhood of the churches and of the world to their responsibility for carrying on the work of the Kingdom. The Movement is a practical combination of the masculine forces of the united protestant churches of the land, being participated in by the International Sunday-School Association, the International Y. M. C. A., the Gideons (Christian Traveling Library), and the various Church Brotherhoods. The plan is to prepare the community of visitation for the coming of a host of religious experts, who will inspire and instruct the churchmen in the ways of the church, giving them scientific instruction in the best methods of church work within and without the church building. Evangelism and Personal Work, Social Service, How to Treat the Masses, The Workingman, Employer and Employee, Bible Study, Boys' Work, Shop Meetings, Street Meetings, etc., International Work, all come in for a very fine and vital program, giving instruction not only in theory but in practice.

Each of the 76 cities to be visited by teams between now and May 1, 1912, has a central committee composed of representatives from each of the communities, and foremost in many of these committees should be found men of the Christian Church. This Central Committee has sub-committees to handle the various projects, gathering statistics, arranging meeting places, etc., and only those men who feel the tremendous enormity of the movement. Churches without the cities of visitation will be in the zone of communication, and will send churchmen to the campaign centers for the convention days, Tuesday and Wednesday. Here they will be inspired to a great determination to go home and organize their own community for a similar campaign. Every minister should get his men personally in touch with the nearest campaign point and if you are not now getting literature and letters about the movement a letter addressed to the Executive Secretary of the Movement in care of the Y. M. C. A. will usually bring a response.

45 MINUTES
FROM ST. PAUL

Up in beautiful Minnesota, nestling away among the forest trees, surrounded by neat white cottages, with neither post office nor store, is Bald Eagle Lake. Thither the Men and Religion Teams—thirty sterling men—wended their way during the closing days of September. Few such groups and fewer gatherings of such expert workers in affairs of the Kingdom have ever come together. Fred B. Smith, whose life story is briefly recited elsewhere in this issue, led the group whose faces beam from the white page across the way.

The Men Who Deliver the Goods

Fred B. Smith, Campaign Leader

There is only one Fred B. Smith, and when he dies there will be a permanent vacancy. But Fred B. Smith is not going to die for a while yet—no, not Fred—he is one of the most active men alive today, devoting his time exclusively to religious work. Every man in America has at some time or other heard of Fred B. Smith. His name has appeared on more bill boards of theatres than any living actor, yet he is not an adept of the foot-lights. Newspapers have devoted more glaring headlines to his evangelistic campaigns than to any other living evangelist, not excepting Gypsy Smith or any of the great world wide evangelists, yet Fred B. Smith is not a sensationalist. He enjoys the personal acquaintance of more churchmen, and can probably call by name more pastors, laymen, and Y. M. C. A. workers than any living person. Fred B. Smith is a greater general than ever led an army into bloody battle. He absolutely controls situations intrusted to him. He not only directs men what to do, but how to do it. He never asks a man to do a thing that is impossible of fulfillment under trying conditions. In conferences, he never forgets the minutest details. He arranges great gatherings of men on twenty-four hours notice by telegraph, and never fails to get crowded houses.

Fred B. Smith, is one of the really extraordinary figures of modern life. His fame as an evangelist to men has spread across two continents since the close of the Spanish War.

Mr. Smith was born in Iowa, forty-six years ago, of sturdy New England parents. His boyhood days were days of struggle, of hard work, of discipline school and at home; and one result of that rigorous life was the development of a bodily engine, of a physique, of enormous power and of corresponding endurance.

After he had obtained all the schooling that was possible at that time, Fred Smith worked for several years as a salesman in the Western country, after becoming converted to active Christianity in a little South Dakota mission church, he became interested in Y. M. C. A. work and served a term of service as a Secretary at Duluth Falls. From 1891 to 1896 Mr. Smith was General Secretary at Duluth. But his great desire was not to stay permanently in the management of a Y. M. C. A. What Fred B. Smith wanted to do was to get out in the world face to face with men, individually, or in groups, or in great meetings, and preach to them the Gospel of Jesus Christ, absolutely, simply; giving them the Gospel straight, and without frills. So, in the fall of 1896, the young man cut loose from the work of a Y. M. C. A. Secretary and sprang into the field of evangelistic endeavor, and for nearly two years traveled from town to town and from city to city as an evangelist, working through various associations and in many places.

When the Spanish War opened, the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. found itself face to face with a new and appealing opportunity for work with the soldiers and sailors of the United States. It was at that time that Fred Smith came up as a national figure. On account of his success as an evangelist for nearly two years, the International Committee picked him out as the man above all others to go to the large camp of 65,000 men at Chickasaw to preach the Gospel, to comfort the sick and dying in hospitals, to give courage to those who needed it sorely, and to strengthen them by his presence as well as his words, among the temptations always present in an army camp. For nine weeks Fred Smith engaged in daily evangelistic meetings at Camp Thomas, and afterward came work in half a dozen other Southern camps, and then an evangelistic campaign with the army of occupation in Cuba.

In the fall of 1899 Mr. Smith was asked to enter the service of the International Y. M. C. A. Committee for the purpose of campaigning the American City Associations, holding conferences with officers, committee-men, and active members, on the organization of their religious work, and impressing upon the leaders the need of giving greater emphasis to the religious work of the Association. His success during the following eighteen months will stand as one of the high lights in the historical picture of contemporary Christian work.

The most important work ever undertaken by Mr. Smith is The Men and Religion Forward Movement which he has organized through and through, from the first meeting in May, 1910, during all the hundreds of meetings and dozens of conferences which have been held since then all over the United States and in many Canadian cities. The phenomenal success of this organization is well known to those connected with it, and before long will be well-known to every person in the Western hemisphere; for it is a campaign which has never been equalled in the history of religious work. The Men and Religion Forward Movement is now under way actively in some 1,500 cities and towns.

from first to last Mr. Smith has directed this Movement to the smallest details, with consummate skill; and that the campaign is actually to place he will devote himself very fully to the work he loves more than himself—that of the evangelist who has one message for his fellow-men.

Roy B. Guild, Executive Secretary

Mr. Fred B. Smith's associate as Executive Secretary in this great campaign is the Roy B. Guild, one of the most successful and widely known of our younger clergymen in the Congregational Church. Mr. Guild was born in Galva, Ill., forty years ago.

Mr. Guild is a man who believes in the social development for ministers as well as for laymen, and he continues his theory after leaving Knox College. For three years he was captain of the Oliver Typewriter Football team in this way coming in constant close association with the great body of young men and boys employed at the principal industrial enterprise of the locality where he was serving as Minister of the Gospel.

In January, 1911, Mr. Guild accepted the office of Executive Secretary of the National Religion Forward Movement, at which time he has been the chief associate of Mr. Fred B. Smith, specializing in the publication of literature, with publicity matters, general correspondence. From now on Mr. Guild will precede the teams of experts in their visits to the various cities, collaborating with the local committees of One Hundred, making final preparations for the eight-day campaign.

When the Spanish War broke out Mr. Guild went to the front with the Third Illinois Regiment to do hospital work and religious work in every possible direction, and is an honorary member of the Spanish-American War Veterans.

Charles Stelzle, Social Work Expert

One of the most interesting and one of the strongest of these teams of experts is under the leadership of Charles Stelzle—one of the most remarkable figures in modern religious life. Almost every working man in the United States and Canada knows about Charles Stelzle, the machinist who turned preacher and who has been so successful in his plan to take the Christian Church into the field of labor, instead of following the usual plan of trying to lasso labor and take it into the Church.

It is hardly necessary at this late date to tell of Mr. Stelzle's remarkable achievement in establishing the "Labor Temple" in the heart of the Red-Light District, New York City,—an active, spiritual church filled to overflowing, where thirty meetings are held per week, most of which are inspirational. Outside of this building at 14th Street and 2d Avenue, there pass by on the sidewalk and in the street cars not less than 1,000 persons per minute during certain hours of the twenty-four. Within a few hundred yards is the center of the great downtown amusement district of the working people, with its dozen theaters and moving picture shows, and scattered around on the sides, saloons and dance halls by the dozen. This is distinctly not one of the city's slum regions because the people who live within easy walking distance are mostly respectable workmen and their families, who occupy tenements. As was recently said in the Outlook it is a neighborhood composed of honest, hard-working men and women who are as human as the rest of the world with all the frailties of mankind in the midst of constant temptation. And it is in just that locality that Mr. Stelzle has founded and developed his Labor Temple, which serves the people there as no other institution attempts to serve. Mr. Stelzle and his association are winning the friendship of the people, and are breaking down long-time prejudices against the church, showing men and women of all religions and of no religion just what practical Christianity means.

W. R. Lane, Evangelist

One of the evangelists taking part in the Men and Religion Forward Movement comes to this country from England after a career full of romance and unexpected situations. He is Mr. W. R. Lane, one of the best known evangelists in Great Britain, who has achieved marked success as one of the Special Missioners of the National Council of Evangelical Free Churches.

Born in Kent, he grew up as many young men do, falling into careless ways and giving no heed to spiritual matters. At 17 years of age he became a volunteer, which was the means of his ultimately entering the Army. The drill instructor of his corps was an old Coldstream Guardsman, and so interested the young volunteer in this particular regiment that when he was 18, young Lane enlisted as a private in the ranks of the Coldstream Guards. A fine young fellow, he speedily became very popular with his fellow soldiers, and also fell into some of their evil practices, of which gambling was the chief. Private Lane soon became as keen a gambler as any of them. One day when the regiment was stationed at Windsor for duty at the Castle, Lane and some companions were seated about the card-table. He had come to his last copper. Presently a Christian soldier approached the gambling table, and offered the men playing cards. They were tickets of admission to a religious meeting.

"Won't you take one, Lane?" asked the soldier. Lane had literally staked his last penny and exclaimed.

"Well, I may as well have one."

Private Lane attended the meeting which was held in the old National Schoolroom and from that hour his life was changed. He entered a room at the back of the Hall at the close of the evening, and there and then gave himself to Christ. But the great struggle of his life was yet to come. His comrades soon knew of Lane's conversion, and taunted and mocked him mercilessly. But the young soldier of Christ stuck bivalve to his colors. Often when kneeling on the cold barrack-room floor in prayer missiles were hurled at him. Yet his example and his words began to produce effect, and within three months of his conversion about forty soldiers came out of his regiment and openly confessed to Christ, and he became an active worker on the side of the Gospel as long as he remained in the Army. He had been a soldier only four and a half years when he had risen to the rank of corporal. When he left the Guards and returned to civilian life to give himself entirely to evangelistic work.

For a number of years Mr. Lane was associated with the work of the Y.M.C.A.

ad enjoyed the close friendship of the Sir George Williams.

Mr Lane is a muscular Christian, and mainly bearing and sturdy character are attract an audience. His military experiences have not been without their value in his service as an Evangelist.

Raymond Robins, Social Work Expert

One of the most forceful and picturesque figures in the religious and civic life of America is Raymond Robins, who for years has made it his business to go through the country preaching the Gospel of Righteousness in every day life. He is a man for his time, filled with the spirit that sent John Wesley out into the field, and so convinced of the superior importance of his message, that he commands and holds the attention of large audiences whenever he appears before them.

Mr Robins was born in New York on Staten Island, fifteen minutes south of the Statue of Liberty. But after his birth in 1873 he was taken by his parents, and spent his boy-hood in Ohio, Kentucky and Florida. As an indication of his fearlessness and spirit of adventure, it may be mentioned that he ran away from home in Louisiana when only eight years old, and hired himself as a water-boy in a brick yard. But after a long time he returned home to report that he was well, and remained there for two years, when he started off again alone at the age of ten, in order to visit his living in Florida. It is a remarkable thing psychologically to see that even in early childhood this boy was conscious within himself of the passion for independence and industrial freedom, an action which later on he has pursued from one end of the Continent to the other.

For some years the adventurous lad worked on a Florida farm and in an apple orchard, attending school in the winter seasons. And it was during this period of his life that he came in contact with a young theological student, William A. Fulton, who had left his seminary temporarily in order to regain his health in Florida. The meager education which the youthful Robins had been able to obtain in the country schools in winter, was now supplemented and solidified through the personal efforts of Mr. Fulton. From that time on young Robins swept ahead in a career of business success unusual even in this country. While still under twenty-one he was manager of a branch store near a Florida phosphate mine, and qualified himself to prospect for phosphate and kaolin. His efforts being rewarded with a discovery of a rich deposit. In this he laid the foundation of a small fortune, and soon afterwards went on a prospecting tour for asphaltum lands in Texas and the Indian Territory. Then he turned to the study of law and was admitted to the Florida bar before he was twenty-two. But this did not satisfy him, and he entered the law department of the Columbia University at Washington, D. C., covering a study period of three years and completing the entire course in one year. Then to San Francisco was his next move, where he threw himself into the work of civic reform with success, after which he joined a procession of gold hunters to the Klondike.

In October, 1897, his party was caught in ice flows four hundred miles up the Yukon and he made the trip overland to Rampart City with great hardship and at extreme risks. It was on this hazardous Arctic journey that Mr.
Robins' growing appreciation of the ideal and human life reached a sudden and definite climax. He had up to that time been an agnostic in religion. The churches as he thought he knew them had repelled it, and his expanding ideals and hopes had not yet impressed him with a consciousness of a religious experience. But in his cheerless wandering in the Arctic Zone he came upon a Jesuit Mission and Convent, and made friends with the inmates, through his devoted life in voluntary exile, amid the snowy wastes of a country of almost endless night were devoted to helping in practical ways and to teaching spiritually tribes of men and women and children whose dreary round of existence was passed in that desolate land.

This personal knowledge of the service to humanity which various branches of the Christian Church are rendering, struck young Robins between the eyes and he thought of it constantly while continuing his gold hunting adventure. The day soon came when he turned from business pursuits to the Christian Ministry. Authorized by the Congregational Ministry for Alaska, Mr. Robins assumed the pastorate of the First Congregational Church at Nome, to which he had been elected by the congregation. The Methodist missionary also authorized him to act for the Methodists as occasion demanded. And he at once jumped into the field where he has since remained, preaching not merely spiritual growth, but righteousness, fairness, sympathy in civic life, in political affairs, in industrial conditions. An epidemic of typhoid fever at Nome caused him to become a fever nurse in addition to being a Pastor, and he fell a victim to the disease, for weeks hovering between life and death. As soon as he was sufficiently recovered he started back to civilization, and since then has become one of the most widely known and influential Christian workers in the Capitals of the world.

"Railroad Jim" Smith, Evangelist

James R. Smith, commonly known as "Railroad Jim," is the son of a professor, of Scotch and Quaker extraction, born in the South where his father was the principal of the Barton Academy in Mobile, Ala. His parents removed to Jacksonville, Ill., where they were well-known instructors. Young Smith was educated there.

In the early 80s, becoming restless under the restraints of a college town, he went West, going first to the lumber camps of Colorado, near Denver. After several months, hearing of the activities of a minister in the West, he removed to the West where he met the general superintendent of the Old South Park railroad, of the Colorado & Southern. Here he entered railroad service and was sent to Buena Vista, where he became a switchman. Through an injury in the yards he was transferred to the motive power department where he was specially employed in connection with the Westinghouse automatic school, the first established in that section of the Rocky Mountains.

Soon afterward, Mike Egan, who became general master mechanic, in charge of this department and became very much interested in young Smith whom he pushed to the front. Smith saw service on the road and on the sides of the cab. Egan so trusted him that at one time he was appointed as foreman of the shop and roundhouse at Buena Vista in Egan's place. The strenuous days and amid terrible exertions. The difficulties of railroading in the mountains were beyond description. Smith was a member at one time of the Alpine Snow Crest, when Alpine Tunnel was the highest piece of railroad in Colorado. All of these experiences were a training school of this man for his future work for Christ among his fellows.

There was no religious influence to bear on railroad men in those days. However, the ties of home were strong and the influence of a Godly father and a praying mother, with the training, finally bore fruit, and he was brought as a prodigal to the father's house. Several years after his return he came in contact with Y. M. C. A., and his first secretary, James B. Smith, now State Secretary of Pennsylvania, brought Smith to see that he belonged among his fellows. Leaving business he went first to Parsons, Kansas, where the Katy, where he became General Secretary; afterward he was called to the State Committee's office at Topeka. Here he met Mr. Moody and went to do general evangelistic work to Chicago. In 1904 he became pastor in the Fourth Baptist Church of that great city, where he served faithfully for ten years among the workmen.

During the World's Fair Evangelistic Campaign in St. Louis he was associated with Mr. Charles Stelzle. The following year, moving to St. Louis where he became pastor of the Hope Congregational Church. In all these years of Christian life Mr. Smith has never lost sight of the railroad men who he knows and loves. Owing to the increase of evangelistic work Mr. Smith gave up his local pastorate and again took to the road, where he has given all his time to the railroad centers under the direction of the Railroad Department of the International Committee. During the past year he has traveled over 30,000 miles in the United States and Canada seeking out men wherever they can be found at all times of day and night, bringing to them the gospel message.

Mr. Dean, Community Extension Expert
 Years ago three little five-year-old boys played together in the streets of Cobleskill, N. Y. One now sleeps on the slope of San Juan Hill, "slain by the bullets of Spain." The second one survived a terrible hand-to-hand fight with insurgents, and is the Military Governor of Mindoro in the Philippines. The third lad gravitated into the Christian ministry, but not unnaturally found himself in Christian Commission work among the troops in the Philippines, by appointment of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations. Here he, too, received his baptism of fire, being taken in action by the insurgent army.

This third brother is John M. Dean, one of the Community Extension men of The Men and Religion Forward Movement.

Prior to Mr. Dean's work in the Islands, he was engaged in evangelistic work in Pennsylvania and Michigan, and after a remarkable revival became pastor of the First Baptist church of Reynoldsville, Penn., before he was twenty-one. Since his return from the Islands he has served the Oregon and Washington State Committees of the Y. M. C. A. in Bible Institutes and evangelistic services for men. More recently he has been the pastor of the Tabernacle Church of Seattle for six years. This church, founded indirectly by Dr. A. J. Gordon, became famous on the coast as a missionary and Bible studying church. It was the first of its denomination on the Pacific Coast to support a "foreign pastor."

In this pastorate, Mr. Dean deliberately adopted the Association methods in Bible study and methods of organization to the local church. Even the Student Conference methods were adopted and the results were surprisingly good. Mr. Dean contends that The Men and Religion Movement can do nothing more valuable than to contribute approved methods to local church work. His last pastorate was that of the First Baptist Church of San Jose, one of the largest churches on the Coast.

W. E. Biederwolf, Evangelist

Another man who will conduct the Evangelistic work is Dr. William Edward Biederwolf, who has a national reputation through his independent campaigns as well as with campaigns conducted in conjunction with Dr. Chapman and other widely known evangelists.

Dr. Biederwolf is of German parentage, born at Monticello, Indiana, where his home is. Is a graduate of Princeton University and of Princeton Theological Seminary. At the second call for volunteers during the Spanish American war, he offered his services as Chaplain, and as such went South with the 161st Indiana Regiment.

Since his return from the Spanish-American war, Dr. Biederwolf has devoted most of his time to evangelistic work, having been prominent in connection with some of the great religious conventions of the country and having served as President of the Interdenominational Association of Evangelists. At the great Christian Endeavor Convention in Baltimore, Maryland, in July, 1905, Dr. Biederwolf conducted a service which the Baltimore Sun characterized as the "greatest evangelistic appeal to men ever held in this city." About 10,000 men were present, and at the close 500 or more signified their desire to become Christians.

W. C. Pearce, Bible Study

The Men and Religion Forward Movement has many objects in view, but none of them of more importance than that of Bible study, in which comes not merely such departments of church work as adult Bible classes, but also the Sunday-school. Trained men able to deal with the best methods for extending Bible study have been carefully selected to accompany the teams of experts in the campaign, and among them is W. C. Pearce of the International Day-School Association of Chicago.

Mr. Pearce has been a national figure in church work for so long that it is hardly necessary to introduce him to the general public. But it may be said he was born in Crawford county, Illinois, forty-seven years ago, and spent his boyhood life on a farm in that county, attending school near by until he was ready to enter Union Christian College at Merom, Indiana, two miles from his home, where he began studying at the age of 17.

Like many another ambitious American lad young Pearce taught school in his spare time to help pay way through college, and after graduating with the class of '87 he taught for two years, meanwhile studying law during the summer vacations in order to prepare himself to enter the Law Department of Harvard University. But he was retained for the practice of law, as his record proves.

When Mr. Pearce was nine years of age a young college student from Union Christian College, at Merom, started a Sunday-School in the school house on his father's farm. A revival broke out and one night young Pearce, though a child, went to the altar accompanied by his three sisters and followed by his father. That night the mother's prayers answered and her faithful Christian teaching bearing fruit, as the father took down the family Bible, and with pages open, dedicated his household to God. A church was organized, the Pearce family uniting, and the father was ordained to preach the Gospel.

Mr. Pearce's love for Sunday-school work was shown early in his life, and his desire to do something definite for day-School came while attending, accidentally, a small county Sunday-School convention at Huttonsville, where he heard one of the remarkable addresses of Mr. W. B. Jacobs, and also, he was strongly influenced by the preaching of Prof. E. O. Excell. An opportunity afforded, in 1889, he organized and taught a successful Bible school in his own school at Robinson, Ill., and in this place he moved after his marriage. One year later he organized a 'Training Class, which he completed the completion of the course, and twelve members had the honor to receive from Professor Hammill the first diploma ever given for the completion of the Region of Honor Normal Course.

H. E. Rood, Publicity

Another man who will be in the field in as many cities as possible in the course of the eight-day campaign is Henry Rood, who was selected by the Convention Members of the Committee of Ninety-seven to prepare for the Official Manual of Practical Working Plans for Building up the Sunday-Schools and allied organizations. This Manual will be published in April at the conclusion of the World's American Campaign, and will be distributed to the Churches all over the Western Hemisphere as the permanent basis of the movement. It is expected that the individual churches of all communities and all localities will find in this book practical plans which they may follow in order to continue indefinitely the increasing growth and influence of the uplift of mankind.

Rood was selected for this important work owing to the fact that he has made a special study of religious movements in different parts of the country. He was born in Philadelphia and with the exception of the year spent at Dartmouth College as a special student, he has been from early manhood continuously engaged in newspaper and magazine work, having served on the staff of two of the most important New York newspapers and having been associate editor of Harper's Monthly Magazine for ten years. With Col. W. H. Crook, who was President Lincoln's personal body guard, and who has been Disbursing Officer of the White House for forty years, Mr. Rood has written an important historical work which appeared serially in the Saturday Evening Post a year ago, and is now just published in book form.

Mr. Rood accepted the engagement to prepare the Official Manual of Practical Working Plans for Churches, simply as a business matter, but when he saw the great need for a trained Publicity Secretary to carry on one of the most important phases of the whole campaign, he volunteered to do this work without compensation, and will spend the next eight months in going from city to city conferring with local committees and talking to his fellow newspaper workers from the standpoint of one who is neither a minister, a Sunday-School superintendent, nor a Y. M. C. A. man.

A. M. Bruner, Community Extension Expert

A very important department of "Community Extension" work on Mr. Stelzle's team will be in charge of Mr. A. M. Bruner, of Chicago, who has long been known especially as a railroad evangelist. Railroaders all over the country have heard "Bruner's Shop Talks" and his ability to gain the confidence of those among whom he has worked, and his earnestness and common-sense methods have appealed very strongly to men who are not generally interested in evangelistic meetings. During a stay of fifteen days in Bloomington, Ill., for example, he conducted thirty-seven meetings in which he addressed thirty-five hundred people, including street-car men, railroad workers and machinists, university professors and students, the City police, Y. M. C. A. employees, Boys' Gospel Meeting, the Bartenders' Association and various other gatherings.

Mr. Bruner is not merely a forceful speaker, but he knows his subject, and invariably commands the attention of those whom he addresses. He is a specialist in Community Extension work, which is one of the most important phases of the modern church

Two View Points

The Men and Religion Movement

A Minister's View Point

BY CYRUS NORTHROP.

A campaign to promote the moral and religious welfare of the men and boys of North America, if it is conducted with sincerity and enthusiasm, must appeal very strongly to the sympathy of all who wish well to humanity. Such a campaign is needed now as much as it ever was. A crisis has come in the progress of Christianity.

More, perhaps, than ever before there is need today of removing the creeds and dogmas with which real Christianity has been covered up, and of revealing the risen Christ as the "One who taketh away the sins of the world." More than ever before, the emphasis must be put upon the Christian life as outlined and exhibited by Jesus, Himself, if Christianity is to hold even its nominal adherents, and still more if it is to carry successfully the Gospel to every creature as Jesus commanded.

What the Christian world especially needs is more spirituality, heavenly mindedness, and less worldly mindedness. "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man loves the world the love of the Father is not in him." We must love the things that are in the world less, and the people that are in the world more, for they are the children of our Father and our people. The gospel of Jesus is a gospel of love, and there ought to be in the movement as there is in Jesus, Himself, love to reach and to bless all the people of the world. The call of the world is love for Christ and for the children of God whom He came into the world to save. "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that through him the world through him might be saved. Shall we not all do what we can to save the world?"

A Business Man's View Point

BY W. PALMER CLARKSON.

National Director, Brotherhood of Disciples

W. PALMER CLARKSON

As for the Men and Religion Movement, I am extremely and deeply interested in this movement and am serving on the Executive Committee of the Brotherhood of Disciples in St. Louis and Chairman of the National Committee on Community Extension. No other movement has ever appealed to me as strongly.

and I think it a splendid opportunity for the men and boys of the Disciples of Christ to get in line and make their voices felt in every community of the country. I think the Disciples of Christ owe a deep debt of gratitude to those who made the Brotherhood of Christ possible, for the reason that were it not for this organization we would have had the recognition of the Men and Religion Forward Movement that we now have, and I sincerely trust that the men of our great Brotherhood will rally to the support of this organization as they never have before. I am delighted to note that our religious society is giving so much space to this movement.

We of this age should indeed consider ourselves fortunate that such a movement has been inaugurated during our time, as it will afford us greater opportunities for working for the uplift of mankind. This movement should cause a great awakening among the men of our Churches and set them to thinking and working as they have never done before. No man can study this movement without being sincerely and deeply impressed with its magnitude and the wonderful good it will accomplish. It is a God-given movement, else it could not assume the magnitude it has, and it is simply started.

It is a source of great joy that our own Brotherhood are taking such an active interest in this splendid movement.

A Father's Prayer

We thank Thee, O Lord, for the world into which we come. For mountain and plain, for hill and valley. For swift running rivers, for quiet lakes and for the great ocean. For the shade of trees, for the fragrance of flowers, for the song of birds and for every living creature.

We thank Thee for city and town and village where the children of men make their abode. We thank Thee for homes; that thou hast set the solitary in families, that we might be bound together in ties of intimate love. We thank Thee for fatherhood and motherhood, brotherhood and sisterhood.

Make all our homes, we beseech Thee, places where thou mayest send little children to be loved, to be cared for, and to be trained for unselfish service in the world until Thy kingdom shall come and Thy will be done even on earth as in heaven. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—The Brotherhood Era.

Why Organize Your Men

BY G. M. ANDERSON, RIVERSIDE, CAL.

A Pastor who has a Brotherhood in His Church

ANOTHER OR-GANIZATION

"A Brotherhood! What—another organization? Why, we have more organization junk now than we know what to do with. Not more wheels and rails and things, but more power is needed.

"Are we not making the machinery so unwieldy that it takes all its power to drive itself, so that when it is hitched up to its load it just whistles—a whole lot—then puffs and puffs and groans and creaks a bit and stops?"

MORE STEAM

Yes, preacher, that is true; but you will admit that power can not be satisfied except through machinery. It is the horse that moves the load, but harness connects him with the load. Now if the horse cannot move the load it may mean that the horse is too small and not that the load is too big. If the power can not make the machinery whir it might be that the power is too weak, and not that the machinery is too heavy. What do you say?

"Right, you are right."

And the more machinery you have the better, provided you have horse-power enough to drive it—what do you say?

"Right."

PREACHER THE HORSE-POWER

Well, remember, you are—the horse-power in the case—you, yes, Y-O-U. Please do not make such a face. And all the wheels and belts and cogs and spindles and shafts and cranks and things that you said just creaked and groaned a bit and then stopped, stopped—could it have been because the horse they had was too light? Pardon me; it is that preacher away of I was thinking of; you are a good and true, and, in your case, it was only the "cussedness" of the machinery. Do I not know how you prayed and tried, but there they were stuck. Pray again. Put traction on. It may tear up the earth a bit, but that is just what is needed, perhaps.

MACHINERY OR POWER, WHICH?

But, after all, Brotherhood machinery or power? Think a while. Have I not heard you talk about latent power—the latent power of the men? And wish, O so early, that it could be called out and made effective?—hitched up to the load and were trying to move and could not. Perhaps the Brotherhood is power and machinery—both; but ought to be classified as power rather than machinery because of the dominance of that. Ask the men who have a properly organized Brotherhood with an efficient identity how they would classify it. I have found it power. Why, there I was in the mud and tugging away and saying and wanting to say something not proved by the dictionary—unless you cannot help it.

HITCH ON THE
BROTHERHOOD

Now, I had reached the point where, well, just the Brotherhood team swung in, hitched in front and pulled me out. Why, we were mired to the bed, but you ought to have seen that big Brotherhood team lean low in the collar and pull us out! And do you know they never had the harness off since!

great day in your church when you get that male junk converted into power. All that is what Brother Long is trying to do.

US
CHRISTIAN MEN
The Brotherhood is his method. And it will do it—if you follow instructions and take CHRISTIAN MEN, and supply the men in your Sunday-School with CHRISTIAN MEN, paying quarterly for it out of the regular treasury.

Do you know that men will either pull or-ride, and if you do not have harness for them they have no choice. The average church had no harness for them till the advent of the organized adult class called the Brotherhood. It was a good deal as if the farmer should crack his whip at the harnessless horse urging him to the plough, the harrow or the wagon, and swearing because the implement did not move.

REPROCAL FACTS
There lie the half-solved and unsolved problems which only men can solve, simply because they are masculine tasks, and here the men dying of ennue, for want of the very exercise attack of those problems would give. Look at it: there is the burden to be lifted, here the man who cannot lift it; burden not lifted for want of a man, man dying for need of the burden. And think not you are going to get him at it by simply talking at him. He does not know how to do it in spite of all your fine talking. Are swimmers made by lectures or by making them swim? Did they get the blood down to Klondike's cold feet by coddling him, or by making him run a race in which his feet themselves did the racing?

DO
ST
Do you first learn how and then do, or first do and then learn how? Is it not the doing that makes the how interesting? I asked that of our men. One said "I did and now I am learning how.

If I had waited to learn how before I did, I never would have 'did.' If I had not first 'did' I should never have taken any interest in learning how." The others saw the point, and nodded assent.

TWO KINDS OF
BROTHERHOOD
There are two kinds of Brotherhoods. One brings in a leading citizen, sits back, listens to him "spout," applauds, eats a bite together perhaps, enjoys the fellowship, then goes out. All they did was to listen, just as they listen on Sundays. That is all men are good for, you know—just to listen, to be entertained—tickled a bit and then let loose until they need tickling a little more; when another leading citizen is brought in to keep them up with the times on the cause of high prices, the Hague tribunal, etc. This Brotherhood never gets anywhere. It does not develop its men—its only reason for existence.

MORE JUNK
It is only so much more junk added to the machinery. It draws for a few meetings, then peters out. Sad, sad; they did not have ticklers enough to keep it tickled, and, as there was nothing to do but be tickled—well, nothing but the coming of summer saved it from extinction, saved it by voting a three months' recess which was badly needed after the strenuous work of the winter, and maybe the spirit would come back into it again in the fall.

TICKLED TO DEATH
These men had not learned to talk nor to do, nor to feel. Their committees kept up their courage by marking time. Really, they hardly knew that they had been put on those committees except for the honor there was in it. It reminds me of the four harnessless horses I once saw hitched two on each side of the horse that was pulling the gypsy wagon and trotting along as if they thought it was they that were doing the work.

THE OTHER KIND

The other kind of Brotherhood gets some expert to give them a start—to push them off; then they depend on themselves. Do they think they cannot entertain themselves, the president is quick to show them entertainment is not the purpose but only an incident of Brotherhood work. Do they say they can not make talks, the president declares that to be one of the very best reasons for the Brotherhood organization—to teach them to talk. Do they assert that men will not come to hear men talk who can not talk, the president says simply, “When there was a prattling babe in your house stammering, ‘Pa-pa-pa-pa,’ and a ten-year-old talking glibly, which was the spell-binder.”

SPELL-BINDERS

The men laugh and see the point and wonder if that is not really the way it will work out. Do they say they doubt their ability to keep life in it without outside help, he affirms that the only way to keep life in it is by developing themselves; that it is what men do for themselves and others, particularly others

THE ACTIVE

they retain interest in and not in what others do for them. The active mood comes by acting, the passive by letting others act. Do they say they can not do the things required of them, he reminds them of Billy Klondike and the other man who said he “first did and then learned how,” that it was “the doing that made the how interesting,” and turned it sometime into a very passion for service.

This Brotherhood does not go into summer recess; it does not want to; it has many things to do, and, besides, it would not know what to do with itself without the Brotherhood meetings.

The Mission of Our Brotherhood

BY S. M. PERKINS, DAVENPORT, IA.

S. M. PERKINS

INDIVIDUAL
We never have debated the question as to whether the individual man in the church has a mission. He may have never discovered that he has a mission, or if so what his mission may be, and never may, yet we believe that he has a place in the church which only he can fill. The church is likened to the organized human body, each part having its own function to perform, and each man who is a part of the church has a distinct mission.

ORGANIZED
But we are forever debating whether organized men, a number of men banded together, have a mission. If it is sometimes difficult for one man to discover his place in the church, and if it is often a problem for one man to choose a life's vocation, one to which he is temperamentally suited, we should not wonder that it is difficult for a great body of men to discover their mission as an organized body. We should, however, drop the question as to whether our organized men have a mission, and spend more of our time trying to discover what their mission actually is.

INDEFINITE?
NO!!!!

It has been urged that the mission of our Brotherhood should be the promotion, stimulation and strengthening of all the departments of the local church and every organized agency among us as a body of people. This suggestion, however, has not been received with favor because it seemed too general, vague and indefinite. It seems to make our Brotherhood a "Jack of all trades and master of none." Some think it would soon become monotonous for the local societies of the church, especially if the men were too persistent in the promotion of the Aid society and the C. W. B. M., their women, in that instance, might make some odious comparisons.

PROMOTION
AGENCY

Yet, notwithstanding this is just the mission of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ. It is possible for this agency of the church to promote every other agency, to be back of every other society, urging them on to perfection. It is possible for our Brotherhoods to raise the standard of the entire church, to promote every interest, and still have a very definite mission.

THE I. S. S. A.

It must be admitted by every student that the greatest organized agency in the entire church of God in modern times is the International Sunday-School Association, comprising some thirty-three religious bodies and thirty millions of people. Its organization is the most complete and practical movement in the world today. It serves as the only clearing house for all the Communion of Christendom, having as its basis the Bible alone, with no theories to float, no doctrinal peculiarities to give or take; having also at her command the greatest specialists of all the great bodies of the Christian world. Thus this association easily becomes the international interdenominational distributing center of the age. The Y. P. S. C. E., the Y. M. C. A., the W. C. T. U., etc., etc., any and all of the interdenominational movements put together, have not come within hailing distance of this association in service rendered, although all of them have rendered valuable service. In the International S.-S. Association are the ablest experts of all Communion, the sum total of the best thought, the tested methods, those that have passed through the crucible of fiery trial and have come to us purified and ready for our adoption. This accounts for the great advance in recent years of the Sunday-School among all Protestant bodies. One man in one communion, such as our own late Herbert Moninger, tests out one principle, and then through the medium of the International Association it is distributed to all the rest, and thus no church lives to itself or dies to itself, for each religious order has a connecting wire running into this grand central office.

BIBLE SCHOOL STANDARDS

But what has this to do with the mission of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ? Simply this: To bring the whole church to the standard of the Bible School movement in all its departments. It is evident to every thinking and observing man among us that the Bible School is far in the lead of every other organization among us today. She is leagues ahead of the P. S. C. E., and I am not "knocking" the Endeavor movement. She is ahead of everything. This is not accidental.

FALL IN LINE

This means that the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ must fall in line and get into touch with all the organized men's classes over the entire country, and the men's classes of the country should fall in line and get into touch with the Brotherhood. Coöperation is the very first step, for they have a service to render to each other. This combination must be effected, brethren, before our Brotherhood will ever make very rapid advance. Wherever this union is effected we have our Brotherhood studying the Bible systematically every Lord's day, the only time when the majority of men will study the Bible systematically. We have the social center formed, the frequent fellowship, the common purpose, the binding tie, the Bible. In the Book of Proverbs we have the balancing of the social and the devotional, which must obtain if we are to long succeed with men. In the L. B. D. C., with this plan, the social life is kept from becoming merely social life, and we always have something to do, something to talk about, something to plan for, and a fine opportunity to put our plans into actual operation, which is psychologically necessary with men as well as with women and children. The L. B. D. C., and the Men's Bible Class are complements one of the other.

BALANCING PROCESS

GRADING PROCESS

The Brotherhood then should begin with class organization and a general grading of the entire Bible School which is practical in all schools, large and small, in whatever kind of building you possess. Better than any other rogram in the monthly meetings for next year, the Brotherhoods should study the grading of the Bible Schools, and class organization. Expert speakers should be called in to inform you of the movement and tell you the great story of modern days, and how the thing is done. Then do it.

PROMOTION
A You will discover in the grading of the school there will come a promotion day. The young people in the high school and the children in the grades will take to it like ducks taking to water. They live in that atmosphere six days in the week and nine months in the year. You will have the endorsement of all the great educators of modern times. Your own men who are employed in great business concerns or who are employers are living by the principle of promotion six days in the week. The only men who will not believe in it will be the drones, who never have had a promotion in the world and would not know what to do with one in the church, if they should receive one. Make a big thing out of promotion day.

KEEP ON
KEEPING ON After the adoption of this in your Bible School it should be adopted throughout the whole church. This will take time. It may take months or years. You will find that the various societies of the church have already absorbed unconsciously most of the program. Even now the C. W. B. M., has a Cradle roll, and a Home department, only they are not called by those names. The Endeavor society and the King's Daughters and all the rest have their Sunshine bands, Juniors, Mission bands, Rosebuds, and it remains for our Brotherhoods to make promotion day effective throughout the whole church.

THE TROUBLE
WITH THE C. E. What is the matter with the average Endeavor society in the average church? Nothing? Well, yours is mighty fortunate. We dislike to admit it, but nevertheless the Endeavor movement is slowly but surely on the down grade. She has lost her sense of her great mission. The Brotherhood can save the Endeavor societies of our churches. The B. D. C. has the remedy, not only for the Endeavor societies, but for all the societies that are rendering a merely perfunctory service. On promotion day promote

PROMOTE
THEM OUT your people from one department to another, not only in the Bible School, but throughout the entire church. Promote your young people into the Endeavor and promote them out, emphasizing that word "out." The trouble with the average Endeavor meeting is that it is simply a "mid-week" prayer-meeting held on Sunday evening. The young people and newly made converts are generally conspicuous by their absence, or if there they have to sit and listen to a lot of dry, grey whiskered, perfunctory talks, by the good men and women who have been faithful members ever since Father Clark launched the movement. No new blood. No testimonies throbbing with fresh acceptance of Christ. Do not ask your young people to sign the pledge, at least do not require it. Promote them from your Junior into the Intermediate and from the Intermediate into the Senior society, and by all means do not forget to promote them OUT. Leave them in the Senior Endeavor society about six years and then have a great promotion day and promote the young women into the C. W. B. M., and the young men into the L. B. D. C.

MECHANICAL
EDUCATIONAL

You say this is not practical, but a mechanical and forced affair. Of course it would be without education. But we must make it an honor to be promoted. The Bible Schools of the country, in all communions, find no difficulty whatever. All is enthusiasm. Exceptional cases occasionally require tactful handling, but outside of the few cases, no trouble at all. Your men live the principle, whether employees or employers; your young people in the high school and your children in the grades are right at home with the proposition. Psychologically speaking the plan is practical, except for drones and dead beats.

NEW BLOOD NECESSARY

Life insurance companies, lodges, great business concerns, institutions good and bad, depend upon the infusion of new blood for the perpetuity. The very moment the church or any other organization fails to infuse new blood that institution gets into a rut, and some one has said that the only difference between a rut and a grave is that the latter is only a little deeper and wider than the former. If you would keep the church and every department of the church throbbing with new life, and from mere perfunctory service, we must somehow adopt a plan of promotion, in and out. It is within the power of the B. D. C. to relegate the "canned goods" of the Endeavor into "innocuous desuetude," and to deliver every department of the church from indifference.

TRAINING FOR LEADERSHIP

By working in and through class organization the Brotherhood will have ample opportunity to train the old and the young for leadership and service. The young people should be trained in private and public testimony through supplemental work in the class. The women's classes should study as supplementary work their own field of conquest, and the men's classes as supplemental study the qualifications and duties of various officers of the church, from the treasurer to the elder, and in all these classes we have opportunity to teach the lessons that all need to know about the various organized missionary agencies of the church. It would not long until we would have our boys and girls and men and women attending conventions and conversing intelligently about the great religious problems of the hour.

WORK OF A GENERATION

This is not simply the work of a day or a year, but the work of a generation. It will take much education. It will give an opportunity to educate. It will be a work of demonstration, and we can see the fruit of our labors as the farmer sees the fruitage of seed time in the growing harvest. Nothing will be forced, but an atmosphere will be created in which the natural harvest will develop. The appeal will be to man's nobility, his honor, and hence not mechanical, but voluntary. Some will claim the task is impracticable, others that it is difficult and a long drawn out process, but after all its practicability has been demonstrated a thousand times in the Sunday-schools of our country. In every minute there are ten thousand schools working the problem out successfully. It simply means the extension of the task into all the departments of the church.

All great achievements have three elements: (1) A great purpose; (2) A plan commensurate with the purpose; (3) And power adequate to the plan.

—Dr. Frank G. Smith, in the Brotherhood Era.

Thanksgiving Hints

BY I. N. McCASH

I. N. McCASH

Thanksgiving Day is not, primarily, to stimulate patriotism. It is a day for a review annually of the national prosperity in material, moral and spiritual things is helpful. It awakens gratitude. A recount of national achievements belongs to addresses on independence and memorial days. But merits from God and progress in righteousness during the year should be summarized to quicken our religious life. Gratitude gives little, but a refusal to be grateful is robbery. Ingratitude congeals the flow of blessings. Niagara Falls, in winter, freezes from below, and as the water pours over the precipice, ice builds up, up, up, until the flow ceases. God's mercies and benefits continually over the heights of a mountain and are often congealed from below by ingratitude, which, mounting upward, chills the expression of appreciation and stops the current of thanksgiving.

Proper observance of Thanksgiving Day rests upon the appreciation of the attitude of the Psalmist: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord now in the presence of all His people. I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the Lord."

Acknowledgment of God's goodness enriches the heart. Its absence takes away respect. It affects others by impartation. It is the irrigation ditch which, overflowing, prepares the harvest and brings dew to the orchard and vineyard. A grateful man is worthy of more blessings. The ungrateful is not entitled to what he has. From him that hath not shall be taken away that which he hath. A thankful heart doubles its own gifts and prepares to return them cheerfully on opportunity. Isaac Walton, the Angler, said: "Count your blessings. A blessing remembered is a new blessing."

Let each man ask himself, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all of His benefits? What has God done for me, physically?" The answer of each normal man is that he has been endowed with the processes of living, well controlled appetite and sensitive touch by his senses with all nature. Eyes, ears, nose, tongue and hands have empowered him to enjoy his gifts. If these are esteemed only as commonplace, let him go to an asylum for the blind, deaf, dumb, and compare his lot with those unfortunates. Then he will lift his eyes and thank God for these benefits.

Let a man ask about benefits through his mental life. Every research, however limited or extensive, one has made, the books he has read, problems he has partially or wholly solved have furnished him with delightful emotions accorded only to the sane and normal. Contrast and comparison with the insane, demented and incapable will provoke devout thankfulness.

Archimedes leaped from the bath tub and reveled in the wild enthusiasm of a new idea as he shouted, "Eureka! Eureka!!" Sir Isaac Newton could not finish his geometric calculations that confirmed in figures the law of gravitation, so great was his joy and mental excitement.

SPIRITUAL LIFE

That life, nourished by nature and revelation from God, aspires, longs, hungers and thirsts. It is meat and drink to do the will of God. Inestimable boon; the soul cries out, "O, give thanks unto the Lord for he is good, his mercy endureth forever." A government without the revelation from God and a nation where Christ is unknown show spiritual destitution. The home and social life of their people feel waves of desolation beat and hear them sing requiems to dead hope. These contrasted with a nation that knows God and returns thanks to Him will prove the high values of these benefits. Our thanksgiving puts us in places of happy surroundings instead of in the blackened path of devastation and destruction.

Such gifts to body, mind and soul are real, and may be increased with rounds of years.

DEEPENS CHARACTER

Thanksgiving deepens character of the individual and nation. This is noted in the type of men, at the present time, who are foremost in guiding American institutions and statecraft. These men recognize God and stand as bold sentinels to defend the nation's interest and uphold righteousness and truth.

The proper observance of Thanksgiving Day will broaden the character of our men. No year has emphasized benevolence, mercy and upbuilding institutions that minister to humanity more than 1911. Such a spirit and such an age are anti-provincial, anti-sectarian, unselfish. Royal comradeship, loyal service to the church, to the state, to the nation, to the world are increasing effects, as widening of circles in the sea.

THINGS UNIVERSAL

Magnificent gifts to Y. M. C. A.'s in all parts of the world, establishment of the libraries in all parts of our land, erection of a Temple of Peace at The Hague, creation of an education foundation which benefits for educators in all institutions, donations of millions for home missions are monuments of this age, and witness of the broadened character of Christian men of our time.

I could express no higher wish or formulate a greater need than that the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ should kindle the fires of gratitude to God for all of His benefits, and endeavor through united effort to promote righteousness and truth by allying themselves with the benevolent, educational and missionary agencies of the church. Hope threatens all that the splendid magazine, CHRISTIAN MEN, shall become even a greater medium of instruction, cheer and herald of achievement.

3. O seek, and you will always find The sheaves of good to reap and bind;

O sing a glad and cheerful song, For it may make some weak heart strong.

There's something you can do or say For Christ the Master's sake each day.

Bible School Day for American Missions

BY ROBERT HOPKINS

National Bible School Superintendent

ROBERT HOPKINS

WHY THE DAY?

It may not be generally known why the American Missionary Day in the Bible Schools is no longer termed "Children's Day," or "Boys" and "Girls' Rally Day." These names were applied to this fall missionary day until a year or so ago, when the adult classes began to grow so rapidly, changing the constituency and work of the Bible Schools so completely from its previous hundred years of history. The Bible School is no longer reckoned a place for children only. Hence a day which is to make its missionary appeal the whole school must be known by some other name than "Children's Day." As a matter of fact, the suggestion to change this name came from many earnest workers from various states, and while several names were suggested, the best one proposed was adopted, "Bible School Day for American Missions."

Since the advent of adult life into the school has been so largely responsible for this change, it is but right that these adults should do much to show their interest. If a day had been named for you individually and was observed quite generally in all America, you would, of course, do all you could to show your cordial appreciation. This principle holds good with every class of men and women in all our schools.

WHY MEN SHOULD HELP

There are other substantial reasons why every man should enlist heartily in the observance of this day. This is the one offering of the year which the Bible Schools make the American Missions. America is indeed a ripe mission field. The growing states of the West, the populous cities of the East, the millions of aliens coming annually to our shores, the more than fifty millions of churchless people, all need the gospel. This offering also promotes the organized Bible School work among the Disciples of Christ both in the national and state departments. Then, too, America is the base of supplies as no other nation on the globe is for world-wide evangelization. Every church planted on American soil means increased support for all missionary and benevolent enterprises.

WHAT MEN CAN DO

What can men do to help Bible School Day for American Missions? Let us give a few pointed statements in answer to this question.

1. Build up your local Bible School to the highest possible stage of efficiency.
2. Have your school appoint a wide-awake missionary committee or secretary, if you have to serve yourself.
3. Get that committee or secretary in touch with the American Bible School Superintendent at the earliest possible moment.
4. Make a study of the needs of the home land and see that all the school does this. The monthly mission charts and programs will help you in this.

5. Use the new educational program prepared by the American Christian Missionary Society for the day. Copies are sent free to all who request them.

6. See that your class makes a generous pledge or accepts a generous portion of the apportionment of the school.

7. Do everything in your power to secure an every-member contribution.

This will insure the raising of your own class offering and may help out some of the other classes of the school.

8. Prayer, work, consideration, sacrifice—these are the manly words, for the life of the Man of Galilee contained all of them, and they constitute the making successful of Bible School Day for American Missions.

9. Send offerings to the American Christian Missionary Society, 108 Carew building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The R. A. Long Tour

Among many columns of news items regarding the Brotherhood Campaign now under way, the following account clipped from the Joplin Globe is an indication of the enthusiasm felt all along the way of the tour of our president:

Manhood is First, Long Tells 1,000

Take Care of the Men, Then Natural Resources will Care for Themselves

Campaign is Launched

Religious Workers Subscribe to Fund for Furthering Movement in This District

With the entire lower floor of the Auditorium packed with men, and the galleries filled with women, one of the largest and most enthusiastic religious meetings that Joplin has seen for years was held last night. About 1,000 persons were present.

About $700 was raised at the meeting last night, which will go towards the forwarding of the Brotherhood movement in Missouri. It was not known before the meeting that the money was to be raised, and it is said that the amount was large for the short time in which subscriptions were taken.

A large number were present from out of the city, delegations being sent from nearly all towns in a radius of fifty miles. Diamond sent a special car with about fifty men to attend the meeting. Baxter Springs, Miami, Vinita, Parsons, Webb City, Carterville, Carthage and Galena also sent large delegations.

Contributes a Million

R. A. Long, millionaire philanthropist of Kansas City, delivered the principal address of the evening. Mr. Long is national president of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ and has had almost entire charge of the Brotherhood work in the past few years.

In addition to the time that he has given to the work he has given it much financial assistance, although very reticent about the matter. J. K. Shellenberger, who has been closely connected with Mr. Long, said last night that although Mr. Long had declined to give him figures on the amount of his donations to the Christian Church, he knew personally of $1,055,000 that had been given.

Mr. Long dwelt much on the work of men in the church last night. He said that if the church boards of this country were organized like the directorate of a bank or business concern the social fabric of this land would be revolutionized in a month.

"We have heard much of conservation of forests and water power, of lands and mines," he said, "but nothing of the conservation of manhood. Whatever else we do, we must not allow the foundations of our American men to be undermined and the energy of the magnificent manhood back of our churches to be dissipated.

The Men First

"I want to say to you men here tonight that when the men of our country are taken care of and are working as they should work, then the waterways, the forests and the mines of our country will take care of themselves."

C. M. Chilton, president of the American Missionary Society, outlined the work of the Brotherhood, and told of the work done and that is being done among the organizations in the United States.

Mr. Chilton said that the Brotherhood movement and the men and religion forward movement were creating a widespread interest in the church among men and that he expected the influence of the societies to be felt over the entire world before their work terminates.

WICHITA, Sat. A. M., Oct. 7, 1911.

DEAR BROTHER ELLIOTT: Have time but for the briefest note to say that the Brotherhood Campaign conducted by Brothers Long, Chilton and Shellenberger was a great success. Fine crowds at both sessions, great addresses, and untold good accomplished. I feel our men will rally to the support of the Brotherhood in person and in finances.

Sincerely, W. S. PRIEST.

M. C. A. Work in the Foreign Field

BY A. E. CORY.

I have studied very carefully the Association's work in Japan, China, Hawaii, and the Philippines, over a period of now nearly twelve years. In Hawaii, I can say without reserve, that twelve years ago, the emphasis was entirely on the religious side of the work. They were working in the very closest touch with the church. In the Philippines, the Missions bear testimony that the Y. M. C. A. is not a competitor, but the center of coöperative work. In Japan, the head of the Y. M. C. A. is Mr. Gayland Fisher. Mr. Fisher is an intensely spiritual man, a statesman on great problems. I was told many times that the whole force of the Y. M. C. A. in Japan, contributed to the church. There are of course, in every country, a few critics, but when any prominent committees were appointed in Japan Mr. Fisher was put upon them and they tried to center the work about the Y. M. C. A. There may be one or two exceptions of individual secretaries, but the National trend in Japan is religious and towards the church. In China, I have had a most intimate experience for twelve years in the Y. M. C. A. I know the policy of the men from Mr. Mott down. I believe it can be stated very briefly and I could bring dozens of examples to bear upon us:

First—To make the Y. M. C. A. a coöperating force with the Missions.

Second—They work almost entirely through the Missions.

Third—When any man takes a stand for Christ in any Y. M. C. A. they urge upon him church membership, at once.

Fourth—The strongest men that they put into the field, are men emphasizing Bible study, a Christian Ministry, etc.

Fifth—I know that at least one man has been sent home from China, because in his work he tried to build up the educational and the social side, emphasizing that the Y. M. C. A. was a separate institution, rather than an institution standing peculiarly for religious development.

When some of the younger men first came to China, they tried to appear as critics of missionary methods, but Brockman, Lyon and Mott, the leaders in the far East, soon put a stop to this. I could also add my testimony, to their work in Korea. The Koreans tried to make it a movement independent of the church, but the men there have stood absolutely against any such trend, and have made the Y. M. C. A. a great factor in the missionary life in that country.

I am very glad to bear this testimony of the work of the Y. M. C. A. in these foreign countries. They have been a real force in our work.

What Our Men Are Doing

BY C. L. HAYS, ELDORA, IOWA.

We are fathering the boys to a considerable extent. Will have them to a 7 p. m. program and lunch tomorrow evening. Will have a talk on high school and with some literary turn by a graduate of the high school; a short lecture and demonstration on care of the mouth and teeth by a dentist; and vigorous brief pointed talk on ethics and religion by the pastor; sandwiches with novel flavor and contents, and social time, with perhaps some music.

The Brotherhood has talked of a campaign by men of all the churches for practical measures to afford innocent, clean and self-developing occupation for young men and boys during their otherwise unoccupied hours when they get into moral danger and trouble, and hope to arrange a meeting of the men of the churches soon to study the problem first. It has already been talked with twenty or more men and pastors of the other churches, the superintendent of the schools, and ourselves, and will probably be arranged.

Tonight, following agitation by our Brotherhood and pastor, some half dozen men from the Baptist, Christian, Congregationalist and Methodist churches are to meet in the church of the latter body to discuss the Men and Religion Forward Movement, with the purpose of better understanding its scope, of getting men to go to Cedar Rapids to the eight-day conference the last of this month, and to get into it generally. Bro. Clark, our pastor, will give the principal address; and I hope to help define its scope clearly as related to the work of the men of the churches generally, and also as related to Brotherhood work; and hope to arrange for a meeting later to discuss the problem of idle hour occupation for the men and boys.

In the case of our own Men's class, it is difficult to induce men to join a class of men handled of necessity a good deal like school children in the opening and closing periods, under our conditions. We have thought of having our meeting at another hour than the Bible School hour, and have also considered a combined morning service, if we find that we can get all the church attendants to come to Sunday-School and all the children to stay to the end of the morning service, a total period of an hour and a half or an hour and three quarters.

As the most practical means of giving renewed life to our Brotherhood and Men's Class, we expect to do two things; to have frequent meetings of the executive committee and other workers to talk over men's work; and to plan something definite and worth while that we can and will accomplish creditably. What we shall do is probably indicated above, with some methods of program building for our regular meeting which will provide something worth while each time.

Washington to the Front

BY S. STRITMATTER, HOQUIAM.

Please send twenty-five more Local Brotherhood cards. We have only a few left and they will not last long.

Forty-three members to date, and the promise of more next meeting night. A great Brotherhood meeting last Wednesday night. Used program as published in CHRISTIAN MEN. After the program we had a social, which our men enjoyed very much.

Our members are not confined to the Christian Church only, but we have some from the other churches, and they are delighted with the work of the Brotherhood.

Planning to have the best banquet ever held in Hoquiam at the annual election of our officers.

A Suggestion

GEO. CHAMBERLIN.

In reference to "One Specific Task for the Brotherhood," I would say this:

Let us emphasize our early motto: "Doing a Man's Work in a Man's Way," and then under the head of specialists, as in Y. M. C. A. work, develop each activity for men and boys to the highest grade of efficiency, being careful to cultivate a spirit of cohesion of interests and good fellowship all along the line.

Regarding Minister's Salary

The Northern Ohio Conference of the Methodist Church convened at Mansfield, Ohio, last month, and adopted a resolution which seems to us to be tending in the right direction. The resolution provides that an effort be made by all churches which pay the minister less than $700 per year to raise the salary to this amount for the coming year, and to $1,000 within three years. In order to secure proper return for the pastor of the small church it is proposed to have a fund to which the larger church will contribute and which will be used in making up the deficit in cases where the weak church is not able to pay a living salary. This plan is already being worked out among the Presbyterians on the theory that anything less than $1,000 per year at the present day is an incompetent salary, especially so, realizing the numerous and constant demands that are made upon the local pastors.

Man—A Religious Animal

BY A. L. HILL, PASTOR AURORA, NEB.

Last night our Men's Brotherhood held its first meeting since hot weather. L. C. Oberlies, State Bible School Superintendent, gave his address on "Man—A Religious Animal." For forty-five minutes he led his audience of seventy-five men up the heights to the plain of better living. Being a layman and a business man, he presented to us the true type of a Brotherhood man; his manly and vigorous manner quickened the true virile spirit in every man present.

A. M. Brooking brought his church orchestra up from Trumbull and gave us a musical treat. With all, this meeting proved the best yet.

Lawton, Oklahoma, in Line

A. R. SPICER

The special program at the Christian Church yesterday reached high water mark. (Rally Day, September 24th.)

The Men's Bible Class met at the Midland Hotel, where they listened to a thirty-minute sacred concert by the Lawton Orchestra. About seventy-five men, who will constitute the Brotherhood, had their pictures taken, after which they marched to the church and studied the Sunday-School lesson. At the school they found the building crowded and looked into the faces of an equally great class of women. The mark of 300 was more than reached. There were 337 present on time. The offerings were over $32.

The Men's Bible Class was awarded the banner both as to offering and attendance. The Women's Bible Class was a close second. The other classes were equally encouraging.

The closing services of the day were most encouraging. The C. E. Rally was largely attended. The climax of the day was the Brotherhood Rally. The Men's messages were right to the point. The great audience of four huned entered heartily into the service. A Brotherhood of Fifty was organized that will soon number one hundred of our leading men. Lawton News.

Brotherhood Insurance Again

Prof. G. G. Cole, Holmesville, Ohio, Speaks

The article in the October CHRISTIAN MEN by Brother Hutchinson on "Brotherhood Insurance" is just what I have been hoping for. Why not? If the Brotherhood can come to command the efforts and interests of the brethren as the lodge does now, we must borrow from them the very essentials that permit the lodge's existence. We already have the lodge's fraternal ideas; why not add the protective ideas. My plan would be to embody a voluntary insurance feature which would give the same advantages as the lodge, but without the excessive expense of supporting a group of high salaried officers from the funds of the organization; in other words, let it be "insurance at actual cost," with its management in the hands of Christians who realize a responsibility in the spirit of grace more than in the letter of the law, which can often be evaded.

New Albany News

HARVEY PEAKE, SECRETARY.

The September meeting of the Brotherhood of Central Christian Church, New Albany, Ind., was an enthusiastic and profitable one. Three new members were taken into the association, making 146 in all.

Two splendid addresses were made, one by Mr. Cossaboom, of Corydon, Ind., and the other by Rev. L. C. Murr, chaplain of the Reformatory at Jeffersonville, Ind.

With the advent of cooler weather a renewed interest is being shown by the members of the organization, and we trust at the next meeting (at which time the annual election of officers will occur), to be able to bring out nearly, if not all, of our members.

Christian Men Exempt

Postmaster General Removes Order to Send by Freight

Quite a saving in the expense of handling the mails in certain publications is made by sending such publications by freight instead of endeavoring to handle them in expensive passenger or mail trains. However, CHRIS-

CHRISTIAN MEN does not go by freight. It is one of the few exempt publications. If freight service had to be depended upon we would have to issue our Magazine on the 20th instead of the 25th of the preceding month.

Thanks to the ingenuity of Postmaster General Mr. Hitchcock, the Postoffice annual deficit has been eliminated and a balance on the credit side of the ledger is now obtained. This will result in benefit to all concerned. The rate of pay for Postoffice employees in many cases has been altogether too low. A remedy has been applied and pay increased in the department of rural carriers and some increases have been made in the railway mail service department. This is to be further increased according to reports from Washington.

CHRISTIAN MEN will hereafter be mailed without wrapping. This is desirable, for a number of reasons. Oftentimes we have requests for Magazines to be mailed flat in order that the pictures on the cover may be preserved. By mailing without wrapper we have assurance that Magazines will go through without damage.

How the Brotherhood Took in Gary, Ind.

BY NELSON H. TRIMBLE.

Nelson H. Trimble

ONLY ONE MAN CAME

We started off with only one Brotherhood, and I will tell you now what has not been told before. When we sent out the call for the Brotherhood only one man responded besides myself. We thought first we would be discouraged but the thing had to go, for Gary needed it. After consultation and discussion we decided to go ahead and organize that night anyway, and make a big talk about it, but never let any one know who was there. So we picked out the men we thought would do for officers and went to them and enrolled them immediately. The report came out in the paper of the meeting, and of the plans for the future, and the names of the officers chosen. Every man in the church and half the men in town thought they must have been the only ones who missed the meeting that night and decided not to miss the next. They did not stay away after that, and the Brotherhood grew until we now have ninety on the roll, though all are not in good standing.

OTHER CHURCHES BUILT

As we built up the other Churches, Tolleston, and Glen Park, we enrolled their men in the Brotherhood, and had a meeting in each Church every two weeks, and a meeting of three groups in one of the Churches each month. At the last meeting held in Tolleston we had sixty present, and this is phenomenal for a frontier town that has the problems of Gary.

That night we decided to ask for a charter for the Tolleston and Glen Park men, and let the charter now held be used by the Central men. This is working well and each Brotherhood will now go ahead in a good-natured rivalry against the other, while the common monthly meeting will keep us in touch.

We have the Church Locals, and the Central Local, but wanted a District Local, and arranged to launch it with a banquet. We gathered together the men from Hammond, Whiting, Indiana Harbor, Valparaiso and the three Gary Brotherhoods, and sat down to a banquet of 250 men, "the greatest feast since Belshazzar's" it was called.

The District Brotherhood was launched that night. So far as I know this is the most thoroughly organized Brotherhood neighborhood in the country.

A Year Ago Today

The Brotherhood Bible Class of the Westminster Philadelphia Church was formed September 18, 1910, just one year ago today. The original members were George B. Rutledge, pastor of the Church and teacher of the school, and one solitary man. Since that day the average rate of increase has been three per Sunday until at this writing they have enrolled 117 men. So far as this can be estimated, this is the largest men's class upon the Eastern seaboard, and plans are now being laid to have 500 members by April, 1912—500 men banded together and doing work for the Kingdom. In writing of the class and its outlook for the fall and winter one of the members said: "This is not a dream, but a vision."

Early Prayer-Meetings for Men

BY GEO. F. BLUE, CARTHAGE, MO.

"'Twas early in the morning
On the first day of the week,
They came unto the sepulchre
At the rising of the sun."

L. B. D. C. No. 367 has kept up its regular business and social meetings through the summer months without a single omission. One of the best things in our work here is the sunrise prayer-meeting, or to be more precise, our 6 o'clock prayer-meeting. We began this Easter morning, April 16th, and up to this writing, there has not been a sing day morning without this gathering prayer. Our meetings are not for talks studies, but for song, prayer or meditation. No leader is appointed in advance. Everything is informal. Anyone who has a prayer or a portion of the Word, of the same without being called upon. Usually all take some part. We take from ten to forty-five minutes and close with the prayer.

We think this prayer-meeting is one of the best things yet to prepare one for the work of the day. At one revival meeting last spring, the men of the Brotherhood did much personal work. Some forty responded to the invitations and many of these came as a result of the Brotherhood work. Our men went out two and two, visiting those we are trying to bring into the Kingdom. This work resulted in great good to the meeting and to the Brotherhood. Much good has been done as a nucleus is being formed around which we hope to build greater things. We are planning for our fall and winter campaign. The outlook is good and we will rely largely in the work this season, we are

Let us say a few words in regard to our boys. Last spring our pastor, D. W. Moore, with the assistance of one of the brothers, a teacher in the Bible School, organized Boyville. They met in the basement of the Church once a week for their social and business period. They were dismissed for the summer, as so many went away through the summer months. The work will be taken up again this fall and we are striving to train the boys in Christian service, so they will be of service to the Master in bringing souls into the Kingdom.

Indians Read Christian Men

JAMES W. BUCHANAN, CHILOCCO, OKLA.

I like CHRISTIAN MEN and use it in my Sunday-School class. I hunger for a sermon sometimes and like to get a paper that gives them, such as CHRISTIAN MEN has been giving of late. I am in the Indian

Service and cannot possibly go to church. There is one other member of our church on the ground, but there are 500 Indian boys and girls here. We have a nice reading room, with the leading secular magazines and a collection of 1,500 books. I will see to it that CHRISTIAN MEN goes to our library tables within a week after receipt.

Circulate CHRISTIAN MEN—it is good, and put in a sermon for those who need it.

Professor Experience on Banquets

Experience is a master of long standing. When he speaks we can afford to uncover our heads and listen. On the question of Men's Banquets he thus delivers himself: See that the banquet program is made up from the idea of a serious consideration of the larger fellowship possible to the men of the Disciples of Christ, and their relation to the heart and life problems that men are facing everywhere. Please do not think that we are criticising the tendency to have fun. Our Father knows we need laughter as well as tears. But after all, real Christlike fun is but the rippling of the stream. The current that will turn the wheels is the deep determination unto serious things which we must arouse in these meetings. We want to see our men have real, convulsive fun as long as it is clean and righteous; but that fun will be all the more healthful when it is directed to some serious and definite end. Our men will bless us, and their very hearts will lay a benediction upon the meeting if we can send them to their homes feeling that they have had a feast of soul, a flow of wit, a heart-melting fellowship, and with all a life-determining vision.

A Boy's Play

BY CHARLES B. HAHN.

"Be watchful of thy body if thou wouldst rightly exercise thy mind."—Descartes.

"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys * * * playing in the streets thereof."—Zech. 8:5.

PLAY LIFE

There is not enough stress put on the play life of the boy. The boy who can play well is usually a pretty good all-round fellow. We must consider the play life of a boy with regard to the four sides of his nature, moral, physical, educational and religious. The moral value of play life lies in the fact that it teaches him how to play square with his fellows, to be clean in his sports with his mouth, body and actions. The physical value of the play life is to teach the boy how to play so that he may exercise the muscles that have the most to do with the development of his vital organs, giving him a strong, healthy body for his future life's work. The educational value lies in the fact that it gives a chance for self-expression and individualism. It is not what the boy learns from books that develops his character, but putting that book knowledge into expression while outside the school room. The value of play to the religious side of the boy is that it helps him form the right kind of friendships, if the play is supervised, and the chance it gives him to develop self-control, determination, honesty, passions, and ideals of God and fellows. Of course, the moral and religious values are very much the same.

DANGEROUS PASTIME

Any dangerous pastime or amusement should be carefully watched by the older people. Serious accidents cause many heartaches all around. A "hike," in other words, a walk, will usually find a hearty response by the boys. Boys always work hard at their play. More muscular energy is used in it than would be needed for some task that they are asked to do at home, but the energy does not usually show itself for work. Boys will work hard for a place of their own. The golden days of boyhood come but once in life, so do not dress a boy up in his best clothes and send him out to play, telling him to be careful. He cannot have a good time, for his friends sit on the ground and kneel down to shoot marbles, and he wants to keep in their company.

ALL AROUND BOY

Every boy wants to be a round man, equally strong in all parts. He must train his muscles just as much as his brain if he would do what his brain demands of his muscles.

Joy translated into a boy's language is fun. A gymnasium sets a boy's whole nature into action. The sound of the word seems to thrill the boy with energy. He once sees the ropes, the bars, the mat, the punching bags, the basket-ball and best of all he sees himself there as an athlete and among the victors in the games. The gymnasium appeals to the average boy as a place to perform feats, rather than a place to exercise. Calisthenics alone do not appeal to him, since because there is not enough of a game in it, he cannot anticipate anything in them. Gymnasiums should be controlled by the instinct, for if a boy learns to play well, he will learn to work well, too.

AVOID CHEATS

Boys will not play with a fellow who cheats in a game. They will not play with a fellow who "swipes" a checker from the board when they are not looking or takes a marble from the ring when given an opportunity. They want to and will play fair in a game at play now, why not in the great game of life? Boys will not own a cheat, he is boycotted from the game. This same spirit can be converted in other lines if the leaders of the movement will only half try. The Boy City Movement is based upon this idea, to get a boy to play fair in all games, whether sport or living, in the nighttime be as square as in the daylight. What boys should learn is that swiping, lying, playing truant, cheating, smoking cigarettes are just as unfair to do as to cheat in a game of base-ball.

MAKING SNEAKS

Some boys have an idea that it is all right to do wrong as long as they are not caught. This, however, soon makes sneaks. Some boys will not play unless the others play the way they want or unless they can be "it." I remember that a boy came to me (he was a member of one of my clubs) and said: "I want to be put on first base. The captain put me on third. Will you put me where I want to be?"

I explained to him the best I could that the boys had selected one of their number to be the captain and that I did not think that it would be fair for me to change what he and that I could not grant his request. "I will quit the club," he answered.

"All right," I said.

He left the club and joined another Boys' club nearby and the boys there put him on base in their team, but it was only a short time until they changed him to third. When this happened he came to me and asked if he could come back in our club. I told him that it was up to the boys. At the following meeting of the boys they decided that he was a "piker" and that he could not come into the club. He learned a great lesson. It taught him that he had to play fair with his "gang."

Busy hands solve many a hard problem in the boy world. Boys have had toys for centuries.

The greatest game in all the world for boys is blocks. It is a game that will never grow old—like the fairy stories—this game will be given to children as long as there are boys in the world. In the game of blocks the boy has a chance to show some initiative genius and some imagination. The house of blocks is not made, it must be built, and how will be determined by the builder. The toy becomes a real game to the boy when it teaches him how to use his imagination as well as the toy itself.

Mechanical toys do not give the boy any vision of his own powers of ingeniousness unless he makes the toy himself. There is only the learning of making it go that interests him and after that is done, it is cast aside for another. Like a puzzle, it loses its fascination as soon as he learns how to control it. If he had made it himself he would be more ready to show other boys how he made it and how it works. If a toy is taken apart it is usually ruined, for he does not know how to put it together again.

Let the boys play. Remember the old adage, that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."

For Men to Think About

Children's Rights

The tendency to specialize has invaded the church. We have a Tuberculosis Sunday, Mothers' Day, Labor Sunday, Prison Day, etc. The fathers will soon have their innings, and if the movement continues each Sunday will be given to some special group as a form of service. Why not? The "Save the babies" crusade, and the emphasis on child welfare, has come none too soon.

Every child has a right to a good physical inheritance, the right to be well-born.

Each child has a right to play, to healthy recreation, and the kind of education best fitted to make him a worker according to his native bent, so that he may accomplish his maximum effort.

But his greatest right is the education that makes for noble character. This means that his religious sensibility must be appealed to and developed. How many are denied this elemental and most vital inheritance, and come greatly handicapped all through life. A bad boy is generally one born physically defective, or as is more often the case, denied genuine religious education.

The church spends the bulk of her money and time appealing to people whose characters are already formed. It means building the pyramid of society on the apex. The part of wisdom is to concentrate on the beginnings of life, to spend money and time on formation of character. The teachings of the Bible and the religious life by consecrated ignorance has never been anything less than consecrated folly.

Capture the child. Give him the best start, the best equipment, the best of life, and then expect great things of him. As the old proverb-maker said: "Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart therefrom."

Let this period dissolve into the next without formally calling to order. Let us steer around and by frigidity this time.

IV.—Cultural.

Use your own initiative in this meeting. Make yourselves sensitive to the season and the present occasion of your meeting.

Let this meeting be a fireside chat of brothers, recalling the things that God, and Christ, and the Church have brought to your homes and community.

Let some one tell the story of our Druidic forefathers—their superstitions, their religions and their human sacrifices. Make it informal. Your number is not too large arrange yourselves in a circle. Let the speaker sit while he talks. Revive the manner of the old fashioned assemblies when the story of heroes were told to visiting friends in the family hearthstone circle.

2—All sing "The Church in the Wilderness." Oct. Mag., p. 29.

3—Let some one tell the story of Plymouth Rock—the early days of American settlement, the origin of Thanksgiving. Strive for conversational conduct of the meeting. Shun formalism in this meeting. Strive for the family, brotherly atmosphere. Be easy, cheerfully, thankful, serious. Impart your spirit to the gathering.

DON'T cram this meeting with sociological data, political pessimism, and words of chronic criticism. Shut out the world a little while. Be brothers together and forget the nagging pressure of every day affairs.

Then when the evening has been thus spent I wonder if you will not feel like falling on your knees before your Father and mine and pouring out your soul in thanksgiving for all that you are receiving at his hands; and most of all for the warmth of brotherhood that you have felt in this evening hour. If you do, then do it; kneel in humble thanksgiving to His goodness, and tell God all that is in your heart.

Brethren, it takes more than the machinery of a men's organization to make a Brotherhood. It takes a group soul. Grow out of it will flow rivers of life-giving water; and sweet, deep joy shall be to him who drinks thereof.

Men and Religion Messages

COMMUNITY EXTENSION.—The Community Extension men of the traveling teams of the Men and Religion Forward Movement send warmest greetings to the great Brotherhoods of men's and boys' Bible classes of America. Men, in the onward march of the Men and Religion Movement a tremendous responsibility will rest upon you. We are depending upon the men and boys enrolled in the Bible classes of the continent to furnish the preachers and the workers for the extension of the whole gospel to the entire manhood and youth of the land.

CHARLES R. DRUM

A. M. BRUNER,

JOHN M. DEAN.

EVANGELISM.—The Men and Religion Forward Movement aims at the regeneration of body and soul and spirit of thousands of American boys and capable American men. I know of no greater blessing that God bestow upon the Sunday-Schools of North America, for it will mean better men, better homes, purer homes, stronger churches and a greater nation.

REV. DAVID RUSSELL,

REV. W. R. LANE,

REV. W. E. BIEDERWOLF.

MISSIONS.—The movement for men and religion views the whole world. Every man is a possible disciple of Christ; every Christian must make him such. The movement looks to the Sunday-School to rear the great coming army of missionaries, and vastly to assist in commissioning them, and it expects the men's Bible classes to accept their place of control and responsibility in accomplishing this.

J. E. CROWTHER,

H. SANDERSON,

H. F. SWARTZ,

Missionary Corps.

BOYS' WORK.—Boys have power to rent. The chief responsibility of the movement is to develop ordinary men as leaders of ordinary boys—men who are gripped by the idea that the most they can do for the physical, social, mental and spiritual boy is what they get the boy to do for himself.

R. A. WAITE,

J. L. ALEXANDER,

J. A. WHITMORE.

SOCIAL SERVICE.—It is the hope of the Social Service workers of the Men and Religion teams to place the religious emphasis upon social service, and the social emphasis upon religious work. To increase the efficiency of the church through standardized programs which may be introduced in communities of a common type; to bring about a more cordial relationship between the church and labor, through a sincere recognition of the faults of each, and through an appreciation of their common virtues.

LESSON 2—NOVEMBER 12.

"BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST AND FATE"

—DAN. 5:17, 30.

(World's Temperance Lesson.)

Commit Verses 25-28. Read Daniel, Chapters 2-5.

17 Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another; nevertheless I will read the writing unto the king, and make to him the interpretation.

18 O thou king, the Most High God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father the kingdom, and greatness, and glory, and majesty: 19 and because of the greatness that he gave him, all the peoples, nations, and languages trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he raised up, and whom he would he put down. 20 But when his heart was lifted up, and his spirit was hardened so that he dealt proudly, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him: 21 and he was driven from the sons of men, and his heart was made like the beasts', and his dwelling was with the wild asses; he was fed with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; until he knew that the Most High God ruleth in the kingdom of men, and that he setteth up over it whomsoever he will. 22 And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thy heart, though thou knewest all this, 23 but hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine from them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know, and the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou glorified. 24 Then was the part of thee in hand sent from before him, and this writing was inscribed.

25 And this is the writing that was inscribed: MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN. 26 This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE; God numbered thy kingdom, and brought it to an end. 27 TEKEL; thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. 28 PERES; thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.

29 Then he commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with purple, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

30 In that night Belshazzar the Chaldean king was slain. 31 And Darius the Mede received the kingdom, being about threescore and two years old.

Golden Text. "God shall bring every work into judgment with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."—Eccl. 12:14.

Time. B. C. 539.

Place. Babylon, the capital.

Introduction. An understanding of this lesson necessitates a careful study of chapters 2-5. Belshazzar was the acting king of Babylon. His father was Nabonidus, who is the regular king, but was warring beyond the city. Belshazzar is spoken of as the son of Nebuchadnezzar. Grandsons were often referred to as sons. Babylon was the metropolis of the world, and one of the strongest fortresses in the world. It formed a square nearly fourteen miles on each side with walls 350 high. Cyrus, who had been marching toward Babylon, defeated Nabonidus, enroute to the capital, on October 5, 539 B. C. He entered the city triumphantly and one week later his general stormed that part of Babylon which had held out against his army and on that night Belshazzar was slain. During this week of the siege, Belshazzar invited his generals to a magnificent banquet given to encourage them in their struggle against the Medes and Persians. There was both music and wine at this feast. The treasures which had been carried from Jerusalem when Israel was conquered were shown. Everything was done to remind the erals of the victories of other days. Excavators have recently found the palace of Nebuchadnezzar in Babylon and in it the great oblong hall in which Belshazzar feasted. It was at this feast that the armless hand wrote on the wall. Fear came over the king and his men. His soothsayers, magicians and wise men failed to interpret the writing. At the suggestion of his wife, Daniel was called, who interpreted the dream.

Explanation. 17—Then Daniel answered and said before the king. This meant courage to stand before a king and tell him of his impending doom, but Daniel never feared. Let thy gifts be to thyself. The king had promised fine clothing, golden chains and a position of third ruler in the kingdom to the man who could interpret the dream. Daniel was not serving for wages, place or power. Yet I will read the writing. Here was a man who knew. What confidence he had. His God was with him. 18-25—in these verses Daniel recalls that which is familiar to Belshazzar. The career of Nebuchadnezzar, his greatness, independence and his humiliation. He then reproaches Belshazzar (verses 26-30) for not having humbled his heart, for his drunken debauch and his having pleased the gods of silver, gold, brass, iron and wood and stone. 26—Mene. (Repeated it for the sake of emphasis.) God hath called thy kingdom and finished it. God had decided the number of years which their kingdom should last. The end had now come. 27—Tekel. Thou art weighed in the balances. His character had been weighed. He was found wanting. He fell far below the standard and was unable to meet the test. Peres (the singular of Upharsin.) The kingdom is divided. Medes and Persians. It was conquered by Cyrus. 29—Clothed Daniel with purple. This was the royal purple. Third ruler in the kingdom. This would be next to Belshazzar, who was really second, Nabonidus being first. This put Daniel in a fine place to help his countrymen. 30—That night Belshazzar slain. It was swift from revelry to the tomb.

Comments on the Lesson

Belshazzar and Daniel stand out in striking contrast. The one ever false, the other constantly true. During this drunken debauch carelessness prevailed. Men were off guard, the gates were not watched and the enemy had easy access to the interior of the city and the palace. Drunkenness has ever been the same. It lacks self-control, and is devoid of reason. Belshazzar in his halcyon days cared but little for the Jewish prophet, but when his earthly strength failed he gladly turned to the one who knows and who can render help. Belshazzar has not been the only man who has lost out by intemperance. It is greater to be a citizen of the kingdom of God, than to be king of a kingdom of earth. Through drunkenness, one loses this citizenship and the kingdom. It is not difficult in reading this story to see God's hand in the affairs of nations. His word is true. It is useless for men to attempt to defy him. He has written his law in revelation and nature. He who transgresses will find "the way of the transgressor is hard."

Questions for Class Use

Who was Belshazzar? What do you know of Nebuchadnezzar? How did Daniel come to be in Babylon? What have we learned of Daniel before the lesson today? What is the occasion of Belshazzar's feast? Why did Daniel ignore the scarlet garment, the gold chain and the promise of a rulership? What instrumentality did God use in overcoming Belshazzar? Name five temperance lessons which this lesson suggests.

LESSON 3—NOVEMBER 19.

"EZRA'S JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM"—EZRA 8:15-36.

Printed text, verses 21-32. Commit verses 21-23. Read Ezra 7-10.

Then I proclaimed a fast there, at the river Ahava, that we might humble ourselves before our God, to seek of him a straight way for us, and for our little ones, for all our substance. 22 For I was ashamed to ask of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way, because we had opened unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them that seek him, for good; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him. 23 So we fasted and besought our God for this: and he was entreated of us.

24 Then I set apart twelve of the chiefs of the priests, even Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them, 25 and weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering for the house of our God, which the king, and his counsellors, and his princes, and all Israel there present, had offered: 26 I weighed into their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels a hundred talents; of gold a hundred talents; 27 and twenty bowls of gold, of a thousand darics; and two vessels of fine bright brass, precious as gold. 28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto Jehovah, and the vessels are holy; and the silver and the gold are a freewill-offering unto Jehovah, the God of your fathers. 29 Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chiefs of the priests and the Levites, and the princes of the fathers' houses of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of Jehovah. 30 So the priests and the Lev received the weight of the silver and gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem unto the house of our God.

31 Then we departed from the river Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy and the lier-in-wait by the way. 32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

Golden Text. "The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him."—Ezra 8:22.

Time. B. C. 458. The 7th year of Artaxerxes. Ezra left Babylon on the first day of the first month, March, and arrived in Jerusalem the first day of the fifth month, June. The great meeting is on the 20th day of the 9th month. His reforms were wrought from December, 458, to March, 457.

Place. Babylon and Jerusalem.

Introduction. Seventy-eight years have expired since the first return to Jerusalem. It was fifty-eight years after the temple was completed, and sixteen years after Esther had interceded for her people. During these years the Jews in Jerusalem and Judea had experienced their hardships, while they had established their homes, and built the temple; they had met great opposition. The walls had not been rebuilt about the city, and the rubbish still filled the streets. The Jews in Babylon had not come to them in large numbers. Lawlessness reigned, poverty and oppression had left their mark upon the returned exiles. There was not much spirit in their worship. Their poverty had reduced their gifts. While the Jerusalem Jew was getting poor the Babylonian Jew was getting richer. This led the Jerusalem Jew to form alliances with the heathen. Intermarriage became common. The fine spirit of their home life was destroyed. There was a laxity of morals, and a fading of glorious ideals. Read Ezra 9: 1, 2 and 11, and Neh. 1 and chapters 13, 15 and 17. The Babylonian exiles had become citizens of Babylon, improving their opportunities for business, but they kept close to the religious texts. The idolatry about them was so repellent as to drive them closer to Jehovah. They were a peculiar people, surrounded with evil influences. Fortunately in their number was Ezra, the scribe and a student of the law. He was familiar with the history of his people. He and other leaders held the people to the Book. "The men exalted the Book and the Book exalted the men." Ezra now decides to take some of the strong life of Babylon, with its wealth and culture into the home land, and there help to fulfill the word of Jehovah, and realize the dreams of his people. Artaxerxes, the king, was now an agent in the hands of God to help prepare the way. He gave Ezra and the people permission to return. Ezra 7:1-10. About 1700 persons, including heads of families, priests, Levites and servants, Ezra 8:1-10 returned. Free-will offerings were made which came from the king and those in authority, from the people and the priests. "In addition the king commanded that the countries bordering on Palestine should give out of the national treasury all that Ezra required, up to $97,000 in silver, one thousand bushels of wheat, 860 gallons of wine, and 860 gallons of olive oil."—Peloubet.

Explanatory. 21—"I proclaimed a fast." They had arrived at the River Ahava, and the fast was a religious act, expressing sorrow for sin. It was an aid to devotion, as well as punishment, willingly accepted for disobedience. It was an expression of the feeling of the heart. By this means they were endeavoring to get right with God, and hence secure his protection. 22—For I was ashamed. Ezra was afraid of the enemy on the way, but he had told the king that the hand of God was with him. Hence to ask for a band of soldiers of protection would leave a bad impression with the king. 23—He was entreating of us. Some assurance that the prayer was heard. 24—I separated twelve. The treasury was placed in their hands. Here was the distribution of responsibility. It also relieved Ezra from any accusation by the people relative to the treasures. 25—And weighed unto them the silver and the gold, etc. This was possibly in bars instead of coin. It shows business ability on the part of Ezra. There was a strict accounting of the funds. 26—Talents of silver, each talent worth $970. The heavy standard would be twice as much. 27—Talents of gold, each worth $14,542. This would make $727,000 in silver and $1,460,000 in gold. 28—Drams, about $5.00 each. 29—A free-will offering, this to be used in furthering God's work in building up Jerusalem and helping in Ezra's reforms. 30—Watch ye. Strict business principles were followed. This would all be weighed again at the House of God in Jerusalem. 31—Then we departed * * * and the hand of our God was upon us. They walked with God and God would be with them. 32—We came Jerusalem. The route which Ezra followed would cover about 900 miles. 110 days from the time they left Ahava.

Comments on the Lesson

For a careful study of the reforms which Ezra worked read chapters 9-10. He had about $2,000,000 for the repairs of the temple. Also a people with the right temper and spirit, followers of the law. But the money would be of little use in the great work, if it not been for the mighty leader, Ezra. We need material and means with which to do God's work, but most of all we need men. When the right man is found, means and methods are seldom wanting. Ezra had hard work before him. He began by laying a right foundation, he built on the rock, and the superstructure was no veneer proposition. One of the leading evils of the country was intermarriage with idolators. His sins were blacker than Ezra had dreamed. (Ezra 9.3.) What an assembly of the faithful met with the prophet, as they discussed the conditions of their times. That was a genuine prayer-meeting. (Ezra 9:6-15.) Then the great public meeting followed. This was a time to try men's souls and it showed the metal of which they were made. To be right with God meant the breaking of many ties, even the breaking up of homes. Ezra was a radical man, and he laid the ax at the root of the tree. He was a surgeon who realized that to heal the body he must cut out the roots of the cancer, that was sapping its strength. The people suffered, but was simply the result of their sowing. They called Ezra narrow. Today the reformer is called narrow, but a man is broad who sticks to the truth. God's men have never been policy men. The times in which we call for such leadership as Ezra's. There is too much winking at sin. Every man who reaps as he sows. If we will save misery and suffering on the morrow, let us teach men how to sow today.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Ezra? How did he get to Babylon? What led him to go to Jerusalem? Wherein is the providence of God shown in this lesson? What caused Artaxerxes to be so tolerant? Give reasons for the conditions that existed in Jerusalem. Wherein did Ezra show good business judgment? Give the leading characteristics of Ezra. What has always been the purpose of fasting? What was the advantage in having only volunteers return? What is the advantage in a purely volunteer offering?

LESSON 4—NOVEMBER 26.

"NEHEMIAH'S PRAYER"—NEH. 1:1-11.

Commit verse 9.

The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachabiah.

Now it came to pass in the month Chislev in the twentieth year, as I was in the palace, 2 that Hanani, one of my brethren, came, he and certain men of Judah; and I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, that were of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. 3 And they said unto me, the remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem also is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire.

And it came to pass, when I heard these words, that I sat down and wept, and fasted certain days; and I fasted and prayed before the God of heaven, 5 and I beseech thee, O Jehovah, the God of heaven, the great and terrible God, that keepeth covenant and loving kindness with them that love him and keep his commandments: 6 let thine ear now be attentive, and thine eyes open, that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee at this time, day and night, for the children of Israel thy servants, while I confess the sins of the children of Israel, which we have sinned against thee. Yea, I and my father's house have sinned: 7 we have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments, nor the statutes, nor the ordinances, which thou commandest thy servant Moses. 8 Remember, I beseech thee, the word that thou commandedst thy servant Moses, saying, If ye trespass, I will scatter you abroad among the peoples. 9 but if ye return unto me, and keep my commandments and do them, though your outcast were in the uttermost part of the heavens, yet will I gather them from thence, and will bring them unto the place that I have chosen, to cause my name to dwell there. 10 Now these are thy servants and thy people, whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power, and by thy strong hand. 11 O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who delight to fear thy name; and prosper I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man. (Now I was cupbearer to the king.)

Time. 13 years after the return of the exiles under Ezra, which would bring 445 B. C.

Place. Shushan, one of the three capitals of the Persian empire.

Introduction. For every emergency God raises up his man. Ezra and Nehemiah men for the hour. Each was endowed for his peculiar work.

Explanatory. 1—Nehemiah lived at Shushan, 250 miles further east of Babylon. He was not in close touch with many of the Jews, and knew but little of what was going on in Jerusalem. The month of Chisleu, the 9th month, November-December. 20th year. B. C. Josephus tells us that Nehemiah was one day walking outside of the palace at Shushan, when some travelers approached, speaking in his own language, the Hebrew. He approached them, learned they were from Judah, and that one was his own brother, Hanani. Compare Neh. 7:2. 2—Certain men of Judah. The men who had immediately come from Judah. And I asked them. The many things about which he would ask, the people, the city, the worship. 3—In great affliction and reproach. Ezra's reforms had embittered the surrounding nations. There had been much misrepresentation. There had been fierce struggles. Jerusalem had been attacked. The walls and the gates destroyed. Neh. 2:11-15. 4—When I heard these words, the report that was made. I sat down, and mourned * * * fasted * * * prayed. Nehemiah was entirely overcome. The real man is shown here. 5—And said. We here have a great plea made by man, in real earnest. Keep a covenant. One who never breaks his promise. For them that love him. God's blessings are always conditional. He rewards and helps those who comply with his conditions, and bring their wills in subjection to His will. 6—Let thine ear, etc. Nehemiah now had much to say to the Lord. It was the confession of the man who was burdened For the children of Israel. This was no selfish prayer. Confess the sins. He realized all their troubles were the fruits of disobedience. I and my father's house. Nehemiah was not one of those who believed himself to be perfect. Like every great soul, he knew his imperfections. 7 and 8—We have dealt very corruptly. He here tells of their disobedience and remembered that God had taught through Moses that they would be scattered among the nations if they transgressed. 9—But if ye turn unto me. That is, if you put yourself in a position, so that I can help you. Yet will I gather them from thence. Lev. 26:40. Deut. 30:1-10. Thy people whom thou hast redeemed by thy great power. Nehemiah was familiar with the history of his people. He knew how God had delivered them in the past. This was assurance that he could and would do it again, if they ever gave him the opportunity. 11—Prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day. The thought in the mind of Nehemiah was to be granted the privilege to go to Jerusalem to help his brethren. He asks God to help him to have favor in the sight of the king, whose cup bearer he was.

Comments on the Lesson

One of the finest characters to be seen in the group of men in the Old Testament history was Nehemiah. We know but little of his early life. He was the son of Hachabiah and belonged to the tribe of Judah. He was a young man, who stood high in the king's court, having been appointed to the position of cup bearer to the king. Notwithstanding he was a Jew, he had risen high. To be a cup bearer was a statesman and a favorite. Nehemiah was wealthy, as we learn in chapter 5, verse 18. He was a true patriot, and meant much in his day. While surrounded with wealth and luxury his heart was in the land of his fathers. While he had never seen Jerusalem, he yearned for that sacred spot. To him God was real. He was religious, in spite of the heathen idolatry which surrounded him. As we will learn in future lessons, he was a man of great business sagacity; not afraid of hard work, worked hand in hand with God, and gave the honor to the people who joined with him in his mighty undertakings. He was a man of prayer. When the report came that his people were in distress, he went to the God of his people and laid his burdens before Him. God always hears the "fervent, effectual prayer of a righteous man." It is easy to be religious when everybody about you is religious. It demands no struggle to honor God and walk in His ways, when the procession is doing the same thing; but when a man must stand alone and a great price must be paid for faithfulness, then is the time to reveal the stuff of which a man is made. Nehemiah had some good teaching. Very careful was the Jew to teach his sons the law of Jehovah, if this world is ever to be redeemed (and it will be) Christian men and women must begin with the child, and safeguard him with the teachings of the Book. The time to plant the seed is in the springtime. The time to form the habit to develop character is at the very beginning. While Nehemiah was but a young man, he had started right, and was able to join with Ezra in doing the work that was needed in the land of his fathers. They were in two different sections of the exile in various ways along different paths. God had been preparing these two men for His work. And now in the fullness of time he brings et and the young man of affairs together. Does not this lesson teach us that in the s of nations God is interested and He sitteth within the portals "keeping watch above down?"

Questions for Class Use

Who was Nehemiah? What do you know of his early life? What was his position in the foreign court? How did he hear of conditions in Judah? Would you deem it very accidental that this intelligence was brought to him? What was the relation of Hanni to Nehemiah? In what did Nehemiah show himself to be a patriot? Did it cost anything to go to Jerusalem? When did his devotion probably begin?

Cor. 16:13.

Time. April, 444, four months after he heard the news from Jerusalem. The journey took four months. He arrived in Jerusalem, first day of the fifth month.

Place. Shushan and Jerusalem.

Introduction. In the presence of the king, Artaxerxes, Nehemiah had shown sadness which was unusual. When the king made inquiry Nehemiah told him of the dilapidated condition of Jerusalem. Then he made his request that he be given permission to go and build up the waste places. The king was pleased and made this young man governor of Judea. This gave him power and protection. Ezra had traveled without escort, Nehemiah was granted and used one. This was an expression of his power helped to enforce his authority among the people with whom he would work. A months' prayer was answered. What a picture we have of this young governor riding about the city in the night time taking a survey of the work, studying the new situation, getting ready to lay his plans. We then have a picture of Governor Nehemiah meeting the rulers and the priests with the people. He lays before them his purposes and his plan, he tells them how he learned of their need, of his prayer and God's answer to the same. Then he said, "Come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that there be no more a reproach." Plans were now laid for the work, and the walls went up.

Explanatory. 6—So built we the wall. Nehemiah gives the people credit. The success of the enterprise depends upon this sentence, "For the people had a mind to work." 7—But. Every good work has its opposition. There were the enemies. Sanballat. He was a Moabite chief, who was a Persian official. Tobiah, a chief adviser of Sanballat. Arabs. The Arabs of the desert. Ashdodites. They came from Ashdod, near the Mediterranean. All of these conspired against the Jews. 8—To fight against Jerusalem. They simply desired to hinder the work. They united against the Jew. 9—We made prayer unto God. This would be expected of such a man as Nehemiah, but while he prayed as though everything depended upon God, he worked as though all depended upon man. And set a watch against them. By day and by night they were on their guard. 10—And Judah said. Many of the Jews became tired of hard work and were ready to give up, saying "We are not able to build the wall." The novelty had worn off, the work was strenuous. The higher the walls the more difficult the labor. 11—And our adversaries said. No doubt the declarations made by the adversaries helped to frighten and dishearten the Jews. Nehemiah was bothered with both foes within and without. 12—The Jews dwelt by them. These are the Jews living outside of Jerusalem. They said unto us many times. Many of the little towns and villages were in no position to withstand the attack. Their strong men had gone to the city to work upon the walls. And the folks from the outlying districts came in and caused alarm among the workmen by these statements. Set I in the lower places. These were in places most exposed, where the least work had been done. And on the higher places where they could watch for the enemy after their families. They no longer needed to be in fear of their families, for they were placed with them. *Remember the Lord * * * and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses.* This was a magnificent appeal. Here was a motive to challenge the best and the noblest there was in every man. 15—When our enemies heard. When the enemies saw that the people had prepared themselves for the attack, they did not care to make the assault. 16—*The half of my servants wrought * * * and the other half.* Thus one half worked while the other half watched. They were divided into two companies, working and watching alternately. 17—*With one of his hands wrought * * * and with the other he held a weapon.* Every precaution was taken, the defense was sure. 18—And he that sounded the trumpet was by me. The trumpeter would sound the alarm. Nehemiah would be one of the first to hear it.

Comments on the Lesson

Nehemiah furnishes us the example of a man who prepared well for his task, planned his work, then worked his plan. The success of the work depended in a measure upon the unity of the people. One of the great sentences of this lesson is this: "For the people had a mind to work." People can do most anything they desire to, if they desire it hard enough and are united. Churches thrive today, when people set their minds unitedly to a definite task. Nehemiah shows us how to meet obstacles, all the threatening of his opponents, and the faltering of his adherents could not deter him in his purpose. As a new emergency arose, he prepared to meet it. He roofed his house before it rained. His careful preparation prevented an attack from the army. He both prayed to God and labored with men; to him prayer and work went together. Nehemiah knew the people would do their best work when with their families, when the mind was at rest. They would also put up a strong fight, if fighting became necessary, if it were in defense of their loved ones. In summing up the character of this young man, we behold faith, courage, dependence upon God, tactfulness and devotion beautifully blended. He was not afraid of hard tasks. He was inspired with a vision. He stayed by his task until it was crowned with victory.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Nehemiah? How did he gain permission from the King to go to Jerusalem? What was his office in Judea? Describe his surveying the territory? Which was the greater hindrance when the wall was half done, the foes within or without? Who were the enemies on the outside? Why were they enemies? What does Nehemiah teach about prayer? What is the practical application to be made of this lesson? What characteristics of Nehemiah appeal to you?

MERRY CHRISTMAS

When it is a little early for the above meeting, our January magazine will not reach our readers in time, hence we open the December number with best wishes to all. The great question in the minds of all God-loving Americans is: What can I afford to give away this Christmas? Indeed, this will be a giving Christmas. Millions of dollars will be thrown on the altar of sacrifice while other millions will be thrown away in a manner that ought to put civilized people to shame. While all round about us lie the sick and afflicted, widows, orphans, the destitute and homeless, we continue to spend money and make presents to those who need them not, and many of us forget the poor and needy. It is our earnest prayer that the men of our churches, in Bible Classes, Brotherhoods, Leagues, Clubs, and kindred groups, will make Christmas 1912 a memorable occasion by providing food, clothing, fuel, light and comfort to a multitude of needy homes that can be found anywhere by a group that are determined to find them.

THREE
OLD

CHRISTIAN MEN is three years old with this issue—three long, laborious and expensive years, and we are still pegging away at the great problem of Men and the Church. We are further along than we were a year ago—yes, further than six months ago, or six weeks ago; in fact, every night finds the Brotherhood Movement and CHRISTIAN MEN magazine further advanced in the minds and hearts of those who are directing these enterprises than when the day began. For this we are truly thankful. We are under obligations to many and could not begin to name them nor to thank them in person. Our circulation is growing and we hope the usefulness of the magazine and of the Brotherhood Movement is growing in the lives of all with whom it comes in contact.

FIRST THINGS
FIRST

We make no apology for giving first place this month to the Brotherhood Campaign Tour of our President and party. It was a magnificent journey from beginning to end. In the judgment of many the Movement has gained greater impetus by reason of this tour than years of campaigning and tons of printed matter could have done under ordinary conditions. The address of C. M. Chilton, which came after the body of the magazine was prepared, speaks for itself, and we bespeak for it a careful and prayerful reading.

Throughout the magazine there are some other stories of exceptional interest that deserve a wide reading at your hands. It is not often that we can present such a literary array as we do this month. Even the wireless whisperers and critics tell us, are improving.

MEN AND RELIGION

In our egotism we do not forget the Men and Religion Campaigns now on in several cities. We urge again liberal patronage of these campaigns on the part of Christian Churchmen everywhere. The campaigns are wonderful in power and the church that does not contribute the presence of its men will reap the advantages to be gained from the campaign.

But we pause to bring to your attention some cardinal features relating to the organization and affiliation of Brotherhoods, Bible Classes and other groups of men.

On Page 23 of this issue find a brief article on "How to Connect Your Men With the National Brotherhood." That page is worthy of a wide reading by all who want light on the Brotherhood subject.

Massing the Masculine

Story of the Tour of Our President

W. E. M. Hackleman, Song Leader; C. M. Chilton, Director; R. A. Long, President, and J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary.

NEOWERDOM R. A. Long was born in Kentucky, but located in Kansas some thirty years ago, and embarked in the lumber business. "Mrs. Long helped me pile lumber in my first store at Columbus, Kansas," said Mr. Long at the Kansas City meeting, and it is therefore fitting that the Brotherhood tour should have begun in the Sunflower State. The State Convention of the Brotherhood was being held in Parsons, a small city towards the eastern border, where the Ozarks bury their feet in good Kansas soil, and hither the Brotherhood President went, taking Mr. Shellenberger with him. Both nervous to the extreme over the unknown possibilities of the beginning. They arrived!!! So did Kansas. The way those Jayhawkers turned out to the Brotherhood meeting was splendid. As Mallory's own men came in late and observed the S. R. O. sign at the door. Hackleman was in Indianapolis adding the finishing touches to the second volume of Brotherhood hymns and did not get to Parsons. Had Hackleman arrived, those Kansans would be singing yet.

WICHITA

From Parsons to Wichita is a night's journey, with frequent changes, but it was worth it. Wichita claims to be the second largest city in the State, and some other things, all true, chiefly that the Central Christian Church has the only "Priest" in the ministry of our churches anywhere. We have other priestly men, but there is only one Walter Scott Priest, and he belongs to Wichita, and what Priest cannot do, in the way of marshalling forces for a Brotherhood gathering, the men of his church "Kan." "Here comes Bro. Chilton," Judge Haymaker announced, when the afternoon meeting was ready, and in marched the Brotherhood Director from St. Joseph. "Marched," did we say? No. Chilton never marches. His is not the step of the soldier, but rather the tread of a saintly man with a divine message, so tremendously in earnest that when the fire has burned in his heart about so long, the words belch forth as from a human volcano. We had hoped to have his message for our readers this month, and in

JUDGE J. N. HAYMAKER,
Wichita

that you are no more disappointed than we who pen these lines.* At Kansas City it smelled of brimstone at the third firing. How it must have thundered the twenty-fifth shot at St. Louis!! But we are still at Wichita, the second station on this swing around the circle, and have already exhausted more than the prorata of white pages, and have only begun our story. We cannot proceed without telling you how W. R. Warren stole our thunder for this issue by prevailing upon both Chilton and Shellenberger to write of the tour for the Christian Evangelist, and at this very moment we surmise both Chilton and Shellenberger are burning midnight oil, as we are doing, in an attempt to excel the other effort. But "time waits for no man," neither do printers. Our printer is holding the press at this moment, crying for "more copy." Newspaper editors, to whom we are greatly indebted for magnanimous news service all along the line of the tour, will readily appreciate our predicament.

TOPEKA The famous W. R. Stubbs lives in Topeka, where the citizens proudly exhibit the Capitol building, the Main Offices of the Santa Fe Railroad, beautiful homes, and no saloon. The progressive spirit of the city is manifest by fine buildings, lining well lighted streets. It was four a. m. and our party turned back three pairs of Pullman's lily white sheets, and stepped into the arms of C. A. Finch. Finch is the "Priest" of the first church at Topeka, the mother of four other churches and several missions. About this time Hackleman had us on the end of the telephone in Kansas City to say "he was in" and asked for orders. Hackleman wrote songs and compiles hymnals, among them Brotherhood Hymns, a book of great merit, and wanted specimen pages stolen off for use on the tour, so down we went to the Kansas City Union Depot to secure the plates. Did you ever hunt a needle in a haystack? We hunted in Hackleman's trunk among a multitude of others and finally located it on a table enroute to the baggage car, bribed the trucker, held the train, secured the coveted plates, and sent Hackleman to Topeka where he met the team and attracted the crowd.

KANSAS CITY Kansas City claims to be the longest for a citizen, and he claims the city as his home. Here is his business headquarters, his home, his family and friends. Here also the Christian Church is numerically supreme. It is harder to write of Kansas City's reputation to the touring party because of the fact. More is expected under such conditions. R. H. Waggener, late of Cincinnati fame, a prodigal son to Kansas City, had charge. The meetings were held in the Independence Boulevard Church, and the way Waggener plastered the churches with advance literature and supper tickets was a demonstration of remarkable genius. When the hour of five o'clock arrived, every church in the Kansas Citys, Independence, Mo., Iowa

JOPLIN

What can we say of Joplin?
Lead? Yes. Zinc? Yes.
Gold? Yes—$700 “good as gold,” C. J.
Chapman says, was subscribed at the dinner. But what a dinner? Turn to the cover pages of this magazine and gaze at that sea of faces. That’s Joplin true to life. There was another Perry at Joplin—J. W. Perry, too, and like the Jerry Wilson of Kansas City, if anything, a little more so. Perry painted the meeting in red on the sky until it shone round-about like the aurora borealis. In special cars, autos, afoot and horse-back, the Christian churchmen poured into Joplin. The newspapers said it was the greatest meeting ever held there, when five hundred men faced the flash light.

GEO. L. PETERS, Chairman

SPRINGFIELD, MO.

The Ozarks of Missouri shelter many churches of our people. At Springfield we have four or five churches, while the hills round-about are full of our membership, and this is no idle statement.
The Congregationalists have a college here, but we furnish the religion for the college, while the Congregationalists furnish the student body, and the “faith once delivered to the saints” is their religious menu. The newspapers took two columns to tell about the meeting, “one of the best ever,” and Peters and Moffatt, and the other pastors are still talking about it. Hurrah for Springfield!!!

OLD VINCENNES

On the banks of the W a b a s h, nestling away among the sycamores stands the quaint city of "Old Vincennes," with its landmarks and historic settings dating back, oh, ever so far, before you and I were born. None of the old fort that sheltered "Alice" and the French, is now standing, but Vincennes is still there, and our people are holding the fort under the leadership of E. F. Daugherty. Shellenberger says Daugherty is a stem-winder, whatever that may mean, but he had a group of men, and others came from the surrounding melon patches, and when the doors were opened, two hundred Hoosiers marched into the room and were seated. Do you know how they received the name Hoosier? A Kentuckian emigrating to Indiana answered an Indian's knock on the cabin door with "Who's yere?" thus coining the Indian's word for the Indiana white man. Suckers were at Vincennes also from across the river in Illinois, headed by B. F. Cato, General Member and friend of the Brotherhood.

EUREKA Eureka! Eureka! Here stands the college, once Walnut Grove Academy, and here is the home of B. J. Radford, hale and hearty, many years the College President, now retired, giving the reins over to younger men. Talk about telepathy, here is an absolute case. We "night-lettered" Eureka, proffering a date. They "day-lettered" Kansas City asking for the pointment and the messages passed mid-air. Eureka is all wool and a wide when it comes to entertaining. College announced a holiday—so did the mayor. The stores and shops put on all attire and an extra charge of dynamite was added to the lung power of the students. As Shellenberger puts it "explosions were frequent." How the team got away alive we don't know. With students to the right of them, students to the left of them, students in front of them, stood the four tourists. Rumble of cannon and rattle of musketry sounded at the station. Right into the jaws of a hundred, rode the weary travelers, to be buffeted and banquetted, and cared about on a chip of the grandest hospitality in the whole round world. Eureka claims a modest 1,600 population, men, women, children, students and dogs, and the countryside turned a steady stream in their direction and when the party rose to speak, every nook and cranny sheltered a human being. Sing? Villagers we should smile. We heard it in Kansas City the next morning, amid farcical shouts and College yells as the train pulled out for Peoria. We guess Eureka got her money's worth, and we know we did.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL. Corn fields and fields surround no undermine conservative Bloomington where Edgar De Witt Jones, J. H. Gilliland, Atkinson, and Zendt are pastors, where the team was billed the next day. Rich? There is no richer city of its size, either in men, money or land in the whole State of Illinois. A mass meeting was arranged. The men turned up in numbers. The team warmed up quickly, delivered their messages, hied for an early train and awoke at Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS James Whitcomb Riley lives in Indianapolis, so Hackleman's family, and this is the home of Butler College, the Missionary Training School, and the headquarters of the C. W. B. M. and Minis-

Relief Boards. Back in the seven-ty had but three churches here, one for the colored folk. Now we have more than five times as many churches in the city, and the Interurban brings into close communication a hundred other churches of the city. That accounts for the magnificent activities of the touring party. "A prophet without honor save in his own country." The newspapers said the men could be heard singing clear down on the street, and Hackleman was the song leader. The afternoon meeting was well attended and the spirit of devotion manifest was the greatest of the tour.

HOUGHTON, IND. The State University is at Bloomington, Indiana. J. C. Todd is our pastor, and of the Bible Chair established for the people. "The outlook is gloomy," he said, when the team arrived, but the atmosphere cleared up, and after the party had left for Cincinnati, they doubled their subscription to the Brotherhood movement, and wrote love letters to the team, saying the day was the greatest Bloomington Disciples ever experienced.

CINCINNATI "Were you ever in Cincinnati?" Well, the Brotherhood team was there, and thereby hangs a tale. The staid old boss-ridden town touched up the gold on its flag poles, dusted off the seats in the old Central church, and kept open house all day. And such a day!!! The occasion was so joyous it elicited editorial comment from the city papers, which is saying a good deal. In the evening a banquet was spread in historic Grand Hotel, in the very room where Brother Atkinson gave utterance to those famous quotations, "Quit you like men," and sank into the arms of Brother Garrison.

CLEVELAND Cleveland, the greatest young city in America, gave a hearty Godspeed to the party en route east. Judge Henry, of whom none among our laymen stand higher, was the master in the affair. The judge has a striking personality, tall and erect, with a bald spot marring an otherwise magnificent head. Not a man among us was more active in the affairs of the Laymen's Missionary Movement than he. This is characteristic of him, and is one of the reasons all the men of Ohio look up to him, although to tell the truth, there are other reasons. Good men abound in the city by the lake. There is W. S. Goode whose Brotherhood message at Luna

HIRAM Close to Cleveland, but away from the noise and bustle, is Hiram—historic to the extreme—presided over by that human genius Minor Lee Bates, President. The tour party, minus Shellenberger, Sundayed there and the faculty, students and directors showed them as good a time as they had on the trip. Shellenberger went off to organize a Brotherhood, and returned with the scalps in his belt to Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG Pittsburg, the Smoky City, consumes more coal, and turns out more steel than any other worldly metropolis. Here is the home of Senator Oliver, and a historic city among the Disciples of Christ. J. W. Underwood is pastor of one of our churches in Pittsburg, and to him fell the burden of arranging the meetings. How those Pennsylvanians rallied to him!!! The evening meeting was most remarkable. Five hundred men were provided for, but seven hundred came.

By way of Pittsburg to Bethany College in West Virginia long journey, but the reception accorded the party was worth it. Shellenberger tells in the Evangelist of the visit

Where the Campbells were baptized, near Bethany, W. Va

The old home of Alexander Campbell, the room in which he died, his grave, and all the old landmarks with which Old Bethany abounds. And there is the college founded by Alexander Campbell, which will be a monument to his memory for generations yet to come. Things are not the same at Bethany as they were when Mr. Campbell was directing affairs. They are better—much better. Men of means with a determination have made vast improvements in all respects, and with the wise guidance and careful oversight of President Abbott and an efficient corps of officers and teachers the school is destined to become even more of a world power for the advancement of primitive Christianity in the future.

LEXINGTON

We are at Lexington, and our space is getting cramped. Lexington, the heart of Disciplesdom, its homes sheltering fair women, and happy-faced children, surrounded by blue grass pastures full of blooded horses. Here is the grave of President McGarvey, not yet green, and that of his wife, who followed him to glory a week ago. Lexington is a Disciple City, surrounded by Disciple towns. Truly, we are a great people in Kentucky. Words fail us in writing of the meeting at a distance. The day was so full of good things. The colleges, the ministers, and the people in general were good to the Brotherhood men this day, and the influence of the meetings are beyond conjecture. Twenty-eight churches in the surrounding territory sent their goodly men and women, and when the last good-byes were waved at the station, the time had been all too short.

Lincoln, the city named for the immortal Abraham of presidential fame, is 1,500 miles from Lexington. Thither our party wended by diverse paths. Hackleman stopped to renew acquaintance with his family; Brother Chilton called "hello" to his brethren, and heard Shellenberger preach, while Mr. Long hesitated four happy hours in Kansas City, but they all arrived in Lincoln together. We are a great people in Lincoln. Cotner University and the village of Bethany lies adjacent, and a portion of the day was spent at Cotner, with its halls and charts and laboratories, and faculty and students. The First Church at Lincoln is a great church, and has a great pastor in Harvey Harmon. The party were entertained in Harvey's church, and one thing these good folk know how to do is to entertain. The Commercial Club of the city opened its doors and invited the party in, and in they went, to tell these business men the story of the salvation of man.

OMAHA Omaha, the Gate City, opened its gates, and Kersey and Kirschstein, who pastor our two congregations in that thriving metropolis welcomed them with genuine hospitality. Judge Slabaugh, chairman, one of the earliest and most persistent advocates of the Brotherhood idea, was ably seconded by a printerman, Mangam, and a host of the best men in our churches in that section. Chancellor Oeschger, of Cotner, was there with Cotner pennants by the dozen, and the way he called in the pledges was good for the Brotherhood Movement, and Cotner University as well, as Mr. Long gives the equivalent of 75 per cent of the money to Cotner, and 25 per cent to the State Missionary Society. But more of this anon.

DES MOINES Drake University, founded by the late General Drake, as most people know, is situated at Des Moines. Des Moines, in addition to being the Capitol City of the Hawkeye State, is the capital of the Christian Churches in Iowa. The State Secretary, B. S. Denny, lives here, as does also W. T. Fisher, leader of Bible School forces;

C. S. Medbury, Finis Idleman, H. E. Horn, Hill M. Bell, C. N. Kinney, professors and preachers, name with end. Des Moines is a great city, Drake is a great university, and Professor Kinney pulled the team out of bed in the Pullman car at half-past 4 the activities began to commence. Students were at chapel early, and filled the great room. Mr. Long spoke, and Brother Chilton spoke, and Mr. Shellenbaker spoke, and so did President Bell, and some others, but the presiding officer forgot about Hackleman, and his solo remained unsung. The party were escorted through acres of school room, lecture hall, church buildings, and what not, bringing up in an automobile at the hotel where about three hundred business and church men were awaiting them at lunch. The afternoon meeting was held in the University Place Church, a mammoth building, and one of the greatest among our church edifices. Here sat an audience, and the team three miles away with the business men. Time wore on, and still no team. "Let us sing a solo," said Brother Medbury, and the singing cards were brought forth and distributed. The "Little Brown Church" was sung. It sounded good, and they sang it again, and looked for the team. Then the other song from Brotherhood Hymns was sung, and still no speakers. After singing themselves hoarse, Mr. Hackleman arrived. The balance of the team carefully explained their enforced absence and proceeded with the program as if nothing had happened to interfere. The evening around the banquet board in the Shu Temple was magnificent, and the team left for Cedar Rapids with pleasant memories of the day—all except Hackleman, who was still humming his solo.

CEDAR RAPIDS

G. B. Van Arsdall and C. C. Rowlison. White is ably seconded by F. E. Smith, pastor of our Second Church, and the two of them make a great team. White had the thing well in hand. The meeting came on the heels of the Men and Religion Campaign, and Cedar Rapids, by the way, is the smallest city thus far entertaining the teams of experts, which is saying a good deal for the city. The day moved off rapidly, as things do generally in that "Rapid City," and 3 a. m. saw the team tucked beneath the red blankets aboard the train bound for the last stop on this 6,000-mile journey.

ST. LOUIS

"The greatest real estate deal ever made was the Louisiana Purchase," said the Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of our National Congress, and

W. P. CLARKSON, Chairman
St. Louis

general member of the Brotherhood, in an address before the Independence

Boulevard Brotherhood at Kansas City a few nights ago. St. Louis is the capital of the Louisiana Purchase, and if it hadn't been for Thomas Jefferson, we might not be writing about one of the greatest cities in the world. And if it hadn't been for Palmer Clarkson, and a group of good men in St. Louis preparing for the team, and giving them a royal welcome, we would probably not have this meeting to report. Union Avenue Church in St. Louis is one of the greatest churches among us—in Missouri or elsewhere. Here the meetings were held. J. H. Garrison, for forty-three years editor of the Christian Evangelist, presided. "There were periods in the St. Louis meetings, especially in the evening, when the team just wanted to get off by themselves and have a good cry," said Mr. Shellenberger, upon his return to the office. "There was something within us that wanted relief, and crying was about the only thing that promised alleviation." Such was the spirit of the St. Louis gathering. Some of our foremost men were in the meetings. J. H. Allen, first president of the Christian Business Men's Association was present, with Brother Thompson, the first secretary, and Udell, and Warren, and Smither, and Abbott, and a host of men prominent in a National way. It was likened unto the last supper of the Lord, and these men felt the tuggings of the Master's spirit at their hearts, and reflected it in their messages.

The tour is done. Mr. Long is about his business; Brother Chilton is pastoring his St. Joseph flock; Shellenberger is away attending Men and Religion Campaigns; Hackleman is back writing hymns; while the writer is gathering up letters pouring in by every mail, issuing tons of literature in response thereto, affiliating Brotherhoods and Bible Classes—a few—not nearly so many as we ought to be—editing CHRISTIAN MEN and endeavoring to make it speak when there are no business men, and preachers, and song leaders abandoning business to go on tours in the interest of this movement. Financially, the tour resulted in more than twenty thousand dollars being pledged for the support of this movement during the coming nine months. But the results never be measured by dollars, or speech or miles traveled, or songs sung—those things are of the world. The measurement of results of this tour be known only at the gates of Heaven. Don't you hope to be there and hear the report?

Good Programs for 1912

In the January number we will present a full year's program for Men's Organizations, Bible Classes, Clubs and Leagues. The programs are at the moment being molded in the minds of some of the leaders of Men's work in Brotherhood and Bible Class circles. The topics will cover,

1. The Boy Problem.
2. Bible Study in all its phases.
3. Missions.
4. Evangelism.
5. Social Service.
6. Community Extension.

Experts who are lending their voices in making the 1912 programs are W. C. Pearce, Adult Superintendent International Sunday-School Association; Robert Hopkins, Superintendent Bible School Department American Christian Missionary Society.

The following State Bible School Superintendents: Myron C. Settle, Kansas; J. H. Bryan, of Missouri; L. C. Oberlies, of Nebraska; W. T. Fisher, Iowa; Clarence L. DePew, of Illinois; Garry L. Cook, of Indiana; Walter Frazee, of Kentucky. Suggestions are being invited and received from leaders of Men and Boys' Work throughout the land.

The problem of the Boy will be treated by Charles B. Hahn, Moses Young, John L. Alexander, late General Secretary of the Boy Scout Movement; R. Waite, J. A. Whitmore, in program and articles of interest.

Missions will have attention of our State and National Missionary Secretaries, and a number of Foreign Missionaries will contribute up-to-the-minute articles.

The 1912 programs will be the best the Brotherhood Movement ever presented and our organized groups should get ready to strike hands in their service.

The Hour Has Arrived

C. M. CHILTON

The article herewith contains the cardinal features of Mr. Chilton's address on the Brotherhood campaign tour. The address was received after the travel story of the tour had been prepared.—THE EDITOR.

At New Orleans, three years ago, we organized our Brotherhood work and called Brother R. A. Long to be the National leader. It has been my honor to be a member of the board from the beginning. We have taken the appointment seriously, and have worked at the task conscientiously; we have organized an effective force at headquarters, in Kansas City; we have secured able secretaries; we have published a magazine; we have distributed large quantities of literature; we have spent more than $54,000. There have been many results to encourage us, which we have seen, and we believe there are many which we have not seen. However, there have been some disappointments. Though we have 10,000 churches and 7,000 preachers, after three years we have only 141 affiliated Brotherhoods. Not as much money has come into the National treasury as we expected. But we are not discouraged; on the contrary, we are greatly encouraged, and have planned this campaign in the conviction that the dawn of a better day is at hand.

After three years, we believe that the very best thing that can happen in any church is the organization of a Brotherhood. There are many good things that might happen—a great many very good things—but after going over them all, we still believe that the very best thing that can happen is the organization of a Brotherhood. It is the psychological moment for a Brotherhood.

Brothermen, the church is the most powerful organism in the world, if we can only get it worked. This does not overlook the importance of banks, factories, railways, libraries, colleges, universities, nor the value of their fruits in the life of the community, but in the face of them all we may still hold that the church is the most potential organization in the world; that is, if we can only get it worked. But we are not working the church to its full capacity.

Suppose you find that you are not working your own business up to the limit of its power, what will you do? You will reorganize it immediately upon a larger basis of operation. And yet a man might say, "I have enough; I am old; I will be satisfied, and take my ease, it is only money, anyway." But the church is different; it is a man-saving institution, and to run it short of the limit of its power is a sin. We cannot any longer afford to tolerate the conditions of neglect that prevail in the church. How shall we, and dare to look Him in the face who died upon Calvary, and shed his last drop of blood for this same holy cause? What if your employees were working for you as you work for Him?

I regret to say it, but from the day on which he assumes the sacred obligation till that upon which he lays it down, a minister's greatest disappointment is his men. When I think of what my 300 men might make the church, and then of what they leave it to be, I do not know what to say. Think of what 300 men could do for a Bible school. They could make it irresistible, so that the boys and girls might not be drifted away. Think what they could do for the Sunday night service. Think what it would mean if some night 300 strong men would come stalking into the prayer-meeting. And why not? Are they not all Christians and members of the church? Men do not work at the church as they do at their banks, and shops, and factories. I think now of a man who is a real force out in the world, but there are little boys and girls who are of more value to the church to which he belongs than he is. No, we are not working the church at either its full capacity or ours. There is nothing of that discipline, and responsibility, and solidity, with which men make their factories, and governments, and armies powerful.

Now, a Brotherhood is a group of men who are ready to organize to go to work to make the church what it ought to be. A Brotherhood is more than a Bible school class. It should have a class and make it the strongest force in the school, but it should also have a Bible school, and a Sunday morning service, and a Sunday evening service, and a prayer-meeting. Someone said, "No, I will not join the Brotherhood; I belong to the church, and the church is a brotherhood." And another replied, "Yes, the church is a brotherhood—that is, theoretically—but this Brotherhood is an organization of men who are ready to go to work to make the church actually what it is now only theoretically."

However, making a Brotherhood is a very hard task. But this is no proof that a Brotherhood should not be; on the contrary, it is the very best proof that one should be. This present world with its ambitions—and money and pleasure—gets a mighty grip on men. Such a grip that it is hard to shake enough of them loose to meet together upon any one night to make a Brotherhood. And we preachers are not very good drill-masters. We are good recruiters, and we are at home among the women, but we are afraid of the men. We shrink from the task of an organized life among the men of the church. So let us find a group of winning spirits—it may be very small at first—and organize them, and go along patiently and wait and wait for the thing to grow. It is well to remember how long we have had to wait for these new groups of pious, disciplined women who are now the glory of our churches.

But some are saying, "There is no place for a Brotherhood in the church." Here is it that there is a place for an Aid Society, and a C. W. B. M., and any number of organizations of women and young people, and children, but none for an organization of the men? I fear we have neglected the men until we are unable to conceive of the church in its relation to them. We have left them to seek in the lodge and in the club, and sometimes in the saloon, that masculine fellowship which a man craves and which the church; up to this time, has not endeavored to furnish him.

Still others are saying, "But what is there definite to do?" There is something definite for an Aid Society, and a C. W. B. M., and the Willing Workers, and others—why not something for a Brotherhood? How is it that there is something for everybody in the church to do but the men? Is there not all for the men of the church to do that there is for the Masons, and the Odd Fellows, and the Knights of Pythias? The whole thing lies here before us. If it were only for the men to become acquainted, it is enough. Christian men do not know one another; they do not know one another's burdens and needs. When the men begin to meet, and become acquainted, and study the task, they will find enough to do. Does anyone ask, "What is there definite for a bank directorate to do?" Why, the bank. Does one ask, "What is there definite for a railway directorate?" Why, the railway.

Is there anything definite for a Brotherhood? Why, the Christian life, the Church, the Kingdom—the one truly masculine task in the world.

We have had, to some extent at least, a misconception of the Brotherhood. We have been trying to make it with banquets, orations, and entertainments of various kinds. The world can outdo us in this. We must build deeper. Why not Brotherhood for the sake of a deeper religious life, and higher standards of service? Why not for friendship's sake? Is not after all the best thing in the world? The one thing men crave most? Why not for the work of the Kingdom? Why not a Brotherhood for the sake of the things in which the church is alone supreme.

This method is apostolic. There was first a brotherhood, not a church. One day Jesus, after spending the whole night in prayer, called to him a group of young men—there were only twelve in that first brotherhood—and began to teach them the Kingdom. For three years he lavished upon them the wealth of his great power, and at last made them, with a command that had gathered about them, into a church—the Apostolic Church. We may well study the history of that first brotherhood; it has much light for our problem. If we can begin to train groups of men in our churches after the plan of Jesus, perhaps, some day, we may bring into an Apostolic Church—a real reformation—that will overcome the world.

Come now to propose to you a covenant for the inner circle—maybe the whole Brotherhood is ready for it; it is a covenant for Covenanters. It is a good standard to measure one's self by. It is interesting to wonder which item or items a Christian man will refuse, and what will be his reasons:

A Covenant for Covenanters

"I, _____, in consideration of my duty as a Disciple of Christ, hereby covenant with my brothers for one year, to attend and support all of the four general services of the church—the Bible school, the Lord's Supper, the Sunday evening service, and the prayer-meeting. I covenant, also, to make my offerings to the church a matter of conscience and prayer, making at least one-tenth of my income the ultimate aim of my growth in giving. I will pray for the church and its enterprises throughout the world every day. I will pray for men and do personal work. I will visit the sick and the needy. I will cherish the Word of God, and read a portion of it every day. I will seek the Spirit of Christ. I will reserve the _____ evening of every month for the Brotherhood. It is understood that there are excuses which one can conscientiously give to his Lord and Master."

If a pastor can have twenty-five men who will take this covenant, he will begin to have a great church. And if he can have a hundred, he will begin to have the greatest church in the world, for I dare say that no church ever had a hundred men who worked at it in faith, as men work at their banks, and factories, and railroads. We must have more men of deep vital faith, men who are willing to bear the cross. Are we ready for the standards of this covenant?

Our Brotherhood's Christmas

BY H. A. DENTON

This space was reserved for the smiling countenance of H. A. Denton, pastor at Troy, N. Y., one of the best friends the Brotherhood Movement ever had. When we looked for the cut it was gone, and this is the best we can do. That Denton is a handsome man is a fact we will demonstrate at some future time.

A YOUNGSTER When we come to think of the coming of the holiday season, we naturally take more interest in the way the chaps will be thinking of the event than the older fellows. The youngster who is looking out toward the coming Christmas Tide is, in this instance, three years old. We begin to count his age from the New Orleans convention. Pittsburgh, 1909, he was one year old. My! but he was a frisky masculine for his age! At Topeka he was two years old, and he cut one tooth while at the convention. That was 1910. At Portland, 1911, he was three! and he was old enough to take a long tour across the country, and lively enough to cause the C. W. B. M., his oldest sister, and the boys of the family—F. C. M. S., A. C. M. S., et al—to look a little religiously expectant as to what notice in the family he would get by his fourth birthday. The youngster saw this, and he said, "Now, children, this is all in the family. I am the youngest, and I was born to serve all of you, and to take a sort of general interest in clearing a new piece of ground each year for you to plow and cultivate. I am going to get a million of the young fellows as the years go by, and as you grow older and richer, to band themselves together to help you. In fact, this year I am going to work in a great campaign with all the other churches of America to win a million men for the Master; but, some day, I will see a million men of the Disciples wearing the badge of a young and consecrated masculine service. I know I am talking old for a young chap, but then you must remember I am a precocious youth—you might expect of me."

A RED BLOOD SPIRIT

So this is the youngster who is looking for Christmas on the approach of his fourth birthday. Now, will you let him have his own way of celebrating his Christmas? Will you, please, not try to make him something that he is not. He is not a conventional churchman. He has dropped the old churchly vocabulary. He has sometimes shocked the fastidious—as did Phidias—with his vernacular. He is frank, genuine, hearty—all natural. The paper he runs—CHRISTIAN MEN—looked a little new when it first appeared. That is why it got the fellows the first issue. It was different. It was a new world in which men live six days out of the week. This youngster will be pardoned for lining up with things that men do and read in the real, genuine world of men. He knows baseball, foot-ball, basket-ball, golf—see the basket full of stones the caddy carries; rowing, shooting, fishing—my, how he talks on this line—even Brother Garrison; factories, farms, business. He will come to the kingdom for such as this, with the stamp of the Man of Galilee upon them. He will be none the less religious—Christian—because of the way he has. Indeed! he will be all the more a true Christian. He will be for the more a Christian Christian. This young boy—Brotherhood—will have a natural, human Christmas. It will be colored with the red blood of life, of youth, of the normal functioning of and mind working together in beautiful harmony. Did you ever stop to consider—consider, I say—that Christmas means life? Red blood.

The Brotherhood will have an interest—in all who are harassed. The world, for twenty centuries of Christian conquest—and how much worse if Christianity had not come, we cannot tell—full of sad men. There are, all about us, discouraged men. That fine metal that takes on the keen edges that cuts through these days has been sawed into failure. Some way, things conspire to make limp, initiativeless, unsuccessful many fine fellows. Something is gone wrong. Friends have not come to us at the right time and at the right place. Napoleon is not the only man who has failed because certain platoons of formation did not appear in time. We are failing and falling all around us—something that men must have—that something that is just as important as meat and clothes—encouragement, companionship, joint action, fellowship—is lacking. And this feeling that is a drag on one ever more becomes us as the traditional time for generosity and humanity—Christmas—approaches. Say what you will about one having enough stamina to stand alone, but it is nice things to talk about, but it is a harder thing—a more unnatural thing—than most people have appreciated. You may be far from home when Christmas approaches, and your heart may be heavy. You will fill up with tender sentiments about mother and father and all the folk on the old stamping ground. What an uplift a hearty fellowship of fellows in some Christian Brotherhood can give you! And the fact that is unfeigned will make it thrice as much for us.

A FOUNTAIN OF AFFECTION

The business of the world is close. Competition is straightened and thin-edged. Things run at high speed. The old reciprocating engine that used to delight you has given place to turbines of multitudinous revolutions. Hours are not always long, but they are exacting. Vacations are short and but once a year. Prices are high. Business is real, tangible, impersonal—that is the worst rub of all—and the individual is lost to consideration. Streams of men and women pour in and out, ringing in and ringing out their time for the factory that is capitalized by non-residents and run by salaried, hard stressed men. Matters are legal. The law takes its rap at us as well as its delays. The foreclosing of a mortgage is a bloodless thing, albeit oft a heart-rending thing. Men are unable to meet their obligations, and their going to the wall is too often a feast for vultures rather than a matter of consoling friendship. If one gets bad enough, he gets a sort of fame. If one fails for a big sum, the taint is fumigated some. But the ordinary man—the fellow who is just a man—fails to meet his obligations and, in business ethics, he is a scalawag, a deadbeat—nothing too bad to say about him. This is the dark side of the situation, but let no one doubt that it is a real side all right. It is the side of it—after all allowances have been made for worthy men—that presents a challenge to the church. This challenge is to open a fountain of affection for men. This work waits for the one who will see it and perform it in the name of Him who opened a fountain in Zion on the first Christmas. The church—and what part of it more than the men of it—should supply this other side of us—this side of affection. Men die for want of it. The world needs it more than any other thing—balm for its tired and secular heart.

Counting from New Orleans, WE WILL the Brotherhood's fourth GIVE Christmas is upon us. We will give Him an anthem of praise. The Father has been good to the Brotherhood of the Disciples of Christ. It was a late child. It is the baby. Older ones did not see from the first just how to adjust its relations to long standing conditions. The chap has had to scrap his way through at times. But it has never been more than a friendly testing of merits. He has toured the country, up to the coming of the Christmas Tide, stirring impulses, thrilling hearts, deepening consecration, and welding a lasting community of interest between himself and his brothers and sisters. Peace abides with this Christmas. Constructive realizations are here with this Christmas. The Father has been good to us; we will give Him an anthem of praise and universal peace. We will give hearty congratulations to all the departments of the Disciples. We will give the men of our local Brotherhoods an opportunity to be host to the lonesome man on this Christmas. We will give the poor of our communities the bounties of some offering—some remembrance that will make the Name that is at every name be praised while it is enjoyed. We will give our pastor a boost of heart action by showing him some way that his men are behind him. These things, and more, will we give the Christmas of our Lord, Nineteen Hundred Eleven.

We will take of our friends WE WILL and fellow organizations TAKE the Disciples of Christ hearty congratulations they offer. We will bare our head in the presence of the ladies, accepting their respect and confidence. We will accept the gratitude of the little tots—the children mentioned in our covenant—and we will not disappoint their expectations. We will take a little notice from the other organizations of our local churches, and if they are minded to say and think some things good of us, we are in a receptive mood. We will take it as a great favor if the matter of our birth and the setting of our eye tooth and our definite task—making men more brotherly and useful—be numbered with our achievements, and the certainty of our presence in the line-up at each coming Christmas be conceded until men are redeemed and saved and set to work for ever more.

The Statesmanship of Christian Women

BY CHARLES T. PAUL

Principal Missionary Training School, Indianapolis

In his "New Acts of Apostles," the late Dr. Arthur T. Pierson mentioned, as a striking characteristic of the present missionary age, "the new apostolate of woman." This phrase was suggested by the heroic and signal achievements of pioneer women workers on the foreign fields in the past fifty years. During 1910 and 1911, in the Jubilee celebrations of the women's missionary boards, another phase of that apostolate has been emphasized and revealed as never before, namely, the genius for organization possessed by the Christian women in the far lands—their ability to inaugurate and carry forward, systematically and efficiently, great missionary enterprises. Christian men have been roused by this revelation. No small factor in the promotion of the present Brotherhood movement is the discovery that Christian women are in the lead, not only numerically as regards church membership, but experientially as regards saintly character, fidelity and devotion; but also that they have much to teach us about more practical matters which, even in Christian service, are supposed to belong to the masculine temperament and prerogative.

This discovery has come to the Disciples of Christ largely through the work of the Christian Women's Board of Missions, an organization which, after thirty-six years of history, not only commands the confidence and admiration of the Brotherhood, but has begun to react upon it as a challenge. The demonstrated efficiency of our missionary women is saying loudly to our men, "Go ye and do likewise."

THE GENIUS OF ORGANIZATION

The present article aims to indicate some of the outstanding phases of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions and its work.

1. It has a thorough official organization from the national board with headquarters at Indianapolis, down to the district or county committees in each state. The local church group is called an "auxiliary," connected with which there are also the "circles" of young ladies and children. The work of all this organization is directed immediately to the stimulation of missionary interest, the definite enlistment of women, girls and children in the local groups, and the collection of missionary funds; remotely it issues in the sending out and the maintenance by the national board of missionary workers in the United States and foreign lands.

WHAT THE C. W. B. M. DOES

2. It has a comprehensive and statesmanlike policy. It ministers to the physical and intellectual, as well as to the spiritual needs of the people. It maintains hospitals, schools, orphanages, industrial homes and printing presses, as well as churches. Through all of these agencies the ultimate aim is evangelistic. In the United States it has mission schools for the isolated and neglected in the Tennessee and Kentucky mountains, for the Chinese and Japanese on the Pacific Coast, for the negroes of the South; and it touches some of the highest intellectual centers in the land through its Bible Chairs at state universities. Its local auxiliaries conduct mission-study classes, and disseminate missionary intelligence through public meetings and addresses. At the very apex of its educational propaganda, so far as its world-wide aims are concerned, stands the Missionary Training School, recently established for the expert training of missionaries for all branches of service at home and abroad. In no other enterprise have the ladies shown their far-sighted wisdom more conspicuously than in this. The school is the first concrete response to the recommendations of the special commission which reported to the World Missionary Conference at Edinburgh on "The Preparation of Missionaries." It receives students from all boards and all communions, aiming to serve through the church universal the world-wide cause of Christ. In view of the ever-widening opportunities, critical problems and strategic conditions now confronting the church in non-Christian lands, and the urgent call from all the fields for well-equipped leaders, this school is a center of call and enlistment. From its halls will go out a new generation of workers specially disciplined in mind and heart for the great and growing task of Christian leadership in all the world.

AMERICAN MISSIONS, TOO

In its propaganda the sometimes objectionable antithesis between "home" and "foreign" missions is well-nigh obliterated. It has seen opportunities wherever there were calls. In our own country it carries on evangelistic and educational work in thirty-five states, sustaining or assisting no less than four hundred and thirty-six ministers, evangelists and teachers. It has found a fruitful field in neighboring Mexico, where it has fourteen American missionaries, twenty-six

3. It has not neglected the near and less romantic fields.

Mexican assistants and sixteen churches. In Jamaica it cares for some three thousand Christians through its ninety workers, helping them to rebuild the churches shattered by earthquake, and to evangelize outlying districts. It followed the American flag to Porto Rico where it is helping the people to lay the foundations of a new life. In this "garden of the tropics" it has two orphanages, four day schools, eleven Bible schools, fifteen evangelistic centers, and fifteen missionaries and assistants. It is the first and only one of our societies to undertake work in South America. A good beginning has been made in the Argentine Republic. There is a church at Buenos Aires, and a call for reinforcements. Its more distant fields are

LIBERIA AND INDIA

Liberia, whither it was led by the gallant Jacob Kenoly—a product of its own school in Louisiana; and India, the "Gibraltar of Heathenism" in the Far East. The latter is its largest foreign field. Here one hundred and seventy-five workers conduct five hospitals, four orphanages, twenty-two day schools, six organized churches, in addition to an extensive campaign of evangelistic itineration, zenana and leper work.

4 The Christian Woman's Board of Missions builds for the future. In Young People's Department it has over three thousand groups under its care. All of these already take active part in missionary work and contribute to its support. The little girls now in the societies will later become members of circles and auxiliaries, and thus succession will be maintained. The total enrolled membership in auxiliaries and circles is about 75,000. The aim this year is to increase it to 100,000.

5. The wonder is that in the administration of such a complex and comprehensive enterprise, with its many and intricate ramifications reaching out into so many lands, this Woman's Society is not "stamped," but it isn't. Its actual cash receipts for the past year were $331,185. It was all disbursed, too, with several thousand dollars additional. The board is not afraid of a deficit (a) because its credit at the bank is good.

(b) because it is confident through its special Jubilee offerings this year to wipe the deficit out, and (c) it relies on a liberal offering from the churches on its annual day, the first Sunday in December. This will be a great day for the Christian Woman's Board of Missions. It will also bring a new challenge to our Christian men—our growing and awakening Brotherhood—to "help these women" as they have never done before.

Ministerial Relief and the Proposition that Solves the Problem

We appreciate the very kind invitation of Brother Elliott to present to the readers of CHRISTIAN MEN a statement concerning our Ministerial Relief work. We did not know of a better place for a heart-to-heart talk with the men of the church than in the magazine read by so many thousand of them in their search for something definite to do in the interests of the kingdom. Then this is to be a great year in the history of this work because it is to win a favorable place in the heart of our great Brotherhood.

The matter of providing support for our aged, disabled, dependent ministers of the gospel is a nation-wide enterprise, a brotherhood interest, and an obligation our Lord has laid upon his people. The responsibility for this support rests not upon a few well disposed individuals and churches, who for the past sixteen years have borne its burdens, but upon the whole church. To put this relation in rather and perhaps clearer form of statement, upon the labors and sacrifices of these veterans of the cross the church is today building. We are not what we are today except through what they did yesterday. To appreciate their sacrifice and recognize their service can be expressed in no better way than in our contribution to their support. And this is not only Christ-likeness in kindness and generosity, but it is real Christ-like manliness. It is also in direct accord with the familiar slogan of this great Brotherhood movement "To do a man's work in a man's way," and is just as definite a proposition as could claim attention and support.

Concerning the Past Year

There were eighty-three names on our annuitant list last year. And when the days of life's active labors are over these persons are found scattered over twenty-one different states. Their labors however cover more territory than this. This is our largest list for any one year, and, we gave them better support than in any previous year. Our new money receipts was the largest by nearly $3,000, and the per cent of running expense was considerably reduced. The death angel crossed the threshold of our family eight times within the year, taking from us five preachers and three widows. Cupid made us one call and won one of the widows. In reviewing the work of sixteen years we do not hesitate to say the year that closed September 30th was the best in the history of the work. And yet all must understand that the demands of the work were only partially met. Only about one-half the amount necessary to the work came into the general fund. But we turn at once from this latter fact to the best thing that has ever come to this ministry, and which we do not hesitate to designate as

The Proposition that Solves the Problem

It will require $25,000 to $30,000 annually to meet the just demands of this work. For five years we have been pleading with the brotherhood for such a contribution. We promised last year that with such a sum we would pay the most needy of our old preachers an amount equal to ONE DOLLAR A DAY, but the amount was not received. However, the Lord has always found among his people the right man for the right time and the right place, and for the matter we are here considering he has not failed. This Moses who is to lead our generosity in the full support of these faithful, old hero-saints comes before us with a proposition that solves the problem, unless those from whom this support is due absolutely refuse to be led. We herewith present the offer of this generous liberality in the maker's own language as follows:

During the next five years I will give one-fifth of any amount that our people may raise for said purpose, provided however, that the minimum amount shall not be less than $20,000, and provided also that the maximum amount expected from me shall not exceed $6,000.

To illustrate: if our people raise $20,000, I will give one-fifth of that amount, or $4,000, and so on, but in no event, as stated, shall the amount expected of me exceed one-fifth of $30,000, or $6,000.

Provided, also, that this proposition holds good only for the length of time I may live; i. e., if I should die within three years, then the offer ceases at that time.

Who, but one with a heart full of holy purpose, could make such a proposition? And knowing the importance and the need of the work to which the offer is made, who could be indifferent to such generosity. This is no bant. There is absolutely no such spirit in. But it is a challenge to the essential element of our Christianity, that of real service. The maker of this proposition has been a faithful and liberal supporter of this work for years, and here proposes that if the church will do her duty to be more liberal. Here is a great heart reaching out for fellowship, the fellowship that is in Christ, the fellowship of fellow-helpers. And, brethren, this is fellowship that involves the integrity of the church and the dignity of her ministry. It is the reaching out of a heart that says, come brethren, let us be true

This is a great appeal to the men of the church, and it ought to meet with a generous, many response. The proposition makes its appeal to the very best there is in a genuine, Christian manhood, and in justice to ourselves we can do nothing honorable but to meet it promptly. If you want something definite upon which to exercise the strength of your Brotherhood, put them up against the proposition. Give an evening to its consideration and see how readily your men will line up for service here. The most soldierly thing that ever transpired on the field of battle was to come with manly aid to a wounded comrade. And this is no less a necessary virtue to be approved and admired among good soldiers of Jesus Christ. What the church of our Lord needs most of a

Today is a manhood that means business where service demands sacrifice. Not sacrifice in death, but sacrifice in service. The sacrifice of life's pleasures, its ease and comforts, with the expense of these things in a hand extended to a needy brother. Brethren of the church of the living God, are we not trifling with the King's business? Do we not allow opportunities and possibilities to crowd our pathway, and daily refuse to give them consideration? And here is another, one that will require the greatest amount of indifference yet, if we shall pass it by. Give it consideration, men, and report results to the Board of Ministerial Relief, 120 E. Market Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

A. L. ORCUTT,
President of the Board.

How to Connect Your Men With the National Brotherhood

Can a Bible class of men affiliate with the National Brotherhood? Yes.

Can a Men's Club affiliate with the Brotherhood? Yes.

Does a man have to be a member of the church to become a member of the Brotherhood? Not any more than a man must be a member of the church to be a member of a Bible class or to sit in the pew.

Are there any dues or fees in order to belong to the National Brotherhood? No dues. No fees. But an annual offering for the support of the National office is expected.

Where can I secure information regarding this Movement? At the headquarters of the Brotherhood, 420 R. A. Long Building, Kansas City, Mo. A postal card request will bring a full package.

Suppose there is no organization of men in my church—how can I belong to the Brotherhood? Become an Individual Member by making an annual contribution of one dollar or more to the support of the work.

Suppose a Bible class of men affiliates with the National Brotherhood, and I am not a member of the Bible class—maybe an officer of the school, or unable to attend the Bible class meeting—how may I be identified with the Brotherhood Movement? You can still be a member of the Brotherhood Chapter, for it should be all-inclusive, and take into its membership all men of the church, whether identified actively with the regular Lord's day meeting of the men or not, Home Department members, so to speak, the class meeting may simply be the regular weekly meeting of the men. If more than one class of men in the church, the Brotherhood Chapter may include them all on a federated basis. The larger organization may give expression to the fraternal and missionary efforts of the different classes, but no change is necessary in the present system of class organization.

Is it necessary to change our name or form of organization in order to become a chapter of the Brotherhood? No, the requirement of the International Sunday-School Association, as regards officers and committees, is accepted as the standard for Brotherhood affiliation.

What does the National Brotherhood Movement do for us, and why should we affiliate? Send for the Organization Package and read "Reasons for Affiliating." This little bulletin will answer your query.

Our Debt to the C. W. B. M.

BY JOHN E. POUNDS

Address to the meeting of the National Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, at Portland, Ore., July 5, 1911.

The Christian Woman's Board of Missions deserves its portion of time upon this program and in all of our deliberations.

C. W. B. M.
DESERVING

It has been in many ways the most successful enterprise ever undertaken among the Disciples of Christ. It is only thirty-seven years since this work had its conception in the mind of Mrs. Caroline Neville Pearre. There was no plan, no organization, no precedent, no missionary enthusiasm, no former success to encourage, and little to be hoped for in the way of moral support from the preachers or the churches. The work was truly pioneer work. The women who undertook it were pioneers in every sense of the word. The growth has been with the rapidity of the poplar, but with the fibre of the oak. Today there are 9 schools and colleges conducted or aided by the Board, 6 orphanages supported, 5 Bible Chairs sustained, 25 hospitals and dispensaries operated, and 437 persons entered on the payroll of the Society.

CHALLENGES
STUDY

No only does such an organization demand our hearty support, both moral and financial, but it challenges our careful study. It cannot be considered the mere concern of women, but must be acknowledged and supported as one of the essential elements in the church life of today.

In studying the work of the Christian Woman's Board of Missions, three things seem to be important factors in its success—its timeliness, its use of the faculties that are peculiar to women, and its methods.

TIMELINESS

The time of women's larger life came to our land about a generation ago. In addition to the general progress of education and the consequent broadening of woman's opportunities, there were two events which contributed directly to this larger life. The Civil War made the hearts of women on both sides bleed; it also turned their minds to themes beyond the circles of their home and social lives. Having once begun to think in larger terms, it was natural that they should continue to do so. Hearts which have once beat for a great cause cannot return to selfishness again. This growing life found its expression in the temperance crusade and was greatly strengthened by this noble movement. Through this crusade women did much for the cause of temperance and purity. But they did even more for themselves. They allied themselves with the active moral forces of the world and learned how much they themselves could do for righteousness and God. More than this, they found for themselves a real life of the mind and heart—something to think on, to feed on, to live for.

MONOTONY

We men have never realized how our women suffer from the monotony of their round of every-day life. Every day women die of this awful monotony. We men like our homes so well, during the few spare hours we spend there, that we forget how much women, whose work is there, need a change. Even when we have a vacation we want to go camping and take a dish-pan and tea-kettle along so our wives can go right on housekeeping. We laugh at those whose lives turn around the shop window, the bargain counter the gossip of the neighborhood. But should they not enjoy these things if they have no larger thoughts?

When the minds and hearts of women are opened wide, the C. W. B. M. was to fill them—sent of God, we may doubt. For had these open minds been filled with social ambitions or other selfish purposes, the Christ must have waited still longer for the conquest of the world to Himself.

The use of the faculties peculiar to women was a second great element in the success of this work. This suggests, in the first place, woman's effective use of her own hands at hand to satisfy the needs of the door. All her training in the home has contributed to this end. Her economic have been of small things, but the result has been a large one—financial success for the household. There is a saying that no man can prosper until he gets the consent of his wife. This is only another way of saying that skill and economy in things creates the total of success. This is the very fundamental principle of the C. W. B. M. Women have very small amounts of money—we men know that.

Do you know what shame and humiliation we put upon our wives when we force them to beg for money,—and perhaps reply to their request with the question, "What will you do with the nickel I gave you last week?" He who does not give his wife an allowance in some form, who does not see that she has something of her own to use and control as her own will, who does not love as her heart dictates, does not deserve to have a wife with mind and strength enough to belong to the C. W. B. M. Patient planning and careful economy which have made our American women the most prosperous in the world are transferred to the work of saving the world, and we call the result the Christian Woman's Board of Missions.

SPIRIT OF SACRIFICE

Another feminine faculty which has contributed to this work is woman's spirit of sacrifice. It is only as we go on in life that we understand what woman's sacrifice really is. Our mothers deceive us, with the blessed, unconscious dishonesty of motherhood. If there are not enough pieces of pie to go around, mother doesn't like pie. If all can not go to the picnic, mother prefers to stay at home. Mother likes the old dress better than she would a new one, because she is used to the old one—and if she continues to wear it the boy can finish his term of school. Of course she never mentions that she has given up, for the sake of her home, her chance of a career, of matching her wits with those of others. Only to one woman in a million comes the chance that came to Harriet Beecher Stowe,—that of writing an epoch-making book while she sat with one foot on the cradle. If you feel the stir of desire in your heart at the thought of measuring yourself with others in the world of men, you probably got it from your mother. But she stifled it in her life for your sake. Woman's ambition expresses itself through the life of her son or her husband. Disraeli's wife was both his inspiration and his practical helper. I have read that she was accustomed to go with him to the House of Parliament and to sit in the gallery where he could see her face while he was speaking. In the early part of his career a testing time came. He was to speak on an important measure, and the success or failure of his plea meant much for his future. When he and his wife entered their carriage the coachman shut the door so as to catch her finger in the hinge. Flesh and bone were both crushed. But she uttered no cry. She did not even remove her glove, lest he should see the flowing blood. Deliberately she walked to her place in the gallery and smiled upon him while he made the speech that made him Premier of England. Only when he had finished did she hasten to a surgeon. The incident is suggestive of woman's spirit of sacrifice. Such sacrifices, though made in less conspicuous ways, are not uncommon in our homes.

A FOOT ON THE CRADLE

THE FAITHFUL WIFE

And then the deeper sacrifices the wife and mother makes! It is she who sends the children away from home at the very time they are most needed there. It is she who in time of war bears the harder part,—who waits for news while others are allowed to fight. It is she who packs the trunk when the young missionary fares forth to his task. So, with her life of sacrifice, her very genius for sacrifice, the sacrifice which is the very soul of missionary work is easy and natural for her. When she joins the C. W. B. M. she brings her spirit of sacrifice with her. With an army of such women success is certain.

THE HEART OF MOTHERHOOD

Another faculty which she contributes to the work is the heart of motherhood. This is a part of a true woman, whether she be the mother of children or not. When this instinct of motherhood expresses itself in quick and sure acts of service, even anticipating the needed thing, we call it womanly intuition. It manifests itself in the C. W. B. M. in the kind of work its members have done. The mothers and especially the children of heathen lands have appealed to the mother-heart of Christendom, and not in vain. The work in these Western States was begun to take care of the children who had come here. The same is true of the Bible Chairs in colleges where the boys and girls had gone. The work among the negroes and the mountain people is an expression of mother-heart in the work of education. It is not surprising therefore that this work has appealed so strongly to women or that she has done it so successfully. With a mother's heart, she could not fail in a mother's task.

The methods used in the METHODS have been a third element in its success. I have already spoken of one method of gathering money—and then the reason why it is so successful. But there is one feature of their method which I desire to emphasize, for I believe we have not realized how far-reaching the results have been. I mean the method of general religious education. The meeting is for more than the giving of a few or fifteen cents. Missionary work will avail and prevail when missionary education is universal.

EDUCATION BEFORE PROGRESS

If you would realize how certainly education goes before progress, consider the relation between modern popular education and the world's advancement. In the memory of those who are here today practically all improvements have been made and all popular education has been promoted. Our fathers reaped with the sickle and studied arithmetic to the "Rule of Three." My father heard a man say, "Now they have invented a cradle for harvesting and as long as it is on a wagon, there will be no use of any further inventions, for we have everything that we can ever need." Then came the era of the "little red school house" and all the people got a little education. There had been scholars before, but they had concerned themselves with academic questions, or with the polite things of the world. But now the common people began to have some education,—not technical training, but just enough plain "schooling" to start their thinking and enable them to utilize their ideas. And, by new world!—a world with time and nearly annihilated, with lightning vapor doing most of the heavy tasks, with one man able to do as much as sixty men could do one hundred years ago. When the man with the hoe to think, he invented something more than a hoe.

THE C. W. B. M. has applied this principle of general education to missions. The whole church was to study and know. Theologians and specialists were educated before, but not the whole church. Women were told to attend to their duties. They did so, and taught their children of missions, hence the Student Volunteer and other missionary enterprises. Universal education in missions must precede the conquest of the world for Christ.

The work of the C. W. B. M. makes its own appeal. We know in a general way that the women are at work and doing well. But more is demanded of us. Study and sympathy and support are due them. Theirs is a real part of the church work of our time. We can help them always by financial and moral support, and sometimes by counsel when they need it. In time they will help more in the enterprises carried on by men. And the great reward will be that all the work of the church will be strengthened by this mutual helpfulness.

Turn Back to Page 12!!!

No group of men should ever come together without a program. No program should ever be presented unless it be a good one. Many faults, failures, sins and shortcomings of our various men's organization meetings are directly traceable to poor planning, or no planning. Things cannot "just happen" and turn out successfully. The whole energy of your men should be thrown into making of the programs presented the very best possible. Take up the programs in a practical way and pursue them with a vengeance. Raymond Robins says, "I always demand the facts before I act in any case." This is good advice to Men's organizations. Ascertain the facts and a method of solution will readily follow.

Turn back to page 12, and ask yourself "What are the facts about the Boys, Missions, Evangelism, Social Service." The 1912 programs will help to ascertain them. Won't you Men and Boy leaders get ready to join hands in this worthy enterprise.

Brotherhood Movement Receives a $22,800 Christmas Gift from President R. A. Long

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 4, 1911.

MR. E. E. ELLIOTT, Secretary,

DEAR BROTHER ELLIOTT:—This is to advise that I shall cancel all moneys which I have advanced to our Brotherhood work from January 1 to October 1, 1911; also that I shall assume the payment of the note due the National Bank of Commerce.

I do not know that it is necessary for you to make any changes in your books at the present time, possibly not until the first of the year. I will leave Mr. Bannister to advise as to this, but am writing this so that you may have the letter on file for your guidance, and for the reason that on our journey I have advised the people to whom I have talked that the money being raised is not for the purpose, so to speak, of paying for a "dead horse;" and should anything happen to me before these obligations are passed from your books you will have this letter to show as to my thought in the premises.

This is to advise further that any expenses after October 1st are to be taken care of through the regular Brotherhood treasury, and if I should be called upon to advance any money hereafter I do so with the expectation that the same will be refunded to me. It is possible that I may have to advance some money before the maturing pledges on the trip just finished come into the Brotherhood treasury.

This is also to advise that none of the expense incurred on this trip is to be chargeable to the Brotherhood treasury, except Brother Shellenberger's salary and expenses. If any of the money paid to Brother Chilton or Brother Hackleman has passed from your treasury, please see that your entries are reversed so that, as stated, none of this expense shall show as applied against the Brotherhood.

Very truly yours,

R. A. LONG, President

The following letter from Treasurer F. J. Bannister is self-explanatory:

Yours truly,

F. J. BANNISTER, Treasurer.

At a meeting of the Advisory Committee of the General Brotherhood in Kansas City, Saturday, November 11th, steps were taken toward preparation of a suitable resolution to be presented by the Board of Directors to Mr. Long, expressing the sentiments of the men who are directing the affairs of the Brotherhood movement in regard to Mr. Long's generosity and magnanimity outlined above.

Wireless Whispers

A Great Revival

The Charles Reign Scoville Company closed the revival at Terre Haute, Ind., in the First Church on October 22d with 900 additions. It was truly a great meeting in every way. Terre Haute is a city of distilleries and race tracks, with 300 saloons and two breweries. It is also a city of coal mines and factories and has all the wickedness that accompanies such situations.

The First Church building at Terre Haute was recently dedicated and more than $40,000 was subscribed on Dedication Day, being the largest amount of money ever raised at a dedication of our people. Scoville did the decorating. S. D. Dutcher, pastor, is a church worker. He built the First Christian Church at Omaha, which is one of the beauties of the Brotherhood. We were in the Terre Haute during while on the Team Work Campaign last winter. The roof was just on, and if the completed building compares in any way in architectural beauty with the skeleton it must be supremely magnificent.

A note comes to us after this squib had been prepared, conveying the happy intelligence that S. D. Dutcher himself was making dates for Brotherhood addresses and going out over the grand old State of Indiana organizing men to give aggressive service for the Kingdom. We are proud of Dutcher, and proud of his men. Give them a cheer—"Rah-rah-rah!!!"

Lawton, Okla., Brotherhood Work Starts Well

One of the most unique and promising meetings ever held in the church took place Thursday night when the men held their first meeting of the B. D. C. It was largely given over to business, but the interest never lagged. The men are determined to make this organization a permanent one in Lawton's life.

The charter will be held open until the next regular meeting, when it will be closed with one hundred signatures. The men will have charge of the night services every fifth Sunday, that will mean they will furnish the entire program the last Sunday in this month. A new mid-week monthly program will be begun Thursday night, October 26th. This will be a curtain-raiser of promise.

The Brotherhood men unanimously committed themselves to the following definite lines of work:

First: That we will enlist one hundred men in the study of the Word of God in our Bible School.

Second: That we will enlist two hundred men in our Brotherhood work by December 31, 1911.

Third: That we will earnestly endeavor to double the male membership of the church by December 31, 1912.

Officers of the Brotherhood

President—Fred Sponsler.

Vice-President—W. D. Turner.

Secretary—Ray Babbitt.

Treasurer—Todd Sanders.

Chorister—F. A. Parkinson.

The following committees were appointed and their duties designated:

(1.) Membership. The duties of this committee are to make a canvass of the men of the church and the non-church men of the entire city, and see that strangers coming into our city know of our work.

(2.) Social. The duty of this committee is to give the glad hand to all. To provide amusements, refreshments, athletic features, indoor and outdoor.

(3.) Program. The duty of this committee is to prepare for the cultural features of the program; select leaders, speakers, etc.; attend to advertising, and arrange for special occasions, such as lectures, entertainments and annual banquet program.

(4.) Fraternal: The duty of this committee is to have charge of the charity work, including the poor, sick and unfortunate; to have charge of an employment agency and to look after the Big Brother or boy problem work.—The Weekly Bulletin.

Oh, You Buckeyes!

Uhrichsville affiliates with 102 charter members. Ohio holds the record for large affiliations. Nelsonville comes first of course with more than 500 members, but Uhrichsville comes second. Read what the leader of the men has to say as to how and why they did it, then mould the thing over in your own mind. Maybe you can go and do likewise.—THE EDITORS.

We have been without a pastor, but no line of church activity has lost a stroke. Bible School average this year, so far, has been about sixty better than last year. Church work doing fine. Finances 25 per cent better off than last year. Other things in proportion. This is no reflection on our departed pastor. It only means that our men have been doing business for the Lord. Our Reading Room Association is ready to join the Brotherhood movement. We have a dandy bunch of men. That is why our work has gone along so well since our late pastor left us. I see that Brother Long and party are to be in Cleveland October 21st and 22d. I want to ask that you come over from Cleveland to Pittsburg via Uhrichsville and give us a boost on the 22d. We will affiliate on that date if you will. So writes Dr. J. A. McCollam, of Uhrichsville, Ohio.

Well, we were at Uhrichsville on the date mentioned and met a host of fine men. The Reading Room Association consists of 102 members, and voted to become a part of the National Brotherhood Movement, and made application for their charter. They are now a part of the National Brotherhood Movement and bending every effort to follow the program of service held up to Brotherhood men everywhere. Many who read these lines could lead a group of men into National Brotherhood affiliation if they might go about it as Dr. McCollam did. Won't you try it, brethren?

Christian Evangelist Has New Editor

When we published the story of J. H. Garrison in the October number of CHRISTIAN MEN, and unveiled his open countenance to our readers on the cover page, we had no inkling of his intention to retire from the position of editor which he has held for the past forty-three years. Therefore when the announcement appeared in a late issue of the Christian Evangelist of his intention to retire next February from the active duties of editor of the paper a feeling of regret spread over us.

Brother Garrison has been a fine type of editor. Not sensational, but rather conservative—the kind of conservatism that points toward progress. To J. H. Garrison, as much as to any one man, our work in general owes a debt that it can never pay.

While we regret this contemplated retirement we rejoice in the selection of A. C. Smither, who has already become managing editor of the Christian Evangelist and general manager of the Christian Board of Publication. Brother Smither was pastor of one church in Los Angeles for eighteen years and in that time saw twenty-two other Churches of Christ established in the metropolis of everlasting sunshine. Besides that, he managed a large business enterprise without neglecting his pastoral duties. This in itself is enough to commend the man, but he has also editorial qualifications which suit him to lead in the larger undertaking.

A. C. SMITHER

W. R. Warren has already begun exclusive editorial work on the Evangelist, and will hereafter devote his time entirely to pen, paper and blue pencil.

Send Christian Men as a Christmas Gift

"If you know of ten worthy people that would like to receive CHRISTIAN MEN please advise me and I will send you a check covering the subscriptions." Thus writes Robert Stack, of Woodworth, La. In the same magazine came an appeal from one of our pioneer preachers as follows: "Take me into full fellowship. I have never been a subscriber to the paper, but I want to be. I have no money just now, but suppose you will trust me." This is only one of numerous similar communications coming to us from these saints in Israel who have placed their lives upon the altar of service in the ministry and in their declining years find themselves rich in fellowship and service but poor in the goods of the world. The directors of this Movement have instructed that no man who wants the magazine should be deprived of it for lack of funds, and we are at this time carrying on our list a number of subscribers whose subscription has been paid by others or is being carried by the Brotherhood Movement until others like Brother Stack voluntarily assume the expense.

Brethren, you could not do a more worthy thing than to send us the subscription price of five, ten, fifteen or twenty subscribers to CHRISTIAN MEN, to supply magazines to a worthy list.

The Insurgent Sunday-School

The above caption appears at the head of page 471 of Everybody's Magazine for October and is worthy of wide reading. It treats of the Sunday-School from its beginning date in 1780 down through its period of criticism, persecution, etc., to the time when it was recognized as a feeder for the church. The art also deals with the causes attending radical changes in the method of instruction and the gradual adoption of the graded lessons. Fortunately the article deals in criticisms of the methods of the International Sunday-School Association, for which, of course, the author of the article only is responsible. Whether or not this criticism is founded on fact we do not presume to know, but the article as a whole does the Sunday-School movement justice and ought to be widely read by preachers.

Interesting Sunday-School Statistics

There are 25,215 organized adult Bible classes in the United States and Canada, according to the fifteenth quarterly statement of the International Sunday-School Association, issued. The Churches of Christ, or Christian Churches, head the list with 6,318 adult organized classes, which is 25 per cent of the total number of classes to which International certificates have been issued. The total enrollment for the 25,215 classes is 603,630, of which the Churches of Christ, or Christian Bible Schools, have an enrollment of 144,438, or 23 per cent. What do you think of these figures? The facts are we are some folks in Bible school work, and if we only couple efficiency in service to numbers we will fill a great place in the religious world.

Mixing The Mixers

Last month we printed an announcement of activities in Oklahoma and ordered our printer to publish the counterfeit countenance of a gentleman from that new state. Ordinarily our printer is a very careful man, but in his anxiety to place before our readers an exceptionally good looking person, being told that M. A. R. Spicer was such a man, he got hold of the cut of a gentleman from Indiana, Robert Simpson by name, and used it instead. Now, one of the things that printers reserve the right to do is to mix things occasionally, and in this instance it is a case of mixing the printers. Brother Spicer is chairman of the Oklahoma State Brotherhood Committee and Brother Simpson is chairman of the Indiana State Brotherhood Committee.

A Ranchmen's Brotherhood

The famous S. L. W. Ranch church near Geley, Colo., a fine type of the wide-awake country church, of which J. E. Lynn is now pastor, has organized a Ranchmen's Brotherhood, which is offering this fall and winter a series of lectures by the professors of the State Agricultural College on their specialties. The October lecture was on irrigation. This unique organization is the outgrowth of the effort of J. E. Lynn, one of our good preachers who went into the hill country of Colorado to string a set of nerves and re-tan a pair of pale cheeks, and incidentally to work for the Lord—no, the work for the Lord was first; the re-tanning and re-wiring was incidental. Brother Lynn has done both in a masterful fashion, and the Ranchmen's Brotherhood promises to affiliate with the National body soon. Isn't this a bully report?

Welshimer's Stenographer Marries

Owing to the usual rush of business we found it necessary to prepare CHRISTIAN MEN a week earlier this month than usual. The Bible School lessons were delayed and we telegraphed Welshimer for them. He replies: "Lessons reach you Monday morning. My stenographer marries, caused delay."

On behalf of the readers of CHRISTIAN MEN we offer heartiest congratulations.

Endorses Christian Men Magazine

"I am convinced, after a thorough examination of other similar periodicals, that the men of no other religious body in America have a more comely, practical, suggestive, or helpful magazine than CHRISTIAN MEN." So writes B. S. Ferrall, Buffalo, N. Y.

Thank you, Brother Ferrall. Your commendation encourages us, although, to tell the truth, the magazine seldom reaches our expectations.

A Correction

It was stated that Brother Garrison was born in 1843, making him at this writing 68 years old. Attention is called to the fact that he was born in 1842, and that our printer got into the wrong font in setting the type, and that Brother Garrison's correct age at this time is 69 years instead of 68—all of which goes to show that it is human to err. However, in looking at the magnificent countenance that speaks from the cover page of October's Magazine, we can say with his many friends—"He does not look it." May he be spared to us still many, many years.

W. C. Payne's Tour

As the December Magazine is going to the press, arrangements are being made with churches in Kansas for a tour comprising about fifty dates for institutes and lectures to our people in the State of Kansas. The expert secured for this service is Prof. W. C. Payne, Dean of the Bible Chair, Kansas State University.

Prof. Payne is one of the best known men among our educators and has consented to serve the Brotherhood while making personal visits throughout the state in the interest of the Bible Chair work of the Kansas State University. This will be an unusual opportunity for not only the members of the Christian Church in Kansas, but for all people interested in educational progress to hear some masterful expositions of the place of the church in the community.

W. C. PAYNE

Afternoon institutes will be held in each point visited, beginning at 3 o'clock. Charts and maps will assist in the work. A men's supper at 6:30 will be devoted to Men's Brotherhood and Men's Bible Class Organization, while the evening meeting will be for popular audiences and may include the members of other churches, according to the will of the entertaining church. It is anticipated that the churches of Kansas will be materially strengthened by reason of this tour and a large number of local Men's Organizations, Brotherhoods, and Men's Bible Classes will be affiliated with the National Brotherhood.

Modern Equipment

First Christian Church Building, Canton, Ohio

By Mrs. Carrie Gregory Krenzle Secretary

The First Christian Church of Canton, Ohio, dedicated a church building six years ago the last of last September. Last April that building was razed to the ground, an additional lot secured, and a new building is now being erected, which will be dedicated in February, next year. Messrs. Fountain & Moratz, of Cleveland, Ohio, are the architects. They call the plan of the building, "The Canton plan." It is a combination for church and Bible school. The building is 110x126 feet. It is built of Bokara velvet brick, trimmed in terra

The auditorium is surrounded by a balcony on three sides. In the rear of the balcony are glass rooms, fifteen feet in depth. These are stepped and open into the auditorium proper. On the east side of the building are three tiers of rooms, used for offices and classrooms, exclusive of the auditorium, the entire building contains fifty-one rooms.

The basement is being fitted up for department work in the Bible School. There will be a large room specially prepared for Beginners' department; three rooms for the Primary, one grade to each room; four large rooms for the Junior, one grade to each room. All other classes above the elementary department will have a room for each class.

The church will have a nursery, a men's room, which will be opened every night in the week, a ladies' parlor, a suite of office rooms, pastor's study and wedding parlor, adjoining the study, which will be used exclusively for weddings.

The building will seat a preaching audience of 2,500. Many more can be crowded into the auditorium and balcony. A Bible School of 3,500 can easily be accommodated in the various departments of the building. The main thought in the construction of the building has been the Bible School work, and when fully equipped will make one of the best Bible School plants in the country.

In this building the Model School of Bible School Methods will be held twice a year. The next session will be held the last week of March, 1912.

Thirteen-Hour Tabernacle

A Lockhart Tabernacle at Iowa City, Iowa, of which this is a counterfeit presentment, was built by thirteen men, in thirteen hours, on Friday. "Unlucky? Well, I guess not," writes C. C. Rowilson, minister of the church. Before the evangelists came he requested a tabernacle, but the church did not have the faith to undertake it until the evangelists had arrived and demonstrated the inadequacy of the church building—then the tabernacle was undertaken and completed, and occupied within thirteen hours. The Masonic order loaned the lot, the building permit issued by the city, and thirteen men set to work with hammer and saw and not only completed the building, but built the benches with backs to them complete.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

¶ A really home-made boy is the best in the world.

—O—

¶ Do you know that the ancient Greek education put play first.

—O—

¶ It is far better to not have any equipment if it is not supervised.

—O—

¶ The adolescent boy does not need a teacher as much as he does a leader.

—O—

¶ Preach more sermons for the boy—the older folks will come just the same.

—O—

¶ Make Christ what he ought to be in the life of every boy—the hero of the age.

—O—

¶ Because a boy is boiling over with animal spirits is no reason why he is a bad boy.

—O—

¶ Don't blame the boy for not going to church until you know for sure that it is his fault.

—O—

¶ A boy demands reality. He understands nothing of the theory of things and cares less.

—O—

¶ A good definition of a Big Brother, "A fellow what knows all about you, but likes you just the same."

—O—

¶ When we ask a boy to take Christ as his Master, let us give him Christ's program and play fair with the boy.

—O—

¶ Remember that the teacher of boys should be man—a live wire—Bible student—a student of boy life—a good mixer.

—O—

¶ It is the bad boy that we should try to reach. Remember that the shepherd went out after the one sheep that was lost.

—O—

¶ Boys sometimes find themselves on a cross-country "hike." Take your boys out once and let them have a chance of waking up to want to do and be something.

—O—

¶ Sad indeed is the life of the boy who in reply to the question, "What are you going to be when you grow up?" said, "I'd like to be a man, but I think that my mother wants me to be a lady."

Something New — A Boys' Department of the National Brotherhood

There is an insistent demand for a Boys' Department of the Brotherhood of Disciples Christ. Many different methods are in use throughout the country, but the plan proposed for a Boys' Brotherhood under mass leadership promises to be universally applicable. The Men and Religion Forward Movement proposes the plan presented here. It has a firm foundation for a good work-boys' Brotherhood in any church. It is purpose to fill the Boys' Department of CHRISTIAN MEN full of up-to-the-minute plans and methods that can be carried on by a group of men for the boys in any church. Suggestions as to constitution, by-laws, and forms of individual activity in the local church, based upon experience, in either equipped or non-equipped buildings are invited. Mr. Chas. B. Hahn, leader of boys' work in the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, Mo., is promoting this feature of the Brotherhood, and we bespeak for him as the boys' work editor of CHRISTIAN MEN the most cordial coöperation of all who may be interested in the work among boys.—THE EDITORS.

The Yuletide

A Story

BY CRAYTON S. BROOKS

over yonder on the other side of the land of Palestine, there nestles the rocks of a rocky plain the little Bethlehem. Though small, it is a place noted in sacred history. It was there with the Moabitess gleaned in the fields of Naomi. Here it was that Jesse and his sons lived in peace and prosperity and duty, tending their flocks. Here David, youngest of the seven, learned to sling smooth stones he found at his feet, to sing and play upon the harp.

Now here comes an edict from the mighty, the great Cæsar that all shall go to the proper place to register. It was in order to make a census possible. It was Cæsar's method of making a census.

To Bethlehem, then, go Joseph and his espoused wife, because Bethlehem is the city of his fathers, the city of his ancestors, David.

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this day. When his mother Mary had been betrothed to Joseph, before they came together she was found with child of the Holy Spirit. And Joseph, her husband, being a righteous man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily. When he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary, thy wife; for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit. And she shall bring forth a son; and thou shalt call his name JESUS; for it is he that shall save his people from their sins; and all this is come to pass, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the Lord through the prophet, saying,

"Behold the virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and, they shall call his name Immanuel; which is, being interpreted, God with us."

And Joseph arose from his sleep, and did as the angel of the Lord commanded him, and took unto him his wife; and knew her not till she had brought forth a son; and he called his name JESUS."

When Joseph and Mary arrived, the public places were already crowded with multitudes of subjects who had come to be enrolled. And Mary was great with child they were obliged to accept quarters with dumb cattle in the stable.

Mary's heart was thrilled ever since the angel Gabriel had said to her, "Hail, thou art highly favored, the Lord is with thee. Fear not, for thou hast found favor with God. Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High; and the Lord God, shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The angel had also said, "The power of the Most High shall overshadow thee."

The time is at hand. While there in the inn, the child Jesus is born. Angels could not contain the joyful news. To whom could they tell it? All the city was asleep or in revelry. The last are not fit to hear such news. Outside the city are the shepherds, tending the flocks; humble, perhaps despised. "An angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid." But with heavenly calmness and dignity the angel said unto them,

"Be not afraid, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people; for there is born to you this day in the city of David, a Savior who is Christ the Lord." Hark! what is that sound of music? A multitude of the heavenly host burst into angelic song, "Glory to God in the highest."

With this babe of Bethlehem, hope is born into the world. Joy and gladness now have place on earth. The anniversary of his birth is prominently the children's festival. The church celebrates his sacrificial death by regularly and solemnly observing the Lord's supper, but the children commemorate his advent into the world in the unspeakable joys of the Yuletide. Away with the mythical Chris Kringle, and the impossible Santa Claus. There is no need for invention or fiction. Let us rather tell the children of the Babe in the manger.

A Savior was expected by the Jews. Without him the law was incomplete. It was a burden no man could bear. None was saved by it. Salvation for all mankind looked forward to and depended upon a Savior. The prophets had predicted his coming. The sweet psalmist had sung of his coming. All Jews expected him.

A Savior was necessary to them. The law was severe and incomplete. They groped in dense darkness as to the future. The law revealed to them nothing of hell, nothing of heaven. Even the chosen people of God had no means of salvation except by absolute and perfect obedience. Since none had kept it, none was saved by it. All are lost without a Savior.

Equally necessary is a Savior to us. Back of all sects, schisms, denominations, back of the Bible itself is the need of a Savior. To meet this universal, world-wide, age-long, fundamental need, comes the angelic announcement, "There is born to you this day in the city of David, a Savior."

"Which is Christ the Lord."

He is the Messiah of prophecy, the Lord, God's Son, co-equal and co-existent with the Father.

Small wonder the angel could say, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy." They have been in bondage and are to be set free.

A universal kingdom is to be established in which the Messiah, the son of David, the begotten Son of God is to forever occupy the throne.

"To all people" indicates the scope of his power, the universality of his religion. Therefore, in these happy days of the Yuletide, all the children of men among all nations rejoice and be exceedingly glad.

1. For material on the first number consult an encyclopedia, at home, at the author's study, or at your public library. If the library, tell the librarian what you want and he will be able to direct you to the material. Take the trouble to do this and it will be fascinating and interesting. You will appreciate Christ and our present Christmas joy as never you did before.

2. Get Vandyke's little book, "The Christmas Tree," and read it through in an hour. It is strikingly beautiful. Then go to the magazine files in your public library and get Scrap Book for December, 1906. It is a double number; get the right one. I wish it were possible to make you feel now the thrill that will come to you when you read the story there. You will say you never appreciated Christmas before. Read it. Then tell the story in your own words.

3. Giving, not receiving, is the spirit of Christmas as well as Christ. The joy of Christmas is in giving. Oh, the agony of the breasts of those who this Christmas have nothing to give! I wonder if you were just to let your heart speak if you could not suggest some plan to your Men's Class, Club or Brotherhood whereby you would express the real spirit of Christmas to the men about you. Try it!

If you really want to make this service gripping and fascinating, setting the pace for the year 1912, get in touch with one of the schools or colleges and have them furnish first-hand information in regard to the subject under discussion. Any of our members will be glad to furnish information on this matter without charge. Then in the January, 1912, number of CHRISTIAN MEN, which will be full of information and inspiration upon the subject with a stimulating article by C. M. Sharp that will be an opener.

High schools and colleges of our Church are joining the Brotherhood in issuing the call to ministers to preach upon the subject of the Ministry as a calling, the third Sunday in January. Any group of men so decided can be of immense assistance and exert a tremendous influence in your local church by having a conference with your pastor and deciding upon a coöperative plan in presenting the subject of Men for the Ministry to the most likely young men and young women of your congregation. Present the matter according to the above program in a modified form. The program as outlined will be too elaborate for one evening, but may be modified to suit your convenience. This will open up the subject and you can then have the matter referred to a committee to work out the details. There ought to be at least two thousand sermons preached the third Sunday in January upon the subject of Men for the Ministry, and with the proper advance agitation 500 men and women should step out and dedicate their lives to His service.

The above program may be undertaken by any group of men—Bible Class, Brotherhood, League, or Club in the church, if you have enough men to man the program.

Extra copies of the January magazine may be secured for distribution at the meeting if request is made by December 20th.

W. C. Pearce Says Affiliate!!!

Every Men's Bible Class ought to line up with the National Program of Service as outlined by its own National Brotherhood. I am pleased to know the action taken at Des Moines recommending that all the men should affiliate with the National Brotherhood of our own church. I believe this is one of the indications of the dawn of a day of larger service for the men of the church.

—W. C. PEARCE

Editor's Note—Mr. Pearce is superintendent of the Adult Department of The International Sunday-School Association and a member of the Christian Church. We have an article in hand from his pen which we will publish in January. Watch for it!!!

LESSON 2—DECEMBER 10.

“NEHEMIAH AND HIS ENEMIES.”

—NEH. 6:1-12.

Print verses 1:12. Commit verse 11.

1 Now it came to pass, when it was reported to Sanballat and Tobiah, and to Geshem the Arabian, and unto the rest of our enemies; that I had builded the wall, and at there was no breach left therein (though even unto that time I had not set up the doors in the gates), 2 that Sanballat and Geshem sent unto me saying, Come, let us meet together in one of the villages in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief. 3 And I sent messengers unto them, saying, I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down; why should the work cease, whilst I leave it, and come down to you? 4 And they sent unto me four times after this sort; and I answered them after the same manner.

5 Then sent Sanballat his servant unto me in like manner the fifth time with an open letter in his hand, 6 where was written, It is reported among the nations, and Gashmu with it, that thou and the Jews think to rebel; for which cause thou art building the wall: and thou wouldest be their king, according to these words. 7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at

Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us take counsel together. 8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou feignest them out of thine own heart. 9 For they all would have made us afraid, saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. But now, O God, strengthen thou my hands.

10 And I went unto the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah the son of Mehetabel, who was shut up; and he said, Let us meet together in the house of God, within the temple, and let us shut the doors of the temple: for they will come to slay thee; yea, in the night will they come to slay thee. 11 And I said, Should such a man as I flee? and who is there, that, being such as I, would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in. 12 And I discerned, and, lo, God had not sent him; but he pronounced this prophecy against me: and Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him.

Golden Text. “The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?”—Isa. 27:1.

Time. B. C. 444.

Place. Jerusalem and vicinity.

Introduction. Read Nehemiah 5 and 6. Nehemiah, a young Jew who went from Babylonia to Jerusalem and who became governor of Judea, was a master in overcoming difficulties. In our last lesson we saw how he succeeded in building up the walls. Today we see him overcoming the enemies who were insistent in opposing the Jews in establishing their home and their worship. Neh. 5:1-19 reveals the hardships inflicted on the poorer people by the nobles and richer class. High taxes, lack of employment and high prices made the situation almost unbearable. Homes were mortgaged and much of the property passed into the hands of the moneyed class. Frequently children were sold into slavery. Hungry men threatened to surrender the city to their enemies if food were not given. It was now the business of Nehemiah to straighten out the tangled web. He had to deal principally with the wealthy class, for their actions had proved the greatest hindrance to the progress of the work. He led them to repentance and restitution.

Explanatory. 1—Sanballat, one of the bitterest Samaritan leaders against the Jews. He was he who mocked the Jews when building the walls. Tobiah, an Ammonite living across the Jordan, northeast of Jerusalem. Geshem, the chief of an Arabian tribe of the desert, who lived by plundering communities. All of these hated the Jews, because their teaching interfered with their business. 2—Come, let us meet together—in the plain of Ono. These delegates would indicate that they would discuss conditions on friendly terms. But this was only a subterfuge. The purpose was to do harm to Nehemiah and his people. Gates had not been placed in the city. There were openings in the walls. He was not yet ready to withstand the defense without the use of strong men. 3—“I am doing a great work, so I can't come down.” What a reply. Here is a man who had no time to quarrel nor to fight; he was keeping busy. To him it was of more importance to do his work. The defenses were not completed. There duty called him. To Nehemiah there was no dispute to settle. 4—They sent unto him four times. His enemies were insistent, but the great leader was positive and firm in his reply. 5-6—Then sent Sanballat his servant. The fifth time an attempt was made to draw Nehemiah away from duty. This time an open letter was carried, one that was unsealed. This would be regarded as a public insult. It contained a charge of treason against the Persian government, stating that Nehemiah and the Jews were getting ready to rebel, that this was the purpose of the building of the wall. 7—Come now therefore and let us take counsel together. Because it had been announced that prophets had been appointed to preach in Jerusalem, and that Nehemiah was king. Nehemiah's enemies would now attempt to appear to be his friends and to come to the rescue, to assist him against the Persians, who would be incensed at this rebellion. 8—There are no such things done as thou sayest. Nehemiah knew these liars. When one plan failed, another had been attempted, but he was undaunted by their threats and their deception. 9—For they all would have made us afraid. By trying to secure the enmity of Artaxerxes in leading him to believe that a rebellion was on. The ultimate purpose was to weaken the work of the Jews. But God strengthen thou my hands. Nehemiah's prayer was that greater strength might be theirs. At this very time when the enemy was expecting weakness. 10—*Afterward I came into the house of Shemaiah * * * who was shut up.* He was probably a priest who had secreted himself to be safe in case of an attack. Nehemiah went to him for consultation. The people were being weakened by fear that had come upon them. *Let us meet together * * * within the temple.* Shemaiah would take Nehemiah where only priests had a right to go. His purpose seemingly was the safety of the governor. 11—And I said, "Should such a man as I flee?" Nehemiah was indignant at the request of Shemaiah. He had been intrusted with God's work. He would not stoop to hide away in the temple to save his life. I will not go in. What positiveness. No man has shown more backbone in our study for the past months than Nehemiah. 12—And I discerned. He learned that this Shemaiah was not a God-sent man, but a tool in the hands of Tobiah and Sanballat, who came in the guise of a priest and a prophet that he might entrap him. From verse 13 we learn he was hired to fill Nehemiah with fear and cause him to sin that they might have an evil report against him. Verse 15 says, "So the wall was finished in fifty-two days."

Comments on the Lesson

There are no grander characters on the pages of Old Testament history than Nehemiah. He was the kind of a man we love to meet. His life is an inspiration to men today who have to do the hard things, who must overcome opposition, work under difficulties, withstand the reproach of enemies and watch for the trap of their adversaries. He was young, honorable, possessed some wealth, a magnificent ruler, in full sympathy with the humblest and poorest of his people, had dignity sufficient to meet the highest of the kingdom, was not afraid to denounce men face to face for their sin and oppression, had an eye like an eagle, could look through the very plots and subterfuge of enemies who came in the guise of friends. He never quarreled nor quibbled over trivial matters, but had one high purpose and kept to that. With him it could be said, "What I have written I have written." When he spoke, nothing else was to be said. When he took a position, there he stood like Gibraltar. Withal, he was tactful and kind. He prayed and he worked. He planned and led others to work. He took up the cause of suffering people and by his own life and example, his earnestness, positiveness and straight-forward manner of speech this young man led the nobles and the wealthy class to give back the lands, the fields and vineyards and the olive yards, the houses and a hundredth part of the money and of the grain and of the new wine and of the oil which they had exacted from the people. Nehemiah teaches us many things. Among the lessons let us note the following: Keep to the main task; attend to the duty that lies nearest at hand; do not leave a big job to go down to the plains of Ono to fight. A man weakens his work and his influence by stopping to quarrel. People that have heavy tasks have no time to quarrel. Never come down from a great task, for when you do your work ceases. Trust in God and do the right and you will never know failure. Such men may temporarily be defeated, but they never fail. A strong leader like Nehemiah inspires his people to follow. Nehemiah not only gave of his influence and his time, but of his substance. His heart and soul and pocket-book were in his work. Read carefully the entire fifth chapter. Here is a man who would not stoop to a small thing, no, not even to save his life. The character of the man is shown when he said, "I will not go in." O! for positive men at all times. Here is a man who not only watched the work, but prayed as well. He led others to sacrifice by his own sacrificing. He taught that men who made a profession of religion should be religious. He was no stage actor.

LESSON 3—DECEMBER 17.

"EZRA TEACHES THE LAW."—NEH. 8:1-12.

Print verses 1-12. Commit verses 2, 3.

And all the people gathered themselves together as one man into the broad place that was before the water gate; and they said unto Ezra the scribe to bring the book of the law of Moses, which Jehovah had commanded to Israel. 2 And Ezra the priest brought the law before the assembly, both men and women, all that could hear with understanding, upon the first day of the seventh month. 3 And he read therein before the broad place that was before the water gate from early morning until mid-day in the presence of the men and the women, and of those that could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law. 4 And Ezra the priest stood upon a pulpit of wood, which he had made for the purpose; and beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Bani, and Uriah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchijah, and Hashum, and Hashbaddanah, Zechariah, and Meshullam. 5 And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people (for he was above all the people); and when he opened it, all the people stood up. 6 And Ezra blessed Jehovah, the great God; and all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with lifting up of their hands: and they bowed their heads, and worshipped Jehovah with their faces to the ground. 7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodiah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law: and the people stood in their place. 8 And they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctly; and they gave the sense, so that they understood the reading.

9 And Nehemiah, who was the governor, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is holy unto Jehovah your God; mourn not, nor weep. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law. 10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, and drink the sweet, and send portions unto him for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord; neither be ye grieved; for the joy of Jehovah is your strength. 11 So the Levites stilled all the people, saying, Hold your peace, for the day is holy; neither be ye grieved. 12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

Golden Text. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul."—Psa. 19:7.

Time. The first day of the seventh month, B. C. 444, one week after the completion of the walls, in our last lesson.

Place. Jerusalem.

Introduction. Read Nehemiah, chapters 7 and 8. The walls had been completed, the city was now secure. By a common task, and having overcome the opposition, the people were stronger. The work so far had only been preparatory. "The problem now was to restore the nation to its place in the kingdom of God." To teach the people to live right by word and deed to uphold the religion of Jehovah and prepare the world for the coming of the Son of God was the task before them. They rested a week from the task of building the wall, and with the blowing of trumpets and horns a civil New Year's Day ushered in. Through the day, from morning till night, the trumpets blew.

Explanatory. 1—And all the people gathered. The building was ready, the city secure within its walls, now came the worship. They met in the public square, lying south of the temple area. All were there, old and young. And they spake unto Ezra, the scribe. We have heard nothing from Ezra for thirteen years. He may have returned to Babylonia and continued his studies and now had returned to Jerusalem at the time he was needed. The people were anxious to hear, they were hungering for knowledge and for righteousness. And Ezra, the priest, brought the law. Ezra had codified the law. The law and the history of Israel had been scattered in separate books. Ezra had brought them together. The people knew him and knew the work which he had done. They appealed to the right source. 3—And he read therein. This was expository preaching. He read and explained. It is not a sermonette, for he read from morning until mid-day. And the ears of all the people were attentive. Good listeners make good preachers. Attention shows interest, and these people were interested. They desired to know. 4—And beside him stood. A wooden pulpit had been constructed, that the speaker might stand above the people, and give him, to give dignity to the occasion, stood some of the leading people of the nation.

5—*And Ezra opened the book * * * all the people stood up.* This was reverence and respect for the Word. We need it today in our religious worship. 6—And Ezra blessed the Lord. Gave him thanks. And all the people answered, "Amen." Amen means, "So it be." And they bowed their heads. Another act of reverence. This was genuine worship, no act of pretending here. 7—Caused the people to understand the law. The men mentioned in verse 7 were also teachers. It would seem the people were divided into groups, each group or class having a teacher. The law was so explained that the people understood it. 8—So they read in the book, in the law of God, distinctively. They interpreted, made it plain and pronounced correctly. And they gave sense. Explained obscure words. Made thorough explanation of the meaning of the Scripture. 9—And all the people wept when they heard the words of the law. They were convicted of sin. They had stood beside the perfect standard and they saw how imperfect they were. Prophecy had been made, and they had now seen some of its fulfillment. They believed now as never before. The history of their nation and the gathering of the fruits from the seed that had been sown had passed in review before them. 10—*Go your way, eat * * * and drink * * * and send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared.* They were taught this was a holy day, not a time for mourning nor fasting, but for rejoicing and eating. They also express their joy and manifest their true religion by helping others. To give unto the needy was not only an evidence of their genuineness, but it was also one of the means of increasing their joy. 11—So the Levites stilled all the people. The weeping ceased, the repentance had reached the end sought—a changed life. Grief gave way to joy. 12—They had understood the words that were declared unto them. Having understood the teaching of the Word had brought about repentance, which had brought about a changed life. They saw the world from a different angle. The path of duty lay before them. They now arose to eat and to drink, and they sent portions.

Comments on the Lesson

This was a great religious gathering. Several things conspired to make it great—the occasion, the place, the time, the people, the preachers and the teachers, and the lesson taught. Many of these had never heard the law of Jehovah before. For some, it had been so long since they had heard it that they had forgotten it. There was appreciation on the part of the people for the opportunity of hearing. People who have good churches and can hear the Word of God taught every week, often fail to appreciate the blessing that is theirs. Many a person detained for weeks and months with illness, or one who has moved into a community where there is no church, often thinks of opportunities that were neglected and blessings that were unappreciated. The people were reverent and were in a worshipful spirit. When the Book was opened they all arose. What a fine sight that must have been. How different we find it among many of the churches today. No, when the Book is opened, ministers sometimes have to wait for the people to give attention, and even rap for silence, and while God's Word is being read how often we hear the hum of conversation through the building. One of the things lacking in much of the worship of today is reverence and sincerity. "And all the people answered, 'Amen, Amen,' with the lifting up of their hands." What an inspiration and what encouragement it must have been to the speaker. Why not today in all of our churches, when a prayer is offered, have everybody say "Amen," as well as the one who is leading the prayer? After all the one who is uttering a public prayer should not be the only one praying, but all should be uniting with him in the petition and the thanksgiving to God. The leaders, men of the nation, men whom the people respected, stood with the preacher on the pulpit. In some churches it is customary for the elders of the church to sit on the pulpit with the minister to assist him in the opening and closing worship. Why should it not be so? This was a Bible School, for the people were divided into classes, and over each class or group there was a teacher, who caused them to understand the law. How important it is that the Word of God should be read distinctly to an audience. Every man should read carefully the Scripture before he reads it to an audience, take time to pronounce his words carefully, to articulate distinctly and give sense to the reading? A splendid habit to form is that of reading the Word of God aloud. The proper teaching of the Word to attentive minds will always bring about repentance, which worketh Godly sorrow. The fruits of repentance is manifest in a changed life. The life of the Christian is not to be one of gloom and sadness, but of joy and happiness. It will also manifest itself in doing the very things that people did in ministering to those in need. To the Christian today his greatest blessing comes not in receiving, but in giving, for "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Questions for Class Use

How long after the building of the walls before the great worship, at which the law was read? Who was Ezra? What do we know of Ezra previous to this meeting? Why were the people anxious to hear the law? Describe the gathering. What acts of theirs indicated their reverence? In what ways do many worshippers show their irreverence?

How correct them? What are some of the ill effects of irreverence in worship? What effect did the teaching have upon the people? What is true repentance? Are and laughter harmonious in religion? When should the Christian rejoice? When? What is a good test of genuine repentance?

LESSON 4—DECEMBER 24.

MALACHI REBUKING AND ENCOURAGING JUDAH."—MAL. 3:1; 4:3.

Christmas Lesson.

Print 3:7-18. Commit 3:16, 17. Read Mal. and Neh. 13.

From the days of your fathers ye have turned aside from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith Jehovah of hosts. But ye say, Wherein shall we return? 8 Will a man rob God? yet ye rob me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. 9 Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob me, even the whole nation. 10 Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now hereafter, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open unto you the windows of heaven, and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. 11 And I will make the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your wine cast its fruit before time in the field, saith Jehovah of hosts. 12 And all nations shall call you happy; for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith Jehovah of hosts.

13 Your words have been stout against me, saith Jehovah. Yet ye say, What have we spoken against thee? 14 Ye have said, It is vain to serve God; and what profit is it that we have kept his charge, and that we have walked mournfully before Jehovah of hosts? 15 and now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are built up; yea, they tempt God, and escape.

16 Then they that feared Jehovah spake one with another; and Jehovah hearkened, and heard, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared Jehovah, and that thought upon his name. 17 And they shall be mine, saith Jehovah of hosts, even mine own possession, in the day that I make; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. 18 Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not.

Golden Texts: 1. "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts."—Mal. 3:7.

2. "Unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Savior, which is Christ, the first-born."—Luke 2:11.

Time. Uncertain, some time during the age of Ezra and Nehemiah. Between 458 and 430 B. C.

Place. Jerusalem and vicinity.

Introduction. Malachi was a prophet of God. He was a plain-spoken preacher. His discourses are on the Socratic manner, that of question and answer. Read the last chapter of Nehemiah. You will see that the sins and evils which Nehemiah encountered were the same as those which Malachi denounced. The glory of the Kingdom of God lay in the future, not in the past. Malachi speaks of the coming of the Messiah. A messenger is sent before him, who will prepare the way for him. His coming and his work are predicted in the first six verses of this chapter, which introduces our lesson today.

Explanatory. 7—Ye are gone away from mine ordinances. The purpose of the worship had been to bring the people nearer to God. From the days of their fathers, the people worship and other religious duties had been neglected. Return unto me. To God's will, to his service, to obedience to his laws. Wherein shall we return? Malachi puts the question in their mouths. They do not seem to know where they have gone, nor how far they have gone. It is even doubtful if they feel they have gone away from God. 8—Will a man rob God? They had done so. This is the way in which Malachi answers their questions. It shows them up in the true light. Wherein have we robbed thee? Unconscious of their transgression, they do not understand yet how they have robbed God. In tithes and offerings. These sustained the worship. They withdrew their support and this hindered the worship. 9—Ye are cursed with a curse. They were complaining of their troubles. Malachi would point out to them that these were the result of having robbed God. It never pays to withhold from God. The tithes were a tenth part of their income, and an increase of property and products. 10—Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse. The chambers were on three sides of the temple. These were empty. And prove me. They were poor. This worked for them a temporary hardship, but God asks to put them to the test, to see if their giving will not bring to them rich results. If I will not open the windows of heaven. A poetical expression, indicating the source of blessings.

and the amount of the same. Blessings will be showered as copiously as the rain. 11-12—And I will rebuke. A picture here of protection; happiness will reign because of plenty. The Lord's blessings will be upon them all, a result of obedience. 13—Ye have said, "What have we spoken against the Lord?" They had complained that God had failed to keep his promise. They failed to see any laxity on their part. They were unaware that their disobedience had brought about existing conditions. Ye say, "What have we spoken against the Lord?" They did not realize how outspoken they had been against God. 14—Ye have said, "It is vain to serve God." Of what profit is it that we have kept his ordinances? They were laying all the blame on God. We have walked mournfully. Their worship was sin in an outward form. It was shallow. At heart there was neither love nor obedience. They thought the blessings of God should come as a result of outward appearance. A man's heart is not right, his religion is all wrong. 15—Now we call the proud happy. As they looked around, it appeared to them as though the people of the world were the richest and most prosperous. They thought those who defied His laws had less trouble than those who endeavored to be obedient. That is the way it appeared unto the people. The whole difficulty was that they expected the true blessings of God to come upon the people, rendering a half-hearted service. They laid undue emphasis upon form and ceremonies and were not right at heart. 16—Then they that feared the Lord spake one with another. They conferred together, each encouraging the other. Such conferences are helpful in strengthening one's faith and lends encouragement in the dark hours. A book of remembrance was written before him. This is the way in which a man keeps record, hence God was indicating to the people that he would remember every good deed and word. 17—*And they shall be mine * * * when I make up my jewels.* They were precious in his sight. His son that serveth him. God loved them as a father loved his own son, and would do as much, yea more, for them. For "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have eternal life." 18—Then shall ye return. Their eyes will be opened; they would know the genuine from the false. The nearer they walked with God, the better able they would be to discern the righteous from the wicked, and they would see that the prosperity attending the truly righteous is far in excess of the supposed blessings received by the wicked.

Comments on the Lesson

The people of Judah as a whole had departed from Jehovah, and yet did not know it. Many people today think they are religious, when they are not. This is often due to improper teaching or no teaching. Neglect of the study of God's Word, absenting one's self from the house of God, not assembling with God's people, neglectful of prayer, having no part in either worship or any religious service, lifting no hand to help humanity; these things always be indicative of departure from God, and yet people who walk in these paths consider themselves true to Jehovah because their name is found on a church roll. It is so easy to rob God. Judah did not realize this had been done. One cannot prosper in the true sense who robs God. They withheld their gifts from the Lord, arguing that by adding that much more to their store they would be just that much ahead, but the Scriptures explain that when we carry to the storehouse of God we are lending to the Lord. If we carry our bread upon the water it will return to us. Many a man refuses to give to the church for local expenses, to help build a house of worship or to evangelize the world, arguing that he is not able, that he has bought a home and must pay for that. If men could only know that when they give to God's work, God gives back more to them. What we need more than all is greater faith in God and His Word, to believe that he will really do what he has promised to do. "Give and it shall be given unto you." Do men believe that? Then why do they not act accordingly? The one supreme need of the religious world is greater faith. God asks to be proved, that is, let us do what he asks us to and see if he will do what he has promised to do.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Malachi? When did he write? What was the burden of his prophecy? What application can we make of this lesson to the time in which we live? Name some ways in which men rob God today. Do the wicked prosper more than the righteous, considering things from a worldly viewpoint? What were some of the sins of the people to whom Malachi was speaking? What is the reference in the lesson to the coming of the Messiah? Where is God's great patience and love manifest in this lesson?

LESSON 5—DECEMBER 31.

"REVIEW."

Golden Text. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."—I Jno. 1-9.

During the past year we have covered 580 years of history, from the division of the kingdom 982 to the close of Nehemiah's governorship, and to the end of Bible history.

about 400 B. C. This period naturally divides itself into four eras. First, the two streams of the divided kingdom. Second, the single stream of Judah. Third, the exile. Fourth, the return and restoration. The first period extended from 982 to 722, about 260 years. The second period 136 years. From the destruction of Samaria, 722, to the final fall of Jerusalem, 586. Third period seventy years, 605 to 536 and 586 to 516. The fourth period 5, to 400 B. C.

I. Topics for Discussion

To make the lesson helpful, it will be well to discuss various phases of the year's work. Among the many that could be suggested the following are given:

1. The providence of God as shown in this history.
2. The wisdom of the wise men of these periods.
3. The folly of the foolish men of these periods.
4. The leading characteristics of the ten chief men.
5. The sins that were besetting to the people.
6. The patience of Jehovah.
7. The way in which the history of the Jewish people during these periods parallels our experiences today.
8. The blessings that come through the captivity.

II. The Question Method

Another plan would be to have members of the class go through the lessons and prepare 100 leading questions. Let these be given out the Sunday before review and on review let the class divide into two sections and see which side can answer the most questions.

LESSON 1—JANUARY 7, 1912.

"THE BIRTH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST FORETOLD."—LUKE 1:5-23.

There was in the days of Herod, king of Judæa, a certain priest named Zacharias, of the course of Abiah: and he had a wife of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth. 6 And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. 7 And they had no child, because that Elizabeth was barren, and they both were now well stricken in years.

Now it came to pass, while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course, 9 according to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to enter into the temple of the Lord and burn incense. 10 And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the hour of incense. 11 And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of the altar of incense. 12 And Zacharias was troubled when he saw him, and fear fell upon him. 13 But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zacharias; because thy supplication is heard, and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John. 14 And thou shalt have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth. 15 For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and he shall drink no wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Spirit, even from his mother's womb. 16 And many of the children of Israel shall he turn unto the Lord their God. 17 And he shall go before his face in the spirit and power of Elijah, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to walk in the wisdom of the just; to make ready for the Lord a people prepared for him. 18 And Zacharias said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years. 19 And the angel answering said unto him, I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and I was sent to speak unto thee, and to bring thee these good tidings. 20 And behold, thou shalt be silent and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall come to pass, because thou believedst not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season. 21 And the people were waiting for Zacharias, and they marvelled while he tarried in the temple. 22 And when he came out, he could not speak unto them; and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple; and he continued making signs unto them, and remained dumb. 23 And it came to pass, when the days of his ministration were fulfilled, he departed unto his house.

Golden Text. "Without faith it is impossible to please Him."—Heb. 11:6.

Time. B. C. 6. October.

Place. In the temple at Jerusalem.

Introduction. Augustus Cæsar was emperor of Rome. Herod the Great, King of Judea, subject to Rome. Aretus, king of Arabia Petria. This was a time of peace. The Roman empire held sway over most of the known world. The Roman roads and army were valuable in preparing for the coming of the Messiah. The Jews, scattered everywhere, had made known the prophecies to the people, and the Greek language, so universally spoken, was the ideal language in which to hold the truths that Jesus would give.

Explanatory. 5—There was in the days of Herod. This was Herod the Great, founder of the Herodian family and the father of most of the Herods of the New Testament. An Idumean by race, a Jew in religion. Zacharias, a priest of whom nothing known except what is recorded here. The priesthood was divided under David into twenty-four courses, which took turn in serving in the temple. 1 Chron. 24. Each course ministered for one week, beginning with the Sabbath morning service. These priests lived outside Jerusalem. And he had a wife. Being the daughter of Aaron, in the line of the priesthood. Both of John's parents were of priestly rank. Elizabeth, meaning, "God is my oath," or "worship God." 6—And they were both righteous before God. Genuine righteousness, not sham. Blameless. Their walk was blameless. Not perfect, but their purpose was to do right. 7—And they had no child. To have no children was a trial, felt keenly by the women of Israel. 8—While he executed the priest's office. Burnt incense and attended to other duties in the temple. In the order of his course. In his turn. 9—According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was. They determined the work of each priest by lot, as to who should perform different parts of the work. The lot cast laid the duty upon Zacharias at this time to enter into the temple and burn incense. 10—And the whole multitude of the people were praying. The people were praying in the temple courts, while the incense was burnt within, each morning and night. At the hour of incense. Nine o'clock in the morning and three in the afternoon. 11—And there appeared unto him an angel. His name was Gabriel. (Verse 19.) This is the first message of God recorded in the Bible for 400 years, or since the time of Malachi. Standing on the right side of the altar. The place of favor. 12—Was troubled. Agitated, excited. 13—Fear not, Zacharias, because thy supplication is heard. He had undoubtedly prayed for a son and that the kingdom of God might come. Thou shalt call his name John. His wife was to bear a son, and that would be his name, meaning, "the grace of Jehovah." 14-15—Many shall rejoice. Because of this son. He would be great in the sight of the Lord, would be an honor to his parents and perform a great work. He shall drink no wine. He would be a Nazarite. (Numbers 6:1-5.) He shall be filled with the Holy Spirit. To be guided by the spirit's influence. 16—*And many * * * shall turn to the Lord.* They are now in sin; he will call them back by his preaching and lead them to righteousness. 17—And he shall go before his face. Before Jesus, the Savior. In the spirit and power of Elias. From the last of Malachi the Jews believed that Elijah would come as a herald of the Messiah. John was to come in the spirit and power of Elias. 18—Whereby shall I know this? What had been promised to Zacharias seemed the impossible. How could he know that it was true? 19—I am Gabriel. Being an angel of God, Zacharias should believe him. 20—Thou shalt be silent. There being some doubt in the priest's mind, this was taken as a means of convincing him while it was at the same time a punishment for unbelief. 21-22—He could not speak. The words of the angel were verified.

Comments on the Lesson

It means much for a couple to be righteous before God. That is genuine righteousness. When God would have a man go before His Son to herald his coming, he began the education of that son by educating his parents before him. Zacharias was a praying man. He prayed for temporal blessings, but was not forgetful of spiritual blessings as well. While the priest was offering incense on the inside, the people prayed without. There is power in united prayer. The lesson is a striking example of God's interest in the people of this world. Four hundred years of silence have elapsed. God had not spoken to the people and now through his angel, Gabriel, he meets this priest face to face, announces his prayer has been heard and that his wife, though old, shall bear a son, whose name shall be John, that his mission shall be more than that of the ordinary child, that filled with the Holy Spirit, he shall be the forerunner of the Savior and shall turn the people from sin to righteousness. It was difficult for the old priest to believe this, and while not exactly disbelieving, he longed for a sign, that he might know that it was true. And a sign was given in his inability to speak. Men today are like Zacharias; they pray for certain things and yet are sometimes in doubt as to whether God will answer or not. We are told to ask and we shall receive, seek and we shall find, knock and the door will be opened unto us. Two great needs of Christendom today are larger faith and more prayer. There are rich mines at our disposal if we only open our eyes to see them. Faith will give them to us. God cannot use a man of little faith. As our faith, so will it be unto us.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Zacharias? Elizabeth? Gabriel? What was the office of the priest? What is meant by the course of a priest? What is the purpose of offering incense? For what had Zacharias probably been praying? What was his state of mind when told a child would be born unto them? What is meant by the spirit and power of Elias? What is meant by being filled with the Holy Spirit? Does the world have spirit-filled men today? What sign was given Zacharias?

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

The officers, Directors and Secretaries of the Brotherhood wish you one of all 366 Happy Days during 1912. Thank you for the patience that has taken you through the 552 pages of CHRISTIAN MEN during 1911, and bestow from you the same degree of virtue during the year to come. This has been a trying year, 1911—business has not been as brisk as it once was—and yet we are thankful to the Heavenly Father that it has been no worse. Time has lain heavily upon some of our hands, and something has gnawed at our hearts—yes gnawed—there is no better word. Some of us have been worried about business affairs—others have labored with problems of life and with it all we have found time to think about the Church. Isn't it a blessing sometimes that we find time to turn to religion? We have done our best to direct your thoughts in channels that to us appeared promising, and in this we have not been altogether disappointed, and yet as we write these lines, there is a feeling that all our men have not done their best by the Brotherhood Movement. We are not complaining—God forbid that we should ever complain—but we have a craving for the fellowship of 500,000 men and boys of the Christian Church in this great and growing work. We could fill pages with record of letters written, speeches made, and miles traveled by our officers and secretaries, but you busy men don't like figures, and neither do we. The figures will come like the evening of a successful day, and we are prepared to gorge you with statistics of things accomplished, but we think as we feel your pulse that this is not what you desire, so we are just wishing you a plain, every year HAPPY NEW YEAR and adding God's blessing upon you.

Psychology of Bigness

A DAY OF BIG THINGS

Bigness is a relative term. The air is full of "Bigness." "Big Problems." "Big Tasks," "Big Visions," and "Gigantic Undertakings," etcetera, ad infinitum! We have heard about them until we have grown dizzy. We have imagined we saw so much, that many times we actually saw nothing. I am wondering if after all we are quite sane in trying to make the "Problems" and "Tasks" and "Visions" and "Undertakings" appear so big. I wonder if there is not a bit of egotism in it all. Is there not a tinge of self-exultation in magnifying the task so that we who undertake it may seem bigger than we really are.

BIG MEN NEEDED

What is needed is not so much a big vision of a magnified task—not so much a "heroic" courage to undertake a "gigantic" task, but heroic men to undertake mean tasks and common, homely problems. Really big men! Not inflated egotism. The ant is "some pumpkins" when met by a flea, but he becomes "small potatoes" when confronted by an elephant. A common everyday problem is a herculean task when it confronts a flabby-faced, nicey-nicey mollicoddle of the male sex. But that same task fades into insignificance when undertaken by one of God's real men.

The thing that God is doing these days is making bigger men. The solvent of all problems will easily be found when He has grown men commensurate with the demands of the day. Will you submit yourself to His scheme?

CHRIST'S SIMPLE PLAN

Jesus took some fishermen, a politician, and men of the lowliest walks, and just lived with and trained them—watched them grow, until they became the biggest men the world ever seen. Through them He set in motion the machinery that is transforming and redeeming a world. These men shook a continent in their own day, but they did not know that they were doing it, or that they had a big task; they just formed the task that crouched at their feet shrieking its demand for recognition. Pastors, here is the secret of leadership. Train your men to meet the immediate task.

I am fearful that our failure to do this—our disposition to trample beneath our feet the nearby and common task, to be lured on by some spectacular work, that the o'-the-wisp has left so many things undone that we are coming to our senses in the midst of what appears to be a surging sea of insurmountable difficulties. Now that we are getting awake let us be sane. Neither let us be frightened. Our manhood is adequate for our problems when once we catch the true life purpose. What have we neglected and where shall we begin:

NEGLIGENT? YES!!!

First: We have neglected Bible study. Let us begin it now and where we are. There never was a better time nor place. Let us begin first with ourselves, then enlarge our study circle to the society next to us. In this maze of perplexity let us work out our own little circle. Some other fellow is doing the same thing just a little way beyond us. Our circle is enlarging and so is his. Before long our circles meet, then coincide and a community of Bible study is formed.

PURE MEN WANTED

Second: We have neglected social service. We have forgotten heed Jesus' command: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God;" and have thought of self-interest first. Result: Clashings, bickerings, suspicions, divisions, wars. Now let us begin just where we are. First gdom of God first in your own when be aggressive in spreading determination to the hearts about men will listen to the message you bring. It calls for the most heroic the world has ever known to make effective without first considering its effect upon fellow men, and its effect on the ultimate purposes of God. But service also makes gigantic church and world leaders.

Third: We have neglected prayer. We have been so busy:—too “fool” with altar fires. They come out. The world is chilly. We are crying because they are lonely. The incense of altars has a strong and foreign odor to the seething world about us. Only twenty per cent of men in the United States belong to church and maybe one-half of that per cent are praying men—men intimate enough with God to lay themselves before Him and take Him as into their banking business, their manufacturing business, their mines, their stores, their farms, their homes, their getting married, their rearing children, their everyday aggravating tasks. Are you one of these men? If so, good. Then begin work of reducing confusion to order by lighting an altar and getting the soul of you to kneel there with you. Support church’s prayer services. Others do the same, and some day you will find yourself rubbing shoulders with a host that cease not to cry; “Holy, holy the Lord God Almighty.”

Fourth: We have neglected the general support of the church in a practical way. We have forgotten that the Church was His church and that the gates of Hell should not prevail against it. We have tried to make it our church. Thus have we dethroned Christ and cast out the soul of the church. Then we lost respect for the shell without the kernel—for the body without a life—for a corpse that would neither walk nor wither. Oh, men! Let us re-enthroned the Son of Man—the Christ of God in our own little corner. Let us not forget about the Christless world but also get mightily concerned about our Christless ward. A Christ-filled Brotherhood of two can be the beginning of a Christ-filled Brotherhood of fifty—of a Christ-filled church—of a Christ-filled ward—of a Christ-filled city, a state, a nation. This will cost life; it will cost money; it will cost time. Pay the price. It is the best investment you will ever make.

The solution of the Kingdom problem is so simple as to have slipped our notice. In our search for the spectacular we did not notice that the solution lay at our very feet. God has so arranged that we cannot make a selfish move without trampling down His own barriers to confusion—without crucifying afresh the Son of God and putting Him to an open shame. But it is mighty lonely to work without the beat of drum or blast of trumpet. It is hard to die alone with no hand to caress, no heart to weep, no soul to sympathize. Elevate us to an eminence where men can see and applaud and we will die for our cause; but put us down in some dark corner where there is nothing or nobody but just men—common, everyday men—who are tired and worn and weary, so goaded by necessity and driven by circumstances that they have neither time nor disposition to applaud, and we fail to hold out. We have not the spiritual reserve force to keep us going. Oh, men! Men!! Herein is the demand for brotherhood! Communion in suffering!

A joining hands in the determination to follow the scarlet thread through the warp of life! This is what we mean by saying God is trying to make us bigger men—men who are big enough to more than fill our little community niche—who have clear enough vision and sufficient spiritual reserve force to keep us busy when the applause has died, to keep us hoping when hopes are blasted.

Cranking the Machine

The Brotherhood Movement is starting out upon its fourth glad year. The Officers and Directors and even the Secretaries are happy over it. Isn't it glorious that our movement has seen so much of life during these three years? We have every reason for rejoicing. First, we have nearly two hundred affiliated Brotherhoods upon our records here in Kansas City, besides more than five hundred groups of men, Brotherhoods, Bible Classes, Leagues and Clubs, have come into being, or have been quickened by this movement. These will later come into full fellowship, the most of them, if the proper nurture is given by those directing the local energies, and we here in the National Office discover the food that will prove appealing and nourishing. It's queer about our Brotherhoods. One group of men go in strong for Bible study—(and they should all go in for that). Another seeks to become proficient in Social Service. Still a third group remembers the boys of the church who will be the men of the future, and takes care of the boys, young and old, but not so many do this. Others go in for Missions, and Benevolences, but every subject persistently pursued leads out upon the high road, and you will discover that it takes the whole round program of Service, Bible Study, Boys' Work, Missions, Benevolences, and Evangelism, to a well rounded, healthy group of men. Our Pastors have been good to the Brotherhood Movement during the year. Say, men, but we ought to starve them, and hold up their hands from the mighty work they are trying, oh, to do. Some of our ministers are afraid to undertake the Brotherhood work for fear you men will lay down in the process. We know this is just the way of them feel about it, for be it to their credit, they sometimes unburden their hearts to us in the many letters that come to us. Hundreds of good men are in the churches where they minister, and how the hearts of the gospel emissaries would respond to an offer from some of you good men in putting a Brotherhood or a Bible Class upon its feet in your church. This is the day of big things, as Mr. Shellene has aptly said in the editorial just preceding. Big men are wanted in the church today as never before. We sit in our office in Kansas City and have a spare oceans of good reading for you and our stenographers can and do fill reams of good paper in answering queries that are constantly put at us, this doesn't make a Brotherhood movement, not a bit of it. It takes more pens and printers' ink, and type and secretaries and speeches, and a lot of humor to make a Brotherhood movement. We have spent three of the best years of our lives, or the lives of any other men alive today, in this, but we are far from the goal of achievement. As you will see from page to page of this issue you will see that we have attempted to put before you the brains of some of our best men who are laboring with us in painting a picture of ideal conditions and trying to bring them about. Brethren, if we have failed to hit the bull's eye, tell us the matter with our powder.

The Problem of the Christian Ministry

BY C. M. SHARPE.

Dean Missouri Bible College

PROBLEM
EL
The problem of the Christian ministry, not the problem the ministry face and solve, is the problem of the Church in providing itself with ministry numerically and dynamically to the demands of these times. The problem of recruiting and training men who are to lead the moral religious forces in the modern con- form in which the matter has ap- to the average thinker is that of striking numbers of young men who entering the ministry. From the religious bodies there goes up the the theological seminaries are asserted. Hundreds of churches out pastors. Whole countries sions are without one resident te There is a fearful dearth of h's, good, bad or indifferent. is point of view the demand is ce men, and the thing to do is to rogh the land and beat the bushes ly for ministerial possibilities.

PROVIDED
e, namely, that what we need is not nisters but fewer churches. In Oober number of the Atlantic h. George Parkin Atwater has a ot article entitled, "The Ministry ve crowded Profession." He says tting the country over, there is iister to every one thousand per- xcluding the Roman Catholics, ths who are absolutely impervious rt of Christian effort (one won- u who these latter persons are), i one minister to every five hun- o population. This, he thinks, is too many. "If the minister keeps to his proper duty and works under proper conditions he may serve much larger groups of people." "But competition forces him into activities aside from his proper work. He is forced to become an organizer, collector, promoter of catch-penny devices, and a prodder of the indifferent. Thus his proper functions lose their force and comprehensiveness." "The ministry is overcrowded because the land is overchurched."

From this statement of what he conceives to be the most significant facts in the case, he proceeds to the remedies, namely, the reunion of the churches, and the more thorough equipment of the ministry. The first problem, he thinks, should claim first attention, but the manner in which he conceives the solution does not offer very great hope of speedy relief. "Reunion will come when it is realized that the barriers erected are irrational only when the divine faith and order are fully apprehended." "So perverse is human nature, however, that it is unwilling to accede to Scriptural, Apostolical and Primitive conditions and essentials so long as the concession seems to strengthen or vindicate the position of any one Church. Reunion would be far easier if the divine faith and order, fully apprehended, were found to be possessed by no one so that all would have to make equal concessions. If we are really concerned about the ministerial supply we should solve this problem first."

QUALITY NEEDED

But who is to solve this problem, and in what field does the solution lie? If it lies in the field of more thorough historical and Biblical study, then we need a ministry more adequately trained to research and to critical understanding of the things involved in essential Christianity. The discovery of the basis of faith and practice which is to reconcile opposing viewpoints will not be the achievement of the ignorant, or the happy chance of the mere zealot. It calls for the finest minds and largest hearts. Look at the problem in whatever way we will, one thing is apparent constantly. We need and must have a ministry of superior intellectual and scholarly equipment. The emphasis must be upon quality rather than quantity. The consecration, the earnestness, the moral character and all that, are assumed; but granted these, the special training of the minister must include the knowledge that is of most worth, and a clear conception of the practical task that confronts him in this age. If we can raise up a few men of the highest type and efficiency in this crisis of the Church, for it is nothing less than a crisis, we shall ultimately raise up all that are needed. Whereas, if we shall attempt to raise up a great multitude of men by fife and drum with little rigor of selection, we shall indeed get the mob but it will lose the battle and the Church will be worse off in the issue. Our first task in the intelligent discussion of this question will be to inquire into the training necessary for the minister who is to lead the Church in these times, and then to consider what sort of men can take this training.

THE NATURE OF THE CALLING

What then is the ideal of the Christian ministry, and what is the training necessary to realize it? Let us premise this definition of the minister's calling. He is the special exponent of Christianity in the society in which he moves. It is his business to give a correct account of what Christianity is, and what it requires in the specific conditions of a given time and place. What is essential or helpful in the teaching and applying of Christian truth is of special concern to the minister, whether it be organization, practices of worship, literature, art or what not. He is the teacher of Christian truth and the inspirer of life in accordance therewith. In his measure he is called to do the work of the Master Himself.

TWO LINES OF TRAINING

All this means that there are two lines of training particularly necessary for the minister. First, the training is to put him in possession of the message. He must know what Christianity is. He must know it intimately and fully, not merely as something expected, though this is first and fundamental, as something understood in its reality and power. It is something that he brings to others by means of "thoughts that glow and words that burn." He can do only as he knows it in its distinctive features, and abounding excellencies. This means the patient, careful study of the classic literature of faith. The Bible and particularly the New Testament are his invaluable indispensable text-books. Here and there will he find the truth he is to teach. But this is a study most exact in its nature. While enough truth lies upon the very surface of the Scriptures to guide even the unlearned in the way of salvation, yet for the culture and enrichment of the Church, for its elevation in the higher ranges of Christian thought and life, the most painstaking and persistent study with all the best scholarship is required. It is an ancient literature, and to know the Scriptures should mean for the minister must first know what they meant to the people to whom they were first addressed. A mere surface reading apart from accurate knowledge of the times and stances and questions that called for such discussions or accounts will in many instances be as likely to convey a wrong conception as a right one. To a first hand interpreter of Christianity in his own generation, the minister must therefore be a first hand interpreter of every diverse and difficult body of ancient literature—the Bible.

But this is only a beginning. A perfect understanding of what the books of Scripture meant to the people of their own times would qualify a minister to speak to Jews and Greeks of those ages, and not many of them survive to the present day. He must translate all that ancient material into the language and thought of this age, and he finds today the same general conditions and problems that called for the principles enforced in the Scriptures. He must find parallels and analogies between those ancient situations and problems, and those that are facing the minds of men today. This means that the minister must know his times and the people, and the factors as it is now being lived. Sometimes no doubt we get tired of hearing about the modern age. We grow weary of the constant passion for the new and the old. We feel like Charles Lamb when someone suggested that he write something a little more in the taste of the ancients. "Hang the Age," said he, "I'll write about antiquity." So some feel about their own age.

The time has come when the curriculum of ministerial studies must be greatly modified. A much larger portion of time must be given to the consideration of the great human interests of society, and less to the investigation of minute points of exegesis and tracing of minute ramifications of doctrine. In the study of Christian history the great human types, and the permanent significance of their experience must be made to stand forth, instead of consuming time in the exact representation of the dead systems that they produced. All theological studies must be made and can be greatly condensed, and they will gain tremendously in vitality and interest by the process.

The age in which we live is democratic. Ecclesiasticisms and religious tyrannies of every sort are drawing to an end. Popular education means that the rank and file of the people are going to do their own thinking in religion as elsewhere. The voice of authority can be only that of truth and life. The Christian prophet must speak not with an ancient and foreign accent but to every man in his own tongue. The mind of our age is seething with the great ethical problems that relate to practical living in the intricate social relationship of men. The helpful, intelligent and sympathetic application to these problems, of the gospel of the Divine Fatherhood and Human Brotherhood, is the supreme task of the Christian ministry today. This means that the minister must be an earnest and accurate student of contemporary life, political, industrial, educational and social as well as religious. At last we are learning as we never have learned before that religion is all bound up with the diverse interests of life. It is not a thing to itself.

This does not mean that the minister must become a specialist in the various social sciences. It would be impossible. He is not to preach Economics, Political Economy, and Social Ethics as such; but he is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ in relation to the facts with which these sciences deal. He cannot do so without some clear and comprehensive knowledge of the sciences themselves, as well as a most thorough knowledge of the ethical implications of the gospel.

ADVANCED TRAINING Now it is not every young man or woman who can or will take the training that is indicated in the preceding outline. It means six or seven years beyond the high school course. It is not every young man that should be encouraged to undertake it.

Indeed, the manifestly unfit should be persuaded against undertaking it. But, and this is the point we should emphasize in the present emergency, there are multitudes of young men and women of the right material upon whom the Church should lay hold for this high calling. If the matter were properly presented to them by influential ministers and members of the Church they would give it serious consideration. If the official board of a given Church were to regard it as one of its duties to look out from among the youth of the congregation each two or three years the most capable and consecrated, and if they were to make it a matter of prayer and counsel, definite and fruitful results would be almost sure to follow. It is a notorious fact that few Christian parents in these days are willing for their sons to consider the ministry as a calling. This can be overcome only by the Church, in its social, congregational capacity, in some way bringing its influence to bear. There is no better way or more effectual than has just been indicated. The distinction that would be conferred by the fact that the leading men and women of the Church had recognized a certain youth as having the exceptional qualities and abilities that are required in the making of a minister of the highest type, would have a great influence upon the youth himself and upon his parents. The raising up of a ministry and the provision for its adequate training is the business of the Church and it must give itself more intelligent and definitely to it than it has ever. Better material and better training these are the two watchwords that should be sounded.

The problem of the reunion of Churches will be solved by way of sending and training such a ministry. A sort of curriculum that has been suggested, while emphasizing loyalty to the gospel of Jesus Christ, will place stress upon the quibbles and abstract theories that have been so fruitful of division in the past. The great humanitarianism to which the principle of human brotherhood points us in these days will, in any case, they will require, the speculative elements of a bygone day to disappear like dead leaves before the autumn winds.

Books and studies even of the most practical sort cannot do everything for the young minister. He will be educated finally by the task itself, in the actual doing. But his college training cannot give him a tremendous amount of time and energy by directing him from the beginning in the right way. It will enable him to do more in ten years than he could do probably in twenty without it. Moreover, it will extend the period of his usefulness in the ministry to twenty-five or thirty-five years, whereas otherwise his course will probably be over in ten or fifteen years so far as real service is concerned.

THE REASON WHY A great deal is said with regard to the obstacles that deter young men from entering the ministry. Theories are as numerous as the explanations of the high cost of living. It is said that our age is commercial, materialistic, and luxury loving. The ministry does not offer an economic reward adequate to the sustenance of service.

Again, it is urged that there are too many other professions in which there are opportunities for large altruistic service, while at the same time there is greater independence and greater material compensation. Business, law, medicine, politics, and teaching are all without an ideal element now that was formerly absent. We no longer divide life up into the sacred and secular. We have such conspicuous examples and many of them of business men who are as much preachers as they are businessmen, and who by very reason of the fact that they are business men bear the more eloquent testimony to the truth of their religion. A preacher's testimony is discounted because it is his business to speak for religion. Yet now we are hearing that this is an age of religious unrest. There is so much questioning with regard to the doctrines of Faith. Science and criticism have attacked very seriously the time-honored teachings that have been held regarding the Bible and the Church. Young men are beginning to become advocates of a fixedness of belief, of which they are not so much sure in the present state of doubt.

These causes are no doubt operative, the first two more than the last one. Science and others have always been influential, and they will always be so. But they are not sufficient now, and have not been sufficient to prevent the high calling of young men from giving themselves to Jesus Christ in special service as preachers, when his call is made known clearly with its true emphasis. There are other vocations in which men may also render high service. We should encourage in the deepening spirit of consecration in the other professions, and this will provoke the ministry to more hearty effort. Every rightful vocation may be a truly Christian one. Nevertheless this does not change the truth of the fact that the gospel ministry has been and must ever be the pioneering force and agency in a Christian civilization. The Christian ideal is such that someone must ever be breaking new ground and sowing the seed for new harvests. This is the business of the Christian ministry and the time will never come when there will not be a call for the noblest, strongest and most self-denying believers to give themselves to this work regardless of any other consideration except that the work must be done.

The ministry can make and ought to make no effective appeal to the young man who wants to be rich. A young man who had great possessions, turned away from Jesus sorrowful; and today, young men who put any material consideration first would better not enlist in the ministry at all, for disappointment is sure. It will be better to turn away before enlisting than afterward and perhaps at some crucial time when desertion might do vast harm.

But if a young man is a Christian he is debarred from making anything less than the Kingdom of God his main object. Equally with the minister he must heed the call—"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." For every Christian the question must be, "How can I best promote the interests of the cause of Jesus Christ?" What calling will afford me the best opportunities for service? That calling will be his ministry.

There is no success anywhere without concentration and persistent industry. What vocation will best justify the effort that is necessary to win success in it, is the question to consider. Every man should choose his calling with a higher end in view than merely to make a living, namely, to make a life.

The large rewards both in material compensation and social influence will always go to the men of most exceptional abilities, best equipment, and greatest energy. Everywhere it is the quality man who is in demand. In the ministry as elsewhere some men are born great, while others achieve greatness. None have it thrust upon them. As the scale of quality rises the support will become better. The abler the minister the more competition there will be for his services. "To him that hath shall be given, and from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

THE MATTER OF SALARIES

Adequate support of the ministry is a great and vital matter for the Church itself to consider, not merely for the sake of the minister, but for the very life of the Church. No church can prosper and do a vital work when it pays its pastor a salary far below its ability or his needs. The minister is showing neither heroism nor sense when he remains with a people that does this. He is encouraging carelessness and selfishness. Let the minister suffer and if need be die with a people that is doing its best; but from a community that systematically starves him let him haste to depart, shaking off the dust from his feet as a testimony against it.

There is, however, much reason to believe that failure in the support of the minister is, in most instances, due rather to the lack of efficiency and appeal upon his part than to inability upon the part of the people. There never was a time when the people were more willing to pay for what they want or were more able to do so. The men who are leaving the ministry for lack of support are those who are failing to supply the spiritual needs of the people, and to exercise spiritual leadership. They do not know how to make their message vital and real. Nine times out of ten it will be found that the ministers who fail of support are those whose preparation has been inadequate, or who are resting upon past preparation. They never learn to be real students either of books or of life. They do not keep step with the life and thought of the times. They do not read the new books that are constantly appearing. Perhaps they think these new books are superfluous or even harmful. What if this were true? They are being read by thousands. They are creating the intellectual and ethical atmosphere. How are we to combat error if we do not know the error, and the forms in which it is appearing? Our sermons become vague, and remote from life, albeit they may be intensely spiritual in that they contain many texts of much orthodox exhortation. We cannot win a battle by refusing to know what is going on in the world. The people are not going to pay for being lulled to sleep. They can sleep at home. We can understand the little girl who came home and said concerning the preacher just sent from the conference, "He's a good enough preacher, I like him, but I wish they had sent us one a little higher geared."

THE SOLUTION There are certain immediate, practical measures to be taken in overcoming the shortage of the right kind of men for the ministry. Churches and ministers must engage in a definite systematic propaganda, looking toward securing the attention of the brightest and best of our young people. Sermons must be preached frequently and the highest ideals of ministerial training be held up. Personal talk, conferences, and literature must serve definite ends in view. Official boards must consider making it one of the functions of the local church to seek out and train the ministry select young men. If the young men are not able to secure the training without assistance, the church assist them in such manner as to preserve their manly independence. The is coming and should not be far distant when every church of any strength, and combinations of smaller churches have their representatives in the colleges and seminaries spending their whole time and energy securing the finest training possible for the most exacting and difficult work in the world today, that of Christian ministry. In the past some of our best men have preached their way through college, and it will always be for the student to obtain some experience in this way. But it has now become a decided detriment to young men compelled to support themselves in this way. It absorbs time and energy that should be put upon their studies. They get into slipshod methods of sermon-making by reason of the haste required by the attempt to do too much. They neglect the pastoral work while in college, and forget to take it up after they have left college. From somewhat large experience and observation the writer does not hesitate to say that he laments the necessity for as much student preaching as there is going on about all of our colleges. He longs for the day when the colleges will be freed by the churches of the whole country of self-support for ministerial students, so that they may give their full attention to the proper work of training these young men for their high office.

The key to the situation is in the hands of the present active ministry. It must lead and stimulate the Church in this, as in everything else. Brethren, we must glorify our calling and let our calling glorify us. There was a time when the derivative name, Christian, was accepted and made a term of honor by the apostles and the saints. Today the ministry has become a reproach. There is no concealing it. The world is jeering at the preacher's vocation, "If any man suffer as a minister, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf."

It is glory enough to have shouted the name Of the living God in the teeth of an army of foes;
To have thrown all prudence and forethought away
And for once to have followed the call of the soul;
Out into the danger of darkness, of ruin and death.
To have counseled with right, not success,
for once,
It is glory enough for a day.

It is glory enough for one day
To have dreamed the bright dream of the reign of right;
To have fastened your faith like a flag to that immaterial staff.
And have marched away, forgetting your base of supplies.
And while the worldly wise see nothing but shame and ignoble retreat,
And though far ahead the heart may faint and the flesh prove weak,
To have dreamed that bold dream is glory enough,
Is glory enough for one day.

—Carruth.

The lure of the heroic must be used if we are to command the loyalty of the choicest youth of our time. We must say to them, "Somebody must do this and why not you?" "Do not ask what is there in it for you, but ask what is there in you for it." To Christian parents too we must speak a faithful word. "How can you pray, 'Thy kingdom come,' when you are refusing to God the only means by which His kingdom can come in the world, the lives of your sons and daughters? Are you not seeking to defeat the will of God in the lives of your children when, instead of encouraging them to heed the voice of God in their consciences you do all you can to deaden their sense of duty in the call to special service?"

Finally, the ministry for the present emergency must be not only an educated, but an educational ministry, in the most real and practical sense. Christianity can be interpreted and applied to the needs of these times only by pedagogical methods. Information must precede inspiration. Faith must follow facts and not go against them. Exhortation to action must wait upon understanding of what action will meet the need. In the words of the writer formerly quoted, "If our pulpits turned from their exhortation to practical instruction in the substance of Christian faith, positive and clear teaching of doctrine, specific and calm statement of the methods of developing righteousness and holiness, to an exposition of real and not artificial sins, we should find men returning to the pews. If the pulpit should train men to pray, and to use their spiritual strength of prayer for their daily temptation, to read the Bible with intelligence and insight, to understand the fundamental doctrines of the religion of Christ, to judge between good and evil, to rear their children in godliness, to do their duty toward their neighbor, to accept their place in a world where they live with and apart from, other men, and then, if the Church would arouse conscience and by ringing appeals, men would be impelled with open eyes and understanding hearts along the distinct and well marked paths of righteousness and duty.

"The abundant supply of ministers devoted to their real work would bring the Kingdom of God to earth among the affairs of men, and the spirit and power of Christ to hungry human hearts."

It is along these lines we shall solve the problem of the Christian Ministry and the BROTHERHOOD OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST is, under God, the providential agency just now for giving emphasis to this most vital and urgent matter.

Student Aid

Possibilities of an Adequate Fund

BY LOUIS S. CUPP, CHANCELLOR CHRISTIAN UNIVERSITY.

LOUIS S. CUPP

The need for more preachers is overwhelming. We have about 100 congregations and perhaps less than 4,000 preachers in active service today. We could find useful fields for 100 more preachers now, if we had them. It is reported that more than 500 congregations are dying in Missouri alone, for want of an adequate ministry. Many fruitful mission fields lie neglected, both Home and Foreign lands, because we have no preachers to send. Our theological colleges are our only base of supply. In all our colleges today we have less than 800 ministerial students. Graduating 150 preachers per year from our schools, barely keeps pace with the death of MEN, what will you do about it? A thousand preachers will not last a dying church forever.

Practically all our evangelists, missionary secretaries, college presidents, teachers, editors and Bible School principals, were drawn from the pastoral ranks. Death claims a large number every year and many become superannuated.

President Zollars says we have suffered a net loss of 800 preachers in the last four years. Many have left the ministry to engage in business. How can our church prosper, if we continue to lose pastors faster than we gain them?

MORE AND BETTER
PREACHERS

City, State, Home and Foreign Missions, besides

Church Extension Societies are all in the business of making new places for preachers. Is it not time we were making more preachers to fill these places? We are creating a world-wide demand for our product; shall we not create a supply to meet it? If we were a dying people, we should need no more preachers. But living and growing, we must have them.

EVERY LITTLE BIT HELPS

How shall we get them?

An adequate Student Loan Fund will help.

Let our men deposit $25,000 or $50,000 in each of our colleges of ministerial education, to be used as a permanent loan fund to help educate poor boys for the ministry. Let the help extended be a loan, not a gift. Charge no interest while the student is in school; you want him to stay there as long as possible. Ask each beneficiary to give his personal note for the amount borrowed, agreeing to pay 6% interest on his loan from the time he leaves college; agreeing also to return the principal in installments of $10 per month, as soon as he has a position with a salary, after leaving college. Require all payments to begin not later than five years after the date of the loan. Lend no student more than $100 during each school year; do not extend help, year by year, for more than five years. A student should be self-supporting after five years in college.

The above is the plan we are using at Christian University, Canton, Missouri, where we are working for a permanent Ministerial Loan Fund of not less than $25,000, of which over $20,000 has already been subscribed. Five hundred dollars establishes a permanent scholarship, which will always keep some ministerial student in school. We hope to be able to assist from 50 to 100 students every year. Many do not borrow the entire $100, a number getting through the year with a loan of $25 or $50. As the students return their loans, the same money goes out again to help others, giving "perpetual motion" to the fund.

WHY A LOAN FUND?

Why have a loan fund for ministerial students?

Two reasons: First, most ministerial students are poor boys and need the help to enter college. Rich men's sons do not usually enter the ministry. Second, being poor, these boys need the help to remain in college until their course of study is finished. Half of the men in our pulpits today were driven out of their college course by poverty, before graduation. They would be better preachers, if they had been able to complete their preparation for their holy calling. To have the highest efficiency, our preachers must be educated. First class schools must be provided and endowed, and some way found to put our young preachers through them. The possibilities of an adequate student loan fund are unlimited. I know of nothing more practical or helpful towards supplying the present shortage of preachers. We should have in our various colleges a fund sufficiently large to assist 1,000 young men every year.

T. W. PHILLIPS' EXAMPLE

Hon. Thos. W. Phillips, of New Castle, Pa., whom many

CHRISTIAN MEN readers know well and favorably, thinks the best investment we can make is in assisting ministerial students secure their education. He believes money so invested will bring larger dividends than in any other department of the Kingdom. His faith has been proved by his works, for he has deposited thousands of dollars in a number of our leading colleges for this purpose. Hundreds of young men today bless the name of this good man, whose generosity has sent them through the halls of learning, to do a larger service for the King. Through the students helped by this philanthropist he is preaching the Gospel throughout our home-land and beyond the seas, building churches, raising funds for missions and benevolences and bringing thousands of souls into the Kingdom of Christ every year.

"The Cost"

An article appearing on Page 24 of this issue is a worthy sequel to the above article. Its reading will repay you.

William Prince Aylsworth, A.M., LL.D.

Chancellor Emeritus Cotner University

BY WM. OESCHGER, CHANCELLOR.

William Prince Aylsworth, preacher, teacher, and college president, was born September 12, 1844, at Cuba, in Lake County, Illinois, reared on a farm thirty miles northwest of Chicago, the son of a pioneer resident of Chicago. So reads his early history. The father was a man of great mental vigor. When the writer reached for the church at Nunda, Ill., where the father had his church membership, his then almost ninety years had not caused his mental faculties to falter in the least. The mother was a woman of great piety and keen spiritual perceptions, who loved God and did everything to inculcate the love of God into the minds of her children. Both father and mother were devoted members of the Methodist Church, but when the cause of Primitive Christianity reached that part of the country both gladly embraced it. The father was a staunch defender of the new faith, and a great student of the scriptures. In such atmosphere the son was reared. From father he inherited strong mental characteristics, and from mother, sweetness and gentleness of spirit. By inheritance and training he was fitted for the great work that was laid in store for him in after years. His father told the writer upon more than one occasion that "William was a great student." He loved his books. At age seven he began teaching school and quickly demonstrated marked ability, later becoming principal of the High School. His college work in college was in the old Chicago University, where he remained until completing his sophomore year. He then attended Bethany College, Bethany, West Virginia, graduating in 1869 with the degrees of A.B., and A.M. Later he took graduate work at Yale University under the late Dr. Harper, President of the University of Chicago, and had the honor of being numbered one of the intimate friends of Dr. Harper up to the day of the death of that distinguished educator. After graduating from Bethany College he gave himself to the ministry, holding pastorates at South Bend, Greensburg, Union City, Angola, and Ft. Wayne, Indiana; and at Columbus, Ohio. In 1886 he came to Fairfield, Nebraska, to preach and to teach in Fairfield College. From 1887 to 1889 he was President of Fairfield College, resigning to take the Chair of Sacred Literature in Cotner University. Here he has been continuously for more than 22 years. Students have come and gone, members of the faculty have likewise changed, but the one person that has remained through all the passing changes has been William Prince Aylsworth. When Cotner University was organized he was elected Vice-President, but the first year was the acting President. Later he assisted Dr. D. R. Dungan, who was at the head of the school and on the resignation of Dr. Dungan in 1896 was called to the Presidency. This position he held for 14 years. In 1910 he resigned "Because," he said, "I feel that the administrative affairs should be placed upon younger shoulders." He still continues at the head of the Bible Department of the University and is doing the best work of his life in the class room. During the last year he prepared and had published a work on Hebrew Prophecy, which is meeting a very gracious reception.

In 1872 he was married to Miss Mary Doane Stuzaker. She has been a true and noble companion to him in all of his work. She has at all times and under all circumstances been an able and willing sharer of all of his labors and sacrifices. Sister Aylsworth is loved by the whole student body of Cotner University. She has not only been a mother to her own children, but to many of the students.

It is now almost a quarter of a century since the writer first met Chancellor Aylsworth. He is my father in the Gospel. His life and labors lie before me like an open book. Of his character, labors and sacrifices for the Kingdom, I feel that I can speak with authority.

Some time ago I was at an educational gathering when one of the leaders, learning I was the new Chancellor of Cotner University, remarked, "Your man Aylsworth is my ideal of a Christian gentleman." He is one of the most Godly men the writer has ever known. He reproduces day by day the culture of the Cross.

Through years of trying administrative duties Chancellor Aylsworth has remained a close student of men and books. He has kept up with the times. He has been a constant and careful reader of the latest and best Biblical literature of the day. His recent work, "The Growing Miracle," shows he is conversant with the literature of the Old Testament fields of Biblical interpretation. Years have failed to decrease his interest in study. On the contrary have added zest to his desire for study. He is a younger and more vigorous teacher today than he was 20 years ago. He kept himself in such a condition by constant study. It is needless to say that his studious and conscientious work have made him a model as a preacher after which the students can well pattern. As a preacher he possesses the qualities of an Elisha rather than those of an Elijah. He is a cultured pulpit orator. His sermons are filled with accurate Biblical information and with the vitalizing touch of the Spirit of God. With his preaching the Divine art that involves the proclamation of the simple Word of God. He has in his message a great place for the Son of God.

Cotner University and the name of William Prince Aylsworth are synonymous terms. Think of one and you think of the other. They are related to each other as cause and effect. The University when first founded in the year 1880 had four or five very prosperous years. For a time it looked that the University was destined to make for itself a great place in the educational world. In 1893 the panic which wrought havoc and ruin in financial circles melted the resources of the University. A mortgage had been placed upon the property by the founders of the school, and upon the property of the University corporation. When the panic came all was lost. The Brotherhood that once owned the school was without the school when the panic had passed. At that time the head of the school as well as many of the teachers left, feeling that all was lost. Bethany the college town was seeing many of its houses moved away. It was thought by many that the place would soon be abandoned again. In that dark hour there was one heroic spirit that still had hope and faith in Cotner University. That person was William Prince Aylsworth. Without a dollar in sight he went to work to redeem the lost property. He gathered around him a few brave and heroic personalities, most of them former students of the school. With these the great task was commenced and carried to a successful issue. After one of the most heroic struggles in the history of education among the Disciples of Christ property was again made the possession of the Churches of Christ. A faculty was selected and the doors of the school opened to students. Even after the property was redeemed there was not a single dollar in sight with which to pay teachers. It was only because of the great love that certain men and women bore for the school, and their anxiety to serve the Kingdom of God that they continued with the school year after year. The story of Cotner University and the sacrifices that were made by Chancellor Aylsworth and his heroic faculty is one of the most heroic and self-sacrificing chapters in the history of the disciples of Christ. For some time the teachers only received $15 per month. At no time since the redemption of the school have the salaries exceeded $45 a month. It has been the noble self-sacrificing example of William Prince Aylsworth that has made possible the continuance of the school. Year after year the school has grown. There has been no "inflation" or "hot air" growth about it. Cotner University in spite of the lack of funds has kept high her educational standards, and under the administration of Chancellor Aylsworth gained the respect and admiration of every College and University in Nebraska. It has been granted by the State Department of Education the privilege of granting to its students the same high certificates in its normal department that are granted by the State University of Nebraska, or by any of the State Normal Schools in Nebraska. One of her students three years ago won the Rhodes Scholarship. The one thing that Cotner University has maintained through all these years—a high standard of work. In this we have the admiration and respect of the State Department of Education to the very highest possible degree. But the glory of Cotner University is the stream of consecrated life that it is constantly pouring out into the world. This finds its chief inspiration because of the one great man whose presence in the institution for almost a quarter of a century has generated by word and deed the power that makes for the higher life. The great work that Cotner has done, and is doing, is destined to be for all coming years a monument to the life and labors of William Prince Aylsworth.

Men With Means—Listen

OUR CORNERED
GAL

The Disciples have been long on Evangelism but short on education. Why can't a company of a few of our wealthier men make it up by going themselves to make a tour of our colleges just to "look them over" It would mean the dawn of a new era for the disciples of Christ. Should such a thing happen it would not be long until the necessity for going to other's schools for the higher degrees and special courses would be stopped. No people in the United States are better fitted to give the final touches to higher education than the Disciples if we were equipped for such thing. Herein lies the solution of our conflicts in leadership. Our President visited eight of our colleges, saw them in action, and met in round numbers 4,000 students. These are the minds that will shape our destinies. These are the forces that will deflect the course of nations and erect standards for the future. Limited Omnipotence in training! What a tremendous responsibility! What a tremendous opportunity! He saw this and more. He saw the poverty of our college equipment. He saw the sacrifices our college men are making for the cause of the Kingdom. Without a whimper or a whine from the first to the last these men made him understand how their hearts were bleeding for the help that is so sorely needed. In one of these colleges the expenses are all paid first; then if anything is left in the treasury it is divided equally among the professors. No debts are allowed. What about faith in a project? I know of greater faith. The tour, in a small way, widened the fellowship in education. A few of us know things now we never knew before. Oh, if our men could know these things—know them with their hearts as well as their minds, how they would rejoice in sharing in the work of training our boys and girls for the common tasks of life!

Call for Men for the Ministry

For two years the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ has been pleading for Men for the Ministry. A more worthy subject has not been presented to our churches, nor one that should receive greater consideration at the hands of our ministry.

According to the very best authority, we have only fifty-five hundred ministers who devote any part of their time to preaching the Word to eleven thousand churches, which means that fifty-five hundred churches either have no preaching at all or preaching only occasionally. This is a situation that must be met. If one-half of our ministers will preach upon the ministry as a calling the third Sunday in January and will do personal work among the most likely young men and young women of their congregations between now and January 21st, we ought to have one thousand men turned to this highest of all high callings.

The interest of our business men in the success of the church is increasing and the result is bound to be a more able ministry and a better paid one. These conditions we have all prayed for in the past. Let us set to work to make them realities.

A few of our schools have small Students' Aid Funds. These ought to be materially increased. No greater need presents itself to our ministerial student body.

The undersigned representatives of our schools and colleges join in making this united appeal for a universal observance of the third Sunday in January, 1912, as the time for presenting the claims of the ministry to the young people of our churches. We strike hands and voice with the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ in this personal way and bespeak the coöperation of our churches in this most serious matter. Will your minister join in this effort and make the third Sunday in January, 1912, a memorable day? God grant that he will.

Brother Earnestman in the City of Somniferra

A Story to Read and Think About

BY J. K. SHELLENBERGER.

and it came to pass that Brother Wiseman was sojourning in the city of Somniferra. On the first day of the week, at about the third hour of the day, he beheld himself, as was his custom, to the House of God. There was a goodly number of saints gathered thither. And it was that Brother Wiseman set himself in the midst of the congregation and worshiped that day with the Saints at Somniferra.

And as he worshiped he saw that Brother Earnestman was a very busy man while the men who worshiped with him were quiet and that exceedingly. Brother Earnestman selected all the hymns and assumed all responsibility for the music of the morning. The woman whose work it was to play upon the organ at the morning worship had attended a social gathering the evening before and was indisposed upon this Lord's day morning: so Brother Earnestman publickly called upon his wife to play upon the organ in the hour of morning worship. Brother Earnestman read all the Scripture and the people were very silent. Brother Earnestman did all the praying and the people forgot to say "Amen!" Brother Earnestman preached the sermon and some of the people slept. Brother Earnestman pronounced the benediction and rushed to the door to see the people as they went out to go to their homes. As Brother Wiseman was going out of the House of God Brother Earnestman nervously grasped his hand and greeted him with a simulation of a smile; but the smile did not reach Brother Wiseman's heart.

In the afternoon of the same day Brother Wiseman was walking by the House of God. And hearing a great confusion therein, he stopped and entered to see what it was that was making so great confusion in the House of God on the Lord's Day. And Lo! there was Brother Earnestman with two-score and ten of "Juniors." His cheeks were flushed and his eyes were like unto glass. His appearance was like unto one in great fear and conscious of impending great calamity. Yet Brother Earnestman thought himself under perfect self-control.

And it came to pass at about the twelfth hour of the day, about the time of the setting of the sun, that Brother Wiseman once more went unto the House of God. It was the time of the meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. The leader for the meeting had gone with her friend for a ride in a great carriage that went without horses, and did not return unto the meeting. And so it was that the Prayer-meeting Committee had said unto Brother Earnestman, "Wilt thou not lead us in our devotions in this meeting?" And so it came about that Brother Earnestman was leading the Young People's meeting.

As it was in the morning worship, so also was it in the evening worship. Brother Earnestman was very exceedingly active and the people were all very quiet. Brother Earnestman had laid hands upon four men of good repute; and, with prayer and fasting had set them apart unto receiving the offering unto the Lord decorously, but this evening one of the men whom Brother Earnestman had set apart did not come unto the House of God. And it was so that Brother Earnestman again publicly called upon Brother Fertigman to assist in receiving the offering.

Many of the people of Somniferra are forgetful of the House of God on Lord's Day evenings and wander away unto strange places. They go unto the public parks, and unto the tea gardens and soda fountains: they play at whist and bridge, and sometimes quarrel over the "kitty" in the house of gambling. And it is so that Brother Earnestman is left to minister unto the few that gather at the House of God. And as Brother Wiseman worshiped on this Lord's Day evening he beheld a look of weary longing in the face of Brother Earnestman, and his heart went out in compassion toward him. When Brother Earnestman had preached his sermon and pronounced the benediction he hurried again to the door of the House of God to greet the people as they went out and unto their homes. And as the people were going out Brother Wiseman heard the soul of Brother Earnestman saying unto the souls of them that were passing out, "Take my hand; I have not time to give you my heart." And so it was that the people touched the hand of Brother Earnestman and went their way forgetting that he had spoken to them. At last Brother Wiseman was passing out also. And when he had come unto Brother Earnestman, he said:

"Brother, thou art worn and weary this night."

And Brother Earnestman answered and said unto him, "Thou hast said aright, friend. My face is hot like unto a fevered man's, and my body trembles like one an hungered and nigh unto starvation. My message to my people was not a message because I could not get it out of my heart and therefore it could not get beyond my lips. My heart is very heavy and my soul is shadowed over with deep despair. Would that I could weep, but my eyes are burning and the fountains thereof are dry. But Brother, thy kind words have done me much good."

And then Brother Earnestman began to enroll a piece of writing and fasten upon the door of the House of God. And so it was that Brother Wiseman looked upon the piece of writing and saw that it was a notice for a meeting of the Trustees for the House of God. And Brother Wiseman laid his hand on Brother Earnestman's shoulder and quietly—very quietly—said, "Brother, read Exodus 18:13-27."

Again it came to pass upon the fourth day of the week and in the evening hour that Brother Wiseman went again unto the House of God for mid-week prayer and praise. There assembled there twenty men besides a score and four of women. Brother Earnestman led in singing the hymns. Mrs. Earnestman and Anna, wife of Brother Jonah Busyman, offered prayers. There were no testimonies unto the love of the Lord and the glory of His service. The women all seemed weary. Some of them slept while Brother Earnestman read the Scripture and exhorted them to be faithful. At last Brother Earnestman announced a closing hymn, and the women all awoke and arose and sang. Then Brother Earnestman prayed, and when he said "Amen" to his own prayer he stood at the door and greeted to every one as she passed out to go unto her home.

Then came Brother Wiseman also. And Brother Earnestman spake and said unto him, "I am glad that thou didst come, Brother. My brethren do not come to the House of God in the mid-week. The lodges and the gatherings at the play-houses, and the business committee meetings and the gaming tournaments consume all their time so that they can not come to the House of God. And my heart grows lonesome for you."

ren in the work of the Lord." And Brother Wiseman came nigh unto Brother Earnestman so that each could hear the beating of the other's heart; and he said unto him, in tones that were like the music of murmuring waters, "Hither, read Exodus 18:13-27." And he went his way unto his own place. But Brother Earnestman's soul was on fire, his mind was on fire with burning emotions, and his heart was sad; so he went to his home and forgot to read. And again it came to pass on another day that Brother Wiseman was walking by the house of Brother Earnestman. Brother Earnestman had just returned from ordering the winter's coal for the house of God, and was now on his way to see Brother Slowman, the treasurer of the House of God, about some money that should have been given to him two years ago. Brother Earnestman was very busy and did not have time to stop and talk with Brother Wiseman, so Brother Wiseman walked with him. And as they walked Brother Earnestman related unto Brother Wiseman the many things he had to do. And it was so that when he had finished talking Brother Wiseman said unto him. "Thou dost trouble thyself about too great a number of things. Is it not true that thou hast no time in which to acquaint thyself with the Word of thy God and to be infilled with the Spirit of the Lord of Hosts?" And Brother Earnestman answered and said unto him, "It is true indeed that I have not the time in which to do as thou hast said. But what am I to do? My people are good. They love and respect me as their pastor. No people could be kinder than they have been to me. But they lack something, I know of what. They are helpless among themselves, and depend upon me exceedingly heavily. I am doing all that I can for them, but my burdens are proving too heavy for me. I can not carry them longer. I love my people but I must go away. Canst thou not find another place where I can minister to the people in the work of the Lord?"

"And where wouldst thou find it different?" spake Brother Wiseman.

"That I know not," answered Brother Earnestman. "That is why I spake unto thee. Thou dost go from city to city; and methought perhaps thou didst know where the burden would be lighter and the fellowship stronger. I would not ask that I should come into ease. I love to work. But I would that some of my brethren would give me helpful sympathy in this work of men-saving and Kingdom-building. My heart is yearning for the fellowship of souls who take initiative and dare to become responsible for results. My Master sat upon Mount Olivet once and looked back upon His beloved city and wept; saying, 'How oft, how oft would I have gathered thee together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings but ye would not.' I know what He meant and how He felt. Dost understand?"

"Yea, verily," said Brother Wiseman.

And once more the heart of Brother Wiseman went out to this anxious man of God. As they walked each felt a burning and a yearning in his soul; but Brother Earnestman could not understand. When they came to the place where they must part Brother Earnestman took Brother Wiseman's hand in his and said: "I would that thou didst live in Somniferra and wert with us always. My heart doth cling to thee, and there is something about thee that doth bring a benediction to my soul."

And Brother Wiseman answered and said unto him: "I can not 'live' in Somniferra, but I am with thee always. I will never leave thee nor forsake thee. I have been with thee many, many times, but thou wert so exceeding busy with other's duties that thou knewest not that I was with thee. Thou art good and I love thee very deeply. But one thing thou lackest. Read Exodus 18:13-27." And lo and behold! Brother Wiseman was not there any more and Brother Earnestman knew not whither he had gone.

And Brother Earnestman went on his way, but he was cogitating and ruminating. "Strange person he. He seems so far away and yet so near. He is gone and yet he is with me. He reads the secret of my soul, but draws me to him and I am not afraid. 'One thing I lack;' said he; 'read Exodus 18:13-27.' Three times has he told me that and I have paid so little heed as to have forgotten. This day shall I read it and learn the meaning thereof."

And that evening Brother Earnestman set himself by his own fireside and read

Exodus 18:13-27. And the Lord sent unto him a vision. And as he looked he saw the House of the Lord in Somniferia filled with the glory of the Great Jehovah that shone from the hearts and faces of His children busy in His service each responsible for his own work in righteousness and rejoicing in the happiness of his brethren. Then it came about that Brother Wiseman was Brother Earnestman's constant companion, and they two communed together much.

And it came to pass that Brother Wiseman said unto Brother Earnestman, one day as they communed together, "Let not your city any more be called 'Somniferia;' but from henceforth let it be called 'Ouranoptas.' So it was done according to the word of Brother Wiseman."

And Brother Earnestman did not any more want to move.

A Social Worker's Creed

A New Year Suggestion

By Darius Brown, Mayor of Kansas City, Mo.

THE best gift that the New Year could bring to the American people would be such changes in the social, economic and industrial conditions that the following results would be accomplished:

1. That every man who honestly desires to do so would be given an opportunity to secure employment at such compensation as would enable him to adequately provide for himself and family.
2. That the attitude of society toward the man or woman delinquent will be such that when they honestly desire to live a decent and virtuous life every possible encouragement and support will be given them.
3. That every man and woman will be judged, not according to their social or financial position, not according to what they think they are, not according to what others think they are, but according to what they really are.
4. That the masses of the people will be given so square a deal that there will no longer be any necessity for charity and philanthropy.

The Cost

Story of the Comrades of Paul Fund

By CLYDE R. HESSE, the Originator.

CLYDE R. HESSE

A SMALL INVESTMENT

"Say, brother, if you knew that an investment of one and one-half cents per day would place a young man in college to prepare himself for the ministry of winning souls to Christ, would you be willing to invest that amount?"

The above question put to over seventy men of Central Church of Christ, Des Moines, Iowa, found a ready response in the hearts and pocketbooks of over 80 per cent of those approached, with only one absolute refusal recorded.

Some four years ago, while drinking in an address by that princely man of God, Dr. D. R. Dungan, who was making a plea for young men for the ministry, a spark, which had long lain dormant in the heart of a young man, was fanned into a flaming fire to do for others that which he had failed in grasping the opportunity to do for himself, and then and there was given life to the idea which later became known as the "Comrades of Paul." The original idea was to raise a fund to place in the field capable men to lay on the hearts of our young men the real worth of the call to service for the Master and the great need and opportunities in the calling. It was soon found that the plan would not do, however, as it was felt that sufficient money could not be raised each year to place in the field enough men to give it the national scope demanded. The thought was brought out that scores of worthy young men were available if assistance could be rendered them through the first year or two in college, and so, briefly, we have the Comrades of Paul Fund:

THE PLAN

A plan whereby the saving of one and one-half cents per day, on the part of each Brotherhood man, will constitute a fund to be loaned out to worthy young men desirous of entering the ministry, in amounts of $100.00, for a period not to exceed four years, without interest, at the expiration of which time, if not paid, an interest charge of 5 per cent to be made. It is understood that money contributed by the various Brotherhoods can be specifically assigned by them to some particular college or person. You can readily see, men, that your money is not "given" to anyone, but goes out to do its work and returns only to be sent out into some other field on its mission of preparation for soul-saving. "All rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. Unto the place from whence the rivers come thither they return again."

"The day of small things is past. What our men want today is to undertake big things. Give a man something big to do and he will take right hold and push it for all that is in him. Just with the money question: The day of pennies is past. You ask a man to save ennies and he will not give you thought, it ask him for dollars and he will be ght with you."

The above remarks were delivered by e of our prominent missionaries in the ouse of an after-dinner talk. This other was right in part, and again, he as woefully in error, for if you can int a man to a way whereby his pen- es will make dollars then you can gain s attention.

Now, men, listen: The
 HE C. W. B. M. Christian Women's
 ATTERN Board of Missions has membership upwards of 75,000. Their es are fifteen cents per member per onth. If each member pays her dues omptly there is brought into the treas- y each month $11,250.00 and an an- al aggregate of $135,000.00. These gures sound big, but what do you think e could do, men (we who hold the ocketbooks), if we would but band to- ether with a oneness of purpose to ake for the Comrades of Paul the suc- ss which it will one day attain to?

Oh, yes, I know you
 IS, IT TAKES are continually asked ONEY to contribute to this, at and the other, and that you are pt "short" the most of the time. It's money, money, money, always money, d so it will ever be, until every ear is ouched by His message. The Comrades Paul reveals a new vision of truth Luke's gospel, for methinks Luke had mind the man who felt that he was o short to contribute to the ever-in- easing opportunities presented when said: "And which of you by taking ought can add to his stature one bit?" Luke also tells us for a man who uld not see Jesus, for the press, be- use he was little of stature, while to- y so many men do not seem to be able see the Master as He passes by be- use of the press, not of the crowds, but rather on the pocketbook. Zac- chaeus was short, and a sinner in the bargain, but he had a desire to see Jesus, and he had that desire satisfied, and Jesus entered into his home and into his life. When some earnest, God-loving, big-souled man comes our way, he leaves us with a feeling akin to the men over- taken by the Savior on the way to Em- maus, and our hearts burn within us, for we feel that He has walked with us by the way, but our friend goes on his way, the reaction sets in, and when He returns He finds us "asleep again, for our eyes are heavy." Oh, men, if we would pattern after the "first Brotherhood," yea, even keep

 "FOLLOW ME," pace with the present
 SAYS CHRIST day, we must be men of rich, red blood, wide awake to the needs of the hour and ready to go, to do and give, watchful and prayerful, forgetful of self and seeking only to be obedient to His will as we hear His "Come, follow Me." How many of us miss the richness of the blessing which God has in store for us by our unwill- ingness to open the avenues through which He would enter into our lives. Each day the call comes to every man to service by word or deed or gift, and he who would be enriched accepts the call as opportunity presents, not feeling that present duties are being multiplied to the extent that burdens are too heavy to bear, but looking to God for in- creased strength to shoulder additional tasks, knowing that as he follows on to do His will God will pour out upon him blessings many fold.

As the Men and Religion
 A YEAR  Forward Movement is sweep-SAVED ing over the land, men of all walks in life are volunteering for serv- ice. The training which these men are receiving is sure to lead scores to that fuller service, in His ministry, some financially able to secure a college education, but many others, at present not in so favorable financial circumstances, must wait, perhaps, a year or more.

Now, just one year ago Central Church of Christ, Des Moines, Iowa, started a young man in Drake University, to prepare for the ministry. This young man was supporting a widowed mother and younger brother and sister, and the backing of Central Church placed him in college just one year in advance of the time he otherwise would have been permitted to enter. The souls to be won for Christ in this young man's first year on the field will be the fruits of Central's efforts. Do you think that it will be worth while? What this one church has accomplished can be duplicated (comparatively) in every Brotherhood in our land if you, men, will select some enterprising young fellow to handle the matter in your home church, or, as is to be done at this point, in your entire city, and have him make that his specific work, and that alone, going among your men with Comrades of Paul pledge cards in manner similar to the plan used here. If a brother cannot be brought to the point of affixing his signature to one of the cards, set the first quarterly payment six months or one year (and in a few cases even longer) in advance, and seven out of every ten of your men will sign the card.

"He that soweth sparingly, shall also reap sparingly; but he that soweth bountifully, shall reap also bountifully. Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."

And finally, brethren, at the Pittsburgh convention our representative adopted the Comrades of Paul into our family, and Paul says: "He that provideth not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." Christ is sitting over against the treasury. What will you do with our baby?

The Call to Young Men

A Lawyer's Plea for Entering the Ministry

BY JUDGE J. N. HAYMAKER.

JUDGE J. N. HAYMAKER

"The Call to Young Men," the call that comes from out the heights, the universal, imperative call, is for young men of strength, of manliness, of clean lives, of right character, and of useful employment.

A response to this call may come from either an honorable calling or life work. It is in the province of man to exalt the noblest calling or disgrace the most exalted one. While this is true, it is also true that the choice of a calling or life work is one of the most significant and momentous events in a young man's life.

PROPOSING A CALLING

In this democratic country of ours where we have no aristocracy, no great and established families, it is expected that every man, upon the threshold of life, will choose some calling at which to labor with more or less industry. What shall it be? Will you listen to me for a little while and permit me to offer some suggestions upon this exceedingly important subject?

In the first place I will assume that you are earnest, ambitious young men. I would not want to address any other class, unless it was to incite them to the most earnest and ambitious efforts. I know of Wolsey charges Cromwell flung away ambition, but this was after old age had overtaken him; after he had descended every depth and shoal of fame, when he felt the great temple of power that he had cunningly built for his own selfish gratification, shaking at its base and threatening his own destruction.

That his selfish, misguided and over-seering ambitions should bring him no solace in his old age is, in my judgment, no valid argument against a legitimate and honorable ambition on the part of young men in whose veins course the red blood of life and whose nerves tingle with hope and expectation.

AMBITION

I believe every young man should be ambitious to achieve the greatest success in life of which he is capable.

I think it right and proper that a young man fairly gifted with ability should desire a calling that would permit of intellectual expansion, that would give him power to reach and influence men, that would secure to him a reasonable maintenance for old age, and that would bring to him the largest measure of happiness compatible with a life of duty.

Will anyone question that this is a worthy and commendable ambition on the part of a young man? This granted, the question presents itself what calling offers the largest opportunities along these lines.

MISCONCEPTION

Young gentlemen, may I, a layman; I, a professional man; I, a lawyer, present a brief for the calling of the ministry as offering the fairest field for the gratification of a lawful ambition and the achievement of the greatest and truest success. In the first place, may I treat the matter negatively and remove what I conceive to be certain prevalent misconceptions, or wrong ideas upon the subject. I believe the most popular and misleading of these is, that the best calling for a young man to pursue is the one that promises the greatest accumulation of money. Riches is made the goal. Wealth the great desideratum. Success is measured by money and happiness is made synonymous with gain. I can scarcely conceive of a greater mistake. May I give you an illustration that came within my own observation but a short time ago?

THE VALUE OF MONEY

I had a rainy afternoon to spend in a country town, waiting for a train, and I called upon a prominent banker I chanced to know. In the course of our conversation he said: "Judge, do you think money brings happiness?" I said to him: "Mr. A., I do not need to think upon that question. I know that it does not, and I know further that it is not a factor of prime importance in bringing about the result." He then asked seriously and impressively: "Can you give me a receipt for happiness?" I said: "Suppose I could, would you take it?" and my mind reverted to the young man who came to the Master with a question of like import and went away sorrowing.

He insisted, however, upon his question and I answered it as best I could, but I could see that my suggestions made little or no impression upon his mind and he shook his head in a sad and sorrowful sort of fashion.

WHAT IS HAPPINESS?

I was talking about his case to a mutual friend, himself a rich banker, and he said: "He is the unhappiest man alive. He wants to sell out and get away where no one knows him, and yet he can't get up and quit but hangs on, miserable and unhappy all the time." Yet that man a rich banker, and judged by a modern standard alone is the richest man in the community, but judged by a true standard of success and happiness is one of the very poorest.

The richest man in Kansas died last year away down in Texas, in a little cheap hotel, away from home and friends and loved ones. He left an estate worth a million dollars and yet that man got nothing out of life worth having, except his miserable dollars, and left a memory that would not be envied by a peasant vendor or a street sweeper. I have talked with a number of his acquaintances, men who knew him intimately, and they with entire unanimity pronounce his life a great failure. Need I multiply instances? They will occur to every thoughtful, conscientious servant person. And yet, in the face of this, I think I am in the bounds of reason when I say the one fact, more than all other, if not more than all others, that keeps young men out of the ministry is the fact that this calling, sacred though it be, does not open wide the gateway to wealth and opulence. This is a commercial age, preëminently so. We worship money next to God, in some cases, I feel, more than God, and in nearly all cases our worship is tempered, or distempered, rather, by an undue estimate of the value of money.

LURE OF GOLD

The young, alone, are not lured from the King's highway by this ignis-fatuus but parents are swayed and influenced by its seductive glamour, by its alluring power and possibility, and the result is a perverted vision of right and duty. Instead of making Goodness and God the main aim of the young life committed to their charge, they make it greed and gold. Instead of encouraging them to a high life duty and consecration, they encourage m to a low life of some gainful employment. Shame upon them!

Oh, You Men, Young Men! Oh, n, Young and Old, I wish I could te it upon your brain and conscience letters of fire, I wish I could make it nd through the corridors of mind and rt like a bugle blast from out the sky, t the pursuit of money for money's e alone is ignoble, and that its acquion at the sacrifice of duty is the most al mistake in life.

Equally disappointing is the T FOR lust for place and power. I ave yet to find the first one to whom itical preferment or the bauble of ver brought any lasting measure of opiness. On the other hand, they ught carking care, gnawing dissatis-tion and lasting disappointments, end-

On the other hand,
 ENCHANTMENT let us view the matter MINISTRY from a positive stand-nt and see what the ministry has to er the young man of ability, as a call-in life.

stated at the outset that these were commendable desires on the part of a ing man entering upon the thresh-of life:

. Opportunity for intellectual deopment.

. Power to influence and control
 n.

. The acquisition of a reasonable competency for life's demands.

. The attainment of the greatest piness compatible with a life of honor duty.

What does the ministry as a calling offer along these lines, and first as to the opportunity for intellectual development.

John Wesley said he claimed the whole world as his parish. He might have said with equal if not greater propriety that, as God's minister to men, he claimed the whole intellectual world as his course of study.

If the time ever was when any course of study or investigation was barred from the ministry, that time is in the past.

The minister can have no higher duty, no more stimulating task than to know God's word and world and find harmony and unity therein. And in this delightful quest there stretches before him an infinity of material to investigate, of problems to solve and of seeming mysteries to fathom, that would challenge and delight the mind of the greatest philosopher, scientist or searcher after truth that ever walked the earth.

The poet, a Kansas poet, has expressed the kinship between science and theology in the following words:

A fire mist and a planet,
 A crystal and a cell,
 A jellyfish and a saurian
 And a cave where the cave men dwell;
 Then a sense of law and beauty,
 A face turned from the clod—
 Some call it Evolution,
 And others call it God.

A haze on the fair horizon,
 The infinite, tender sky,
 The ripe, rich tint of the corn fields,
 And the wild geese sailing high—
 And all over upland and lowland
 The sigh of the golden rod—
 Some of us call it Autumn,
 And others call it God.

Like tides on a crescent sea beach,
 When the moon is new and thin,
 Into our hearts high yearnings Come welling and surging in—Come from the mystic ocean,
 Whose rim no foot has trod—
 Some of us call it Longing,
 And others call it God.

A picket frozen on duty,
 A mother starved for her brood.
 Socrates drinking the hemlock,
 And Jesus on the rood;

And millions who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway trod—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.

Whether we call it science, or nature, evolution or longing, or any other name or term, it is all summed up in the Christian's conception of God, who ordained the universe by his infinite will, created it by his infinite power, and governs it by his infinite law, whose we are and whom we serve and whose creation we study with lowly and devout reverence, worlds without end.

Do you seek power to influence men — where can you find it so well as in the pulpit? I think I belong to one of the noblest professions, and yet, I say to you, both out of my own experience and from observation, that the opportunity to come in contact with man and influence and shape his life comes to the minister more than the lawyer in a ten fold degree. There are various reasons for this. In the first place the work of the lawyer brings him in contact with his fellow men almost wholly in a business or commercial way, and I might say the tendency to commercialism grows apace.

On the other hand, the minister comes in contact with man on his social side, on his moral side, on his spiritual side. The lawyer in the ordinary course of his profession meets with few men, and while his relations with these are close and confidential as far as business matters are concerned, on the other hand, the minister meets many men and his relations with them are even closer and more confidential than those of the attorney. He touches the family in almost every phase of life. His advice affects the children in their nurture and education and influences no little their young lives. He performs the marriage ceremony for the young man and woman. He counsels and advises the family upon all the main issues of life, shares their joys and their sorrows, visits them in sickness and when death comes, as close as it will to every home, it is he that gives help, and hope and consolation and direction to the bereaved ones. In addition to this, Sunday after Sunday, week and week out, month in and month out, year in and year out, life in and life out, he stands before the people with the greatest message that can come to man, the message of salvation from sin, through the merits, the life, the love, the example, the sacrifice, the death and glorious resurrection of the God-man, Jesus the Christ.

The minister deals with the eternal verities, life and love, and hope and death and immortality, and judgment and glory. He walks with God and talks with Him, like Enoch of old, and derives his power from Him.

"Speak to him thou, for he hearest, a spirit with spirit can meet; Closer is he than feeling, and nearer than hands and feet."

He walks with man and talks with him and communicates the power received from on high, nor can man resist for he "needs must love the highest whom he sees it."

I am easily within the bounds of reason, I speak but words of soberness and truth, when I say that no other calling is at all comparable to the ministry in its power to reach and influence men for good.

From a commercial standpoint, it must be conceded that the calling of the ministry is a poor one and this is as it should be, for were it otherwise this sacred calling would attract the mercenary and the unworthy. And yet it affords reasonable compensation for the labor performed and reasonable security against want in old age. Not as good as it should be, I will confess, and not as good as it will be en the laity awakes to its responsibility to these evangels of God, and consecrates a reasonable portion of its wealth to His service.

Hear, Oh, ye of little faith, this trumpet-note from one of old come ringing in the centuries:

"I was young and am now old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken his seed begging bread."

And lastly, young gentlemen, if you embrace a calling that permits of the widest intellectual expansion, that affords you the largest power and possibility for reaching and influencing men for good; that gives you companionship with God in a special sense and the society of good men and women, the elect of earth, do you doubt for a moment, dare you question that you will have the largest and fullest measure of happiness compatible with life on earth below?

Burns sounds a note of almost inspired freedom when he sings:

'Tis not in titles nor in rank,
'Tis not in wealth in London's bank,
Can make us truly blest.
'Tis not in making muckle more,
'Tis not in learning nor in store,
Can bring us peace and rest—
Happiness hath not her seat
And center in the breast,
We may be wise, and rich and great,
But never can be blest."

No, 'tis not in wisdom, however profound, not in station however exalted, nor in wealth however great, nor in a combination of all of them, that brings us peace and rest, but it comes from that small voice whose seat and center is in the human heart. The Master has taught us in that memorable sermon on the mount that happiness is not from without, but from within. Happy are the pure in heart, for they shall see God, and happy are the meek for they shall inherit the earth.

Would you have this condition of heart, would you have that peace that passeth understanding, would you have that serenity of mind and fortitude of spirit that will enable you to say, at life's close, whatever its vicissitudes in passing: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give," then choose bravely and follow faithfully this highest and noblest of all callings, the Ministry.

I have but one son, a young man just entering life's portals, in whom is centered much of my life's hopes and aspirations, yet I say to you without hesitation, I would rather see him a faithful and devoted Minister of God than to grace any other profession, however noble, or fill any station however exalted.

In conclusion, young gentlemen, if you should choose, or have chosen the ministry for a calling, then I pray you follow it earnestly, assiduously, enthusiastically and in the spirit of that prophetic rhapsody of Rudyard Kipling when he sings:

"When earth's last picture is painted,
And the tubes are all twisted and dry,
When the oldest colors have faded,
And the youngest critic has died,
We shall rest, and, faith, we shall need it.
Lie die for an æon or two Till the Master of all good workmen Shall set us to work anew.

"And those that were good shall be happy;
They shall sit in a golden chair,
They shall splash at a ten league canvas
With brushes of comet's hair;
They shall have real saints to draw from—Magdalena, Peter and Paul—
They shall work for an age at a sitting
And never grow tired at all.

"And only the Master shall praise it.
And only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money,
And no one shall work for fame;
But each for the joy of working,
And each in his separate star,
Shall draw things as he sees them,
For the God of things as they are."

MYRON C. SETTLE

DAVID OWEN

Ohio Settles Kansas

January 1st Myron C. Settle, for some years Bible School Superintendent of Kansas, becomes Bible School Superintendent for Ohio. We rejoice with Ohio in this most happy season. Myron Settle has been one of the best leaders of the Brotherhood Movement from its inception, and has given much time and thought to helping this Movement get upon its feet. He was eminently successful in Kansas, which is one of the causes of his selection to preside over the destinies of our Bible Schools in Ohio. "Ohio is a great state," I. J. Hill says. "More presidents have come out of Ohio since Lincoln than any other state." Even granting that, occasionally Ohio has to support a man like Settle. Of course, sending so many men out of the state causes a scarcity of certain classes of timber which must be imported. While we rejoice with Ohio, we would have good reason to sympathize with Kansas were it not for the fact that her man of Settle's stripe is to take his place. David Owen has been chief clerk in the Mechanical Department of the Santa Fe Railway general offices of Topeka for several years, and being an ex-railroad man ourselves, we can shake hands with him like a brother. We do not know Owen very well—in fact, we have only met him, but he has the general gait of a man who gets there. He is a little fellow, like Settle—if anything, a little more so—with a pair of brilliant eyes that sparkle like morning dew. Owen has been Superintendent of C. A. Finch's Bible School in Topeka and knows a thing or two about Bible School work, so you see while Kansas is furnishing a Bible School Superintendent for Ohio she is not going outside her own state, or even outside of the city of Topeka, for a successor, which speaks well for the Sunflower State. We know Settle is going to make good and David Owen has a chance to show his mettle. We anticipate that it will not take him long to warm up to the proposition.

Some New Books

"The Social Work of Christian Missions" is a complete volume by Professor Alva W. Taylor, of the Bible College of Missouri, published by and under the auspices of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio. Professor Taylor in his inimitable way deals with the problem of the Christian missionary in making conditions of life tolerable in foreign lands, where ignorance is a greater sin than idolatry. The book paints pictures of the before and after taking variety, dealing with conditions missionaries find upon arrival at the scene of activity, and these same scenes and these same people a few months later under scientific coaching of the mission forces. The volume deals with sanitation, food, housing, clothing, disease and its transmission, laws and customs of the lands, modern inventions, etc., which are all handmaids of Christianity. Truly the social work of Christian missions is great, and the four hundred pages of Professor Taylor's book are filled with information that no student of missions should be without. The book is handsomely bound in red cloth and will make a valuable addition to any library, and sells for 50c plus 10c for postage. Literally thousands of copies of this book should go upon our bookshelves.

"The Happy Habit" is the title of an attractive volume just from the press of the Chapple Publishing Co., of Boston, publishers of the National Magazine. Joe Mitchell Chapple, author, sits among the travel writers of the world and in "The Happy Habit" has dealt with a variety of subjects, from the Salvation Army lass upon the street to Christmas with the old folks at home, depicting the opportunity for happiness if we only have "The Habit." The handsome volume of five hundred pages will adorn many bookshelves this Christmas, and happy indeed is the man, woman or child who adds to his store of joy in life by hearing the words spoken from these dainty white pages.

"Helpful Hints for Home Makers" is another volume from the Chapple Press that every housewife who gets it will prize. Those who have had occasion to examine the National Magazine in years past remember the Department of Domestic Science to which thousands of women contributed "Helpful Hints." These have now been boiled down and compiled in this dainty volume of six hundred pages, more elaborate and beautiful than any cook book could possibly be. Indeed, it is not a cook book, but rather, as its name signifies, a book of "Helpful Hints for Home Makers." It is most carefully indexed, so you may readily locate suggestive methods for improved domestic culture in the home. This and "The Happy Habit" are offered as premiums with subscriptions to the National Magazine, and are a complement of Heart Throbs and Heart Songs, published in years gone by by the Chapple Co. These are indeed rare volumes.

A Move on Omaha

CHRISTIAN MEN office received a visit a few days ago from Judge W. W. Slabaugh, of Omaha, one of our leading members in the First Church of the Gate City. The judge is Superintendent of the Sunday-school, and interested in charity, philanthropy and social betterment. He is also interested in the Brotherhood Movement, being one of the earliest and most persistent advocates of the idea. There is no Brotherhood as yet in the First Church of Omaha, but there promises to be one before long. The judge took special joy in visiting the public playgrounds of Kansas City, including the public bathhouse, the Helping Hand Institute, Franklin Institute, public parks and institutional churches, and went back to Omaha filled to the brim with firsthand information that will be of assistance in outlining a course of work for the people of Omaha.

Educational Progress

CHRISTIAN MEN readers are interested in religious education, whether they show by their actions or not. Hundreds of business men lend the power of their personality, their names and their money to our educational institutions. This month we publish a number of educational articles from the pens of C. M. Sharpe, L. S. Cook, Clyde R. Hesse and others, all worthy of wide reading.

Busy Kansans

"Hutchinson, Kan., has the biggest bureau of organized men in the state. They are doing things. Two outlying struggling churches have been saved during the year, and a strong mission started in our own city. Our men have stepped under a great local burden and lifted it." So writes O. L. Cook, of Hutchinson, Kan.

Christian University gets $50,000

"Christian University, at Canton, Mo., recently received a magnificent gift of $50,000 in cash from a philanthropic woman in St. Louis whose name, at her own request, is withheld from the public. This fund is to be used for the erection of a dormitory and a gymnasium, to cost $25,000 each. Plans are being prepared for these buildings and both will be ready for use by the opening of school next September. So writes L. S. Cupp, Chancellor.

Results of the R. A. Long Tour

By J. W. Underwood, Pittsburg

We are having additions as a result of our Men's Rally. A fine-looking, clean-cut young man said to me on Sunday evening: "I am going to unite with the Church and go to work for the Lord. You may also put me down for $25 toward your indebtedness and collect any time." This young man was awakened at the rally. Another excellent young man made the good confession on last Sunday evening. Others are on the way. At our recent minister's meeting instead of a regular program we had an open discussion on Brotherhood work. There was not one dissenting voice against affiliation and all are laying plans to either organize a Brotherhood or affiliate their Men's Classes. I announced to the minister that I would take twenty to thirty men anywhere in Western Pennsylvania to assist in organizing a Brotherhood. The harvest is ripe and we are ready for work. In the Men and Religion Forward Movement our ministers have found that a Church without a good live Brotherhood is "up against it."

New Year Resolutions

For Men's Organizations

By J. H. Mohorter

Resolved, That Christian men owe it to themselves, to the Church and to Christ to help each other in the name of Christ and the Church as they are now doing in the work of the lodge.

Resolved, That Christian men could serve themselves better and at less cost through the lodge than through the lodge.

Resolved, That the Church should do for its members all that the lodge is now doing for its members.

Resolved, That the Church should render service to its members now rendered by the lodge.

Resolved, That the Church should take the interest in the lives of Christian men now occupied by the lodge.

Regarding The Programs

The 1912 Calendar was prepared after extensive consultation with Bible School teachers, Boy Experts, Missionary Secretaries, and leaders of educational work throughout the country. And while purely suggestive, it is intended for the consideration of Men's Classes, Brotherhoods, Leagues, Clubs and other groups of men in the local churches. A company of men who will seriously undertake the observance of this Calendar throughout the year 1912 will be assured a pleasant and profitable undertaking, and will find themselves after each meeting further advanced in knowledge of the affairs of the Church and its place in the communities in which they live and labor. Detail programs for each meeting will appear semi-monthly in the issues of the "Front Rank" as well as in the monthly issues of CHRISTIAN MEN, the official organ of men's work.

Brotherhood Organizes Other Brotherhood

Three automobile loads of our fellows went to Virginia yesterday and helped to organize a new one there." So writes J. E. Davis, pastor at Beatrice, Neb. Beatrice has had a Brotherhood for five years and a half, although it has only been affiliated a few months. They are doing a magnificent work. One of the New Year's resolutions we are asking all local Brotherhoods to pass, is that they will assist in organizing at least one Brotherhood or affiliate one group of men with the National Brotherhood during 1912. If this resolution holds good, and we see no reason why it should not, we will turn up a year from now with about 400 local Brotherhoods affiliated with the General Society. Don't you hope that this comes about and that you have a part in doing it?

Eureka Brotherhood Starts a Library

By David H. Shields

There is no public library here nor any place where a boy can get the right sort of a book to read. Our men have undertaken to raise a hundred dollars as a "starter" for books for the boys. They will be placed in the high school building and be under the direction of the superintendent of schools. There will be certain restrictions to be worked out by a committee. Of course a hundred dollars will not buy much of a "library" but it will help the boys that much.

A Mistake

In the account of the tour of our President appearing in the Christian Evangelist, Ashtabula, Ohio, was credited with 140 men. Now Ashtabula is a modest city, located upon Lake Erie, and while she has a good deal to boast about, among other things a fine Brotherhood, owning its own house, affiliated with the General Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, and when this account of only 140 men appeared these men were a little bit excited. In writing to us the President said: "Now we do not want credit for more than we have done, but we really had better than 225 men." Of course it was the printer's error in saying 140 instead of 240. Printers like to do these things. Recently our printer here in Kansas City, who is ordinarily a man that can be trusted, switched photographs and put one man's picture over another man's name. All of which goes to show that printers like every one else are liable to err occasionally.

So Ashtabula had 240 men in attendance upon the R. A. Long tour meeting, and our President said it was as fine a group as they had anywhere along the line.

How A Brotherhood Grew

BY A. R. SPICER

State President Oklahoma Brotherhood

In April, 1910, three young men with zeal and determination organized a Bible Class in our church. The first rally day there were ten men present, when they organized and secured their International certificate. The second rally day there were forty men present, and on the third rally day, seventy-nine were present. Then they organized the Brotherhood with fifty charter members, and now the membership has grown to over one hundred. But this isn't near all, we have just started. Fourteen of these men have made the good confession and fifteen have taken membership with the church. Their motto is "Reaching Out for the Last Man," and the men are living up to it. The class has engineered a lecture course of a high grade, two numbers of which have now been given to crowded houses. Here is another item. We had an election here in Lawton recently, and two of the three men elected as commissioners for the "new commission form of government" were from this group, and the other commissioner is an elder of the church and teacher of the class of older men. The Brotherhood which grew out of the Loyal Men's class is making the church more attractive than the club or pool room for the men of the church and the town. The men are realizing that religion is a reality and not a philosophy.

The Brotherhood men unanimously committed themselves to the following definite line of work.

First: That we will enlist one hundred men in the study of the word of God in our Bible school.

Second: That we will enlist two hundred men in our Brotherhood work by December 31, 1911.

Third: That we will earnestly endeavor to double the male membership of the church by December 31, 1912.

Editor's Note.—We knew when A. R. Spicer left Illinois after winning the prize for CHRISTIAN MEN subscribers, that there would be something doing in a Brotherhood way in Oklahoma. Look at that photo and say "Have you been disappointed?" Brother Spicer very modestly added as a postscript to his article that "Mrs. Spicer is the teacher of the Loyal Men's class," so you see even the women often have a good deal to do with men's activities, which leads us to say that there are many women among us who could well emulate Mrs. Spicer in this regard. Over in Kansas City the wife of the City Missionary, Mrs. Frank L. Bowen, turned her men's class into a Brotherhood class which is the envy of every Kansas City church. What would we men do in the church without the women?

Introduction of visitors and strangers.

Greeting of new members.

Offering.

Suggestions on Above Cultural Program.

First Address: Show the value of the "Little Red School House on the Hill." Contrast nations and communities that have and have not the public school. Show how ignorance and vice go hand in hand.

Second Address: (a) Show how the public school labors to scientifically adapt its message to the mind that is to receive it—a graded school and graded lessons. (b) Show the lack of parental and social oversight of public school morals; the lack of supervision of playgrounds and sports. See files of Survey Magazine for awful revelations as to sexual evil in the high schools and upper grades.

Third Address: Make it plain and send it home that if the church does not teach the Bible, it will not be taught. Is it necessary that we should know the Bible? Show that the knowledge and practice of Biblical principles not only keeps individual souls out of hell, but also keeps society en masse from turning into a hell.

Fourth Address: Make it effective that a wide-awake church will see that its Bible school message is adapted to the minds that are to receive it. Show the foolishness of trying to give an adult's message to a five-year-old child—trying to teach metaphysics when we ought to be arousing the imagination. Lay on hard the vital necessity of equipping the Bible School as rapidly as possible with sane methods and apparatus for teaching the most wonderful message the world will ever hear; provisions of separate rooms and departments, sand tables, moulding clay, maps, charts, pictures, reference books, good literature, trained and consecrated teachers.

The Discussion: Take this matter up freely. The Program Committee should see that someone leads in this. "What can we do?" Answer: Be a Fatherhood to the whole school. We must do more than build a Men's Bible class. Let the men take the initiative in improvement. The women will soon join them. Help the superintendent and the pastor make the school everything it ought to be. Do not try to be spectacular, try to be useful. Do not try to make your school spectacular, try to make it useful.

PROGRAM FOR FEBRUARY No. 1.

PIC—"The Church at Home."

Devotional.

Hymn, "The Church in the Wildwood," from Brotherhood Hymns.

Prayer for the home church.

Hymn, "Home, Sweet Home," from Brotherhood Hymns.

Scripture, Eph. 4:1-11.

Hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

II.—Cultural—Three ten-minute addresses.

1. "The Church the Teacher of Righteousness."

2. "The Church the Prophet of Truth."

3. "The Church the Savior of Society."

4. Music.

5. Discussion.—"Will our Brotherhood men get busy making our church a teacher, a prophet, and a savior?"

6. Clincher: Let us begin at once. What is the first thing we will do?

III.—Business.

1. Roll call.
2. Minutes.
3. Reports.
4. Offering for Brotherhood work.
5. Unfinished business.
6. New business.
7. New members, reception by president and pastor.

IV.—Social.

1. Informal meeting of new members.
2. Introduction of strangers and visitors.
3. General good fellowship.
4. Benediction.

Suggestions for above cultural program.

First Address: (a) Contrast the purpose of the church with the purposes of other institutions in your community—public schools, the bar, the bench, etc. (b) Show that first of all the church is a teacher of Righteousness. This is its peculiar field. (c) This being true, show the opportunity and responsibility of the church to the community and world.

Second Address: (a) The church is not a foreseer of events, but a foreteller of truth. If those who are diligent in studying God's Word and ways cannot foresee consequences, then the world is in a pitiable condition. (b) Therein lies the real province of the pulpit. It must be a prophet's throne or fail. (c) Show what the men of the church can do toward releasing the pastor from detail and "serving of tables" unto the work of the prophet.

Third Address: This divides into two visions. (a) Evangelism. Emphasize individual evangelism. Suggest systematic organization for this work. Show possibilities when every redeemed man comes a teller of the good news. (b) Social Service. It is not simply the church's duty to teach and prophesy, but to work—ramify its influence to the circumference of society. Suggest lines of service and tasks. Urge the appointment of committees who shall be responsible for actually getting things done. For instance, social surveys, including sanitation, tenements, social evil, juvenile delinquency, non-enforcement of law, non-church-going men out of job, need of Brotherhood spirit, etc., etc. This is a great field and a wide opportunity. It is virtually untended. Press in. As you do your vision will widen and opportunities will beckon.

Discussion: Program Committee should appoint someone to lead in this. Pull together all the suggestions of the evening and plan for action.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Boy City Talk

Plain Words to Fathers

Someone has said that fathers who make companions of their boys will be better men and will raise a mighty good band of boys. Seldom indeed do we find a father who does not want his son to be better than he, yet has he any right to expect it if he does not set the right kind of an example? It is not always the poor man's son who is neglected. Many a boy whose father is rich and gives the boy everything the boy wants in a material way is without the influence that uplifts.

Fathers are too often absorbed so much in the quest for gold that they forget their sons, and the boys are grown before the father realizes it, and lost, too, sometimes. Many boys are thus left to grow up without restraint and without moral or religious advantages.

The father generally is more careful what he does if his son is near, and some fathers will sacrifice if they see that it will help their sons. Fathers are revered more for what they are and do rather than what they say or preach. If they are worthy of their son's admiration they will not have to tell their boys to reverence them; their sons will do that without being told.

Boys are born imitators and they will always ape a man. The man whom they take for their pattern may not always have the highest ideals, nor be the fit example for the boy, yet the boy will think that everything that that man does is right. There are hundreds of boys who are longing for the time when they can put on long trousers and be like father or big brother. Fathers have not yet realized as they should that to them is given the welfare of our future America.

Fathers should answer the boys' questions. If you as a father are truly interested in your son you will want to be the one who shall tell him of the mysteries of life and not let him hear of them first from the lips of one who may put the wrong word or thought or interpretation upon life. It is the boy's right that his father be his example, and it is a sad commentary on the home life and the father when someone outside the home must be the one to know the boy better. I know that the fathers are busy, but they are home a part of each day, and I have known fathers send their boys from them if they become interested in the paper. All fathers we know of boys and went through the same temptations as their sons are going through and should be the ones to guide the boys in the right way. Mothers were never boys, and of course don't know. Yet many a mother has been able to take a father's place in the boy's life. It is much better to be interested in the boy when he builds his block houses and perhaps have a backache than to have a heartache when the boy is older and forgets to come to the father for advice in building his air castles or plans for his future.

The attitude of the fathers upon the moral questions of the day has a great influence upon the boys. I know boys who become addicted to the drink habit because their fathers failed to take a stand against it in a local option election. One boy asked his father how he was going to vote. The father answered that he did not know. The son said, "That means that you are going to vote wet." The father tried to explain to the boy, but the son would not take an indifferent answer, so the father said, "I'll vote dry for your sake, my son," and he did. Because of this father's vote and many more the city abolished the saloons.

One of the boys in my camp several years ago received the following postal card which I think tells the story of true companionship between father and son:

"Canton, Ill., July 29, 1908.

(Yours received.)

Leather Breeches!

"Are you well? Are you busted? Hope you will have a good time. Behave yourself
"Your Jolly Old Chum."

In writing to a grown son who had left home, one mother wrote:

"I wanted to write you on your birthday. Such a short time, it seems, since you were a little boy, helping me about the house. We often talk about it, papa and I, and wish that we could live over those years again. Papa says he would lead a different and better life."

There are many such cases, sorry too late. We have all read of how fathers have tried to save their sons from some physical harm, yet how many fathers are willing to let them go for their sons. Some folks would rather have their sons go to the "devil" than to own that anyone besides themselves could help them. I have known this to be true when boys have been incorrigible and after the parents have told me that they could do nothing with the boys. Boys always choose a man for their hero, and it is a lamentable fact that every father chooses his boy's hero. Boys see that a certain man is successful, that he has many people working for him, and they say, "He is what I would like to be." These boys look to the material side rather than the moral or religious side of that man's life. A man so many times taken for an example by the boys does not stay at home on Sundays, he does not go to church on Sundays, saying that he must read his mail. His wife and children do not know him as a companion at home. His sons have never had a confidential talk with him. His motto is to be: "Success, no matter at what cost." But that success spells failure, for it is as reasoned for time only, and forgotten in eternity.

A little fellow, a member of my Sunday-school class, was killed by the train. When I went to see the father after the accident, he said: "Oh, I wish that you had gotten hold of my boy. I know that he would not have tried to run away from home if you had known him sooner. He seemed to look up to a lot of you." What a sad cry from a father! To think that someone else could have gotten hold of that boy to save him from physical death. Yet I want to stand right here that there are boys today, some of them are living in fine houses, who are dying a worse death than being killed by a train.

Bob was a boy who had about everything he wanted. Clothes and good times were his; used his father's automobile to take his friends riding, and was the only child. One day his uncle came to visit him and talked to him when they were alone: "You don't seem to appreciate anything that your father does for you, Bob. You bum around in your rooms and smoke cigarettes, and you say that your folks do not want you to do these things. What is the matter?"

"Oh," the boy answered, "I may have all the things, but you don't understand. My father does not love me, at least he never shows it. He dresses me fine because I'm a boy and people would talk if he didn't. He never talks to me as if he cared for me. No, you don't understand."

The father's duty is to protect his son. The power is in his hands. Who is responsible if a man sells your boys cigarettes, tobacco, liquor or anything that injures his health or body? The father. Who can vote out the dens of vice in the community? The father. Who can see that blood and thunder shows are shut out? The father. Who can object when the billboards are plastered with wild and exciting pictures that burn into a boy's mind more than the studies at school? The father. Who is really responsible for the boys of today? The father.

It is a "Man's work in a man's way," and the fathers in our churches are big enough if they will to put a ban on all things that tend to make a boy less a man. The kingdom of heaven needs boys. Remember, too, that when we save a boy we save a life as well as a soul. Lilburn Merrill, chief probation officer of the Denver Juvenile Court, well said: "A bad boy is what I am but for the grace of God." It takes the blood of Christ to save the boy wholly.

It should not be forgotten that it is not enough for the father that he provides food and clothing and a place for his boy to sleep, but that his greatest duty is to love and protect the boy.

Too long our laws have been topsy turvy, and it is only of late that these conditions are being adjusted. The juvenile laws are making the parents responsible for the acts of their children. The law used to say that a boy was a man if he did a wrong, but that he was a child in all civil rights until he was 21. Today the juvenile laws make the child an infant if under the juvenile age and summon the parents into court with the child.

We have fathers that are good; men who are trying with all their might to help their own boys, knowing that their efforts will be of benefit to other men's sons. The churches are awakening to their duty to the growing manhood, and are making it possible for the boy to get a manly glimpse of the Man of Galilee.

Possibly the best equipped church in the Disciples of Christ is in the Independence Boulevard Christian Church, of Kansas City, Mo., where R. A. Long has given a Sunday-school building equipped with classrooms, organs, club rooms, gymnasium and swimming pool. The church, through the Men's Brotherhood, has a Boy's Secretary, who spends all his time in working with the boys. It is a new work, one without precedents, and will be watched with interest by all who are looking to see this work do big things.

(a) Central organization such as "Boy City."

(b) Object of club should be to develop the boy four square—mentally, physically, socially and religiously.

(c) Suggested Pledge.

I believe that Christ lived to be an example for me; that when He was my age He was strong, pure and manly, fighting the same temptations that come to me as a boy. I will try my best to be like Him and in my daily life do nothing that I would not do if He were by my side. I will play every game square, whether sport or living, and in the night time be as square as in the sunlight. Thus with Christ's help I will try to live.

(d) Have something doing all the time (outdoor and indoor sports).

LESSON 2—JANUARY 14.

“THE BIRTH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.”
LUKE 1:57-80.

Print verses 57-75. Commit verses 67-69.

57 Now Elisabeth's time was fulfilled that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son. 58 And her neighbors and her kinsfolk heard that the Lord had magnified his mercy towards her; and they rejoiced with her. 59 And it came to pass on the eighth day, that they came to circumcise the child; and they would have called him Zacharias, after the name of his father. 60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John. 61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name. 62 And they made signs to his father, what he would have him called. 63 And he asked for a writing tablet, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all. 64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed, and he spake, blessing God. 65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judæa. 66 And all that heard them laid them up in their heart, saying, What then shall this child be? For the hand of the Lord was with him.

67 And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit and prophesied, saying,

68 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel;
For he hath visited and wrought redemption for his people,

69 And hath raised up a horn of salvation for us

In the house of his servant David

70 (As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old),

71 Salvation from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us;

72 To show mercy towards our fathers,
And to remember his holy covenant;

73 The oath which he sware unto Abraham our father,

74 To grant unto us that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies
Should serve him without fear,

75 In holiness and righteousness before him all our days.

Golden Text. “Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people.”—Luke 1:68.

Time. B. C. 5.

Place. Somewhere in the hill country of Judæa.

Explanatory. 57—Elisabeth, the wife of Zacharias. 58—The Lord had magnified his mercy toward her. In giving her a son in her old age. And they rejoiced with her. One of the highest honors coming to a woman of the olden times was to be the mother of a son. 59—They came to circumcise the child. The Jews circumcised on the eighth day. They would have called him Zacharias. In this they would have honored the father. 60—He shall be called John. “The mother knew that this name was given by the angel.” Luke 1:13. 61—*None of thy kindred * * * by this name.* It was customary to name a child after some of his relatives. 62-63—And they made signs to his father. The father had been stricken with dumbness when the angel told him that Elisabeth should bear a child. 64—And his tongue loosed and he spake. The angel had said that he would be silent and unable to speak until the day that these things should come to pass. John had asked how he might know that the angel's words were true, and now having been dumb and again made to speak he could believe everything else which had been said about the child—that he was to be the forerunner of Christ. 65—And fear came on all. Zacharias' inability to speak and the fact that the aged wife had given birth to a son had convinced all the people round about that this was out of the ordinary and God must be in it. 66—What then shall this child be? Knowing that he was of the Lord, they expected an extraordinary child. He was born for a great purpose. 67-68—Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit and prophesied. He now prophesied of a thing that was to come to pass as though it were already done.

69—And hath raised up a horn of salvation. The horn of many wild animals is their weapon of defense. The power by which God would now overthrow their enemies is referred to as a horn. In the house of his servant David. The Mighty Deliverer was to belong to the family of David. 70—*As he spake by the * * * holy prophets.* The prophets had uttered God's thoughts to men. 71—Salvation from our enemies. They were oppressed by the Roman government. They longed for deliverance. 72—To show mercy towards our father. The promise had been made to the fathers on earth and now it is to be fulfilled. 73. An oath which he swore unto Abraham. This oath is found in Gen. 22:16-17, and referred to in Heb. 6:13-14. It is the same as the covenant of verse 72. 74—Serve him without fear. Being delivered from their enemies, their service would be fearless. 75—In holiness and righteousness. Holiness towards God; righteousness towards men. 76-79. Zacharias here addresses himself to his child, telling of his mission and of the blessings that shall attend his life.

Comments on the Lesson

We can easily enter into the feelings of the people and the excitement occasioned in the hill country of Judæa when John was born. The mother was an old lady. In no other home in the land had a son been born to one so aged. The father had been told that he would be speechless until the birth of the child. Doubtless many had wondered through the days why Zacharias could not speak, but with the babe in the old mother's arms, and the father on the special occasion of the circumcision being able to speak left no doubt in the minds of the people that this was a most extraordinary occasion and this an extraordinary child. They now thought the Lord was in it all. God never forgets his promises. He promised this child that certain conditions would exist. What he said now came true. John's mission was to prepare the world for the reception of the Christ. He announced the coming of a new kingdom and made the people feel the greatness of their sins and the need of a Savior. When he finished preaching, there was a hunger and thirst for righteousness. He established a nucleus of men who were prepared to receive the teaching of Jesus and thus become key men in his work. It was he who introduced the Messiah to the world, baptized him and by the descent of the Holy Spirit at the time of the baptism was convinced himself and in turn convinced his audience that Jesus was the Christ of God.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Elisabeth? Who was Zacharias? What relation was John to Jesus? Where was John born? Why was Zacharias stricken dumb? What was peculiar about the birth of John? What effect did his birth have upon the people of the community? How did Zacharias know that John was to be the forerunner of the Christ? Why was he circumcised on the eighth day? Where was he reared? What was his mission?

LESSON 3—JANUARY 21.

"THE BIRTH OF JESUS"—LUKE 2:1-20.

Print verses 8-20. Commit verses 10, 11.

Read Matt. 1:18-25.

8 And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock. 9 And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shown round about them: and they were sore afraid. 10 And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people: 11 for there is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. 12 And this is the sign unto you: Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger. 13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, 14 Glory to God in the highest,

And on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased.

15 And it came to pass, when the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing that is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. 16 And they came with haste, and found both Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in the manger. 17 And when they saw it, they made known concerning the saying which was spoken to them about this child. 18 And all that heard it wondered at the things which were spoken unto them by the shepherds. 19 But Mary kept all these sayings, pondering them in her heart. 20 And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, even as it was spoken unto them.

Golden Text. "For unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:11.

Time. The last of December, B. C. 5, six months after the last lesson.

Place. Bethlehem of Judæa, a village five or six miles south of Jerusalem.

Introduction. Bethlehem means "house of bread," so called because of the fertile fields adjacent. Here Ruth and Boaz had lived. It is called the City of David because it was his birthplace. The mother of Jesus lived in Nazareth, but the prophet had foretold that Jesus should be born in Bethlehem. Mic. 5:2. The providence of God is manifest by a decree which brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem through the enrollment of the whole Roman Empire. The time of the birth of Jesus was fitting. It was prior to the fall of the Jewish nation and the destruction of the temple. Rome being in power, the heralds of the Gospel could travel in safety. It was an era of peace. The Greek language was the universal language, hence there was a tongue understood by all, in which the Gospel would be told. Through the dispersion of the Jews the Old Testament had been carried among many places and there were those in every land looking for the Messiah. The synagogue in various towns furnished a place in which to preach the Gospel. All of these were helpful. It helped to constitute what is known as the fullness of time.

Explanatory. 8—*The shepherds * * * abiding in the field.* Near Bethlehem. Tradition makes the place about a mile from the village. Historic ground. David had been reared here. It was the home of Boaz and Ruth. Except in coldest weather the shepherds watched their flocks in the fields; at night sleeping on the ground, wrapped in a heavy cloak. 9—An angel of the Lord. A messenger from heaven. The glory of the Lord. A radiant brightness, which was a symbol of God's presence. They were sore afraid. They realized the presence before them. It was unexpected. They were startled. 10—And the angel said unto them, Be not afraid. This was not a time for fear, but for rejoicing. I bring you good tidings of great joy. The world was looking for the Messiah. That he had come would be good tidings. His blessings were to reach all people. 11—A Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. In Bethlehem had been born one who should save them from their sins. Christ means "the anointed." 12—Wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger. That shepherds might know which child is the Christ, this description is given, and thus finding him helped to create faith. Swaddling clothes were bands or blankets that were bound tightly about the limbs to prevent distortion. 13—A multitude of the heavenly host. The angel who had announced the good tidings was now accompanied with the multitude, who joined in the song of praise. 14—Glory to God in the highest. Christ being the gift of God, his life and work would bring him glory. His praises were sung to the highest strain. And on earth, peace. Jesus brought peace to the earth. When he is fully accepted, it means peace between man and God, and between man and man. 15—Let us now go. There was no delay. Immediately they went to see their Lord. 16—They came with haste. This was a manifestation of their faith and zeal. *And found * * * the babe lying in a manger.* They saw Joseph and Mary, and then, lying in a manger, exactly as the angel had described, they saw the babe. 17—They made known concerning the saying. Good news cannot be kept. This news belonged to the world, and they told those in the inn and others whom they met of the joyful tidings. 18—And all that heard it wondered. This news was startling. They were astonished. 19—But Mary kept all these sayings. While others soon forgot about it, Mary never forgot. She knew this child was the Christ of God. Doubtless she kept comparing what had happened with the prophecies that had been made. She remembered the message of the angel. While the angels published, Mary meditated. 20—The shepherds returned. Back to duty's path they turned. They believed, and hence gave God the glory for this unspeakable gift.

Comments on the Lesson

Often the greatest blessings come to us while performing our daily duties. The shepherds were watching their flocks by night. To them this was a common duty. God selected busy men as the ones to whom the glad news should first be told. They were also common people. Not to royalty, as the world calls one royal, but those of royal character, who would listen, investigate and examine for themselves; to such came the angel. The angel having departed, the shepherds went at once to see the Christ. If men would today investigate as did the shepherds, and be as prompt as they were in searching for the Christ, the world could soon be brought to the feet of the Master. Having seen, the shepherds now began to publish the news. They began with the ones nearest at hand—those in the inn.

Questions for Class Use

Where is Bethlehem? Who had lived there prior to this time? Why were Mary and Joseph in Bethlehem at this time? What was the message of the angels? What is the meaning of the word Christ? Name some of the prophecies that were made concerning this event? What effect had the angel's message upon the shepherds?

LESSON 4—JANUARY 28.

"THE PRESENTATION IN THE TEMPLE"—LUKE 2:22-39.

Print verses 25-38.

25 And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and this man was righteous and devout, looking for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Spirit was upon him. 26 And it had been revealed unto him by the Holy Spirit, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ. 27 And he came in the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, that they might do concerning him after the custom of the law, 28 then he received him into his arms, and blessed God, and said,

29 Now lettest thou thy servant depart, Lord, According to thy word, in peace;

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation,

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples;

32 A light for revelation to the Gentiles, And the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And his father and his mother were marvelling at the things which were spoken concerning him; 34 and Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the falling and rising of many in Israel; and for a sign which is spoken against; 35 yea and a sword shall pierce through thine own soul; that thoughts out of many hearts may be revealed. 36 And there was one Anna, a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Asher (she was of a great age, having lived with a husband seven years from her virginity, 37 and she had been a widow even unto fourscore and four years, who departed not from the temple, worshipping with fastings and supplications night and day. 38 And coming up at that very hour she gave thanks unto God, and spake of him to all them that were looking for the redemption of Jerusalem.

Golden Text. "For mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all peoples."—Luke 2:30-31.

Memory Verses. 29, 30.

Time. Early in February, B. C. 4, forty days after the last lesson.

Place. In the temple at Jerusalem.

Introduction. Forty days have passed since the birth of Jesus. These days were spent in Bethlehem, six miles from Jerusalem. The circumcision is the only event of importance transpiring during this period. At this time he had been named Jesus, as told by the angel. Today we find him in the temple. Read Lev., twelfth chapter, for the teaching of the law on the ceremonial purification of the mother and the redemption of the first-born. Read also Numbers 3:12-13; 44-48; 18:16.

Explanatory. 25—*There was a man * * * whose name was Simeon.* The same as Simon. He was doubtless a familiar figure about the temple. He was a man of God and had been looking for a Savior. Beyond this, nothing more is known of his life. Looking for the consolation of Israel. Full of hope and faith, he expected the Messiah to come, for the prophets had so taught. The Holy Spirit was upon him. With this he was blessed. The Holy Spirit coming upon him did not give him his fine character, but he was thus favored because he had developed such a character. 26—*And had been revealed * * * by the Holy Spirit.* We do not know in what way this was done, but suffice to say the Spirit had made the promise, and he believed the promise. 27—And he came in the Spirit into the temple. The Spirit led him there. The parents brought. Joseph and Mary. Mary was the mother and Joseph her husband. The Christ is the Only Begotten of God. That they might do concerning him, after the custom of the law. To redeem the first-born. 28—Received him into his arms. A happy old man. He now beholds the face of the Lord's Christ. 29—Now. He is ready to go. That for which he has been waiting has come to pass. Depart in peace. To him death was simply a departure. 30—Mine eyes have seen. He has seen that for which he has been looking. When he looks upon the face of the babe, by faith he also saw what he would accomplish. 31—Which thou hast prepared. This preparation had been going on since the fall in the Garden of Eden. Before the face of all peoples. This rises above Jewish narrowness. It is the world-wide reach of the Gospel. 32—A light for revelation to the Gentiles. Jesus is the light of the world, and light is the source of life, of beauty, warmth, comfort, joy, health and power. And the glory of thy people, Israel. The light which was to bless the Gentile world would also bless the Jewish as well. 33—His father and his mother were marvelling. They wondered at the statements of Simeon. 34—This child is set for the falling and the rising of many in Israel. The falling to those who entertained wrong ideas of the King and his kingdom, and the rising to those who are willing that God should overthrow their plans and ambitions and establish a universal kingdom. 35—A sword shall pierce through thine own soul. Mary would be blessed, being the mother of the Christ, these blessings would bring suffering. 36—Anna. Grace or prayer. An old woman who devout. She was a prophetess. 38—Spake * * * to all of them. The Holy Spirit led her to deliver this message. It was no unimportant occasion.

Comments on the Lesson

God has always had good people in the world to help carry out his plans and purposes. Sometimes the ones he uses best are those who come from some obscure corner. As the people looked upon Simeon and Anna in their temple worship from time to time, little did they think that these were the ones who were to be favored and that God was sparing the life of this old man that he might behold the salvation of Israel. He kept close to God's side because he loved God. Attendance in the house of the Lord is a good index of a man's love for the Lord. One of the first signs of backsliding is carelessness at religious worship, and one of the best helps to steadfastness is regularity in attendance at worship. Let us also note the promptness of Joseph and Mary in complying with the Jewish law. If the mother of our Lord was careful to render an exact obedience to the demands of the law, is it not important that we today should be careful to know the law of God, under which we live and render exact obedience to it? One of the dangers of the day is religious anarchy, the setting aside of God's law and every man being a law unto himself. Many presume too much on the mercy of God. Simply because God is merciful does not furnish argument that he will wink at wilful transgression of His law. "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Simeon and Anna rejoiced at seeing the babe, how much more should be our joy when we have the regnant Christ! In the days when Jesus was here upon earth only a few could see him and come under the power of his influence. Today the power of his influence is world-wide. Each person has access to him. No matter where we are, communion can be had with him, and through his written Word he speaks to us.

Questions for Class Use

Who was Simeon? Who was Anna? Why were Joseph and Mary in Jerusalem? What were the ceremonial requirements of the Jewish law regarding the first-born? What do you know of the character of Simeon and Anna? How did they know this was the Christ of Israel? What is meant by "a light for the revelation to the Gentiles?" Why did Joseph and Mary marvel? What is meant by "the falling and the rising of many in Israel?" In what way was the sword to pierce the soul of Mary?

LESSON 1—FEBRUARY 4.

"THE WISE MEN LED BY THE STAR."

Print verses 1-12.

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, certain Wise men from the east came to Jerusalem, saying, 2 Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we saw his star in the east, and we come to worship him. 3 And when the king heard it, he was troubled, and Jerusalem with him. 4 And gathering together all the chief priests and scribes of the law, he inquired of them where the Christ should be born. 5 And they said unto him, Bethlehem of Judaea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

Thou Bethlehem, land of Judah, thou art no wise least among the princes of Judah: out of thee shall come forth a governor, and shall be shepherd of my people Israel.

7 Then Herod privily called the Wisemen, and learned of them exactly what time the star appeared. 8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search out exactly concerning the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word, that I also may come and worship him. 9 And they, having heard the king, went their way; and lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. 10 And when they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. 11 And they came into the house and saw the young child with Mary his mother; and they fell down and worshipped him; and opening their treasures they offered unto him gifts, gold and frankincense and myrrh. 12 And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

Golden Text. "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth; for I am God and there is none else."—Isa. 45:22.

Memory Verses. 1, 2.

Theme. B. C. 4.

Place. Bethlehem of Judaea.

Explanatory. 1—When Jesus was born in Bethlehem. Mary and Joseph lived in Nazareth until the decree of Augustus Cæsar concerning the enrollment had brought them to Bethlehem.

Bethlehem. Luke 1:26. Herod, the king. This was Herod the Great, the founder of the Herodian family. Though aliens by race, the Herodians were Jews in faith. Having won the favor of Marc Antony, Herod had been made king. Though king, he was subject to the Roman Empire. Wise men from the East. Magi, who possessed the real learning and philosophy of other countries. The number is indefinite. One tradition makes the number twelve. The common belief is that there were three; this being based upon the fact that three gifts were presented; each one bringing a gift. 2—Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Throughout the entire East at this time prevailed the conviction that ere long a powerful monarch would arise in Judea. Confucius in China, 500 B. C., had prophesied the appearance of such a deliverer. We saw his star in the east. In the eastern countries. This star was so different from any other star in its superior brightness. It stood still over the house where the mother and babe were. 3—*When Herod * * * heard it.* Herod was unpopular with the people. Being fearful of losing his position, he was troubled. 4—He inquired of them. Having before him those who ought to know whether Christ should be born, he now questioned. His fear led him to inquire. 5-6—And they said. They quoted Micah 5:2. They were well posted on this topic. 7—Then Herod privily called the wise men. He believed the child born was the expected king. His decision had been made concerning the destruction of the child. 8—He sent them to Bethlehem. Six miles out of Jerusalem. Search out exactly. He desired the child to be found. His going to worship Herod was all pretending. It was not worship but destruction that prompted his move. 9—And the star. The star again appears to guide them and stands over the house, that they may know the exact place where the babe lay. This was also evidence that God was with them. It saves them the trouble of making inquiry in the village and hence could worship unmolested. 10—When they saw the star they rejoiced. God's favor had been made manifest; the child would soon be seen. 11—And they came into the house. The parents and Joseph were now living in a house. They fell down and worshipped. This is the Oriental manner of showing homage. It was the custom to bring gifts when visiting royalty. Frankincense. A gum resin, valued for its sweet odor when burnt. A valuable product of the East. Myrrh. An aromatic gum used in perfumes.

Comments on the Lesson

Lange says, "The infant Savior was concealed, yet well known; hated and feared, yet longed for and loved; signally despised, yet marvelously honored; besought by extreme dangers, yet kept in perfect safety. He set everything in motion, attracted all that was congenial, repelled all that was hostile." In his babyhood he represented our weakness and helplessness. He divested himself of the glory which he had with the Father, to show the lowliness of our humility. Herod lived amidst a people who knew the prophecies and expected the Christ, and yet he did not know. He was a worldly man and his mind was on worldly things. There are men living in our Christian nation, who were they called abroad and were asked to explain some of the wonderful workings of the Gospel, would be as ignorant of it as was Herod of the coming of the Christ. Many a man has died of hunger when surrounded with plenty. The fact that a man lives in a Christian nation will not save him. Knowledge must be accepted, faith must be established, works must be evident or there is no salvation. The wise men went a long way to worship. There are men today who would travel many miles if they were to look upon the face of the Christ but will not walk three blocks to worship him in the house set apart for that purpose. Christ is real today. He is pleased with our worship when we worship in spirit and in truth. The wise men who came to worship the new-born King, gave gifts. These were a manifestation of the sincerity of their worship and the intensity of their love. From that event there has come down through the ages the beautiful custom of making gifts at Christmas time. It is the King's birthday. While we cannot make gifts to him direct, we do give unto Him when we give unto His.—"Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

Questions for Class Use

Where is Bethlehem? From what countries did the wise men come? How were they attracted? Who was Herod? Why was he troubled? What cunning was here practiced by Herod? What gifts did the wise men bring? What lesson does this teach us?

FEBRUARY FEASTINGS

the second month of 1912—the month h gives to this leap year its extra making 366 in all, the month which the calendar year a whole twenty-hours over and above other years now at hand.

January has been a hard month. Snows blows, accompanied by much suf-fing, have been the order from coast east and from Canada to the Gulf, thanks to the spirit of brotherhood h permeates every city, village and v, many who would otherwise be suf-s from cold and hunger have been portable.

Our Februa (feast) ought to be a h of diligent preparation on the of the CHRISTIAN MEN readers.
January honors some great men. Abra-Lincoln was born in February and several of our great commonwealths honor the day by cessation of business and usual holiday observances. Closely following comes St. Valentine's Day, when friend remembers friend with dainty envelopes and pretty tinsled cardboard, speaking glad sentiments of love and devotion. There is no day whose sentiment is stronger than St. Valentine's.

Then comes the birthday of the father of this nation, whom every American citizen honors and reveres. The day is unanimously observed although its patriotic significance is generally disregarded. But with CHRISTIAN MEN readers and Brotherhood men in general February will mean more than feasting and holidays—it will mean diligent study of the great issues confronting Christianity on the foreign field. It will mean a gathering of our men together in the local churches in small groups to take up the subject of "the church abroad." Much information and inspiration will be dispensed at these meetings. The only difficulty with the meetings is, we do not have nearly enough of them. That is, many of our churches do not get their men together with any regularity or precision and many of our men never get together at all, or when they do come together they do not get anywhere as regards a program. We have endeavored to keep CHRISTIAN MEN overflowing with matter of interest to Christian men who mean business, and truth forces us to say that the action of many of our churches indicates that we do have Christian men who do not mean business. If all of our men meant business it would not be necessary for the President of our Foreign Missionary Society, or any other society, to spend the major portion of his time in the field raising money for the support of his work or creating sentiment that will bring the coveted support. If more of our men meant business we would have groups of men in every church meeting together at least once each week for prayer. They would also come together once a week for the study of the Word, and they would also meet for a cultural program at least once each month. There is not a particle of doubt about the truth of the above statements, as we are prepared to prove. History repeats itself wherever a leader with consecration and ability wills that such will be done. The trouble is, brethren, many of our pastors are already overloaded. "Doing four men's work," as one pastor said to me a few days ago. Changed conditions must be brought about. We know our pastors are busy men, and our laymen are busy men, too, busy about the affairs of commerce, and our pastors and laymen must work hand in hand in this matter—neither has any right to disregard the other, and work will fail just so sure as pastors and laymen fail to coöperate.

We wish every month that CHRISTIAN MEN had 148 pages instead of only 148 because there is so much along this line that we want to say. But we cannot say it, and if we did you men would not read it. What you can do, and must do, if you mean business on the proposition of men's work in the church is to call your men together and give them a chance to make good. You certainly owe it to yourselves, your Church and your church to do this much, and any less means nothing but a block in the way of progress.

Our Men's Bible Class

At the head of the pages devoted to consideration of the Bible School Lessons in this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN will be found the above caption. With the January issue of this paper the connection of Brother P. H. Welshimer as Bible School Editor, ceased, and hereafter the lessons will be prepared with our own official family. As CHRISTIAN MEN is becoming more and more of a Bible study exponent, it is only proper that the lessons should receive an exposition commensurate with the needs of our large and growing constituency. Mr. Welshimer has done noble work in the almost three years that he has served us so acceptably as Bible School Editor, and it was only because of the growing demands upon his time in his church at Canton, Ohio, and his inability to devote a larger time to this work, that caused him to relinquish his work as Bible School Editor of this paper. However, our readers may still be assured of a most interesting treatment of the great subjects that are placed before our Men's Bible Class from week to week.

Bucking the Tiger

Winning a Local Option Campaign

BY JUDGE ROBERT L. ADAIR.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN, WAYNE COUNTY, OHIO, DECEMBER 22, 1911

Row, from left to right: Judge Robert L. Adair, Publicity; Rev. Frank Scattergood, Law Enforcement; Prof. L. C. Knight, Finance; Prof. H. F. Manns, Secretary Executive Committee; Mr. S. H. Dawson, Committee on Polls; Prof. J. H. Hooke, Treasurer Local Option Funds; Prof. Charles Martin, Severance, Publicity; Mr. H. F. Crowl, Committee on Polls.

Four years ago the legislature of Ohio passed a law making the county a local option unit. Under the provision of that law the county after another voted out saloons until sixty-six out of the eighty counties in the state were without legalized saloons. The liquor interests were prompt to realize the danger to the total elimination of the saloon and confronted them in the state and set upon a systematic and extensive campaign of defiant violation of law. Riots were formed in many of the larger cities in dry counties to prevent by force the execution of the laws by the local officers. The riot in Newark, in which Carl Etherington, the dry detective, was lynched, was a result of such a mob violence. What was done in Newark was done in many other places on a small scale with less terrible results. Wayne County did not escape. Officials were assaulted. Private citizens were attacked. On one occasion the sheriff, in the performance of his duty, was assailed by a frenzied mob of ignorant wet sympathizers.

The purpose of these disturbances was to throw discredit upon the county local option laws. In many places the result intended was accomplished; so that when the three years' period when a second vote was permitted had elapsed many of the counties readmitted the saloon. The liquor interests, encouraged by the fact that fourteen out of eighteen counties had recently voted wet, brought on an election in Wayne County. At the beginning the outlook was gloomy. It could not be denied that the law had not been enforced as it should have been, and many well-meaning people had been induced to believe that the return of the legalized saloon was preferable to the "speak-easy," the commotion and excitement of law violation, and the bitterness that was engendered by the efforts for enforcement. A petition for an election was filed by the "wets" on the first day of December. The election date fixed by the court was December 22d. As soon as it became evident that an election was inevitable, the thoughts of the temperance people centered on Mr. J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary of the National Brotherhood, to lead the fight. Mr. R. A. Long was communicated with by telegraph, and with that generous exhibition of sympathy for every good cause which is his characteristic, referred the matter to the Executive Committee with favorable recommendations, and our request was granted.

Mr. Shellenberger, at the outset, outlined a plan of campaign. He pointed out, first, that it must be a spirited campaign of agitation and education; second, that it must be free from personal feeling and bitterness; third, that all attack was to be made against the saloon as an institution, and not against persons. It was determined to enlist every part of the county at the earliest possible moment. A county mass-meeting was called at Wooster. Spirited discussion of plans and stirring speeches led up to a county-wide organization. The governing body was a committee composed of one man from each township and one from each town in the county. This body appointed a campaign committee which kept in constant touch with the work and called together the larger committee as occasions demanded. In other counties, the liquor interests had masqueraded under the name of "Business Men's League." In our case we simply beat them to it; so we organized ourselves into "The Wayne County Business Men's Association." We further decided to do everything in the open, and to avoid everything that looked like political chicanery, believing that the justice of the cause made trickery unnecessary. It was further decided not to try to hide behind names or to do things anonymously, but give the cause the benefit of the personality of its advocates.

The names of the committee were printed at the head of the paper and on the letter heads, and the names of the writers were given with many articles.

A daily paper was published the last ten days of the campaign and mailed to every voter in the county, whether wet, dry or doubtful. The task of addressing, wrapping and mailing some ten thousand of these papers each day was no slight task, but was expeditiously done by the women of Wooster. Seventy-six thousand copies were mailed in eight days.

A speech-making campaign was organized and an effort was made to have a meeting in every school house in the county. Result: One hundred and thirty meetings in eight days. A call was issued by the committee for the general observance of cottage prayer-meetings in every part of the county on Tuesday evening before election. It was sought to have one in each school district and one on each of the principal streets of the towns. Two hundred and thirty-five such meetings were held.

In the midst of all the agitation the organization made a systematic effort to reach the last voter in the county personally. Personal workers were picked and sent out.

As the campaign grew warm, men and women went to work with a will. Many practically gave up their business. Some of the farmers went from house to house the last ten days of the campaign. They waded mud, threaded darkness, plodded through rain. One man was busy arranging meetings and getting out advertising matter. A committee set themselves to writing articles for the paper. Others gave practically their whole time to addressing meetings. The headquarters presented a busy scene. In a large room there were from thirty to forty women sending out the paper; in another room, a stenographer and several girls were getting out correspondence; elsewhere, often a township committee was in session with the workers. The telephone was brought into constant requisition and the temperance people were constantly dropping into headquarters for information, advice and consultation.

One evening the disappointing news came that two sister counties had gone "wet." This cast a deep gloom over the workers. Mr. Shellenberger called the workers and asked them to lay aside their work and to gather for a season of prayer. They did it as naturally as going to dinner. Indeed, the whole campaign was conducted in the spirit of prayer. It began with a prayer-meeting and closed with a prayer and praise service. Faith was renewed and in the morning they were all at work again with their confidence as strong as ever. On a still later evening the news came of two other counties where the temperance forces had won and again we prayed for guidance and confidence.

As the campaign progressed recruits were secured from the ranks of the wets. Men who had talked "wet" for months began to talk "dry." The campaign of education was furnishing arguments for the temperance men, and they were not slow to use them. In a number of instances those who had been the victims of the drink habit became active advocates for the "dry" cause and were most effective workers. During the progress of the campaign the Mayor of Wooster imposed a heavy fine on the local brewery for violating the law. This act inspired confidence that the laws could be enforced if the people would take hold. F. H. Scattergood, pastor of the Christian Church of Wooster, was the active spirit in the campaign for law enforcement. Wooster is the seat of Wooster University—a strong Presbyterian College. The wets had timed the filing of the petition so as to bring the election during the holiday season; but the students presented a petition to the faculty to extend the school term three days so they could vote, and the faculty granted the request.

A parade was held in Wooster on the evening before the election, in which the Sunday-Schools, the Grand Army of the Republic, the women of the W. C. T. U., the students of the University, employees of State Agricultural Farm and many citizens participated. The culmination of enthusiasm was reached when the boys of the High School gave the High School yell as the parade passed through the public square.

The committee adopted the policy of giving a large place to the critical investigation and public discussion of the effect of the liquor traffic locally. They made prominent its relation to the morals, the business and the social life of the people of the county.

When election day came the plans for getting out the dry vote and having it honestly counted had been perfected. The dry challengers were on hand in every voting booth. They did not permit a suspicious stranger to escape their vigilant eyes. The dry workers were out stirring up the dry voters to get to the polls. Phone gangs were organized and "dry" voters were compelled to go to the polls or cut their wires. The day was drizzly and gloomy, supposedly unfavorable to the temperance people. Finally the polls are closed and the count began. In just six minutes the first precinct reported "dry!" Then another "dry!" and still another "dry!" In a few minutes after the polls closed it was apparent that the "drys" had won by a surprising majority! All day the women throughout the county held prayer-meetings. Each hour the church bells rang the call to prayer. As soon as the result was ascertained the temperance men of Wooster assembled at headquarters and joined with the women in a praise service. The campaign song* was sung with more enthusiasm than ever, although used in almost every meeting held in the county. This service was led by Mr. Shellenberger and was vibrant with spiritual enthusiasm and holy joy. It was a happy introduction to Christmas.

A splendid majority of about 3 to 2 in favor of the "drys" makes it practically certain that the saloon has been permanently banished from Wayne county.

* The Campaign Song—for God at Home

WALDO H. DUNN, PROF. OF ENGLISH
WOOSTER UNIVERSITY.

Air. Battle Hymn of the Republic.
Mine eyes have seen a vision of the triumph of the right,
For the piercing beams of morning break darkness of sin's night;
And the sons of earth, unfettered, shall the sons of God in light,
And sin shall be no more!

CHORUS:

Glory, glory, hallelujah! Glory, glory hallelujah!
Glory, glory, hallelujah! Ye sons of Wayne awake.

Now the hosts of sin confront us; they would darken all the dawn;
They would loose again the evils, all they
that are gone;
They would wake from caves of darkest darkest passions long withdrawn;
Let brave men now awake!

Shall saloons again be planted in the bosom of old Wayne?
Shall we sell our souls and bodies at the market-place of Gain?
Shall we add ours sons and daughters to the ghastly heaps of slain?
Ye men of Wayne, say NO!

You are voting for the ages: Choose Satan, now, or God?
Look you higher than the dollar; look higher than the clod;
Look you far into the future at the Iron avenging rod;
Ye sons of Light, Awake!

Archibald McLean

BY HUGH M'LELLAN, SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.

Rivers are rivers and men are men, but though all rivers are called rivers and all men are called men, there is a vast difference among the individuals. All rivers have banks and a flowing stream, but one is the Nile and another is a Niagara. One is the Nile because it toils through a desert, the other is Niagara because it is hurled through a gorge. So it is with lives. All have the life stuff in common; but whence it comes and whither it goes, how it comes and how it goes makes the difference between man and man. Back of the flowing blood are the racial springs and the tapering histories. We see the moving tide between the river banks, but who can tell what swims below,—the shapes that swim and the forms that creep. So they move before our eyes the multitudes of men; and some of them are preachers and some are traders and some farmers and some missionary presidents, all more or less conventionalized and shaped by the pressure of the times: but who can tell what swims below,—the shapes that swim and the forms that creep under the tides of life. These things make the difference among the preachers and farmers and traders and missionary presidents. Shakespeare says that the dyer's hand is stained to the color of that it works in. True, but there's an antique sinew and a modern skill which the colors never reach. The Clan McLean had its seat in the islands which lie along the coast of the Western Highlands of Scotland. Particularly they held the island of Mull. A wild home for a wild clan. They were a powerful people, brave, magnanimous and free. They were the fastest of friends and the fiercest of foes. These Celtic McLeans were not your "canny Scots." They were not your cautious, long-headed, pawky Scot has his habitat throughout the lowlands and along the eastern coasts. These McLeans of the Isles were men of different temper. They lived in rocky, barren places. They took a spoil from the most dangerous seas. They espoused desperate causes. They went into battle always against great odds. In all their tasks from bread to victory their lives were the gauge and challenge. These were not the conditions for a canny spirit. Natures were bred here at once romantic, mystic, and passionate. Looking ever into the face of death they ceased to fear. Looking into the face of sea and mountain and sky they grew romantic. In their loneliness they became mystics. Their seers had gifts. Second sight was not uncommon. Their language has the mist of the mountain over it. It has also the wash of the sea in it. These things are in their language because they are in their blood. These are the shapes that swim and the forms that creep under the life tides of the McLeans wherever they may be.

Archibald McLean is perhaps the best known figure in our brotherhood. He is known to multitudes of his friends as a quiet man, a great reader, a constant student, a fast friend. Those who know him most love him best. However he is fixed in the mind of our people as a unique platform figure in our great conventions. Having seen and heard him thus, one cannot forget him. His style is his own—it is himself. Quiet, in the main it is, but passionate. Not the passion of abandon and rant, but a suppressed passion. Like the poetry of Wordsworth, his quiet style is an intense thing. His feelings suffuse his words and gestures and overflow his hearers. His cloud darts no withering bolts, but there is a constant flushing and glowing. His words are at times veils of beauteous mysticism which like the mist on the mountains of Mull reveals as well as hides. His face is as expressive as his words. It is a sad Scotch face like Carlyle's; but in the intense passages of his speech, it is drawn with the tragedy of the world's need or glows with the joy of a world's salvation. His hand is eloquent. He does not suit the word to the gesture and the gesture to the word. He utterly lacks elocution. His hand anticipates his word. It is tied to his heart. In a spasmodic twitch it leaps to his head. It is a signal for an utterance hot from the heart.

Some think Brother McLean is at his best when presiding over the Foreign Missionary Sessions of our great conventions. Perhaps so; I prefer to hear him preach. However this may be, it is a great experience to see and hear him lead a great missionary gathering. Under his hand it becomes a means of grace to every soul. He gets behind every speaker. He blesses them with courage. He gives freely of his spirit to them. As they speak they know that he is praying for them. But his chief love is for the missionaries. When he leads them forth before the people, his hand lingers lovingly on the shoulder and you perceive that they are his children in the Gospel.

Today Archibald McLean is probably sitting at his desk in the Foreign Society offices. He is constant at his task. The church has no servant more faithful. As he sits at his desk, it may not be given him to know the great influence for good he has over his brethren. This sweet knowledge is withheld from modest natures. He would probably deny it. We know it. We have only to look at his associates. They are growing men; growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Of course, the missionary facts and news have stirred their souls. Their own faithfulness is having its fruitage. But I think I see over all this the influence of A. McLean. They are getting more and more like their leader. It is not an imitation, but rather a nearing through admiration and love to a rare and noble man.

There is an inner room in every man's life,—an upper room where Jesus sits with his disciple. It is the place where a man makes his surrender and his sacrifices. It is not given to me to open this door. You can tell the man who meets his Savior in the upper room by his spirit of sacrifice. I do not propose to catalogue anything. I do not know. I doubt if any man knows. We do know, though, that no missionary on the field shall ever hunger or need if A. McLean has anything in hand. Nor shall the flag of Christ be lowered on any mission station, if the sacrifice of A. McLean can keep it flying. Along the sacrificial line we do not know, but we suspect. We do know, however, that for our sakes and the Gospel's Archibald McLean is today a poor man. His greatest influence is a good book. His wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, and those that hear the word of Christ do it.

In conclusion, I may say that we have a fairly good sprinkling of really great and good men among us. We have great preachers, great teachers, great evangelists, great organizers, and great scholars; and were they all to sit down at a festal table it would matter little where the McLean sat, high or low, that would be the head of the table.

Personal Tributes to A. McLean

Our last Texas Convention was the greatest. Among the speakers Archibald

McLean towered highest. Humble, earnest with burning eloquence he told us of the world's need of the Gospel, pure and simple. "Mac" is a favorite in Texas. We all feel that in him we have a leader who has fully given himself to the great work of sending the glad tidings to every creature. All Texans love him.

BY CHAS. LOUIS LOOS.

I have many friends whom I esteem, none more so than the President of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, Archibald McLean. I have known him intimately for many years—since he came as a student to Bethany College, where he was under my charge for years, and since that time in the most intimate relations with the Foreign Society for eleven years and more.

As a student he was a model and stood at the head of my classes. He was a student No. 1, and was ever hard at work. A student seeking knowledge in the midst of his professional cares as President of the F. C. M. Society, ever working to make himself more efficient in his office. I really feel that he has been given to us providentially, for I cannot think that more efficient man for his office could have been given to us. Brother McLean is in the highest degree conscientious in all respects. He fears and loves God as never when whom I know. You may always rely upon him as determined to do what is right. He wants to do the best for the Master's Cause in the conversion of the world. Rely on him—always. Listen to him who would in any way disparage him. God Bless him.

I have known A. McLean from the beginning of his honorable and useful career. He has the mind of The Master.

A more unselfish man I have never known. The evangelization of the world is a burden on his heart. Archibald McLean is good with a Christly goodness, and he is as wise as he is good. The Disciples are incalculably indebted to him—indebted to him as to no other man in their communion. I believe in A. McLean as a man and as the efficient President of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society.

The missionaries in China all have great love and respect for our president, A. McLean. Brother McLean is a man who is all fire for mission work. In fact, it might be said that the zeal for mission work is burning him up.

Brother McLean gives his life for the great cause. He ranks as a pioneer missionary worker and has taken all the brunt of the fray. I marvel how his constitution bears up under the strain. Outside of the inner circle it is unknowable the strains put upon the man both from the home side and from the field. Misunderstandings must make many sleepless nights. Confucius said: "I constantly for a day have not eaten and for a night have not slept thinking how useless as compared with learning."

His missionary cause is more to him than sleeping and eating.

Think of the troubles from the "Antis" while our missionary cause is such a fragile plant as to be hurt and hindered by every little wind that blows. Think of the trouble to our president when a missionary develops some quarrelsome spirit or crankism. I know the worry of such a state of affairs. Brother McLean is much respected among the mission secretaries and workers of other boards. We feel proud to have such a man to represent us. It seems absurd that the church should need an advocate of missionary work. It would seem that this was the main function of the church, yet our president must spend a lot of his time developing in the church a missionary spirit. Brother McLean is apt to teach and patient in teaching. Let us make the most of our president now. It would be hard to replace him when but his fragrant memory remains.

1. My acquaintance with Archibald McLean began with his appointment as Secretary of the Foreign Christian Missionary Society. My friendship for him synchronizes with my acquaintance with and knowledge of him. I have known him intimately as a great missionary secretary, and then as a most efficient President of our Foreign Society, and always as a most unselfish, energetic and insistent worker for the advancement of that cause. I have had much correspondence with him during these years, and sometimes it has been a little sharp both ways on points of administration. But that fact has never, in the slightest degree, diminished my appreciation of and love for him.

2. I have known him as a contributor to our paper, and as one of the ablest contributors to our religious journals. His sentences, short, sharp, and clear, strike right at the heart of his subject, till his meaning stands out in bold relief. Some of his articles have obtained wide publicity in the form of tracts, and his books are models of clearness and force. He would have excelled as an editor, as he has excelled in the missionary work, and his pen has been, and is, through the Missionary Intelligencer and our journals, a mighty helper in the work which he feels to be his supreme mission. As a speaker, too, he commands the greatest attention in our conventicles and awakens the deepest convictions.

But, after all, it is the man's character—his undaunted faith, his sublime unselfishness, his utter sincerity, his preme devotion to his Master's work which has won him the warm place which he holds in the love and confidence of his brethren the wide world around.

Regarding the Rev. Archibald McLean while we live in widely separated cities that I have not been able to meet him as often as I could have desired, I have known him for many years. We have been brought together in the Annual Conferences of the representatives of the Boards and Societies of Foreign Missions of North America, and also in connection with the World Missionary Conference which was held at Edinburgh a year ago. We are now associated on the Committee of Reference and Counsel, an important committee charged by the Foreign Missions' Conference of North America with large discretion and responsibilities. I also know Dr. McLean as an author and a personal friend. In all these relations I have been impressed by his ability, freedom and devotion. I regard him as a strong man, an eminently qualified leader of a great enterprise. I have come to value very highly both his judgment as a friend, and his spirit as a follower of Christ. I congratulate not only your General Church, but all the churches, in the influence which he exerts.

Financing a World-Wide Institution

BY F. M. RAINS.

F. M. RAINS

This is a time of world movements.

Men think and plan beyond county and states, and even national lines. There is a new world consciousness. We think of the whole of men. International is a big word; international railroads, international banks, international postal unions, international telegraph unions and international conferences of all

The Foreign Society is a world institution. The intrepid missionaries we support toil in the Orient as well as in the Occident, in the burning heat of the tropics, in the cold of the northern lands. These, our brethren, have gone forward to the ends of the earth and speak in numerous tongues and dialects the unsearchable riches of Christ. They are touching many lives and toil in the midst of different civilizations. Our missionaries have gone far beyond the commercial man, the newspaper and the telephone.

The work being done by this Society bulks large. Over 400 different people are treated in twenty-four hospitals every day.

That service alone means much. Buildings, equipment, medicines, bedding, surgical instruments, nurses, assistants, must all be had. But, men, think what it all does! We touch not only families and towns and cities and provinces, but whole nations are reached by the skill of the consecrated medical missionary. "He is not from America, but he is from Heaven," said the astonished Koreans when the medical missionary stopped the wounds of their dying crown prince. It is said that China was opened to the gospel at the point of the lancet. Men come hundreds of miles to our Doctors Macklin, Butchart and others to be healed. It takes money to do this great work. The hospitals, however, almost finance themselves. Some of them more than pay all their expenses. The initial step of the medical service is very expensive.

The great schools of the Foreign Society require much money. The Society supports 95 schools. More than 5,000 pupils are under daily instruction. Hundreds of teachers are employed besides the missionaries from America. Think what the buildings and equipment cost! It is more than mere pocket change. A few pennies and nickels will not oil this stupendous machinery. It requires many thousands of dollars annually. You intelligent Christian business men appreciate this. And you know what the schools are doing. They are transforming whole villages and towns and provinces. These schools are the beginnings of great national public schools, systems and universities. Japan has her own schools, supported from Imperial funds. China is beginning with schools of Western learning and pays the teachers from public funds. Our mission schools set examples and inspire the people to lofty ideals. Out of these schools go great men that help to lead the nation. The mighty men that are leading and have led in Japan came out of mission schools. How can a Christian man better serve the King than by planning a school in China or India? Mr. Sherwood Eddy, a business man of this country, went to India and planted a number of such schools. Dr. Goucher, of Baltimore, did the same. John Wanamaker has splendid fellowship in the same enterprise. Why not more of our men? Some have already done well for our schools on heathen soil, but it is time a great number were coming to the front. If you cannot plant a school by yourself, do as much in that direction as you can.

F. C. M. S.
EVANGELISTS

We have a large evangelistic force that are preaching the gospel day and night. When we sleep they are breaking to the people the bread of life. The sun never goes down upon their work. The workers of the Foreign Society baptize about 60 every day. New churches and schools are springing up everywhere. It is a glorious campaign, men. It is interesting to watch the column of the Lord's host move forward on the territory of the enemy. You are practical, sensible men and know that unless the commissary department is in good shape, the battle will be lost. This requires cash, good hard cash.

This is not all the work that is being done. Kindergartens, printing presses, industrial schools, orphanages, colleges and universities are all carried forward with eminent success.

FINANCIAL PROBLEM This Society has a large financial problem with which to deal constantly. It requires more than $1,000 every day to meet its present imperative obligations and this makes no provision for enlargement or expansion. Almost 100 workers toil day and night in the yard of the Lord in different parts of the earth, that must be clothed and fed and housed. The work needs to be multiplied by two now. It can be done if our spirit-led brotherhood so wills.

IMPOSSIBLE? NO!! Financing adequately this great institution is not an impossible task for our people. We have brains and enterprise and no lack of experience and a mighty host of consecrated men and women, and withal almost unlimited wealth. We are no longer a poor, struggling people. Scores of millionaires are to be found among us. Of that great class of well-to-do people we have many thousands. They constitute a mighty army. We own practically all forms of wealth—mines, farms, business enterprises, commercial houses, banks and stocks and bonds of all kinds. In the political world we have many leaders and some of great promise. In the professions hosts of strong men are numbered with us, and are among the very best. We have men and we have money in abundance.

BETTER DAYS AHEAD

The best judges, men in a position to know the facts, are urging the missionary cause be better financed. Eminent Americans like Bryan, Banks, Wanamaker and many others, have recently visited the mission field and insist that more should be done. One gentleman gave over $300,000 during his recent visit to the far East. I saw with my own eyes a number of buildings either built or aided in building. One gentleman was an eye witness to the character of the work being done and of the urgent need. More than 20,000 missionaries and over 80,000 native evangelists and teachers call for increased financial port. These men know the merits of ease. This clear call ought to ring the ears of Christendom.

THE CASE
CHINA
The spirit of many of the Chinese Christians would solve the problem of firing a world wide institution. A high ese official recently converted is now porting 20 evangelists at an expense $9,000 yearly for the conversion of his ury. Another Chinese Christian supa hospital where 50,000 patients are ed annually. One of our brethren in in recently gave Dr. W. E. Macklin 100 in gold for his work.

AMERICA
Do you know it requires 3,000 of our Protestant Christians in America to port one missionary on the foreign ld. This is the average. It is not ex-tional. You say this is slow going.
do it is. But do you know that our e are going only about half as fast?
quires 7,300 Disciples of Christ to pt one American missionary through Foreign Society. Sit down and figure out for yourself. I am not "knocking."
e are doing so much better than we ve done in the past that I greatly rever the showing. However, I sub-at this is no "high financing" for world's evangelization.

THE CASE
BOLENGE
Against this we may place the statement of the Missionary Review that 750
rians in Bolenge, Africa, support 76 ng lists whom they send out among tribes. And think of it. Twelve rs go they were unclothed barbarous ags. That is about one evangelist to ryen of the membership. These are own brethren. We are proud of
m. Suppose our brethren in America e is much in proportion to their ult as our brethren on the equator, in Congo! Think of it. We would be poing 125,000 American missionaries instead of 170. Then we would be financing a world-wide institution.

WHAT DO YOU THINK?
Suppose our whole brotherhood should undertake to have each thousand members support one missionary out on the great world-field. This is not by any means impossible or unreasonable. This is being done by some churches now, indeed a number of the churches with 500 members and less support a representative. Some do this that have only 250 members. Not only so, but a number of individual Disciples support a missionary each. Some of these are women on small incomes. If each thousand members provided their own worker, we would have 1,250 missionaries sent out from this land by our people. This would make us what we ought to be, the greatest missionary people in the world. It would challenge the admiration of all mankind.
This would constitute us more nearly a New Testament people. It would hasten the good day when our Lord would come to the inheritance of all the nations of the earth.

ONE IN A THOUSAND
Let us begin at once with new ideals before us, striving to have each thousand members support a missionary. Many individual men who read CHRISTIAN MEN should take up this task at once. Many business men think nothing of buying an automobile. A thousand men could notify the Foreign Society of their purpose to support their own missionaries.

MY LAND
But the support of the missionaries is not all that is involved in financing the Foreign Society.
We need land, land, land! Land for homes, land for compounds, land for schools and land for hospitals. Land is advancing in value everywhere. The advances are even greater in Asia than in America. We bought property five or six years ago that has more than doubled in value already. We could sell some of our real estate for ten times what we gave for it. We have none for sale. We are crowded. Wise men say that after the next five years it will be almost impossible to secure land anywhere in China at any price. This is a practical problem with us. There is exactly the same need for land in all Asia where we are doing work that there is for good church lots in this country. There is no way of escaping the issue if we go forward. We may let opportunities go by as we have done in New York City and later pay ten times as much as the price today.

A CHANCE TO HELP

We are hoping to see a mighty advance in the problem of financing this enterprise during the present March offering season.

THE EDITOR'S VALENTINE

I wish I had time to sit down and write each Christian Men reader a long, long letter, to tell you all the thoughts that come and go about you, but you know how busy I am with duties, duties, duties, so I am slipping this little personal note in the February Magazine to say that I believe this is the very best number of Christian Men we have ever issued and bespeak from you a very careful reading of it all. After you have read it won't you drop me a line saying what you think of this number?

Fraternally yours,

Minakuchi, the Japanese Orator

A Member of the Christian Church

YUTAKA MINAKUCHI

He member of the battalion of thirty who are sweeping through the country the great Men and Religion Forward Movement is a young Japanese, Yutaka Minakuchi, who is an orator of remarkable ability. He was born in Japan, and through the efforts of an American missionary was converted to Christianity when he was about seven years old. He left his native land in 1877 and came to the United States to obtain an American education. Shortly after arriving here he entered Kentucky University, at Lexington, where he remained for more than five years, then continuing his studies at Yale, the University of Chicago, from which he was graduated with high distinction.

Mr. Minakuchi's conversion to Christianity was not a matter for a short time, as is evidenced by the fact that since that time he has been constantly working to prepare himself to further his service in every possible way. Three years he was pastor of the Church of Christ in Ashville, North Carolina, and then for a year was engaged in the Laymen's Missionary Movement under the auspices of the Movement at Baltimore, Maryland. It was while he was in this work that his extraordinary forcefulness in presenting the foreign-missionary appeal commanded wide attention, and when Mr. Fred B. Smith, campaign leader of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, was looking for a man to talk on foreign missions, he thought immediately of Mr. Minakuchi, who left his work in Baltimore for the present winter, and joined the field battalion.

Mr. Minakuchi comes from a distinguished family in Japan, and before leaving his native country to reside in America he spent seven years in the Russian Empire with his uncle, who was for twenty-five years a diplomat representing the Japanese government in Russia. Mr. Minakuchi has wonderful magnetism, excellent delivery, and attractive presence; but these are overwhelmed by his tremendous earnestness. He believes in the Christian religion; he believes that nothing else can do so much to bring the Japanese people to a position of highest influence for the good of the world, and he has thrown himself into the Men and Religion Forward Movement with the utmost enthusiasm. Wherever he has appeared, throughout the Middle West, he has captured large audiences, and has sprung into a position of great importance in the Men and Religion campaign.

Mr. Minakuchi declares that Greek, Latin, or the modern languages of other countries seem simple to learn in comparison to English, although he speaks our language fluently and with a grammatical precision that puts to shame that of many of our native students.

In addition to his scholastic attainments Mr. Minakuchi is a fraternity man and was an athlete in his college days, playing on the North Carolina foot-ball eleven. His fraternity is Pi Kappa Alpha, the chapters of which are confined to Southeastern states.

"It is the duty of Christians to lift the darkness from the minds of poor beings who are capable of better things," said Mr. Minakuchi. "Supposing that Hindooism is good enough for Hindoos, it ought to be good enough for us because of our common humanity, and God is no respecter of persons.

"But we cannot think of a Western Buddha; we can hardly think of a Western Mohammed; and we could not think of exchanging Jesus Christ for them. If we claim for Christianity an ideal perfection we must carry it into the countries where Buddha, Mohammed and Confucius are still revered.

"We are bound, as lovers of humanity and as worshipers of God, to share the very best with our neighbors and to lift them to the plane on which we stand. To be Christian philanthropists we must be not only givers, but sharers as well. The grace of God does not degrade or humiliate; it ennobles and dignifies human nature and reveals the higher possibilities of common men. Therefore, the church as a class can never be the church of Jesus Christ."

Plan Now to Attend This Most Remarkable Gathering

A Full Day With a Great Medical Missionary

By DR. PAUL WAKEFIELD

DR. PAUL WAKEFIELD

E ARDEN

A day with Dr. Macklin, of Nanking, China, is worth while. He starts work with daylight. He has his own garden and before breakfast is out with strawberries, lettuce and radishes. He has made a careful, scientific study of soils and fertilizers. He has two boys from Ames, Iowa, studying agriculture that they may go back and show the Chinese how to renew and properly care for their soils, a thing more needed than any other thing in the industrial upbuilding of China. Chinese gentlemen and officials have become interested in his work and are trying to gain and make use of his practical knowledge.

Although in his garden he goes in to breakfast and, "marvel of marvels," his visitors say, "he sits at the same table with his wife and little girls." They have never seen him beat Mrs. Macklin, or even knock her down, and she can read and write and figure! Strange people these foreigners!"

THE HOSPITAL After breakfast he goes to the hospital. With his students he goes through the wards, telling them of the diseases and the treatment. This is the way he does his teaching. There are no words or characters in Chinese to express medical ideas. So this is the only way we can teach. Three days a week he operates at the hospital. Three days a week he goes to the dispensary in the heart of the city. Here the work is very interesting. He has his horse brought (he keeps two horses busy) and gets ready to go down the "Beautiful Flower Street" when often he will hear a great racket. People pour into the air crying "Da tu," "da tu," "da tu," leading a woman, pounding her, slapping her, running her back and forth in great excitement. "Da tu" is opium, which she has taken, trying to commit suicide. They are trying to keep her awake.

As soon as the young doctors hear that cry they grab a kettle, rush for a store, where they buy boiling water, quite as we buy butter and eggs. They then wash out the stomach with a solution of permanganate of potash in warm water, using bucket after bucket. Nine cases out of ten are saved, and the husband is relieved, for wives are quite expensive in China. And the woman? When you remember these people live with no hope in all their life, and treated like dogs, if suiting her master as a good dog, if not suiting, as a cur, you will understand why it is so many get hold of a box of opium and strive for the "long sleep." We usually give the husband some "good advice" in plain Chinese, and he learns his wife has some way of being rid of him, so she is more kindly treated. But the horses are waiting and we must get away. The Dispensary is within three blocks of the Viceroy's home, and the Viceroy of Nanking rules more men than President Taft would if he were king. It is on the main street, where great throngs pass all day long. The building is a very good one, built Chinese fashion, all around the yard with the court in the middle.

A CHINESE COMPOUND

We go in the front door, through the main room, where a great crowd has already gathered, listening to one of the evangelists preach, and take our horses into the court yard and tie them. Dr. Macklin then goes into a little side room, where his teacher is waiting. He sits with his teacher, drinking tea, and translates while the teacher acts as stenographer and takes down what the doctor dictates. I have said Dr. Macklin is one of the greatest Chinese scholars. His translations are among the finest and most valuable in the Chinese language. Few, if any, books have had greater influence than his translation of Green's History of English People, showing the advance of civilization in England when Christian ideals were followed and decay when they were forgotten. No one can measure the part this translation has had in preparing the people for the present changes in China. Dr. Macklin's books are studied by the greatest scholars and statesmen of China, and when I tell you that all the religions of China have been developed, not by preaching, but by books, you understand the power of literature in the land of scholars.

TICKETING PATIENTS

Finally, the Evangelist through, it is time to let the people in for treatment. Each patient as he comes is given a

"Paitsz" or ticket, quite like we get at a barber shop on Saturday night. They are allowed in the dispensary room ten or fifteen at a time. The door is open and they come in with a rush. As they come Dr. Macklin watches them from his room, where he is working with his teacher. Nineteen out of twenty cases can be treated by the native doctors whom Dr. Macklin has trained. There are abscesses and ulcers, eye and ear and nose diseases and itch, that the students are perfectly able to handle. Sometimes a rare or difficult case comes and Doctor Macklin is all awake. He will give hours, or days, to one case if necessary, for he never does anything else any way. And while the influence of his medical work is tremendous and we marvel at the wonderful power of the Doctor, the real miracle of it is that the Doctor should come to them and do such a work for them at all. The real miracle is the miracle of "Love for them!"

So while Dr. Macklin oversees his work most of his time in the morning is spent in translation with his teacher. Along toward noon often the scholars or merchants or officials will come in to consult the Doctor, consulting with him concerning questions of public policy, or discussing social or political conditions; a thousand and one things are brought to him for they have learned to trust him; we know he loves China and her people. So he gets very close to them and reaches their lives as few can.

Every afternoon Dr. Macklin goes out into the country to one of the Chinese villages or cities, so numerous in Central China. Often he goes many miles to a distant city; sometimes riding till three or four past before coming to the town.

A VILLAGE VISIT

I remember one afternoon we left dinner early and started cross country. Everyone knows the Doctor. Often they stop and speak to him, or shout a greeting from the fields. We finally reached our village, and when Dr. Macklin comes to town he needs no church bell to call the people. As soon as a child on the edge of the village sees him he starts up the cry: "Nea hsien seng Lai." It is picked up by children down the street and everyone in the place knows that Dr. Macklin has come. He goes to the largest tea house. The tea house is the social center in the Chinese city, and crowds quickly gather. They come, the sick and lame and blind, crying for help. Men with poor, broken, illset limbs, beg him to straighten them so they may work again. He gives such aid as he can and tells those he can help when to come to the hospital. Many he must turn away because help has come too late. A doctor who has once worked in China, with its great need, can never come back to America and practice, where there are so many doctors struggling for a living. The calls of the dying ring in his ears; he sees them in the night. The 400,000,000 of China, sick in body, soul and mind, calling for him to help, and to be pent up here at home is maddening.

CHINAMAN'S COFFIN

But the people press around and want one of Dr. Macklin's tracts. Now there is nothing in the world quite like Dr. Macklin's tracts. I remember one he had that afternoon. It had the picture of a coffin at the top. It was a tract on opium. The finest thing a young man can give his father is a coffin. The old gentleman puts it underneath his bed and keeps it there ready to tumble into when he dies, for above all things else a Chinaman wishes a respectable burial. Below this picture was printed a story like this:

"You men smoking opium buy yourself a coffin, crawl into it, have someone nail it almost tight, stay there till your craving for opium is gone. If you die, you have a coffin and a respectable burial which is more than you have if you continue the use of opium. (For a Chinaman sells absolutely everything, his wife, girls, sons, for opium.) If you die you can have your friends pry up the cover, and you come out a man, with your coffin extra on hand." Then he tells them to come to his hospital, where he will put them in an opium ward under guard, where they cannot get to opium or get opium in to them. Then he will feed them, give them needed medicine and they come out men.

PRIESTCRAFT DEFINED

But the chief thing the day comes last. Chinaman will go around the circumstance before he comes to the center. So Doctor Macklin suggests they must be very lazy people in that town; they all have poor thatched houses, hardly fit for animals; if they were industrious they would have good homes with tile roofs. But they protest. "Why, Dr. Macklin, you know we are hard working people, you know we are not lazy." "Well, hold up your hands then," said the Doctor. They held up their hands. Great ridges of calluses on their places crossed them. They are hard workers. The Doctor scratched his head. "Lerange," he says. "I knew you worked, but your homes." Suddenly his face cleared. "Ah!" says he, "I have it. As I came into town I noticed your temple was a beautiful building, with a tile roof, your priest, as he passed, I noticed he was dressed beautifully in his silk. Oh, that's it; that's it. The priest in his temple sits and says his prayer. (And Dr. Macklin kept repeating the Buddhist prayer until he had it made into a buzz like the song of a mosquito.) "Oh, that's it, the priest sits there in his temple and says his prayer; he is like a mosquito. He stings you, he stings you, he sticks his claws into you, takes even

g from your pocket; he gives you ing but fear and misery and despair;
e is no peace, no hope, no joy, no in his religion. He has a fine temple dresses in silks; he leaves you in a k in the night of despair. Oh, men, long must you cling to such foolish-
; why is it you will not listen to Him gave His life that you might have e and joy and happiness. Why will not give your life to Him who, bee He loved you, gave His life for that your lives might be filled with ; why is it, men?" They hang their s for his sermon has reached their
ts. They know he lives his sermon they cannot get away from it. So quietly he leaves them standing there.

He goes out, gets on his horse and hurries for home. I tell you some day I expect to see a church in that village and a tablet on the wall with these words:
"Nea hsien seng Lai Liow"—"Doctor Macklin came." Dr. Macklin usually gets home about supper time. After supper he takes a lantern, and with his students, goes through the wards of his hospital, teaching again, giving orders for the night, seeing everything is in shape. When his horses are seen to and the last beggar cared for, then his day's work is done and he goes home for his rest.

The Life of Prayer

It is productive of much mischief to try to make people believe that the life of prayer is easy. In reality there is nothing quite so worthy of the attention and the exercise of the fine parts of a great manhood.

Simplicity and courage are two virtues indispensable for those who covet to pray well. Especially must they be ready to embrace difficulty and court pain—and that through the long stretch of a lifetime.

Prayer is a universal art, but there is only one Teacher for all and He never teaches two persons in exactly the same way.

Though we have learned the fundamental principles of prayer from devout friends and teachers, whatever we really know about prayer we have learned by praying.

The world just now is sadly in need of better service, but before this can be rendered there must be better prayer.

What the Layman's Missionary Movement Stands

BY J. CAMPBELL WHITE

General Secretary Layman's Missionary Movement

J. CAMPBELL WHITE

TWO OUT OF THREE

About two out of three people in the United States and Canada are outside the membership of all Christian churches. Two out of three people in the world live in non-Christian lands. Two out of three people in non-Christian lands are beyond the reach of the combined missionary agencies of Christendom. And in spite of these appalling needs, about two out of three of the church members of North America are contributing nothing toward the aggressive missionary work of the church at home and abroad. The primary objective of the Laymen's Missionary Movement is the enlistment of the other two-thirds of the members of the church, as intelligent, systematic missionary supporters and workers. And this can be done. Experience in all denominations and in every section of the United States and Canada makes us confident that thoroughgoing methods of missionary education and finance, backed up by prayerful and persistent work, will result in most cases in a doubling of the number of systematic missionary supporters, during the first year, and in the enlistment of practically the whole membership within a few years. These results are secured almost universally when proper methods are used.

In briefest summary, the essential points are these:

1. A Missionary Committee in every church to work with the pastor in enlisting the entire membership.
2. The adoption of the weekly subscription plan of missionary offering instead of an annual or occasional collection.
3. A period of intensive missionary education in each church once each year continuing through at least two or three weeks, in addition to systematic general missionary education throughout the year.
4. An organized and complete personal canvass of every member of the church and congregation once each year following the intensive educational campaign, canvassers going two by two after proper preparation.
5. The adoption of the Duplex envelope system as the most effective collection device, and the appointment of a separate missionary treasurer, who will forward the funds month by month to the Mission Boards.

ought not to require argument to show that a strong Missionary Committee in a church, working heartily with the pastor, can secure results that would otherwise be unobtainable. For a full discussion of the work of such a committee, careful study should be given to the pamphlet entitled "The Church Missionary Committee."

Why a Weekly Offering for Missions?

1. It is Scriptural. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him."—1 Cor. 16:2. This instruction was not concerning the local church expenses, but referred to a missionary offering.

2. It is educational. It keeps missions and benevolences habitually before the people.

3. It enlists many more givers.

4. It secures much larger aggregate offerings.

5. It replenishes the Mission Board treasuries regularly, preventing indebtedness and financial loss through interest payments.

6. It does not decrease but actually increases the offerings to current expenses.

7. It is fair. "Love thy neighbor as thyself." There is no justification for having a better plan for securing current expenses than for missions.

8. It promotes prayer. Each weekly offering becomes an act of worship.

Systematic, proportionate, cheerful giving is the most Scriptural, fair, stress-like and productive method. When properly introduced and conscientiously worked it secures the largest possible results, educationally, financially and spiritually. The weekly offering does not interfere with special offerings on suitable occasions, such as Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter.

We have already come in most churches to the weekly offering system for current revenue. Why should we adopt an inferior system for the aggressive missionary work of the Church?

GIVING GOD'S WAY There are some very manifest advantages of doing our giving in God's way.

And first of all is the great spiritual blessing to ourselves. To worship God with our gifts fifty-two times a year brings at least fifty-two times the spiritual blessing from this exercise that would be ours if we did it only once a year.

This weekly offering to the worldwide work makes habitual prayer for the whole Kingdom much more natural and vital. It also makes it seem more appropriate for the pastor to make frequent brief references to the work being accomplished. This is the most effective sort of missionary education. And any added interest aroused may find outlet at once, where the weekly system of offerings is in use.

This weekly missionary offering will not interfere with contributions to local congregational expenses, but will stimulate larger giving also to this purpose. Many a church has solved its local financial problem by becoming aroused on its duty to support missions more largely.

MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE If the men of our churches are to become really intelligent about the problem of evangelizing the world, their concentrated attention on this matter will be required until there is time for a deep and clear impression to be made. In the first instance many men will need to be aroused out of indifference or educated out of prejudice to missions. The enterprise challenges investigation, and stands the test of investigation, but it is too vast an undertaking to be comprehended quickly. The plans should, therefore, include special agitation during a period of three or four weeks at some favorable time of the year, together with some systematic presentation of the subject throughout the year. So far as the men are concerned, the most effective way of arousing and enlisting them in the first instance seems to be in interdenominational Men's Meetings, when the whole missionary problem of the church can be presented in general outline, together with adequate plans for meeting this great need and opportunity. Campaigns of this sort should generally last through two days. This should be supplemented by having qualified laymen speak in the pulpits, at the regular church services, on the imperative claims of this work upon men. Special sermons by pastors on missions, stewardship, and kindred topics will be of great help. In connection with such public presentation, strong pamphlets, dealing in a man's way with outstanding features of the work, should be distributed. Every man who hopes to be anything of a leader in such work should be familiar with the best of such literature. In addition to what may be secured from the Mission Boards, the Laymen's Missionary Movement has published many very strong pamphlets and is adding constantly to the list.

A MEN'S SUPPER

Toward the close of the period of intensive missionary education there should be held a church supper, with a very special effort to get every man of the church to attend. Tickets purchased in advance are generally the surest guarantee of their presence. At this supper, which should be disposed of as promptly as possible to leave time for addresses and discussion, the missionary policy of the congregation for the year should be considered and adopted. It will be of great value to display prominently at this meeting the statistics for the fiscal year, showing not only the amounts given, but the number of subscribers.

No subscriptions should be asked at the supper, but it should be made clear that the purpose is to endeavor to enlist all members of the church congregation—men, women and children—as systematic contributors to the missionary work as well as to the current expenses.

Arrangements should be made for the appointment of a sufficient number of the men of the church as canvassers, so that no group of two canvassers will need to visit more than ten or twenty homes. If at all possible, the canvassers should go to the homes instead of to the business offices of the men, so that whole families could be enlisted. In order to find the families as a whole at home there are some marked advantages in doing a good deal of the canvassing on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

THE PERSONAL CANVASS

In the minds of some there is still a question as to the wisdom and practicability of the organized personal canvass. Some of the more important reasons for it are the following:

Why an Annual Every-Member Canvass

1. It answers the personal questions and objections of members.
2. It supplements most helpfully the public instruction and appeal.
3. It compels a fresh consideration of each member of his personal missionary responsibility.
4. It dignifies the missionary cause in the minds of all.

5. It vastly increases the number of systematic contributors.
6. It discovers and develops many new workers.
7. It promotes acquaintance of canvassers with the congregation and with the community.
8. It often reclaims many lapsed members of the congregation.
9. It stimulates church attendance.
10. It avoids multiplied appeals for money from the pulpit.
11. It is an invaluable inspiration to the canvassers and to the congregation.

These reasons are not theoretical, but have been discovered in actual experience in a large number of congregations. Any one of them is strong enough to lead pastors and church officers to give this method preference over any other now in use. In their combined strength they constitute a conclusive argument for the organized canvass in every church that aims at reasonable efficiency.

GIVING, A PERSONAL PRIVILEGE
 Giving, like prayer, is a Christian grace. The father cannot exercise this grace for his child or the wife and mother for her husband and family. The church owes it to its membership to give each member a share in the missionary work of the church. No Christian life is complete which does not have part in the world-wide work of the Kingdom.

COMPLEX ENVELOPE
 After people have made their subscriptions, some convenient device for their collection is very important. The most acceptable plan yet devised is the Duplex envelope. No envelope system has any magic power, and in some cases church officers have imagined that all that was necessary was the adoption of such a system. The real value of the campaign outlined above is its educational and spiritual power. Yet after the members of the church have been interested and enlisted, it is a matter of no small importance to have a method adopted of collecting the subscriptions that is simple, convenient and practical.

MISSIONARY CONVENTIONS
 In meeting the educational and financial problems in missions, a new method has been developed by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which has been very successful. This has been the holding of missionary conventions, continuing through two or three days.

In connection with the discussion of an adequate financial basis for the evangelization of the world, what the churches of that particular city have given for Christian work in America, and what they have given for work abroad, have been clearly stated. In any balanced presentation of the world-field, it is seen at once that the amount spent for missions, and especially for the work abroad, is not only utterly inadequate to meet the needs, but that it bears no reasonable relation to the total amount contributed for religious purposes. In all cities where the matter has been so presented, the men, after full discussion, have decided to undertake a much larger amount for this work than their churches had hitherto given. In some cases they undertook to double their missionary offerings within a year. In other cases they have determined to treble or quadruple them within a year, and some cities have made an advance of three or four fold in their aggregate contributions within a single year. Under this impulse a great many individual congregations have raised from two to ten times as much for world-wide evangelization as they had been giving.

Such interdenominational campaigns should be held in every city and town in North America as soon as arrangements can be made to have the work fairly and persuasively presented.

LOCAL CONVENTIONS

A City or County Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement should be appointed with at least four laymen and three pastors as members of the committee. Their first work should be to make up a complete table of religious statistics for their city or county, showing these four facts:

1. Numbers of church members.
2. Amount contributed last fiscal year for all congregational purposes, including pastors' salaries.
3. Amount contributed for Mission work of all kinds in the home field.
4. Amount contributed for work abroad.

With these facts as a basis, this committee can plan for a city or county campaign, in which the needs of the world, and the way in which the churches are meeting them, will be forcibly presented. Mission Board secretaries, missionaries, wide-awake missionary pastors, and a rapidly increasing number of strong laymen, can be secured to present the case. In connection with its presentation there should always be considered what advance should be undertaken. A definite policy should be adopted both as to the amount to be raised, and the best methods of going about it. The Laymen's Missionary Movement is responding to calls for the conduct of this kind of city campaigns as rapidly as it can command suitable speakers.

Literature published by the Movement should enable local leaders to conduct such campaigns successfully.

OUR INSPIRING OPPORTUNITY

There can be no finer opportunity for investment than that which is presented by the world's need of spiritual help. On one of the store windows in a Canadian city there is this suggestive statement: "Unless you buy here, we both lose money. Is not the Spirit of God saying to the men of our times, with reference to missions, 'Unless you invest here, we both lose opportunity.'"

Dr. Boucher tells of a man who invested $100,000 in one district in India during a period of twenty years. As a result of his investment and the work of those supported by it, fifty thousand idolators were led to accept Christ as their Savior. In view of such a possibility as this, what great meaning should be attached to that command of our Lord, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth," where they must soon pass away or perish, "but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." Make to yourselves friends by means of money that when your money shall fail the friends may receive you into eternal habitations.

What an inspiring thought it is that the Christian Church of North America in addition to preaching the gospel full time at home, can carry this same living and life-giving message to at least 600,000,000 of people in the regions beyond. This number are now living in the districts occupied by missionaries from the United States and Canada. Only in definite correlation to these larger problems of the church can any Christian live his own best and most fruitful life.

The late Mr. John H. Converse well and truly said: "When Christian business men give the same energy and intelligence to the work of missions that they now give to their own private business affairs, then the proposition to evangelize the world in this generation will be no longer a dream."

There are individual men now living who will be the means of sending the knowledge of Christ to a million or more people, who otherwise would not have ceived it. That man had the right ception of life who said: "I would er save a million men than save a ion dollars." To be the means, in l's hands, of taking or sending the oel to a hundred, a thousand, a hund thousand or a million people, not r gives a man a satisfaction here in present life that no wealth can give, t must also be the occasion for joy tterable throughout the life that er ends.

Keeping is losing. Giving is saving.
The only permanent values in this world are spiritual values. "We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." All of us face inevitable and eternal bankruptcy, except as we invest our lives and our treasure in that which alone can endure.

"We can do it, IF we will."
"We can do it, AND we will."
"He can do it, IF he will."

CHRISTIAN MEN MAGAZINE

WHEN the first number of Christian Men appeared, in January, 1909, it had no subscription list, but a small list recruited the first month has been steadily increasing.

Recently the general makeup of the magazine has been materially changed. New-featured articles have been introduced and each month's issue stands out as a peculiar contribution to some one phase of Christian work. Monthly Programs for Men's Societies, a page devoted to a good masculine hymn, and a Boys' Department, are of more than passing interest. The Wireless Whispers contain not speeches or reports, but brief, snappy, up-to-the-minute articles, written in the main by men on the field,

This magazine is unique. It is the official organ of a great movement and is devoted to the interests, campaigns, methods and ideals of the movement. It is not intended to take the place of any magazine issued by our Missionary or Benevolent Agencies, but rather seeks to promote, in season, the work of each agency after the other. One hundred thousand men should receive Christian Men every month, in all parts of this continent.

If you are not a subscriber—fill out the blank below before you turn over another page. The subscription price is 50c per year. Special rates for clubs of ten or more. If you are a subscriber—why not go right out and get another, or ten? Why not a hundred? We will furnish all the subscription blanks you ask for. If you have a Brotherhood, a Men's Bible Class, League or Club, let this be your chief business the next few days.

Other Brotherhoods' Activities

At the annual meeting of the Congregational Brotherhood of America, Mr. Frank Dyer, who has been the General Secretary for several years, presented his resignation on account of ill health, and the resignation was reluctantly accepted.

Report reaches us that Dr. Fayette L. Thompson, of New York, General Secretary of the Methodist Brotherhood, was stricken with a serious malady while on a Western trip in the interest of the Men and Religion Forward Movement, of which Dr. Thompson has been Associate Campaign Leader.

The Presbyterian Brotherhood, Walter Getty, General Secretary, and the Otterbein Brotherhood of the United Brethren Church, Warren L. Bunger, General Secretary, are contributing largely to the Men and Religion Forward Movement Campaigns.

The monthly visits of "Men at Work," which is the title of the Presbyterian Brotherhood paper, and "The Watchword" of the Otterbein Brotherhood, "Saint Andrews' Cross" and "Methodist Men" are most welcome to the desk of the editor of this paper.

New President of the Congregational Brotherhood

H. M. BEARDSLEY

Kansas City now has the honor of being the home of two National Brotherhood Presidents. The latest acquisition to this small yet powerful fraternity is the Honorable H. M.

Beardsley, an attorney of note, and at one time mayor of the Southwestern Gate-Way. Mr. Beardsley is interested in all good things. He is just as clean cut as he looks, and believe us, when we say that he is a clean-looking man. He believes in the Brotherhood idea and its opportunity for leadership. Those nearest to him realize that to undertake the Presidency of the Congregational Brotherhood means a large sacrifice of time and personal comfort. He joins with our own President, Mr. R. A. Long, in many of the worthy local enterprises for civic, industrial and commercial uplift.

Mr. Beardsley promises to use his pen for the CHRISTIAN MEN readers at some future time, and with this writing we hope to present a counterfeit likeness in these columns.

The City Club of Kansas City

One of the several Civic Organizations called the City Club, whose membership includes any citizen interested in the betterment of the city—improvement of domestic, educational, industrial and civic conditions.

The club is organized to aid, through its own efforts and through coöperation with other agencies and with those in authority, getting the things efficiently done which we tend to promote the public welfare of the city. It is not a political club, and does not as an organization either advocate or oppose the election of particular candidates for public office. But firmly believing that a "city or community receives just the sort of government it deserves," and that "that community deserves the best whose citizenship is most active in promoting good government," the City Club will continue to work earnestly and fearlessly for the betterment of social, political and economic conditions in Kansas City.

The Club meets on Tuesdays around the luncheon table and has for its speakers men eminently qualified to talk upon the various subjects in which the Club is taking active interest. After arriving at a definite understanding of its duties and opportunities, the Club now proposes and offers for free use of Men's Clubs, Church Organizations, Political and Civic Organizations, a Lecture Bureau on the following topics:

- I.—Civil Service and the City.
- II.—The Work of the Board of Public Welfare.

—Public Utilities.
Municipal Ownership vs. Private Ownership.
Privately Owned Utilities and Public Utility Commissions.
—Taxation.
The Weakness of the Personal Property Tax.
The Single Tax and the Proposed Constitutional Amendment.
—Extension of Educational Facilities.
The Need of Trade Schools.
The Field of the Night School.
The School as a Social Center.
Industrial Training.
The Public Library and Its Function.
—The Responsibility of Citizenship.

Local Brotherhood Banquet

By C. G. Bates, Monmouth, Ill.

J. A. BARNETT

Local Brotherhood No. 346 of the Monmouth Christian Church gave a banquet in the Church Dining Room recently. An elegant three-course supper was served, under the direction of the Social Committee. The ladies of the church ably assisted in the kitchen, while the class of Loyal Helpers waited on the tables. The young ladies proved so efficient at this that the Brotherhood are wondering how they can ever manage to return the favor. We feel that we must at least be "Big Brothers" to them and ask them to call on us any time they need assistance. About seventy-five men were present.

After the banquet the men adjourned to the Auditorium, where the crowd assembled, and listened to a splendid address by J. A. Barnett, State President, Illinois Brotherhood. Subject, "Men and the Kingdom." Mr. Barnett is pastor of the neighboring church at Galesburg and certainly is the proper man to head the Brotherhood Movement in Illinois.

Regarding Judge Adair

Author of "Bucking the Tiger," printed elsewhere in this issue.

Adair has been the foremost character in reform work in the city of Wooster for five years. A man of wealth who gives most liberally of his time and his means to the betterment of conditions. He is sympathetic with every move upward. And when the public is the most ready to criticise a move upward the Judge often alone comes to its rescue. He has turned the tide of public opinion many times within the last five years. In the recent campaign he was really the brains of the whole movement. His mind is penetrative and far-reaching. And his heart is as true as the needle to the pole.

Hoping and expecting an abundant success in the Brotherhood Movement, desire to remain your co-laborer in the Master's Work.

Fraternally,

M. T. REEVES.

Book Reviews

We are in receipt of a neat booklet entitled "Where Are Our Dead?" by William Henry Book, of Columbus, Indiana. A neat booklet of twenty pages, replete with Scriptural references upon this mysterious subject. There are also some poetic references that are worthy of reading by any who may be interested in this subject, which has caused so much speculation in the lives of men.

The book is advertised to sell for 15 cents per copy, and may be secured upon application to the author.

The 1912 Commentary, issued by the Christian Board of Publication of St. Louis, is one of the most complete volumes of its kind ever issued by any publishing house. It was prepared by a group of college professors in Drake University, Des Moines, with authority well qualified to speak upon the subjects with which the text-book deals. In addition to the Drake professors, Chas. S. Medbury, Pastor University Place Church, Des Moines, contributes the introduction to each of the fifty-three lessons for the year. The historical and geographical sketches are exceptionally fine. The typographical appearance of the book is excellent, and the sale at this writing has exceeded all past records of the progressive publishing house. No real student of the Bible, especially a teacher following the course of events, can afford to be without this most valuable assistant to class-room work. The price is $1.00, including postage, and the first edition is almost exhausted. Address Christian Board of Publication, 2712 Pine Street, St. Louis.

Church men are seeking information. Brotherhood questions are in the atmosphere of every church gathering. In answer to these questions and this desire, literature is being produced.

The volume, "Modern Church Brotherhood," by William B. Patterson, is a volume full of good things for Brotherhood workers and Brotherhood inquirers, and is a fine record of Brotherhood activities up to date. Dedicated to "virile, stalwart, consecrated Christian men," it carries a message bristling with just the facts that Brotherhood workers need. The book is published by Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago, and sells for $1.00, bound in the characteristic style of that publishing company, which fact carries its own recommendation.

WILLIAM B. PATTERSON

Two hundred and fifty-six pages of facts, figures, ideals and inspirations. It opens with a Chronology of the "Brotherhoods," stretching from 1833 to 1910. The introduction is by Frank Mason North, of New York City.

It is divided into four sections: (1) The Brotherhood Movement, (2) Denominational Brotherhood, (3) Working out the Brotherhood Idea, (4) Just What to Do.

The first section treats of the rise, the mission and the field of the Brotherhood; the second, of the organization and conduct of the different denominational Brotherhoods; the third is the story of what is actually doing in the different Brotherhood circles, while the fourth is an excellent suggestion as to what needs still to be done.

Get the book. Read it from beginning to end. It is worthy the attention of every pastor, as well as every Brotherhood man. Order from the publishers.

President Thirty Years

March 4th, A. McLean will have finished thirty years with the F. C. M. S. Thirty years ago he was able to do all the work of an office, and at the same time continue his services as minister of the church at Mt. Healthy.

the offerings run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, and four men, with their offices of office assistants, are required to administer the affairs of this great society.

Regarding Jackson Avenue

The Brotherhood Bible Class of the Jackson Avenue Church of Kansas City has just completed its second successful year. The average attendance during the year was 60; the average collection $3.62; the largest attendance during the year, 91; the smallest attendance, 32. This class is the outgrowth of Local Brotherhood No. 262, and has done commendable work in holding the interest of the men of its community. In charitable purposes it disbursed $27.23. There were twelve men who attended every Sunday during the year.

Christian Men's Business League

By Ellis Purlee, Red Bluff, Cal.

We are going to organize our men. I. E. Heywell has just closed a great union tabernacle meeting here. We have received several additions to the church, many of them splendid men. We have organized a Union Christian Men's League that meets every Sunday afternoon for the present. December 21st we chartered a special train and went 110 miles to Corning in this county and conducted services. Our Brother A. M. McCoy is the president of our union of men. We predict that Red Bluff and Tehama will go dry in the very near future as a result of the influence of the Christian Men's League.

Regarding Miss Lemert

Miss Eva Lemert is a Bible School specialist of exceptionally high order. She recently held a Bible School Campaign at Peoria, Illinois, and in writing of the matter, H. B. Holloway, Superintendent, said:

"We have more than doubled our enrollment, and our attendance ran as high as 602. The fact is, we are thoroughly reorganizing our old school and putting it on a much more efficient basis. We find Miss Lemert is a splendid worker and thoroughly equipped to do the work in which she is engaged. She is here now spending the holidays and will return the first Sunday in January for three more weeks' work."

New Year's Greeting

CHRISTIAN MEN was remembered by hundreds of friends this New Year's and Christmas time with appropriate greetings. Many came by personal letter. We received one from O. L. Cook, our minister at Hutchinson, Kan., which closed with the following words:

A full measure of cheer,
And never a fear;
With Christ ever near,
Through all the New Year.

20th Century Men's Bible Class L. B. D. C. No. 412

By W. K. Ash, Secretary, Columbus, Ohio

The 20th Century Men's Bible Class of the West Fourth Avenue Church of Christ has just closed by far the most successful year in its history. An average of seventy were in attendance at every session, which is an average gain of fifteen over the year 1910, or nearly double the attendance during 1909. Three hundred and ninety-seven visitors were given a cordial welcome during the year. The class raised for all purposes $420, besides giving 102 sacks of flour to the poor for Christmas. It closed its service for the year by presenting its teacher and pastor, Dr. T. L. Lowe, with a handsome mission leather rocker.

And now it faces the year 1912 with a desire to be of more service to its fellow men, and a determination to accomplish something really worth while.

Seattle Business Men's Association

By Frank Nase, Portland, Ore.

The writer unexpectedly was able to be in Seattle this week and had the great pleasure of attending the Brotherhood Second Annual Dinner, given by the men of the First Christian Church, and can assure you it was an enjoyable evening.

The men's work at the First Church always has been quite alive, but under the guidance of J. W. Reynolds, President; J. R. Watson, Vice-President; W. J. Osborne, Secretary, and A. F. Schuler, Treasurer, the officers elected October 1st, to serve for one year, you can look for progressive work from this group in Seattle, and I believe good support to the General Brotherhood work. The First Church Brotherhood received an invitation last evening to be the guests of the Brotherhood of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, at their annual meeting, January 5th, and expressed their acceptance and thanks.

FRANK NASE

At Portland the First Church Brotherhood Sunday-School Class will divide into a Junior and Senior Class, January 7th. The young men promise to let their class be favorably heard of in 1912 by growth and service, and no doubt the Senior part of the Brotherhood will endeavor to keep up to the record of these younger brothers and friends and excel in the same ways.

Empire Statements

By Peter Baillie

We have one of the liveliest Brotherhoods in North Tonawanda, New York. Numerically it is not very large, but for enthusiasm and good fellowship others will have to travel some to beat us. We meet in one of the large pleasant rooms in the Tabernacle Church of Christ the second and fourth Fridays of each month. Our aim and purpose is to get every man in our Brotherhood to take part in speaking. At our last meeting we had a deliberate Resolved, That the tobacco habit is injurious to the rising generation. It was led in the negative by Brothers Hill and Graham, in the affirmative by Brothers Carey and Grapes. Well, sir, to hear those young fellows talk, it made us older fellows sit up and take notice. On both sides they made splendid speeches and the judges decided it was a tie, so everybody felt happy.

We are planning for the winter months to have one of our meeting nights as a business session and the other one as a social meeting where the interested ladies can attend. We think by this plan that we can get every man to take a more active part in all of the Church services. Our pastor is delighted in having so many of our men take such an active interest in the work.

NEXT MONTH

CHRISTIAN BENEVOLENCES will receive a share of our attention in the March issue of Christian Men.

Watch for the next number of this paper and prepare to give a full evening to its reading.

These are some of the men who will contribute articles to the March number:

J. H. MOHORTER, General Secretary National Benevolent Association.

L. J. MARSHALL, Kansas City Pastor, Secretary Christian Church Hospital Association.

T. S. RIDGE, Layman of distinction, National Director Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ.

FRED KLINE, Field Representative National Benevolent Association.

The best there is along the line of Christian Benevolences will be yours in the stormy month.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

Save the boys from the kind of dirt that won't wash off.

Be dead in earnest yourself and your boys will catch the spirit.

You cannot win a boy by proxy; you must get next to his heart yourself.

Remember that the boy cannot be fooled; he knows intuitively whether you are sincere or not.

Boys in America are like those told of in Wales, "who would rather have foot-ball on earth than wings in heaven."

Boys who never have any chores to do at home should go on camping trips, where they have to wash dishes and collect wood for the fire.

Parents seem to take every precaution to keep their boys from being physically hurt, but never make any provision for their moral and spiritual welfare.

Boys are very much alive, and we should not discourage this activity, but rather work to help them use this energy for the good. The boy who is normal would never have Wadsworth say of him, "This boy stopped, therefore he died."

¶ "A boy will hunt and a boy will fish,
Or play base-ball all day,
But a boy won't think and a boy won't work,
Because he's not made that way."

This statement is not true of all boys, and it is not fair to think of them in this way. Boys will think and boys will work if we give them something to think about and something to do.

Give every boy in your class another chance—that last chance may be the one that will save him. Not long ago I was out in an automobile which for some reason would not start; time after time it was cranked, but it would not go. The man who owned the car said that we would have to walk, as the machine would not go, but there was another man there that had patience, and, by the way, he was a teacher of boys. He said, "Try it again." Another trial was given, the machine was cranked, and we started to town and had no more trouble. Try it with that boy of yours some time.

IV.—Recess. (Social period.)

Introduction of strangers and visitors.
Meeting and welcoming of new members.
Benediction.

V.—Suggestions on above Cultural Program.

1. The first address: Read Matt. 28:18-20, and Matt. 24:14. Show that the final purpose of all Jesus' Teaching was "The Kingdom of God." Take a Concordance and note how often Jesus uses the terms "Kingdom of God" and "Kingdom of Heaven." Note further Paul's elucidation of Jesus' program (I Cor. 15:20-28), namely, to bring all things in subjection to Christ that Christ may at last deliver them to God, that Jehovah God instead of false gods "may be all in all."

This, then, is the Church's Commission:

- a To evangelize the world.
- b To teach the world the Word of God in order that
- c The rule of God may be established among ALL men.

2. The second address: Read Matt. 9:35-38. This is a generalized vision. It fits any age and any specific field. Definite and specific information is what your men are wanting though they are not asking for it. Therefore, make a study of some one field as typical. If your church is a living link make a study of your own special field. Otherwise confer with your Pastor and Missionary Committee about some definite field to be studied. Any one of our mission fields will arouse missionary activity among your men if the facts are faithfully presented. Let this address be a presentation and not a criticism. Anybody can criticize but it takes a man to give a constructive and inspiring presentation of facts. BUILD is the Brotherhood's watchword.

3. The third address: Read Acts 13:1 and II Cor. 9. The evangelization of the world and the building of the Kingdom of God accomplished:

a Through volunteers to service sent out of the church, just as were Paul and Barnabas b Through the dividing of our abundance of material blessings with those in Pagan destitution.

What is done depends entirely upon the Local Church, and finally upon the individual member. Both service and material contributions depend upon love and not upon compulsion. A business-like knowledge of Missions is the secret of inspiration. The efficiency of our Missionary work in general depends upon our "base of supplies"—the Local Church in particular.

Outline work for your Brotherhood looking toward increasing Missionary information, inspiration and contributions.

4. The fourth address: Read Matt. 7:1 and Phil. 2:4-12. Our obligation is not sentimental but a social one. It is the most binding obligation the world has ever known. Selfish man has always demanded that "the other fellow" minister to him. He has spent his time, energy and means in forcing others to minister to his demands. The Kingdom of God demands a reversal of the whole system of selfishness. Jesus' plan suggests that universal happiness and prosperity can be achieved in each man finding his highest happiness in ministering to the other fellow. Thus the individual becomes an unfailing fountain of love and fellowship, spreading joy everywhere, instead of becoming a sink-hole absorbing the lives and energies of his brothers and souring because of his absorption. I demand that my brother become my protector. My obligation is then that I also become my brother's protector. Thus Brotherhood and fellowship are achieved, and joy is the result.

He who refuses to acknowledge his social obligation is an unsafe character—an anarchist.

The obligation once acknowledged it knows no limits until one's heart includes the world. Jesus came doing good unto all men. He sent us to do good to all men. And the word "All" is all-inclusive. Not only to the heathen that does our laundry work, but also to the heathenism that is just awakening from its centuries of slumber.

AS GOES HEATHENISM SO GOES THE WORLD.

The discussion. Let one be appointed to lead in this discussion. Bring the men to face with the question: "What contribution is the non-missionary church making to the world?" Of what value is it to society? What right has a non-missionary church to live in the name of Christ? What place has it in the program of the ages?

Furthermore: What contribution is the non-missionary man making to the world? Of what value is the selfish absorber to society? Would society be as well off without him? What right has a non-missionary man to call himself a Christian? What place has he in the great program of the ages?

As you would tackle a business problem, face these questions. Real men are not afraid to look their difficulties and their short-comings in the face.

Note: For information on Mission Fields write the Foreign Christian Missionary Society, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio. Consult files of Missionary Intelligencer. A Brotherhood could not make a better investment than to place in the church "The Missionary Library," sold by the Foreign Missionary Society, above address.

VI.—Suggestions on the above cultural program.

1. The first address: Keep in mind the question of the evening: "The forces at work realizing the Christian state." What, then, is the church doing toward making the state a Christian institution? The following outline may prove suggestive:

a. Implanting Christian ideals in the minds of statesmen.

b. Urging Jesus' standard of morals in business.

c. Creating a new social consciousness of society's sins.

Ineffective as the church is charged of being, still sober judgment acknowledges that she is furnishing the motive power in every upward struggle that society is making.

2. The second address: Get the "World's Almanac" for 1911. It is just out. Also the "American Year Book." The former costs 20 cents, the latter is more expensive. Both are crammed with most reliable facts and figures to be obtained. Also consult files of "Survey."

We would suggest that this address be given to an active lawyer, if you have such a man in your midst. The field is so imposingly big that it is a staggering task to undertake to grapple with it in ten minutes. However, just a catalogue of the reform forces at work, with a word of comment on each, or the most important ones, would be an inspiration to any Brotherhood. Few of us realize that we are a part of a gigantic army that is moving like trained soldiers against sin and crime in every direction.

We mention the following as a mere beginning of the list that is possible to be named. It will do the speaker and the Brotherhood great good to complete the list as far as possible: Prison reform, investigation of graft, anti-saloon agitation, prevention of crime, juvenile delinquency, prevention of disease, "pure food" agitation, International Reform Bureau, the National Civic Congress, the W. C. T. U., insurgency in politics, international peace movement, etc., etc. These are mentioned merely as a starter.

3. The third address. Instead of making a second catalogue, which would be possible, this evening we suggest a study of some one effort in social uplift and rescue work. For instance: Jane Addams' work in Chicago. Beginning in last November's McClure's and continuing through December and January is a series of articles by Miss Addams that are rich in facts that every Brotherhood ought to know. The facts she cites are typical of conditions everywhere. No better use could be made of the ten minutes for this address than to give a resume of these articles to the Brotherhood.

4. General discussion: Choose the one of the above questions you wish to discuss and appoint some one to lead in the discussion. See to it that the thought of the discussion is trained on the question of the relation of God to so-called secular affairs. Lead the men to see that there is no such division between religious and secular. God is as much interested in the state as in a revival meeting. He expects his people to be as much concerned about the righteousness of their legislators as about the sainthood of their elders. Note carefully the suggested Scripture lesson, as to God's interest in civic affairs. Run the references from these passages and it will soon become evident that the church's business is one of civics as well as theology.

Citizenship in Training

The "World Scout" Movement

Apropos of the program for March, No. 1, published in this number of CHRISTIAN MEN, we call attention to an article in January American, entitled "World Scouts," by Albert Jay Nock. It gives itself to contrasting the movement known as "Boy Scouts" with the "World Scouts." Quoting from Mr. Nock: "The points of difference are these:

"The Boy Scout is trained to believe in two artificial, false, old-fashioned and utterly exploded ideas—ideas that the world has no use for. First, he is taught to believe in the existence of a large class of beings called foreigners. Second, that it is normal, right, and above all, very glorious and interesting to oppose these beings occasionally in the institution called warfare.

"The World Scout, on the other hand, is in these respects not trained at all. He is simply allowed and encouraged to keep the natural, true, clear vision of human beings with which he was born."

Mr. Nock asks the question, "What is a foreigner?" Then recites his own experiences in hunting for an answer to his question. The papers said the "Strikers were foreigners." So Mr. Nock gets acquainted with the strikers and finds them made of the same kind of flesh and blood real people are. The travelers told Mr. Nock of the foreigner. So Mr. Nock traveled in order to meet the foreigner. He went to Italy. In the park around the aquarium he found a horde of children playing. He attempted to join in their sport and they flocked about him and took him into their game just as if he had been a native of their clime. In other words, he found all people everywhere swayed by the same desires—hungry for love, ready with sympathy, fired by the same ambitions. And again asks the question, "What is a foreigner?" Then continues:

"Now, suppose the United States should be involved in the present trouble between Italy and Turkey. I would be supposed to go and help shoot people whom I have found to be precisely like myself and my neighbors in my home town, and who have been kind and good to me without exception. One would not want to do that. * * * When one finds that the people whom he had thought were foreigners are really not, but real folks, he looks at it differently. * * * A child does not know the difference between a foreigner and anybody else, because there is no difference. The person or society that tries to teach him that there is a difference does a great wrong against nature—a wrong that may take him a lifetime to right.

"The World Scout is allowed to go on looking at people as they really are, and to take them as he finds them. * * * A boy who keeps that view, if permitted, because it is natural to him."

Mr. Nock very frankly states that when the Boy Scouts were first organized he was attracted to it. But when he learned that "the background there was always the idea that war and fighting—fighting other people are inevitable and often praiseworthy," he promptly lost interest. "But," says he, "one morning I read in the London papers an account of a thirteen-year-old boy who had gone into a burning house and carried out a baby. The little fellow took a risk that grown-ups would not take. It was one of the bravest finest things I ever heard of. The baby's father offered him a reward, but he refused, saying: 'No; it is my job. I am a World Scout.' That got me interested again. * * * I noticed that the little fellow called himself a World Scout. That sounded better."

Because of this interest Mr. Nock made a serious study of the "Scout" movement. He happy in his discovery that the World Scouts is a world-wide training school fostering the fundamental principles of world-wide brotherhood. The World Scouts are trained to think, not in terms of classifications when talking of people, but in terms of Brotherhood. He is not asking "What can I get?" "What can I give?" He is taught not to prepare for glory on the far-distant battlefield or in some far-famed naval battle, but to be prepared for heroic service at any moment and then to be on the constant lookout to render manly service in the next five minutes; to stop a running horse within the next minute; to rescue a drowning man before sundown.

The everlasting love of adventure, the fun of never knowing what is going to turn up," says Mr. Nock, "is what holds the Scouts in their work. Anyone who realizes what a hunting trail is, yes, in a good sense, gambling nature a boy is by nature, can see at once how efficient the motive is. All the strongest factors of boy-life come into play; all work together for good, if the good is once seen to be an adventure."

Hence the World Scouts has become a Peace movement, instead of a recruiting agency for war. It is training our boys to cultivate the things that make for Brotherhood instead of emphasizing sectarianism. It is implanting chivalry of the real kind instead of training the boys in selfishness. It is teaching the boys that the most fun to be gotten out of life is found in making some one else happy, or in helping some fellow who cannot help himself. They are the fellows who, when grown to manhood, are last to buy sympathy with cheap tears. If sympathy be given at all it must come begging admission to their hearts from a heart tender and strong as their own. Such men make the best of husbands, ideal fathers, clear-sighted citizens, and unflinching Christians.

This movement among the boys, when led by a competent leader, is doubtless the most far-reaching influence in the world today toward Christianizing the coming generations and making the state a Christian institution.

The movement is about two years old and has a membership already of over 50,000.

Some Side Tracks and the Main Line

BY ROBERT PERRY SHEPHERD

ROBERT PERRY SHEPHERD

THE MOST IMPORTANT THING about any man is not what he has in his pocket or in the bank, but what he has in his head. When a man thinks about God the way he treats God is the supremely important factor in determining whether the man is growing in his manhood or degenerating into a piece of human junk.

Arcus Dods made no mistake when he said: "All wrong conduct will be found, on its last analysis, to be based in a wrong conception of God." What a man thinks of God will determine the way that man treats God. The way a man treats God will determine the way a man will think about himself and his fellow men and act toward himself and his fellows. For this reason, then, a man's mental and physical attitude and action toward God is the biggest and most far-reaching thing any man ever develops.

A RELIGIOUS ANIMAL Man is a religious animal. Stated in that way the expression is a mere truism. What it means is this. Outside of imbecility and insanity, every human being has some conception of God, and lives it. The instinct for God is as much a native part of the human mind as the instinct for air is a part of the physical structure of the lungs. A man's religion is always determined by the conception he has of God; for, as a man thinks of God and treats God he will think of himself and his fellows from the standpoint of their relationship to God. At the very bottom, therefore, in human thinking, theology plays the largest part in the development of a man's thought world.

THEOLOGY? Don't shy at that word theology. If theology seventy-five years ago had meant what theology commonly means today,

YES!!! Alexander Campbell would never have built into the character of Bethany College the provision that theology should never be taught in that institution. Christ has come out of the grave clothes in which deductive theology had him wrapped for centuries. And the living, personal, saving Christ is today the only recognized center and circumference of Christian Theology. This means, in short, that what a man thinks of Jesus Christ is what he thinks of God; and the way a man conceives Christ and treats him is the expression of that man's religion, ethics and theology. In other words, in three-quarters of a century the center of theological thinking has shifted precisely to where Alexander Campbell saw it and placed it throughout the long period of his magnificently productive religious work.

DOWN TO EARTH Individual men and local Brotherhoods are apt to chase off after the most exciting, superficial appeal to their sympathy and activity. A Brotherhood cannot live on the meeting house it built in a day last year any more than a man's generosity toward men and devotion toward Christ can live all year on the turkey, or the ton of coal he sent to a poor neighbor last Christmas. This is a parable and what it means is this: Sociology is no adequate substitute for theology, and effusive humanitarianism may keep up an Elk's Lodge but it isn't the heart and mainspring of the body of Jesus Christ which is the church. Now don't jump to conclusions—woman fashion. Turn around and study Christ's life practice. When did he ever charge men to get busy, to hustle here and to hurry there, to hold the watch and count time while other fellows hustled to count glories or count profits and fevered increase in membership and multiplied achievements? Never. Christ himself didn't work that way. Even in the midst of the most tragic crush of the influences and events of his Passion, Jesus was unhurried, thoughtful and sure. He knew his ground because he knew his God.

INSIDE INFORMATION

Inside information comes from the effect that many Men's Clubs, groups, Brotherhoods, affiliated and unaffiliated, are long on sociability and short on Bible Study, spirituality and devotion. Now the perfection of character among men is in the Man, Christ Jesus. Sociability, affability, amiability and generous response to human need are good traits and characteristics, but they are not essentially and necessarily Christian. Elks' lodges have them, as a rule, to a very high degree, but nobody would mistake an Elks' lodge for a Sunday-School, nor a bunch of the antlered fellows for a bunch of men set to study and practice the life of Jesus Christ. Now the vital heart of Bible Study is to learn how men have thought of, and treated God, their neighbors and themselves. The Bible is the exclusive text-book on that topic. And out of Bible Study only men may learn how men of all degrees and kinds, from the lowest up to the perfect Man, built God into their lives and were blessed, or built without place for God in their lives and failed.

IT'S UP TO US

It is up to the Brotherhoods to develop a new type of masculine study and teaching of the Bible and to build a new society out of new manhood in which God in Christ is built as the foundation and superstructure of it. The main line is Christlikeness of personal character learned from Christ Himself; sidetracks are countless and confusing. Stay close to the main line.

A Prayer for the Devotional Mind.

Teach me, O God, how to live and grow in the realm of the Spirit. Let me learn how to feed my soul upon food proper and sufficient so that there may come to me those holy aspirations and spiritual powers that live in the life of Him whose I am and whom I long to serve more efficiently. May I have the help of a man ready to seize upon spiritual suggestions and interpret divine motives and apprehend divine truth. Let me have the mastery over the tumult and uproar of the distracting world about me so far as my mind and spirit are concerned. Let me rest in a serene faith through which alone I may approach divine things that make me strong. Teach me how so to use my mind in dealing with true and personal experiences and so to exercise my faith, that I shall find myself steadfast, well balanced Christian, and let me know how to relate this frame of mind to daily service for other men in such devotion as to make it count for most, and pour back into my life a still deeper knowledge of Thee.

In Christ's name, Amen.

Bible School Field Workers

At the Des Moines meeting of the Bible School Field Workers' Association last fall the Brotherhood Movement was taken up as one of the departments of work to be pushed during the year 1912. We firmly believe this is a commendable step, and that Bible School work will be materially strengthened by this alliance. Some of the Brotherhood men are acquainted with the scheme of coöperation in our National Bible School work.

First, let us say that there are more organized Bible Classes in the Christian Church than in any other of the great communions.

Second, there are more members of these Bible Classes in our church than in any other individual church.

Third, there are more men in the Bible Classes in the Christian Church than in the Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian Churches combined, and this is no reflection on those communions.

The records of the International Sunday-School Association in Chicago are authority for the above statements. It has only been in comparatively recent years that we have been so strong in Bible School work. Some years ago at one of our National Conventions, the Bible School Department was organized and Marion Stevenson was elected National Superintendent. Brother Stevenson labored early and late and laid broad foundations for the work. With all the handicaps that he had to overcome, with no society backing him financially or morally, he was eminently successful. Great credit is due him for his work.

At the Norfolk Convention the Bible School work was taken over by the American Christian Missionary Society and Robt. Hopkins elected National Superintendent in place of Brother Stevenson, who resigned to accept a position with the Christian Publishing Company, now the Christian Board of Publication. Brother Hopkins was then State Bible School Superintendent of Kentucky, and was pronounced one of the most successful Bible School Superintendents then employed by any of the states. We are a great people in Kentucky, having more members of the Christian Church than any state, excepting only Missouri, and in other ways Kentucky holds the banner. It was therefore fitting that Brother Hopkins should be selected to preside over the destinies of our National Bible School work. Those who know Brother Hopkins love him like a brother. He is a little fellow, giving the impression of being sawed off at both ends, like a Pennsylvania Dutchman, and a broad countenance and open speech typical of himself.

Though doing a great work, he is rather modest about reporting it, fearing that in so doing some of his statements might be construed or misunderstood and that credit belonging elsewhere might be reflected in his direction. Therefore he authorizes us to say simply that his department has endeavored to be the clearing house for Bible School activities through which the State Bible School men give voice to their united work—and there is more to this than appears upon the surface. Standards of service have been adopted, uniform methods proposed, uniform records and practices undertaken, so that throughout the length and breadth of the land in less than three short years every one of the State Bible School Superintendents is advocating the standards adopted through the National Bible School Office, and this has not stopped with the State Superintendents, but has percolated into the districts and counties and the local churches. Brother Hopkins has done, and is doing, a magnificent piece of work in helping to mold the destinies of our people in Bible Study.

There was a stirring in Buckeyedom New Year's Day, a flutter of wings and rattle of band boxes as Mr. and Mrs. Myron Settle, and all the little Settles, settled down to lead the Bible School forces of Ohio. They blew in from Kansas, where Brother Settle has led the Bible School forces for a number of years, and before that was a Kentuckian. Enough said. Our Bible Schools in Kansas are well advanced in the front rank. We do not know the record, but presume it will compare favorably with any frontier state. Things are already moving in Ohio and as soon as Brother Settle can get around the circle, get acquainted with the folk, and with his new work, there will be some Settling done.

MYRON C. SETTLE

Garry L. Cook is the State Superintendent of Hoosierdom—otherwise known as Indiana, where they raise Presidents and where the Legislature raises cane. At the Bible School Institute, at Bethany Park, last summer, they called him Dr. Cook, but we would not have our readers believe that he is the Dr. Cook that divided honors with Commodore Peary in the discovery of the North Pole. Our Dr. Cook has discovered something more valuable to humanity than the aforesaid attractor of magnetic power, and if you are a Bible School worker in Indiana, it will not take very long to discover that Dr. Cook is on the job. Now, Brother Cook is a big fellow, about 6 feet 3 in his slippers, and weighs 300 or 400 pounds, or such a matter, enough to secure a reserved seat on the trolley car. When he gets in your vicinity there is a trembling of the earth, indicating dangerous ground. That is the reason there are so many new churches being built in Indiana; they cannot stand Cook's onslaught. He goes into a church and diagnoses its ailment, prescribes a remedy and invariably they have to have a new church to take care of the increase. The Disciples are a strong people in Indiana. Some of the counties have as many members as those in the Seventh District of Missouri, and that is saying a good deal, and Garry L. Cook is responsible for his part of the progress that our people in Indiana have to report.

GARRY L. COOK

Over in Illinois some years ago there was a printer man, named Clarence DePew. We have a strong attachment for printers, possibly because we have so much to do with them, but Clarence DePew was a mighty good printer. He was also Superintendent of Russell Thrapp's Bible School at Jacksonville, and the door was a smoother path than a buffalo trail in Kansas, and Clarence DePew's footsteps made it. He opened up the Bible School just like the printing office, conducting Bible School affairs decently and in order, and anyone who came into either school or shop acted as if he owned the place was promptly and properly kicked out.

About this time our folks determined to have a Bible School Superintendent for the Sucker State, and Clarence DePew was p-vailed upon to close up his printing office, take up his hand sachel and take to the prairies, and for five years has gone up and down Illinois organizing Sunday-Schools, rehabilitating others, distributing gladness and printing matter all along the way. There has been no more enthusiastic worker than DePew, no one whose work is more painstaking or efficient. They say he has the best set of Bible School Records in his office in Jacksonville that is to be found in anybody's state. Clarence DePew is a big fellow, with a voice like Robert Hopkins—if anything a little more so—and knows his work through and through.

Iowa is the Hawk-Eye State, but W. T. Fisher, the State Bible School Superintendent, has an "eagle eye" when it comes to Bible School work. He graduated from Cotner University not many years ago and is just as young in looks and actions as any of the other State Superintendents. After graduation he was a pastor and now is leading our force in the Bible Schools of Iowa with satisfactory results. Fisher is a steady worker. When he goes out to accomplish anything he seldom returns without the scalps in his belt. He is sought after to deliver addresses at Institutes and wherever a group of Bible School or Brotherhood Men of Iowa want an inspirational talk that will help them in their work.

W. T. FISHER

er may be sent for. He has a family back ing the church folks of Des Moines and n to see them occasionally, like any other etary, enough to keep on speaking ac-tance with them.

Missouri is a great state. One Hundred y-Five Thousand Disciples is estimated rvatively to be our membership. J. H. is the Bible School Superintendent. We ot know if he is related to the Wm.
rings Bryan—in fact, we anticipate that not, but he is just as much of a com-or as Wm. Jennings Bryan ever was.
e coming to Missouri Brother Bryan

J. H. BRYAN

as State Bible School Superintendent of Iowa upon the death of the late J. H. Harden, er Bryan stepped across the line in Mis-ou. Bible School work is hard in Mis-ou; very hard. We have scores of churches it but Bible Schools and a whole lot more ave inefficient and ineffective organizaor. This is Bryan's job. He maintains an ffice in the R. A. Long building in Kansas it from which he issues tons of printed at that goes out over the state in helping ake Missouri Bible Schools what they ug to be.

Nebraska next: Several years ago there as a lumber yard in Lincoln. The lumber is still there; in fact, there are several r yards there, but the particular lumber to which we refer was the property of Oberlies, and Oberlies was the Supertendent and General Manager of the concern.

L. C. OBERLIES

He sold the lumber and took in the money.
The business was profitable and he was independent, but the call to service came his way and what did this Fat Man of Lincoln do but sell out his lumber business and become Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and it was only a step from that to State Bible School Superintendent, which position he now holds. Oberlies is an enthusiast, can lead a song, make a speech, or write a book; in fact, he can fill any job in almost any church from janitor to preacher, and often performs both those tasks the same day. Nebraska is a frontier state, and the wind blows occasionally. Some of the New England states could be put in a corner of some of the Nebraska counties and not know they are there, but somehow Oberlies gets over the territory and covers the ground well—especially when he wears a No.
12 boot, or thereabouts. We like Oberlies very much and like to read his articles in the papers. He always makes us want to take off our coats and go to work.

You may think the State Bible School Superintendent of Kansas has hardly had time to make his mark, but he has done so just the same. His name is David Owen and he lives in Topeka along with Governor Stubbs, C. A.
Finch, Geo. E. Lyon and others of prominence.
Owen was a railroad man until about sixty days ago; in fact, we assume he still calls

DAVID OWEN

himself a railroader, but along with railroad business Owen was Superintendent of the Sunday-School of the First Christian Church, and the Sunday-School was a good one. To think a thought was to do a deed with Owen, and when Myron Settle determined to put on his sandals and remove his tent to Ohio, what did Kansas do but go down into the railroad offices and lay violent hands on Brother Owen and establish him in Settle's chair. We have no doubt that he will make good and shall watch his progress with eager anticipation.

H. S. GILLIAM

Oklahoma, the "beautiful land," is only twenty-two years old and we as a people are decidedly strong in that new commonwealth and have churches in almost every community, thanks to Boggess' Ride. He have churches and Bible Schools where much of the membership is of Indian blood, and a visit to these "Happy Hunting Grounds" will convince you that we are a progressive people in the new state. H. S. Gilliam is the State Bible School Superintendent and is doing splendid work in leading our forces there.

Edward Owers leads our Bible School forces in the "Lone Star" State. Texas has magnificent distances, yet they are only a step when measured by the workers. Many trips of the State Superintendent require several days in the saddle, but things will not always be so in Texas. Railroads are building as fast as we can put steel and ties together. Land is increasing in value; some of it doubling in a night. We are a prosperous people in Texas. Zealous and enthusiastic and our progress in Bible School lines is most marked.

WALTER FRAZEE

Down in Old Kentucky, when Robert McKins left to become National Superintendent, Walter Frazee was selected to take his place. Brother Frazee is a man of magnetic personality, pleasing address, with an ambition to succeed in any enterprise he may undertake. Kentucky won the Front Rank Banner for Bible Schools last year, which is an indication of Frazee's work. The National Convention will be held in Louisville next October and will see a demonstration of Frazee's ability in Bible School lines.

To the above men and other men and women in other states who lead our Bible School forces probably more than to any other section, officers in the church great credit is due for the tremendous progress that our people are making and are making in a Bible School movement. At their meeting in Des Moines the Brotherhood Movement was enthusiastically endorsed and CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine was designated the official organ for Men's Work. At the writing plans are on foot to inaugurate Brotherhood and Bible Class Campaigns in various states under the cooperation of the Brotherhood and the State Bible School Superintendents, and it is anticipated that as a result of this propagation hundreds of new Men's organizations—Brotherhoods, Bible Class Leagues and Clubs—will be organized and associated with the General Brotherhood Movement.

OUR MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

LESSON 2—FEBRUARY 11.

THE BOY JESUS IN THE TEMPLE.

Text—Luke 2:40-52. Golden Text—Luke 2:49.

The theme this morning ought to deeply concern every father. We are to study about a boy who was exactly the kind of a boy you would want yours to be. I am sure no greater good fortune could come to any man than to have such a son grow up at his fireside, and go out to a life of achievement from under his roof. Solomon rightly understood the parental heart, when he said, "A wise son maketh a glad father." In no place does the example of Jesus touch more vitally the need of our time than in the footprints that have been left us, of these unfolding years at Nazareth, in the home of Joseph and Mary. The forces that contributed to His normal growth and marvelous grace may still be put in operation and be made the greatest conserving power of the age. Let us glance at some of them.

Home Influence. There is something peculiarly attractive about this Nazareth home. The beauty of the garden we may learn from the beauty and fragrance and flavor of flower and fruit. The atmosphere of the home may as easily be discerned by the plants that grow up around the hearthstone. Here in the home of Joseph and Mary we learn that "The child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him." One needs no further proof that the home in which Jesus passed His childhood was one of peculiar grace and charm. It was a very modest affair, but we underestimate its worth, if we think of it as a place of squalor and want. Grace and dirt do not domicile together. Wretchedness and religious devotion never keep company. It belonged rather to that class of which has gone the best manhood of our time; to use Emerson's phrase, "A place of plain living and high thinking." It might be said of it, as the scholar said of his garden, "It was not very long, nor very broad, but it was wondrous high." In the home at Nazareth, we may be sure the chief window opened toward heaven, and the doorway led by a straight path to the village synagogue, and that underneath it was the rock foundation of obedience to the Word of God. There is not a beautiful trait of that home that you could not reproduce in yours, and your children be the better for it.

Parental Example. What a world of religious wisdom and power is crowded into one sentence: "Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the Feast of the Passover." Jesus' parents were church-going people. Some one suggested that "if they had not been church-going people they would not have had Jesus in their home." God certainly has shown His preference for such homes by sending nearly every great reformer and benefactor into them, for infantile nursing and juvenile training. These Nazareth parents not only set the example of church-going, but they took Jesus with them. Parents and child went side by side to the House of God. Strange so many of you fathers have overlooked this, and then wondered why your children were so indifferent to the things of the Kingdom of God. Every son is entitled to religious example in father that will aid him in the development of a normal life. After all, more boys go astray because of examples in the home, than from any other one cause. There are so many ways the father can belittle religion in the eyes of his boy. When there is money for pleasure, and money for self-indulgence, and money for every worldly desire and only a stingy pittance for the church and its missionary agencies, the boy easily draws his conclusion regarding the real religious worth of the pater familias. When the father puts Christ and His cause before everything, when he puts his best energy into the Bible School and Church, the boy takes notice. There is in reality no "boy-problem." It is the "father-problem." When you fathers value your boys' character more than you do dividends and material success, and not only train him in the way he should go, but go that way yourselves, youth will come to its rightful inheritance.

Watchful Oversight. Even wise parents sometimes make mistakes. "Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem, and Joseph and his Mother knew not of it." But with nightfall they missed Him, and searched diligently until they found Him. What a balm for those anxious hours of search that when found, He was in the house of God. Are you careful to know where your boy is, what kind of company he keeps, what habits he is forming? "Too busy," you say, "with business and traffic to keep in touch with him." Then you had better see that some provision is made for his play-hours where he is sure to find helpful companionship and wholesome sports. A father whose help, in carrying on a work for boys, I was soliciting, said, "You don't need to make any provision for my boy. I'll look after him." "Where was he last night?" I asked. "At home, of course," was his answer. "I seem to know more about your boy than you do," I replied, "for he is a leader in the boys' work down at the church." The father did not know, and it would have been the same, if his son had been out with the street-corner gang, making fast tracks to ruin. With alluring paths to sin, leading down every street, he needs careful oversight. With right example and patient care, we need never sing:

"Where is my wandering boy tonight?
Go search for him where you will,
But bring him to me with all his blight,
And tell him I love him still."

The Father's Business. It was not an accidental circumstance that took Mary's lost Son to the Temple. He sought it as His Father's house. It was here He could perhaps learn about His Father's business. It was here the depths of His unfolding nature first found expression. "All who heard him were astonished at his understanding." We are in danger of underestimating the soul capacity of adolescent youth, and consequently misunderstanding him. He seems so young and thoughtless. In class he is so listless and inattentive. But under this careless exterior there may be an intelligence of surpassing wonder. A few months ago, Harvard professors were amazed at the knowledge of the youngest of their thousand students, a boy of twelve, as he lectured to them on abstruse mathematics. The average boy thinks more deeply than you give him credit for doing. The eternal varieties of religion weigh upon his mind. He longs to know the mystery of being and the meaning of unfolding life. But the lips which should instruct him are often dumb and the hand that should guide him is withheld. The father has missed his opportunity to enlist another child in his Father's business.

The Ideal Boy and Perfect Man. There are no accident sin the realm of character. It is a matter of sowing and reaping. Jesus was early about His Father's business. He was loyal to His higher nature. The result was the beautiful harmony in His development. "advanced in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." If some of us could go back and begin over how differently youth's years would be spent. The wholesome parental restraint which we bore like a burdensome yoke, or sought to break away from, would be welcome. The misspent hours would be crowded with wise preparation. Each power of mind and body would be developed with a view to the best service that we could render to God and man. We cannot go backward and amend the path our wayward feet have made, but we can, at least, let His grace direct our future pathway, as men, that some boy, following in our footsteps may round out his young life in a way to secure the favor of God and the approval of good men.

LESSON 3—FEBRUARY 18.

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Text—Mark 1:1-8; Luke 3:1-20. Golden Text—
Matthew 3:2.

Jesus says of the character we are to study today, "Among them that are born of women, there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist." John's appearance is connected with the political and ecclesiastical current of a great epoch. Tiberius is on the throne of the Roman Empire. Pilate is in the governor's chair, as a ruler of Judea. Caiaphas is arrayed in pontifical robes, as high priest. The world is moving on in the old path of tyranny and oppression. But, suddenly, there appears a man whose manner and message make the people forget potentate and prelate, and flock to his improvised pulpit on the banks of the Jordan. What is the occasion of all this excitement? A new prophet has arisen. There is something about the tone of his speech that causes men to listen. His baptism becomes the sensation of the day. Curiosity, unrest, guilt cause men to leave home and business that they may see and hear this wilderness-trained preacher. What did they find? A young man of priestly lineage, clad in a mantle skin, living in the desert, speaking boldly against sin

...rting to repentance, and proclaiming the
...ing of the long expected Messiah.

The Call to Service. God has always had
...y of finding men for His work and letting
...e know. He called Moses through the
...ing bush, and Isaiah by a vision of live
... and Ezekiel by whirlwinds. "The word
...od came to John." And so did it come
...u last Lord's day, as the preacher appealed
...elp in caring for some needy family down
...e bottoms, or for volunteers in building
...he Bible School, or for funds to send the
...el to some unevangelized part of the world.
...It was your answer? Was it, "Here am I,
...me?" or was it some self-justifying ex-
... about charity beginning at home? Or the ...rging toss of small coin into the mis-
...ory offering? When the call came to
...y, he did not hesitate, nor question
...rders. He just "came into all the regions
...round about Jordan and at once began
...rnest the task he had been given to per-
...r. "He came preaching in the wilderness,"
...hew tells us. Strange place for the be-
...ning of a great religious revival, but the
...a who has his orders from heaven may
...ws be sure of success in carrying them
...it

Teaching Repentance. One would think
...o the throngs that came to hear him that ...had sensed some popular fancy and was
...dg to fame on the tide of popular favor.
...ely no mere worn out dogma of religious ... could attract such crowds. If Shakespeare ...been extant, we would expect him to be ...panding one of his tragedies. If new ...ght had been in vogue, it might be that
...d declared himself its high priest. What ... saying, that men gather around him in ...interested crowds? Listen. "Repent, for ... Kingdom of heaven is at hand." He is
...ing about sin, and the need of getting rid
...f. He is preaching "the baptism of repent-
... for the remission of sins." His sermon
...l of strange and terrible words. He is
...ing things by their right name. The best
...ce of Jerusalem in their own estimation,
...harisees and Sadducees, the great leading
... of the day are in his audience, but with
...ng accusing voice he cries: "Oh, brood of
...s, progeny of serpents, deceitful, cunning,
...nant, how do you account for being here?"
...o hath warned you to flee from the wrath
...me?" That kind of preaching drew mul...titudes then and it will draw multitudes now.
...o after all, the most startling fact in the ...ol today is sin, and the most crying need
...f the human soul is to get rid of it. It is this
...he makes a Beattie, with only a few hours
...etween him and eternity, confess his revolting
...ring, in the hope that the mercy, denied in
...arly tribunals, might be secured at the bar of
...o. It was this that led Richeson, shut in his prison cell with an outraged conscience, to acknowledge the tragedy of his life. The doctrine of repentance is old, but it will never be outgrown while men go down before the assault of temptation. John says "Repent," and men flock to hear him, because they find that repentance alone will tear down the barricade that sin has reared. The most popular message for our world, today, is that which points a way of escape from sin's dominion.

The Fearless Reformer. Merely to talk against sin is a harmless performance; but to insist on a changed life, and to take steps to bring it about, is the test of a man's courage.
John was not a denunciator only, but a reformer. The goal sought in his teaching was an amended life. "Bring forth fruits worthy of repentance." The liquor-dealer and the pool-seller, and the whole brood of modern vipers do not care how much you talk temperance and righteousness in the Bible Class and Prayer-Meeting, but when you begin to talk it in the primaries and at the ballot box, if you are not considerable of a man, you will be tempted to show the white feather. John's idea of repentance was summed up in Sam Jones' trite phrase, "Quit your meanness." To every candidate for baptism, his meaning was made plain. When the people came, he insisted on the exercise of brotherly love. When the publicans asked baptism at his hands, he demanded the end of "graft." When soldiers asked what to do, he recommended the exercise of kindness, justice, and contentment. When we make such repentance the prerequisite of Christian baptism, there is going to be some shrinkage in the telegraphic results of our marvelous revivals. It takes courage to insist on reformation, as an essential fruit of repentance. John's fate was that of most of the world's reformers. As a preacher he was the sensation of the hour, but as a reformer he found the door of the dungeon and the headsman's axe awaiting him.

Not John But a Greater. It was an age of Messianic hopes, already pretenders, taking advantage of this general expectancy, had appeared, and failing to justify their claims, had been "brought to nought." The ministry of John, now in the height of its popularity, led men to look upon him as the possible goal of all their desires, but his answer checked their ardor and turned their attention to another one.
"I am not he," said he, "but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose." It is to this greater one that we are now to turn our attention. John was great, a hero of giant mold. We admire him for his courage and for his work in preparing the way for the coming of the Lord.
But how John shrinks in the presence of the young carpenter who came to his baptism from Nazareth, and whose glory today fills the world.

LESSON 4—FEBRUARY 25.

THE BAPTISM AND TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

Text—Mark 1:9-13; Matthew 4:1-11. Golden Text—Hebrews 2:18.

There comes a time in the life of every young man, who is worth while, when he must launch out in a career for himself. Happy indeed is he whose early years of development and training have fitted him for his task. Jesus has been in training for a work that is to fill the ages and transform the world. Hitherto His school had been the Nazareth home and synagogue and carpenter shop, and the rocks and flowers and birds, of his native heath. How well he learned the lesson of the simple life is seen in the parables and figures that held multitudes spell-bound during his ministry, and that still reveal the heart needs of our suffering, sinning world. Then one day he laid down his tools, folded his work apron, and stepped out of the narrow shop and joined the throng that were coming to the baptism of John. Here the final stages of his preparation await him. He has been always about his Father's business, but must have the Father's approval. He has had long years of training in the element of moral beauty, but he must be tested in the fierce battles of temptation. His baptism and temptation were the final steps in his preparation for the work the Father had set for him to do.

An Example of Obedience. Every great leader among men has first learned to obey. Your great captains of industry have sprung from the ranks. Your merchant princes began in subordinate positions. Your great editors were once printer's devils or poorly paid reporters. "Though he were a Son, yet learn he obedience." It was that He might set an example for coming ages that Jesus began right where John was demanding the surrender of every penitent sinner. John's was the baptism of repentance. Jesus had no sin. But His mission was to redeem a world lost through transgression. His obedience would help untold millions to an obedient surrender to the claim of the gospel; so He said, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus is becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." The fact that men today question the need of baptism and make light of it as a meaningless ordinance that may be omitted, or changed at pleasure, shows the wisdom of Jesus' example. Since He went down into Jordan "and was baptised of John," and the Holy Spirit spoke His approval of the act, and Jesus embodied it in His parting message, why should we question or hesitate? Here baptism was followed by the visible descent of the Holy Spirit. With us, it is accompanied with the promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit.

The Father's Approval. What one of us, as boys, has not felt his heart thrill with pleasure as he has heard his father's approving words, in recognition of some manly act, or well performed task. Its echo has safe-guarded us along many a dangerous path and through many trying experiences in later years. We must have been the emotion of Jesus, Son of God though He were, as He heard from heaven His Father's voice, saying, "Thou art my beloved son, in thee I am well pleased." In trying ordeals through which His course led him, how these approving words must have cheered and strengthened Him. I wonder that day when the soldiers struck Him and mocked Him, in Pilate's judgment hall there did not come, to strengthen faith and courage, the assurance of this earlier day, "I am his beloved Son, he is well pleased with me." And what greater blessing can come to us, today, than to have the heavenly Father's approval? When the day's task is ended and you lie down to rest, what better return could you ask than that it has met with the favor of God? The multitude may turn a deaf ear, and enemies may scoff, but all that does not matter to a man, who above the storm, has heard the Father say, "Well pleased." It was that voice that sustained Luther, as Pontiff and prince denounced him. It was the voice that cheered Bunyan in prison, and the pilgrims in their exile. And will sustain every loyal disciple who sets his face resolutely to do his Father's will, regardless of what the unregenerate world may say.

Meeting Temptation. "Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the wilderness." Have you ever noticed how violent the alternations of human experience? Just now He had come from the waters of baptism, where He had seen the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and heard the Father's approving voice. Then He was driven into the wilderness to "fight His determining battles." From Baptism to Temptation. Let no man question the sincerity of his profession, or the validity of his baptism, because he finds himself at once assailed by the tempter. Nor should we judge a brother harshly, because in the infancy of his profession he has not always been able to withstand the assault, with an "it is written." Holy Writ states of Jesus that "he was tempted in all points like as we are" and then records His three assaults of the tempter. The program of Satan has always been a short one. He has only three things to say, and has been ringing the changes on these through the dreary millennium of the centuries. They are appetite, pride, and ambition. The temptation to eat dishonest bread, the temptation to worldly pride, and the temptation to worldly power. In the keen competition of today, how fierce the first temptation has shown itself. For the accumulation of dishonest dollars, through beating down wages, boosting up prices, or misrepresentation, is only another phase of the temptation that would "turn stones into bread." Fiercer still is the temptation that assails men to a depraved appetite or seeks its ill-gotten gain at the expense

ry virtue. Again legions go down before temptation of pride, to make a showy appearance, dress better, live better, and stand out than their neighbors. A more conspicuous though less numerous, company, are those who have fallen at Satan's feet for political eminence, and have bartered honor in their quest for power. To all these, the trail of temptation points the way of escape from sin's bondage. For in that he himself had suffered, tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted. His "it is written," to those who vainly seek escape, is the instrument of victory.

Perennial Conflict. Luke tells us that at the end of this wilderness experience, the tempter "departed from him for a season." Again, at the feeding of the multitude and in the garden, the attack was renewed. But the final victory came when enduring the cross and despising the shame, "he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high." Let not the victory of today put you off your guard. Tomorrow, in subtler form and better disguise, he will assail the citadel of your faith, and the stronghold of your character. Buffeted and battle scarred, it was only at the end of the journey that Paul could say, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Happy he who, through watching and prayer, has likewise resisted unto death.

LESSON 1—MARCH 3.

THE CALL OF THE FIRST DISCIPLES.

Text—Mark 1:14-28, and Luke 5:1-11. Golden Text—Matthew 9:37-38.

The work of John the Baptist ended in suffering. But one mightier than he had already appeared upon that marvelous, fateful career, which has been the wonder and hope of the world. Some months before John's imprisonment Jesus had gone about quietly in Judea, and there enlisting a follower, or speaking comfort to some burdened heart. A few days at Jordan, the guests at a wedding at Cana, Nicodemus by night, the woman at the well, had seen and felt the marvel of His personality. But now that John's ministry had ended in the dungeon of Machaerus, Jesus returned to the more fruitful field of Galilee, and every hill is to re-echo His voice, and every valley to receive His footprints. Here He begins to teach the principles of the Kingdom, and to plan for the conquest of the world. It is our privilege today, as men, to follow His feet as he begins his evangel.

The Gospel of the Kingdom. "The Kingdom of God is at hand." These words seem to be the echo of something we have already heard. It was the keynote of John's message, and Jesus has added a word that transforms the meaning. It is "the gospel" of the Kingdom. It was a message of "good news." Are we preaching a real gospel to men? Is the purpose of the Bible School and Church to be winning the hearts of men and helping to lighten their burdens? There have been times when these questions might have been answered in the negative—when the church was neglecting the principles of the Kingdom. But absorbed in its own concerns that it forgot the good news of the Kingdom is again finding expression. We have just witnessed a demonstration of it in the care of the poor through the usually rigid winter. We have a demonstration of it in the treatment of poor, defenseless manhood, that leaves our prison walls, and again a place in the world. We have seen great movements of our day to lighten the burdens of toiling millions and to secure them a rightful share in the privileges and blessings of God's world. If "the Kingdom of God is within you" it will find expression in some form of service for human betterment.

Fishing for Men. Jesus was an expert fisherman. He knew on which side of the boat to cast the net. But His motive was not to catch fish, but to catch the fishermen, and secure their service in a wider field. Their calling was honorable, as is all honest toil, but up to this time the life of these men was exceedingly narrow. Fishing had become the chief end and whole aim of living. Their horizon was no wider than the sea that supplied their trade. By their standard, success was measured by the greatness of the catch. At this level they would have lived and died, but for the call and mission of Jesus. Now these men were living up to the secular ideal of life. It is to catch something for self, whether that something be pleasure or wealth, fame or fish. How immeasurable the world of those four fishermen, Peter, Andrew, James, and John, enlarged that day as they responded to the invitation of Jesus. "Come ye after me and I will make you become fishers of men." Did it ever occur to you that in these words Jesus was calling you to a definite service for Him? Your daily task may be in shop, or counting room, or field, but that does not need to hinder from the greater work to which Jesus calls every disciple. The shop, to the man who recognizes the higher calling, may afford one his best opportunity to catch men. The best haul Paul ever made was in a tent-maker's factory, when he caught Aquilla and Priscilla. Personal evangelism is destined to outstrip all other evangelism in the magnitude and permanence of its results, when we are ready to let Jesus use us in fishing for men. And the field of humblest toil is going to be held in honor, when it is used as the channel for catching men for the Kingdom. Would you be successful fishers of men? Then follow Jesus. "Love men as Christ loved them and you will not mourn your small skill and limited chance."

Authority in Religion. The question of authority always concerns us. Our whole system of jurisprudence is based on authority. We seek for an authoritative standard in every line of investigation. Men are questioning today, as never before, the claims of religious authority. Reason, the church, the Bible, have all been urged as the final seat of authority. Each in turn has been attacked and rejected by some modern school of thought. Whither shall we turn? In our lesson today, Jesus speaks with a finality that filled his hearers with wonder. "He taught them as having authority." Their amazement increased as they listened to his Sermon on the Mount. Why did he speak with such assurance about the Father and our relation to Him? Because He was a God-sent man with a God-sent message. "All authority is given unto me," he said, "in heaven and in earth." When men are willing to accord Jesus His rightful place as a teacher of religious truth and recognizes his sole authority, we shall be done with denominational strife and sectarian bitterness. And we shall be done with an inefficient church and the reign of the mammon of unrighteousness.

A Good Day's Work. The modern Sunday problem had its counterpart in the old Jewish Sabbath problem. How ought the day to be observed? What restrictions shall be made and what liberties granted? Shall the bars be thrown down and the lid lifted, or we return to the blue laws of Puritan supremacy? The example of Jesus may safely be followed here. "Straightway on the Sabbath Day he entered into the synagogue." What day that was. In the early morning hours he was in the house of worship, participating in its exercises, extending help to an unfortunate member of the congregation, later healing the mother of one of His disciples, and as the day drew to its finish, bringing relief to multitudes of suffering people who sought His help. What was the use Jesus made of the day, hallowed by sacred memories. It had been a day of great helpfulness and blessing. Contrast this with the example of some men who live in your neighborhood. Half the morning is spent when they appear in a grouchy mood at the breakfast table to divide time between coffee and the Sunday paper, followed by a trip to the office to look over the morning mail, to plan some scheme for larger gains, an afternoon spent in dozing, or in a ride through the parks, an evening of dissatisfaction with oneself in particular and the world in general. When the day is done so many professing Christians put in the Lord's Day, and wonder why things are going wrong; and criticize the church for its inefficiency, and the world for its heartlessness. Jesus knew the human heart and human need, and has left an example of worship and service, indispensable to spiritual growth and human happiness.

FORWARD—MARCH!

With the passing of this month one of the year 1912 will have gone by its history. The Brotherhood Movement—the agency responsible for the CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine—has written some golden letters upon the year 1912. First, we have to re-remember that since the Portland Convention more than four hundred local Brotherhoods in their various forms of organization have been established in Christian communities under the inspiration and suggestion of the National office. The number, 446, to be exact. Every day we receive notice of other groups of men meeting together and asking the question, "What must we do to be saved?" In the past we have had some Brotherhoods that sprang up in one night, made a loud sound and disappeared again before the morning sun. It is no difficulty to get these mushroom Brotherhoods, but is a hard matter to break the soil, prepare the field, plant the seed, and cultivate the plant of a real, live Brotherhood of men. We are right now, as a religious people, facing a crisis in our history. We are intensely evangelistic and our ministers and evangelists frequently have great in-gatherings. One meeting at Parsons, Kansas, reports more than 1,200 additions. In some sections people answer the church bell as they do the dinner bell, and as a result our supply of ministers doesn't near go around. The editor of this paper has been corresponding with some of our leading educators and finds that with 11,000 churches in the United States we only have 3,224 of them that have preaching by a minister with any regularity. There are at this time, according to authorized sources, less than 1,000 young men preparing for the ministry in all of our schools and colleges combined, and as the usual ministerial course requires four long, laborious and expensive years, you will see that if all of these 1,000 students are persistent we can at best only graduate 250 per year, and this is not sufficient to take care of the loss by death and incapacitation. We must have more men for the ministry, more money to educate these men, and more appreciative churches in which they are to preach. Our colleges need chairs of "Men's Work." There is nothing so appalling as the inability of the average minister to lead his men into channels of real usefulness. Even some of our very best ministers do not take hold of the proposition as if they were confident of their knowledge of the situation. So much for the ministry. You are asking yourself, "Well, what are we going to do about it?" The Men and Religion Forward Movement says the only salvation for the church and the empty pulpit is the development of lay preachers. The Brotherhood says a loud "Amen." Every one of our ministers ought to have a class of men meeting regularly, discussing the subject of personal evangelism, and these men ought to be developing so they can go into the empty pulpits and give the people the message of life. Such a group studying persistently in any church, in any community, will bring returns in excess of fondest expectations. If we but get our laymen aroused to their opportunities in this regard the church will go on the upward road toward progress, but first we must enthuse the minister—yes, the minister is still the key to the whole situation. He is no longer simply the preacher—some of the best ministers are far from orators as such, but they are doing great work in developing leaders. What is the use of sending out evangelists to hold meetings and establish churches when we haven't the men to lead the people on? What is the use of building church houses all over the land and then turning the key in the lock and not opening them for months or even years? Brethren, these are facts, and if the men of our churches do not get under the proposition now on earth will. The ladies have their hands full carrying a burden that will be left with them altogether too long. Ministers are in the most cases sadly overworked individuals, and we men are worrying ourselves about it. As long as we come to church on Sunday morning bow our heads on the back of the chair when the minister prays, drop our money in the contribution plate as it passes by, and after the hymn go home, we think we have done our duty by the church. But we are wrong. We may be members of the church all right and keep up this kind of thing indefinitely, but that is not Christian. It is simply our excuse for not being a Christian. An early number of CHRISTIAN MEN will deal fully with this problem.

An Untimely Announcement

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, held in Kansas City, February 16th, J. K. Shellenberger, Field Secretary, offered his resignation to the Board to take effect April 1st, next. Mr. Shellenberger has served this cause faithfully and efficiently for two years and six months, traveling almost continuously, organizing and stimulating the members of our local churches to consecrated activity. It is with extreme regret that we stop the press long enough to insert pleasant and untimely announcement. His resignation was accepted by the Board and resolutions regarding his service will be published in the April issue of CHRISTIAN MEN. For the present the work will be directed entirely from the office in Kansas City.

The Foreign Offering

The first Sunday in March will be here almost by the time these lines are read. No more worthy work presents itself for consideration during the year than work abroad. The Foreign Christian Missionary Society is the only agency among us doing exclusively Foreign Mission work. It is worthy of moral and financial support. Every church in the land should take a liberal offering for Foreign work on that day. To fail to do so will cause a shrinkage in the receipts of the Society. This would be disastrous to the work, and almost ruinous.

Which will you do? "Go or send?" If you think you are physically and otherwise qualified to go to the Foreign Field, consult with your pastor or write to A. McLean, President, Cincinnati, Ohio. If you cannot go, arrange to send a representative. Hardly a church of any size among us that could not or should not have a personal representative on the Foreign Field. If the matter is laid upon the hearts and pocket-books of the men of the congregation, when you get to "Know" about the work, you will "Glow," and you will decide to "Go," either personally or by proxy. What will your answer be the first Sunday in March?

IDEALS TO MAN
Ideals and methods are reflexive in their influence. The methods have more than once lost the world its highest idealism. When at our best we sight a high ideal, then go our way on a false method and lose it again in the mists of uncertainties and vagaries. Jesus' method never fails. Jesus was right in sociology and economics as well as in theology. How shall I treat my fellow man in order that the highest good may come to all? Answer: "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also even unto them." Paul paraphrases His thought thus: "Not looking each of you to his own things but each of you also to the things of others." "Have this mind in you also which was in Christ Jesus."

THE GOLDEN RULE There is not a social problem in existence that the Golden Rule will not solve when once enough men practice it. To usher in such a social condition was the purpose of Jesus, and He did not set us to impossible tasks. We are not responsible for fully realizing perfection in our three score years and ten; but we are responsible for making our lives an added urge unto the end "To which the whole creation moves."

Hence the Brotherhood would emphasize the Golden Rule as a safe rule of society. The Brotherhood recognizes three divisions of the human race, viz., the children, the women and our fellow men. It appeals to Brotherhood men to take the initiative in putting into practice the Golden Rule to the children and out of it shall come the solution of the child problem in all its forms. When I promise to treat your children just like I would like to have you treat my children, I put myself on a sympathetic basis with you. Whether your children be orphans, down in sin, crushed in sorrow, buried in poverty, blinded in heathenism.

BROTHERHOOD
BENEVOLENCES

Are your children orphans? Then the Golden Rule applied means that I will try to do for them what I would like you to do for my children if they be orphans. Herein is the basis of our orphanage and rescue work. The time has come to put them on a sympathetic rather than merely an eleemosynary basis.

Are your children crushed in poverty and lost to all holy ambition? Then the Golden Rule applied means that I will do all in my power to relieve that condition of poverty and restore ambition. This is what I would like to have you do for my children. My father love enables me to see my way clearly as to my duty to another father's children. When the church succeeds in planting this spirit into the hearts of the multitude the child problem will be solved.

YOUR NEIGHBOR'S DAUGHTER

To put the Golden Rule into practice in our relationships with the women solves the sex problems of the land. Indeed, Jesus offers the only solution to this as to all other social problems. Will you treat my daughter just the way you would like me to treat your daughter? If so, then we are on a common basis and the heart of men is becoming purer. Is the love of men's children stronger than their sexual passions? Then there is still a chance to rescue the world from the hidden crime that has eaten the heart of civilizations and wrecked kingdoms.

FELLOW MEN

To put the Golden Rule into practice relative to my fellow men means that I will treat the other fellow just the way I would like him to treat me were I in his position and he in mine. Should the employer treat his employee like he would like to be treated were the conditions reversed, and should the employee reciprocate by treating the employer like he would like to be treated were he the employer and the other man the employee the industrial conflicts of the day would be fast drawing to a close. And we are to say there is no other adequate solution.

"So far away as to be Utopian and impractical," did you say? It is no so far away as it was 1,900 years ago. Neither is it any more beyond the realm of possibility than was the fulfillment of the commission given to the eleven the day the Master went to heaven. It is ours to decide upon the validity of the ideals placed before us. It is our duty to offer our life and influence unto their realization. This as much for our benefit as for the added urge we afford to the final cause.

BROTHERHOOD
IDEALISM

This then is the idealism of the Brotherhood. The moral history of the world is made up of a series of re-emphases of the teaching of the Master. Hence this awakening of the Twentieth century is but a re-emphasis of Jesus' thought up the social aspect of Christianity. The Brotherhood finds itself in harmony with the upward tendency of the age and would urge upon the members of our churches to link arms and join forces unto the realization of Jesus' ideals for our benefit and for the benefit of our children and our children's children.

Mohorter—The Man

Some noble men, and true, have been portrayed in the thirty-eight issues of CHRISTIAN MEN, but none more worthy than the subject of this sketch, James Levey Mohorter. As most everyone connected with the Christian Church of the world knows, he is the General Secretary of our National Benevolent Association, which maintains hospitals, orphanages, and Old People's Homes in various parts of the United States. Five years ago Brother Mohorter was pastor of our church at Pueblo, Colorado, and before that he represented the "Christian Only" in the conservative city of Boston. Before that he was in Cleveland and Ashland, Ohio, and before that he was a student at Hiram College, where he completed the six years' course and obtained his degree in four years. Prior to his college career he was an orphan in the South, and before that he was a farmer's son. His parents were Scotch-Irish Presbyterians, but Brother Mohorter came to the Christian Church through the devious path of Methodism, aided by the ministrations of his wife, a member of the Christian Church in Newark, Delaware. Mohorter is not a large man, neither is he small. In stature he is just medium, while what he lacks in height is gained in portliness, and to tell the truth he is well fed and well groomed. His fair complexion is set off by a well-shaped head of auburn hair. A man of determination came to him from County Antrim, and a bump of common sense is plainly evident. He lives in St. Louis, where he renews acquaintance with his family occasionally, and where he has a desk in a corner of the orphanage. Brother Mohorter has always been considered among our ministers as "a man's man" in the largest sense. When working in the mills of the South he was an officer of a local labor organization, being secretary, chairman of the grievance committee, and delegate to the National Assembly. While in Boston and later at Pueblo, he was prominently connected with the Knights of Pythias lodges, both local and state. Since coming to the work of the National Benevolent Association, however, he has had a larger opportunity to exert his claim upon the leadership of men. He took hold of the Benevolent Association work when its leaders were almost discouraged, the treasury empty, and orphans were crying for bread. The sick in many of the hospitals were without promise of sustenance, while the Old People's Homes were sadly in need of attention. Brother Mohorter went at the task as he did at the loom twenty years before. He took off his coat, clambered into our pulpits and told the story of misery and want, the homeless and destitute, and the extremity to which the society was driven. Cars shunted onto the sidings of the railroads were crammed and jammed with the necessities of life, and started toward the nearest institution of the National Benevolent Association. This deed was repeated so many times that its bare mention now seems commonplace. But hams and jams donated by kindly folk do not fill all wants. With indomitable will and determination, Mohorter set about a scheme to keep the wolf from the door and steer a steady stream of money into the treasury of the society. Men were put into the field soliciting funds. An appeal was made to our churches for an annual offering. Easter Sunday at that time was not used by any society for the furtherance of their work, so Mohorter wisely suggested this as the day, and it was universally accepted as the one day in the whole year that our churches and Sunday-schools should remember the widow, the orphan, the aged and the afflicted, and thousands of dollars for the maintenance of the society are collected on that day. Read the two articles elsewhere in this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN, telling of the work of the society. Mohorter has not done all the work of the society by any means. He has associated with him on the Board of Directors some of the most sterling men and women of the Christian Brotherhood. Each home or hospital has its local Board, while the National society with which the various homes are affiliated by mutual ties, has a set of officers and directors that plan for the larger work of all the homes combined. Brother Mohorter as a fellow-secretary and side-partner in a travelogue campaign is par excellence. In the pulpit dispensing the "Gospel of the Helping Hand," or conversing regarding his chosen work, he is probably at his best. He knows the work through and through, and woe be unto the man or woman, boy or girl, that does not manifest belief and desire to coöperate in the blessed work in his charge. Mohorter is meek. He comes quietly and without blast of trumpet, with the great work he represents. The monthly issues of the Philanthropist are issued under his pen, and frequent contributions on the general subject of benevolences emanate from the same source. It has been suggested in the past that the Brotherhood Movement would do well to undertake the maintaining of orphanages, homes and hospitals like the National Benevolent Association is doing so faithfully and efficiently. The answer has been properly made rather than do such a thing, the power of the Brotherhood Movement should be thrown behind the work of the Benevolent Association at a time it will call for most. That is our provocation in presenting the subject for the consideration of CHRISTIAN MEN readers this month. The time for the annual offering for the widow, the orphan, the aged and afflicted is Easter Sunday, April 7, 11. Believe in the Association and the work it is doing. Believe in the General Secretary, whose open countenance we unveil to you on the cover page. He is true blue and no mistake. Receive him in open arms. Get your men together and have him talk to them about the "eternally infinite" things for men to do in the church. If any of that mist is still floating around in your vicinity, he will readily dispel it. Throw the power of your influence toward a worthy observance of Easter Sunday with a large offering to the National Benevolent Association and the Christian Church. This is your work and the Association is your agent. Let you may manifest your personal interest in this great and growing work, and this sterling man among men, the General Secretary.

Foreign Missions Up to Date

Why We Should Make a Large Offering for Foreign Missions the First Sunday in March

BY E. W. ALLEN, Secretary

E. W. ALLEN

The Biblical Basis of Foreign Missions.

Christian missions must be primary in the life of the Church, because they were primary in the thought of God. From the beginning of revelation we see God's world purpose. A world-end lay in the selection of Israel.

GOD'S PURPOSE IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

In History, Gen. 12:3; Gal. 3:8.
In Song, Ps. 22:27, 28; Ps. 67.
In Prophecy, Is. 49:6; Jeremiah 4:2; Daniel 12:44; Zechariah 9:10; Mal. 1:11.

GOD'S PURPOSE IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

In the Gospels, John, 8:12.
In the Acts, 15:8, 9.
In the Epistles, 1 John 2:2.

GOD'S PURPOSE IN CONSUMMATION.

Rev. 5:9-13.

2. The Success of Foreign Missions.

John W. Foster, our former Secretary of State, unites with other great statesmen who are informed, in saying: "If not a single conversion had been made in the past one hundred years, the reforms and blessings which Christian missions have produced would be an abundant reward for all the labors of the missionaries and the money contributed for their support."

In the nature of the case, by far the larger part of missionary accomplishment can never be seen or measured. Missionaries dig the well and toil at the windlass, but the waters they raise do not always flow in an open conduit to the fields they quicken. Most of them disappear in the ground, and when they reappear to make distant wastes bloom they are not always recognized. What of the young men leaving the mission colleges unconverted, yet imbued with Christian ideals? What of the native philanthropies which have sprung up in emulation of the missionary care for the blind, the injured, the leper, the orphan? What of the untraceable influence of the Western literature of inspiration and progress which, but for the missionary translators, would not yet be accessible to the Orient? Among the non-Christians who neither know nor care for the "Jesus religion," the changes of attitude toward opium smoking, foot-binding, child-marriage, concubinage, slavery, torture, the subjection of women, and caste systems betray currents of opinion set in motion largely by the labors of missions.

The percentage of converts on the mission fields is more than in Christian lands.

3. A Report to the Business Man of the Disciples of Christ on his Foreign Missions Investment.

Receipts for 1911, $379,000. This money was spent to carry on the following agencies in China, India, Japan, Thibet, Philippines, Africa and Cuba.

1. EVANGELISTIC.—169 missionaries and 759 native helpers have organized and are caring for 141 churches, whose membership is 12,000, a net gain last year of 22%. 16,000 Sunday-School scholars receive instruction.
2. EDUCATIONAL.—95 schools and colleges are supported, with over 5,000 pupils receiving a Christian education. 295 young men are studying for the native ministry.
3. PHILANTHROPIC AND INSTITUTIONAL.—Hundreds of orphans are being brought up, and with hundreds of others taught carpentry, farming, blacksmithing, and domestic science. Four large presses print hundreds of thousands of pages of Scripture, tracts and papers in four languages.
4. MEDICAL.—16 physicians treated 160,000 patients.
5. CHURCH ERECTION.—Chapels, school buildings, missionaries' homes, and hospitals were erected to house these manifold activities.

4. How Increase Missionary Intelligence in the Church?

Have the missionary committee send leaflets to all the members of the church before the March offering. Have every family in the church subscribe for the Missionary Intelligencer. Send missionary material to several persons for use in every prayer-meeting. Use a missionary bulletin board in vestibule of church. Organize one or more mission study classes. Make general use of a missionary translating library. Hold frequent mission socials. Encourage pastor to often preach on missions, and refer constantly to recent missionary events. Letters to missionaries; visits from missionaries; missionary rallies.

5. Organizing the Church for Missions—for the March Offering.

Appoint a strong missionary committee. Coördinate the work of the Brotherhood, Sunday-school, and Christian Endeavor Society in a worthy missionary plan. Have church adopt an adequate missionary objective each year. Make the missionary offering a part of regular church budget. Organize a personal canvass of entire church membership to secure worthy offering. There are eight essentials in an ideal missionary church:

1. A Missionary Pastor.
2. A Missionary Committee.
3. A Missionary Sunday-School.
4. A Missionary Brotherhood.
5. A Program of Prayer for Missions.
6. Systematic Missionary Education.
7. An Every-Member Canvass for Missions.
8. A Worthy Offering for Missions from every member.

6. The Work of the Missionary Committee.

This Committee should be representative of the whole organization. The responsibility of the Committee is threefold: to bring to every member of the Church the facts concerning missions; to place missions on a business-like basis in the current expense budget; to secure substantial offerings in increasing proportion from every member. The Committee should hold frequent meetings in the interest of its work.

The Monthly Missionary Meeting —How Made a Vital Factor in the Life of the Church.

The study of missions is a science, and management of a missionary meeting is an art.

There are many profitable ways of using the Bible in the devotional service of the missionary meeting.

Prayer should be an important feature of the meeting. There should be three elements in the prayers—Definiteness, Agreement, and Expectancy. So great is the power of Sacred Song to help the human heart to love, to adore, and to aspire, that many a soul has been led to yield itself to God and obey His call to missionary service through the singing of a hymn.

The assembling of missionary facts, so that they will live and have power. A series of topics that are related, to be studied through the year. The lives of great missionaries. A Study of various countries and their needs, the Discussion of missionary motives, Criticism of missions and objections urged, History of Missions, Review of missionary books, Missionary Quiz and Debate, By-products of missions, Testimony of great men in favor of missions, will supply a wealth of interesting and fruitful themes, and a world of material is available.

The Bible View of Money.

A life is a stewardship. Into its complex deposit enter, as main elements, time, talent, and opportunity. One of the measures in which life may be expressed is money, which is a measure of value as well as a medium of exchange. Hence money may be the measure of a man. It is the measure of his time, as he is paid for the day or month. It is the measure of his talent, and the rate by which he is paid depends upon the character of the work he does within the time. It is the measure of his opportunity, and the amount he can earn depends upon what chance he has to employ his talent in the time.

Time and talent and opportunity rightly employed determine the value of life service, and money is a counter used to express and convey the value given or received. The value of money, as well as of a man, is evidently affected by the gospel. Money expresses life value; is, indeed, a part of personality. Character is revealed best in the way in which money is spent, for it reveals the man.

No wonder money occupies so large a place in the Word of God. Its teachings is that each man is a steward and must give account.

9. How Get a Missionary Offering From Every Member?

Begin at conversion, and ever after teach every member:

1. The Kingship of Christ in all of life.
2. All are workers together with God in His plans.
3. The real purpose of the Church.
4. The greatness of the task.
5. The glory of opportunity for world-wide service.
6. This is a lost world to be saved, and not an ignorant world to be educated.
7. The utter inadequacy of pagan religions.
8. The truth of stewardship.
9. The proper adjustment of individual comforts to the tremendous needs of the missionary work.
10. The comparative needs of home and foreign work.
11. Definite facts concerning missions, and the great success of missions.
12. The paralysis of inertia.

Have every member constantly facing these dozen principles, and the list of missionary givers will be synonymous with the church membership roll.

10. The Mission Study Class as an Adventure.

The mission study class is the most effectual agency for producing sustained missionary interest.

1. It calls together small groups who are in training as leaders.

2. By weekly sessions impressions are clinched.

3. Difficult problems are given time for research and discussion.

4. Affords opportunity for discussion.

5. As an intensive method it produces deep convictions.

Here are other reasons why every church should have a mission study class—because of

1. The almost universal ignorance concerning missions.

2. The intimate relation missionary information and activity have to all the activities of the church.

3. The place missions are taking in molding the history of nations.

14. What Can a Country or Village Church Do for Foreign Missions?

People in rural communities see about them so little destitution, and hence so little need for benevolence, that they become restricted in their gifts as well as lives. Show them the great need for the Gospel abroad and their generosity will be awakened, their liberality called forth, their sympathetic natures aroused, and life will be transformed. They and their churches will have a new birth. Country churches die only because they are o-missionary.

Any church, county or city, may be transformed that obeys the heavenly vision. A country church can do as a city church—render its members unanimously obedient to Christ's commission.

15. The Double Danger—to Ourselves and the Unevangelized of Inaction.

"As often as you failed to do it to Me."—Matthew 25:45.

Ambassador James Bryce recently in Washington:

"The moment in which we are living is the most critical moment that has ever been in the history of the Christian races—most significant and weighty upon their fate and future. Material civilization is permeating every part of the world, and transforming conditions of life. Under this shock not only the material conditions of life, but also their traditions and beliefs are rapidly crumbling away and disappearing. Their morality, such as it was associated with their beliefs, we are destroying.

"What I want to put to you, gentlemen, is the supreme importance at this moment of our doing what we cannot fill that void which we have made by giving them something to live by instead of that by which they have lived heretofore. Now, when the old things are passing away from them, is the time for us to give them something new and better by which they may live, through which they may come again into a true progress than they ever could do in the ancient ways.

"This is the time for us to give them the one supreme gift which the world has ever received, and in which we believe the safety and future hope of the world lie—a knowledge of the life of teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ; provide them with the means and basis of the foundation of life instead of that which has crumbled from beneath them."

The Double Blessing — to Ourselves and Future Myriads—of Strenuous Effort.

Read the story of the Beckoning Partners in Luke 5:7.

Out of the great deep of non-Christian humanity the foreign missionaries have launched forth at the bidding of the Master. They have let down their nets for a draught, and have enclosed multitudes that their nets are at the breaking point. They are beckoning to the partners in the other ship to come and help.

When Simon beckoned to his partners in Galilee, and they went out to help him with his large draught of fish, both boats were loaded full when they put back ashore. So, too, will it be with the churches, just in the degree that the response is hearty and full to the beckoning of their partners in the foreign field.

Let the crying need for added workers and equipment on the foreign fields be met, and it will mean not only greater growth of Christianity there, but fuller fullness of Christianity in the home churches. This is a law of nature. It is a law of economics. Prompt and strenuous response to the foreign needs will always be attended by quickening and ennobling life in ourselves.

Christian Unity Through Foreign Missions.

Professor Bosworth has said, "There are four things that bind men together:

A common hope, a common work, deliverance from a common peril, and loyalty to a common friend." Where words divide, the work unites. There are three reasons for Christian unity: The forces against us, that world may believe, and the Ideal of Christ.

18. Motives for Giving to Foreign Missions.

The Divine Command, Matt. 28:18, 19.

The Aim of the Work.

The Magnitude of the Work.

The Pleasure of the Work.

All we Have is God's.

19. How the Work Abroad Blesses the Church at Home.

1. The missionary spirit creates a true conception of the Christian life.
2. It strengthens loyalty to Christ.
3. It cultivates the spirit of intercession.
4. It fosters the self-sacrificing and generous impulses.
5. It promotes love and unity.
6. Increases faith in the Scriptures as prophecy is fulfilled and heathendom produces "twice-born" men.
7. The courage that leads to attempt great things for God qualifies to surmount home difficulties.
8. Life is expanded and enriched by coöperating in the world purposes of God.
9. Selfishness is cured by the widening concentric circles of sympathy, work and gifts.

Who Should Care for the Orphan?

An Interesting and Important Question Discussed

BY J. H. MOHORTER, GENERAL SECRETARY
NATIONAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

BEFORE AND AFTER TAKING

These two pictures were taken within thirty minutes of each other in one of the homes of the National Benevolent Association. The first shows the condition in which the tots were received, the other after the Association's "first aid" had been applied.

Some people insist that all dependent children should be turned over to the state. They call attention to the fact that the state has all the needed funds, whereas church institutions are often meagerly equipped. The state could doubtless excel the church if the physical care of the child were the only consideration; but the physical, important as it is, is one of the least of his needs.

LOVE LACKING

He must have the highest and best moral training. This the state is not prepared to give because its institutions are usually lacking in the essential elements of love and Christian culture. State institutions are, as a rule, under the management of persons who are in office through political preferment, rather than any fitness which they may possess for the work in which they are engaged. It is pretty generally conceded that politics are corrupt; that greed and graft play an important part in the affairs of the state. The charitable institutions of the state are often the scenes of the gravest abuses. While political conditions remain as they are, the state is about the last institution the training of children left without parents. Then, under our constitution, the state is forbidden to furnish religious instruction. If any class offortunates in our midst needs and deserves the sweet, refining influence of Christian love, it is the children who have been bereft of parental love. Persons who serve them chiefly for pay cannot serve them truly at all. Think of me for children with the good-night kisses and the countless little touches of love that make up the color and poetry of childhood-life left out. The state maintains institutions. The church supports homes in which love reigns. The human mind never reaches its highest development in any other than the atmosphere of love. Next to the love divinely provided for the child in the mother-heart is the love which God has so richly provided in Christ and His church. In the plan and purpose of God, the church is the fostering mother of the widow and orphan in their affliction. God will not excuse her if she allows His parentless little ones to grow up worse than when (without religion) in a Christian

Another class insists upon placing all needy children under the care of some one of the many home-finding societies. The theory of these societies is good, but too often their practice is defective. They advocate the placing of the homeless child in a good, childless home. This is ideal, but since, however, homes are not equipped to keep children, and are not prepared to make a wise selection of homes. They advertise to receive children, and the children come. They must take them or lose public support. Since they are not prepared to keep them, they must place them almost as soon as they are received. Under stress of circumstances they are often compelled to accept such homes as are offered, and when homes are not offered they must seek them, often by an appeal to sympathy. Not infrequently this is done by placing the children on exhibition. Not long since a New York home-finding society shipped a carload of children to a small Missouri town. The papers advertised their coming. The people flocked in to see him. Everybody's heart was touched at the sight of a "poor little orphan." In the language of a local paper, "the children went off like hot cakes." Under this plan there is little or no opportunity for making a choice of homes. As a result many children find their way into homes for which they are totally unsuited, or into homes that are decidedly unfit. Often the condition of the child is as bad or worse than that from which the society has sought to rescue him.

THE HOMELY CHILD

These home-finding societies can do little or nothing for the "undesirable child," the child so marred by physical blemish that he cannot be placed in the family home. Often the homely face, the deformed body or the tainted (morally tainted) blood are greater misfortunes than the loss of parents. Few doors are open to this class, and yet it has the greatest need. If justice is done to this class they must be kept in homes in which love provides for the special training which enables them to grow into self-sustaining, contributing members of society. Shorn as they are of all natural beauty, they must depend upon Divine love, if love is to come into their lives at all. The church is the one institution that is able to give them that wealth of unselfish love and service which their double misfortune demands. She is the institution to which all love-bereft children should be committed. If she is true to her great Head, she alone has love enough to shelter the world's vast army of homeless little waifs.

THE CHURCH'S MISSION

It is good economy for the church to take the responsibility of training the dependent child. It is the cheapest and most effective kind of evangelism. The Roman Catholic Church has had a high appreciation of this fact. It has always specialized in the care of unfortunate children. The orphanage has been one of its most fruitful recruiting agencies. In fact, the Protestant Church has furnished both the children and the money with which the Catholic orphanage has made good members of "the church."

The Roman Catholic Church has shown wisdom in its efforts to "save the child," being reasonably sure that if the boy came into the church the man will be found there. It is far cheaper and far more Christian to save the man while a child, "before the evil days come nigh," than to wait until he has become a hardened sinner and then to spend money and tears in often a vain endeavor to save him. Two boys, brothers, of our acquaintance, were left without parents at a tender age. One of them was fortunate enough to get into a good Christian home. He grew up in the church. He early became a leader in Christian work. His life has been of inestimable value to the community in which he has lived. His brother, less fortunate, found a home with a family that, while of respectability, was altogether without interest in Christianity. The boy, without moorings, soon drifted into wild and sinful life. At fifty he came into the church. He used to say: "Here I am a baby when I ought to be a full-grown man. I have lost more than half my life. Starting so late, it has cost me time, money and a struggle, and I feel for some members of my family. Oh, why did not somebody start me right?" The story of the life of the child brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord may not sound so thrilling as that of the hardened sinner "plucked as a brand from the burning," but it is better evangelism and will awaken as much "joy in the presence of the angels." Nearly every child that remains in his home until he is old enough becomes a Christian. Our records show that, most without exception, children placed in homes of our selection come into the church. Once they come into the church they remain, gratefully acknowledging their indebtedness to him.

Not only is the care of dependent children by the church good economy, but it is good Christianity. It is a recognition of the claims of the weak upon the strong. It is the bearing one another's burdens in fulfillment of the law of Christ. More and more must the church carry the burdens of the homeless upon her back, as well as upon her heart. The church has turned too much of her wealth of love and mercy over to other organizations. In writing upon this subject Dr. Washington Gladden says: "In passing her philanthropies over to the state the church has divested itself of its mission."

function. The loss is lamentable, most fatal; the weakness of the church the latter day is largely due to it. The church must recover this function; not a mere matter of expediency; it is a question of life and death. It was the tender, motherly care of the early church for humanity in both of its children that touched the heart of pagan world and won it to Christ. By the irresistible force and charm of this same spirit of brotherliness the church must win the multitudes back to herself if they are ever won." The church stands with open arms and heart welcoming the children as did the blessed Christ when he lived among men, bearing the burdens in love.

The men of University Church, Des Moines, were among the first to organize along Brotherhood lines, their club antedating quite a little the national work. Several calls have come for an account of our work, and it is in response to such requests that this sketch has been prepared.

Some time in 1907 our first organization was effected, but no records of the first year or two are available. On the last day of the year, 1908, a complete reorganization was effected, looking to the active prosecution of Christian work along definite lines and in a business-like manner.

INCORPORATION

In order to be able to acquire, hold and dispose of property, and to have legal standing before the world, the organization was incorporated under the laws of Iowa. The Articles of Incorporation vest active control of the business of the society in a board of twenty-five, elected by the Brotherhood annually. Originally five departments, or lines of work, were undertaken, viz., World Work, or Missions, Constitutional, or Boys' Work, Civic Affairs, Social Life and Membership.

REORGANIZATION

In the beginning the name "Men's Club" was adopted. During the past year, however, we have made such changes in the name and other features as would put us in complete harmony with the National Brotherhood Movement.

A further change was recently made in our by-laws providing for a reorganization of our departments, or standing committees, to conform to the plans of work recommended by the experts of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. At present the machinery of our organization consists of a President, Secretary, Treasurer, and eight departments, or standing committees, whose chairmen are ex-presidents and members of the Executive Committee. These departments and committees are as follows: I, Membership and Program; II, Boys' Work; III, Bible Study; IV, Evangelism; V, Social Service; VI, Missions; VII, Inter-Church Work; VIII, Social and Church Activities. Each committee has twelve or more members, so that not less than one hundred men are definitely assigned to committee work.

ORGANIZATION

The fact that the department chairmen are directors and that the twenty-five members of the Directors' Board are distributed among the eight committees, enables the Board to keep in touch with all the committees and wisely coördinate their work. The Board is thus at once a clearing house and a directing body for the business of the Brotherhood.

PRESIDENT,
ACTIVE MAN

This elaborate machine has had a most competent and efficient engineer in our President, Professor C. N. Kinney. He has attended practically every meeting of every committee, furnishing enthusiasm and wise counsel. Many of the meetings of the Board of Directors and departments have been in his own home, and the hospitality dispensed by him and his good wife have been a larger factor in the success of the work than they will ever realize. Professor Kinney is a member of the National Committee of '97, and chairman of the Committee of 100 in Des Moines for the Men and Religion Forward Movement, in which movement our men are very active and have been from the beginning. At present some of them are going out every Lord's day in teams to surrounding towns in this extension work of this movement. They have also been represented in the noon factory meeting, and our Prof. Athearn is at the head of the Sunday-school Institute work in the city, which is a part of the same movement.

The greatest benefits that have come from our organization are intangible, and can not be recorded. The highest good that can come to any Church is for its men to be set to work on specific problems—problems that challenge their noblest endeavor and give them the feeling that they are workers together with God in the promotion of His enterprises.

FRATERNITY

Very much has been done in cultivating a spirit of fraternity. The frequent conferences concerning important and definite church projects shame littleness and selfishness. I am sure the pastor feels that the brethren divide with him the burden-bearing of the church in quite a new and special way because of the fellowship and the training afforded by the Brotherhood. He rarely misses a committee conference, and helps to make each a source of spiritual uplift.

SOME reader is ready to say, MEDBURY? "Oh, yes, you have Medbury YES for a pastor, and that accounts for it all." It would be impossible to give him too much credit. In fact, we Des Moines people have run out of adjectives with which to express our appreciation of this wonderful man whom the Lord has sent to be our leader.

BOYS' WORK Among the more tangible results that have been achieved, three enterprises are deserving of special mention. First is the work among the boys. I can not here go into detail, but a boys' secretary has been employed for four years to work among the boys, and it is not too much to say that ideals and standards of conduct among the boys of the community have been revolutionized. The new chairman of the Boys' department, Bro. E. R. Harlan, is a critical student of the boy problem. A special fund is being raised to put some of his plans into execution.

CITY MISSION ESTABLISHED

The second enterprise to be mentioned is the Mondamin Avenue Mission. A Sunday-school was first organized and maintained under the care of our World Work, or Missions department. Later, lots were secured, a tabernacle built, a meeting held, and a church organized. This mission will require the oversight and financial aid of the Brotherhood for some time to come. For two years past, five hundred dollars a year has been contributed by the University Church to aid in supporting the pastor there. It is proposed this year to raise this sum by personal subscription in the Brotherhood, thus relieving the church mission treasury of this burden. O Dr. E. C. Scott and his family have devoted themselves to the Mondamin work with tireless sacrifice, and deserve our warmest appreciation. A number of other excellent workers of the University Church cast in their lot there and are doing heroic service. It would be difficult to do adequate justice to the loyalty and efficiency of the band of workers there and the good they are doing.

CITY MISSION No. 2

The third enterprise which I shall speak of is the planting of the work at Grand View. For eleven years Sister Howe, aided by Sister Etta Cook and other faithful workers from this church had maintained Sunday-school and occasional preaching in her home. Our mission department took up the work, and built a neat church at a cost of about three thousand dollars. At its dedication in July about two thousand dollars was raised, of which about twelve hundred was contributed by our Brotherhood. A meeting followed and a healthy church was organized, which took over the church property and assumed the balance of the debt. The church started out with about seventy members and a good outlook.

CIVIC AFFAIRS

The Civic Affairs department has been active in movement to better conditions in the city along moral lines, such as cleaning up questionable places of amusement, influencing the selection secured of proper officials, etc. In this they have cooperated with the Layman's Civic League of the city, which they were instrumental in organizing, furnishing twenty-eight of its members, and three members of its executive committee. They have likewise had part in the effort to rid our city of saloons. Our brother, W. J. Pilkington is President of the Des Moines Business Men's Association, incorporated with 0,000 capital to fight the saloons twenty years. No less than eighty-five of our men did personal work in the fight to make the petition of consent. The case is now before the Supreme Court with excellent prospects for a victory. It would not be possible to go into further detail in such a sketch. The foregoing is sufficient to suggest something of the lines of service.

Emphasis on committee activity rather than upon general meetings has marked our work in the past, but regular membership meetings have recently grown in number, very greatly to our profit.

At present a budget is being raised to take care of the work, missions and other enterprises. The budget idea is new, and promises to put new zeal into the membership by the very fact that the organization as such is supporting its financial enterprises. The figure for the budget is set at $1,800.

R. A. LONG'S TOUR

On the occasion of Brother Long's recent visit here, our membership met his generous proposition by contributing to the National Work, about $1,200 of the nearly $2,000 subscribed at the Des Moines meeting. These sums are not raised by large gifts of wealth, but in nearly all cases are the generous gifts of men in salaried positions.

We were greatly benefited and encouraged by the visit of Brother Long and his team of workers. No words can adequately express our admiration for his example of devotion to the church and his untiring zeal in promoting the Brotherhood movement. We trust he will have the joy of seeing the fruit of his labors and sacrifices in the new life that it shall take on.

Some Interesting Salvage

BY FRED KLINE, FIELD SECRETARY
NATIONAL BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

FRED KLINE

I've been down to the strand again, for the love of the "stranded," down on the shore with the beach-combers where the sea of humanity beats on the rocks of inhumanity. Here is where the "wreck" and the "derelict" is made, and pounded to pieces, too—where serf is surf. We were down to save what we could, and the wreckage was enough to interest a miser or make an angel pause.

ORIGIN OF ORPHANS

I showed a man a pile of this salvage some short while ago, a whole house full of homeless little children, and he said, "Yes, but you don't know where these came from." I said to him, almost fiercely, "Man, where did you come from? Can you produce a clean bill of health three generations back in all branches of the line?" Not many of us can.

How horribly unfair it is for us to take the unfortunate child and fasten upon him our labels of "unfit" and "bad parentage" and "undesirable," to hobble him with our prejudice and handicap him with our puny judgments, unless, and perchance he breaks our bonds and, spite of them all, puts us to shame by making good. Such records, and there are many, give us to see how small and ignorant is the business of trying to label a child to his past with the merciless records of our opinion. We would pin him with a bad name instead of helping him out of it with all eagerness. We commissioned us to this labeling business anyway? Not science. It says man has in him power by gradual processes to modify life as he will. Not experience. It says, ounce for ounce, a man is on fourth inheritance and three-fourth environment. Not Christ. He says the that are sick need physicians, not labels.

LABELING
AN OUTCAST

It is easy to label a little bunch of ragged humanity but it's ten to one that the side of thirty years that little bunch will make a fool of the prophet who labeled him. And if the Church of Jesus Christ has any clearly defined business here below, it is precisely to give the bunch a chance to do it. Christ didn't label. He just lifted. Suppose we, like Him, should set a little child in our midst. We will say he is ragged and dirty, untaught and unmoral (little children are not immoral). For honesty's sake we will also say he is in God's image, meant for the Kingdom and may become greater, better man than you or me. Now what shall we do with this child? You can consult his past and clog him or you can consult his future and help him. Catalogue him you may not—time alone can do that. In the year '59 two little Irish boys, Brennan and Burke, were digging their toes into the sand of Brooklyn beach. Few knew and cared less for the tattered waifs. But a good man, the father of Theodore Roosevelt and the boys and consulted their father by putting them into a Brooklyn orphanage.

Could he tell who they were? No. He knew their names, probably, and where they came from, maybe, but that was not knowing who they were. Time has told. One of them, Brennan, was the governor of Alaska under McKinley; the other, Andrew H. Burke, was the second elected governor of North Dakota. Taken to an Indiana farm at eight, he was a summer boy in the Federal army at twelve, serving throughout the war. While governor, the grasshoppers devastated the country, and in fighting the plague he poured out his private fortune in water, thus saving thousands of dollars to the farmers of his state.

Now if anybody has a penchant for finding little boys, these two Brooklyn muffins are ready for their badges.

You know the original "message to Garcia" was carried forty years ago. The first missionary had gone for the first time into the dark continent, reaching it this time to the very core, when the rumor of his death had come. Livingstone was lost in Africa! The enterprising newspaper of New York determined to find Livingstone or his grave. It was a long and unknown way, where every mile was girt with danger. Who could take it? They found a man with full chin, determined mouth and calm, clear eye. In a little while the great forests swallowed him, and for months that was all. But away up at the headwaters of the Nile, the messenger, scarred with the battle and worn with the journey, was confidently approaching the only white man's tent within five hundred miles. It was then that Dr. David Livingstone, sick and destitute, hearing messengers announced, came feebly from his tent and fell into the outstretched arms of Henry M. Stanley. How that English explorer, defeated and far from home, must have thanked God for the intrepid soul who, as a lad, in his Missouri home, had been without parents, education or experience.

CLOSER HOME

So runs the tale, and if we chose to come closer home we should find some household names on the brave list. Had not wise heads and kindly hearts, some forty years ago, made room for homeless little fellows, the Disciples of Christ today would lack at least one of their sweetest singers in Israel, and the American Christian Missionary Society would lack one of its most effective servants.

If there is anything the angels of heaven lean over the parapets to watch, I believe it is human beach-combing.

The Bible Class and the Brotherhood

Address by R. A. Long at the Bible School Banquet, Portland, Oregon, July 8, 19

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—It affords me a rare pleasure to be your guest tonight while you are celebrating the past of the Adult Bible Class Movement and looking, keen-eyed and hopeful, to its future.

I count the Adult Bible Class Movement significant because of two things: In the first place, it stands for the study of the Bible, for an intimate acquaintanceship with that great Book upon which civilization has been builded, that Book through which God has spoken to the hearts of men, and men have spoken back to Him and to the life around them during nearly four thousand years. I love this Holy Book. When I read it, it stirs in my soul the conviction that God has moved in wondrous ways through all the ages to make man more like Himself, and to make life more worth living, and to make this day in which we toil and sweat more like that tomorrow which the Bible tells us of, and into the morning of which we all hope to come. And when I speak of the Bible, I would not have you think it is in any mere sentimental way. Just now, at the tercentenary of the King James version of the Bible, we are hearing a great deal about it. Sermons are being delivered, editorials are being written, eulogies are being sounded regarding the Bible as literature and as a vital force in life. They tell us that it has made England great. They tell us that it has made our civilization better and brought under its sway countries that had been dwelling in the darkness of heathendom and superstition. But I believe a meeting like this, with all that it represents, is of far more significance than any mere celebration of the birthday of this Great Book, or of any version of it, no matter how much eloquence may be poured forth at such a time. You have shown your allegiance to the Bible by your deeds. You have recognized the fact that the Bible isn't simply a chair. Its presence in the home is good, but its presence in the heart is essential to a God-loving world. The Bible wields its influence because it makes an appeal to the mind. You cannot get its lessons by looking at it, or by enshrining it. You can only get it by taking it up into your mind, by studying it as the lawyer does his statutes, by absorbing it, as the blotter takes up the surplus ink.

It is this, now, that makes the Adult Bible Class Movement supremely significant to me, and I believe supremely significant to the age in which we live. It is a move to study the Bible, not to study it merely as a piece of literature, but studying it as a guide to conduct, the interpretation of life, the key to the universe and the revelation of the nature of our heavenly Father to the nature of His children. There is a fine sentiment in one of Paul's letters, where he says that "The spirit of a man knoweth the things of the man as the Spirit of God knoweth the things of God," and it seems to me that in the Bible we have the place of contact between the Spirit of God and the spirit of man. We believe that the Spirit of God wrought upon the minds of men and through that working produced this Book. If we open our minds to it, I believe it will work upon them to produce in our hearts those fruits of grace which it is the will of God should abound among men more and more unto that perfect day, when we shall have attained unto the fullness of the stature of Christ.

The Bible School stands for Bible study. Paul has said, "Whatsoever a man thinketh, so is he." The Bible School teaches its students to think the thoughts of God after him. The boy or the man or woman who thinks the thoughts of God will be presently trying to live the life of God.

Again, I find in the Adult Bible Class Movement this other idea to me of tremendous significance, which is, that the Bible is not a book alone for children, but the Bible School is not a place for children alone. This is the Adult Bible Class Movement. Christianity is a religion for grown-ups. It is in the adult world of life that we have the greatest need for religion; it is then that the greatest tests come, then that the mighty burdens tell, it is then that character is most likely to be crushed and crumpled and broken by the mighty burdens that life lays upon it. A bridge was breaking, and workmen hurried supports under the weakest part, and it was saved. When a mighty obelisk was being raised in position in a European city, the ropes loosened under the strain and the mighty blocks of stone tottered and was about to fall. "Wet the ropes," a workman shouted, and as streams of water were played on the strands they grew tight. The monument was saved. Bible study will do this for the adult man or woman. It will tighten the ropes of his self-control and his passion or weakness. It will strengthen him or her at the breaking point.

We have been saying that every member of the church ought to be in the Bible School. I fear that we have been saying that and it has been interpreted as meaning that they ought to be there for the sake of example; that they ought to be there because their presence is needed as encouragement to others. I flatly declare to you tonight my conviction that every man and woman in the church needs the daily and the weekly stimulus of Bible study for the highest upbuilding of his or her Christian life and character, and hereby record my solemn conviction that they cannot attain their full height of Christian life without such participation, and that church men and church women who go through life without vital affiliation with the Sunday-school are making a compromise which will tell inevitably upon their character in the present and in later years.

For these reasons, therefore, I hail with joy the increasing acceptance which this movement has obtained everywhere among our people.

And now a word as to the very close affiliation which I believe ought to exist between the Adult Bible Class Movement, of which you know, and the Brotherhood Movement, in which, as you understand, I am vitally interested; not, however, I hope, more interested than are those of you who know its aim and import, nor more than all of you will be when you see the vision of the program of service which it holds out to every full-grown man in Christ Jesus.

May I say to you in regard to the Brotherhood Movement that it is inclusive, and not exclusive; that it competes with no existing organization in the church; that it appeals to every man in the church, not as a Bible School man, or Christian Endeavor man, but as a church man. We believed in the launching of the Brotherhood movement we had a right to the support of every man in the church, and I take it you will agree with me in that. The joint conference of the Bible School Field Workers' Association and the Brotherhood representatives in St. Louis, in January last, passed resolutions stating the need for some definite plan of social service for Bible classes, recommending the Brotherhood cultural programs and a close coöperation between the Adult Bible Class Movement and the Brotherhood Movement. I am glad to be here tonight because of believing heart and soul in the great necessity of the exceedingly close relationship that should exist between the two movements. We are fond of saying in our Brotherhood work that both the Brotherhood and the Bible Class supplement each other; that each sets loose force that cannot be conserved without the other. The Brotherhood Movement believes in the Adult Bible Class. Wherever the Brotherhood goes in we are careful to support the existing Adult Classes and the formation of new men's classes, if the situation warrants. We can point to great men's classes at Troy, New York; Norwood Avenue, Toledo; Ash-tabula, Ohio, and many places on the Pacific coast, and others that might be mentioned, which are the direct result of the Brotherhood work. On the other hand, we find Adult Bible Classes already existing availing themselves of the Brotherhood Movement to give permanency and diversified activity to their class organizations. Examples of this are the Doan Class at Nelsonville, O., the Barnett Class at Galesburg, Ill., and many others.

In closing, let me say to you, men and women, that myself a daily reader of the Bible for largely the whole of my active life, I believe that your movement for the study of the Bible is so closely associated with the life of the church that your success is the success of the church. Therefore, I pray that God may speed you to triumphant results in your great work, and that we may have your prayers and help in securing the coöperation of all the men in all of our churches in spreading the gospel to the ends of the earth, thereby fulfilling the will of Jesus Christ, our Lord.

Regarding Comrades of Paul Fund

Down at Pittsburg, Kansas, they have a Brotherhood of which J. U. Treadwell is the treasurer. This Brotherhood takes an offering every three months for the Comrades of Paul Fund to assist young men through college. Their latest remittance of $10.48 was received on January 22d. This makes $42.52 that this Brotherhood has contributed to this fund since its organization.

Interesting Bible Figures

According to figures reported 555,894 men studied the Bible in organized classes or clubs last year. In the world's Sunday-school classes 28,011,199 men, women, boys and girls are enrolled. Last year the Oxford Press alone issued 640,000 copies of the Bible. One church on foreign soil placed an order for 20,000 New Testaments and sold them all before the order could be filled.

Unique Insurance Plan

The 1,500 officers of the Y. M. C. A. in the United States have a system of insurance which is both cheap and Christian. It is called the Secretaries' Insurance Association, and insures every one of its members for $3,000. There is no medical examination, one stenographer does all the office work, and one officer voluntarily acts as treasurer. The members, each paying $2.10, provide all expenses and place $3,000 in the treasury, where it remains until the death of one of the members. Then there is a fresh assessment of $2.10. It costs perhaps $10 a year for each to carry this insurance.

"It may be a little late for a New Year's present, in the way of a list of subscribers for CHRISTIAN MEN, but better late than never. I must confess these Southern brethren are a little hard to handle, but believe they will come out all right along Brotherhood lines. You may call to mind that about one year ago this time I sent you fifty names from Jersey Shore, Pa. Sorry it is only twenty-two this time."

Our Friends are Busy

The Otterbein Brotherhood in United Brethren Churches has set aside a day to be known as Brotherhood Day in United Brethren Churches. The Objectives of Service are as follows:

1. To win men and boys to Jesus Christ and the church.
2. To promote the spirit of brotherliness.
3. To magnify the church and to enlist men in the work and worship of the local church.
4. To coöperate with the denominational boards in making real their ideals for the establishment of the kingdom of God in the earth.
5. To enlist men in all worthy movements for social, civic, and industrial betterment.
6. To promote and extend the Brotherhood work in the United Brethren Church by giving an annual offering to the general Board of Control.

Peoria Brotherhood Does Community Work

By Arthur W. Leu

ARTHUR W. LEU

"We had a good attendance at the Brotherhood meeting and several branches of work discussed, one of them, 'A Systematic Method of Visitation Among the Men.' Mr. Price brought out the point, and I believe it is a good one, that in his mind one reason why the women have gotten such a hold on the work of the church, is the fact that practically all the visitation is done among the women. For example, his own visitation is done largely in the afternoon, when the men are at work, as most of his evenings are taken up with some kind of a meeting. We are, therefore, going to try it among the men of the Brotherhood and see how it works."

Christian Union in Joplin

Christian Union is coming, not through uniformity in theological conceptions, but through coöperative application of the Christian principles to the problems of every day life.

The Men's Brotherhood of First Church, Joplin, Mo., has been taking the initiative movement to unite the Brotherhoods of different churches in the city into a sort of union of Brotherhoods. They are discussing municipal betterment and considering the question of Sunday closing of theaters and high licenses for saloons.

We had a fine meeting at Chester on the evening of December 27, and inclose you a list of the members. Brother E. E. Youtsey, Pastor, is a live wire for sure and was elected President; G. G. The men of the Chester Church are coming and have caught the vision of Brotherhood work in a greater degree than in some of our larger churches. I am sure you will hear more of the Brotherhood of the Chester Church. I also inclose a copy of the church paper.

What the Church Needs

Lyman Abbott, in The Outlook

We have treated the church as though it were simply a school, and the minister simply a teacher. We have treated religion and theology as synonyms, and substituted talking about religion for practicing it. We have summed up the whole of Christ's commission by the word "preach," and we have left out "heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils."

We have incited the laity to work, but the only work we have given them to do is the work of religious teaching and public worship on a small scale, in the prayer-meeting and the Sunday-school. There are a great many laymen who have neither the temperament nor the training for public teaching or public prayer; we blame them because they do not take up work for which they are not prepared, but which is the only work that is offered to them.

The church is not merely a school; it is an industrial organization. The minister is not merely a teacher; he is a captain of spiritual industry. But the industry which ought to be carried on by others under general guidance and inspiration has been thrown on him, and, dividing his energies between teaching and administration, he is not able to do either very well.

The Church of Christ does not want more ministers nearly so much as it wants more laymen; not passengers, but crew; not an army looking on to see how David will fight, but an army which will follow David into the battle; not sentimentalists, but men of devout spirit, inspiring practical philanthropy; men who are not only harmless as doves, but also wise as serpents; men of worldly wisdom, who will use in the service of the church their practical good sense in making it effectual for promoting the kingdom of heaven in the community, and helping to make it truly "at hand."

A Visit to Our Foreign Mission Stations

We are in receipt of a copy of F. M. Rains' report of his visit to our Foreign Mission Stations, involving a journey of some 20,000 miles. He left Cincinnati on July 24, 1910; sailed from San Francisco August 9th for Australia; visited India in October; the Philippine Islands, Japan and China in December. It was his intention to make an overland trip through Siberia and Russia, thence to Africa and up the Congo River to Bolenge, but his health broke down and he was compelled to return home from Japan, reaching San Francisco on June 23, 1911.

The report is a most comprehensive affair, being largely a resume of letters written, and a diary kept along the way. It comprises sixty-four pages, illustrated with striking cuts. The copy coming to our hands is worthy of wide reading, and careful preservation.

Front Rank Churches

The National and State Secretaries, representing all departments of our work, met in St. Louis in December and adopted a Standard of Efficiency for Churches, and the same has been recommended to and favorably acted upon by a number of our churches. The Standard is as follows:

A Standard of Efficiency

1. A Bible-School striving for Front Rank.
2. A Christian Endeavor Society.
3. Weekly Observance of the Lord's Supper.
4. The Sunday Morning Audiences averaging fifty per cent of the Church Membership.
5. Contributing Members Equal to sixty per cent of the Church Membership.
6. Monthly Meetings of the Church Officers.
7. Annual Revision of the Church Roll.
8. Annual Evangelistic Meeting held at Home or Elsewhere.
9. Annual Statistical Report to the State Board.
10. Annual Offerings to:
 - a. State Missions.
 - b. Foreign Missions.
 - c. American Missions.
 - d. Church Extension.

This Standard was originated by Geo. E. Lyon, State Secretary of Kansas, and with some slight changes was adopted as above. It was printed on large posters and sent to the Christian Church in the United States, Canada and should be prominently displayed in every church building for its educational effect. The Christian Board of Publication issued a supply of charts headed by "The Wheel of Efficiency," as per copy to Churches not supplied may secure copies by applying to the State Secretary or to any office of National Boards.

"In Old Kentucky"

There are 197 organized classes of men in the Christian Churches of Kentucky, containing in all about five thousand men. This is the result of the effort of Walter E. Frazer, the State Sunday-School Superintendent. A year ago the Kennett's Men's Class of Clifton Church of Louisville engaged a former pastor, W. J. Clark, and sent him to the state as a Sunday-School evangelist, supported entirely by the class. With the beginning of 1912, however, Brother Clark took up the duties of Adult Bible-School Superintendent, working in conjunction with W. Frazee. It is hoped and anticipated that during the year a program of service will be undertaken by these 197 classes of men in conformity to the program of service outlined by the men's organizations in general throughout the country, and which programs have been recommended for adoption by the National Bible-School Superintendents and scores of others who are interested in this movement.

"A copy of the calendar program may be secured by application to any State Bible-School Superintendent, or to the National Office of the Brotherhood.

Mock Trial

By Peter Baillie, N. Tonawanda, N. Y.

Our Brotherhood Mock Trial on January 10 was a great success. The School Board of the city very gladly gave the Brotherhood the use of the annex of the Iron-ton Public School on the occasion, and it was packed to the doors. The defendant, Mr. C. C. Andries, alias Wm. Taft Howard, immaculate in his full court suit, lacked the look of a henpecked husband. The attorney for the prosecution tried to make him a heartless villain. The plaintiff, Mr. Fred Grapes, alias Mrs. Wm. Taft Howard, was rather a captivating blonde and made a striking appearance. Detective Krumm, Burns, alias Corn Salve Kruger, of South Africa, brought in some very damaging evidence against the plaintiff in the shape of a marriage certificate from a former husband in Pittsburgh. Judge, attorneys, jury, stenographer and witnesses all took well their parts. Attorney Mer Root, eloquent in his address to the jury, made it seem possible that there was not but a verdict in favor of the defendant. Alas, when Attorney Fred Carey, in his direct appeal to the jury, told of the follies and deception of the defendant, it was plain the sympathies of the jury, who later in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. The audience seemed to be much pleased with the evening's entertainment. Our Brotherhood has organized a fine Bible-Class, with Mr. Winfield as teacher and Brother Clemens as substitute teacher.

Shellenberger at Mattoon, Ill.

By F. B. Thomas

Shellenberger has been here. Evidently he has been pleased and I know we were. The day was clear and bright, but as the hours passed the sun pushed through the clouds and dispelled the gloom, both on the earth and in our hearts. We had a fine morning audience and Shellenberger preached a most acceptable sermon. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock there were 33 men to listen to him talk about the Union Brotherhood—its purposes and its work. There was no thought of clanking cymbals or blare of trumpets, but with a quiet, dignified procedure, the meeting went on until the moment came for the men to take the oath of the Brotherhood. When Shellenberger asked for the men to rise to repeat the oath, eighty-three arose, and in great solemnity spoke the words of the Covenant with a beautiful sight. It marked the beginning of an epoch in the history of the Church at Mattoon and the beginning of a new epoch in the life of the church wherein we attempted greater things for the Lord's Kingdom than ever before. The spirit of the men was gracious. There was a feeling of mutual consecration, fitting them to approach the Throne of God with readier minds and receive the power of the in-dwelling spirit. At the evening service eleven more men took the Covenant and pledged themselves to the Union Brotherhood, making a total of eighty-five for the day. We have ordered a copy with one hundred copies of CHRISTIAN MEN monthly. We intend that every man shall read this paper and read it. Shellenberger said that it was the greatest Brotherhood that has ever been organized in the first meeting. I want to thank you for Shellenberger and say that we believe the problems of the world will never be solved until the men of the Church are aroused from their lethargy and take their rightful place in the constructive work of the Kingdom of Christ. Surely there are many things to be done.

Brotherhood Report, Artesia, N. M.

By C. O. Brown, Secretary

On April 30, 1911, a few of our men met to organize a Brotherhood. We elected officers and appointed a committee to arrange a band program for some date during May. The program was held in the dining room of the Gibraltar Hotel May 26th and was a great success, with a number of members. There was also Brother Frank Talmage of Hagerman, who gave a stirring address on the benefits of a Local Brotherhood, followed by a number of short addresses by our local members.

Our regular meetings were held once each month and the Brotherhood has been a great help to our members as well as to the church in general. We have had charge of the regular church services a number of times, letting our minister, W. A. Dawson, preach at other places. Part of our work for the year will be to arrange meetings at the various school houses in the smaller towns, where they have no regular services, and send two of our men to hold the services for them, and at other times take charge of our services at home, allowing our minister to visit these places. We feel we can strengthen our church materially in this way and be of assistance to our brethren, who are not located so they can attend regular services.

Our annual election will be held on the third Thursday night of February, at which time we will plan for the year's work. At present we have twenty-nine members and our aim for the year is to get every man in the church into the Brotherhood and Brotherhood Class. We would encourage our brethren elsewhere to have a Brotherhood, as it is the organized men who can do the most good for the church.

Union Brotherhood at Carthage, Mo.

By George F. Blue

Inclosed find report for quarter ending December 31, 1911. We have not collected any dues nor made any offering for the general work yet, as we are trying to get most of our men to give $1.00 a year to this general work. As I understand it, that includes CHRISTIAN MEN. We take the question of dues up at our next meeting. We want to keep all the members we have now and get more if we can, and perhaps educate them to give more liberally.

We only had two meetings in the last quarter, as we were in the midst of a Union Revival Meeting in October, in our city. All the Brotherhoods and Men's Clubs of the various churches have gotten together and have organized a Union Brotherhood. Each Brotherhood elected one from among their number, and they are the Executive Committee. There are seven churches represented in the Union Brotherhood and they have a business and social meeting every quarter. The Union Brotherhood had charge of the Union Meeting—financing it, etc., all working together with the pastors, shoulder to shoulder, and the meeting was a great success. The home pastors did the preaching, having a singer from away.

On December 7th Local No. 367 had Brother Bagby from Fort Smith, Ark., give his lecture, "Uncle Rastus in the Auditorium of the Church." No admission was charged, but a free will offering was taken at the door. Fifteen dollars was realized from this lecture.

On the following day Brother Bagby spoke to the men of the Brotherhood and friends around the banquet table. Sixty-four men sat down together. The ladies of the church served us and they had things just right, as they always do. Brother Bagby brought us a message that was worth while and all you could hear on every side was praise for him. He sure is a winner and his message did our Brotherhood much good and set us to thinking about things that we had not thought of before.

Bethany Assembly

Dear old Bethany Park will open its gates inward July 27th to August 18th this year. The ministers will hold their convention July 29th to August 2d, and the Bible Study Institute, under the auspices of Garry L. Cook, will be from August 6th to the 16th. The Men's Movement, Brotherhoods, Men's Bible Classes, Leagues and Clubs will have one full day, July 30th, during the Ministers' Convention and one or more periods each day during the Bible Study Institute. At these hours the Brotherhood program of work for men in local churches will be taken up item for item and thoroughly discussed. It is hoped at that time to outline the Calendar of Programs for the year 1913 so they may be promulgated simultaneously with the "Front Rank Standard of Excellence" for churches and Bible schools early in the fall.

This conference at Bethany Park will be wonderfully worth while. The list of speakers and leaders will include a host of the biggest people among us—those who are laboring at the task of building broad foundations for the advancement of the Kingdom. Bethany is an ideal place for rest and recreation. It is the Lake Geneva of Discipleship; hotels, cottages, boating and bathing, fishing, etc., are offered, not altogether free, but at small cost. A descriptive booklet, with program of the entire assembly, may be had by addressing the President, C. W. Cauble, Martinsville, Ind.

Fruitful Brotherhood at Orange, Cal.

By J. A. Pfeiffer, Secretary

Thanks to advance ideas and perseverance of our pastor, Brother Bentley, another link has been added to the good work in the Christian Church of Orange, by the addition of a Men's Bible Class and Brotherhood Club during the past year, that is now in complete running order and bids fair to be of great help to our community in general and our church in particular.

From a preliminary meeting in June, we advanced and identified later with the National Organization of Kansas City, from whence we received our charter and working supplies. We elected officers, a constitution and by-laws were framed to govern our work and selected committees on program, membership, social work, Bible study, young men boys' missionary, sick and reception, and now have a membership of fifty—all of signed our Covenant.

We meet the first and third Monday of month and have been having an average attendance of twenty-two since our commencement. Our voluntary contributions have $25, which was expended in extending membership and in timely luncheons during sessions—prepared and served by men, manly way, just to show our women they are not behind in their modern ideas and timely advance of woman's suffrage.

Roach's Scheme

A. L. ROACH

A. L. Roach, President of Independence Boulevard Local Brotherhood No. 1, sends the following letter, together with a bulletin and covenant, to all members of the Brotherhood:

"We should make next Sunday a great one. This is the beginning of the new year. If it is at all possible, please arrange to attend morning prayer-meeting service at 8:30. It will require some effort on your part, but it will be recalled with pleasure. We rarely receive a cultural or spiritual benefit without effort."

"I am sending you herein the Brotherhood Covenant card, which I trust you will consider seriously. It sets forth the higher standard of Christian service. No Christian should hesitate to make this program a part of his active life work. Independence Boulevard Christian Church should have several hundred meeting these requirements, but it can simply have one hundred sign it and it, it will revolutionize our work."

"Think what it would do for our prayer meeting, if we had one hundred men were always present at this mid-week service. This would prove such an inspiration that it would result in many others uniting with this good work. Last night there were six present, only two per cent of our church membership, and only ten per cent of our board. We know you will agree with us that this is not the ideal condition."

"If we have one hundred men covenanting to be present every Sunday in the Bible-School it would prove an inspiration to another" join in the good work. Why not undertake it? It will give strength and definitely to your life and greatly enlarge your usefulness. Measure yourself by this covenant carefully and prayerfully, and seriously before marking out a single one of the items. If you cannot undertake it mark out and change its items until you make out a definite program of service for yourself for 1912. If you are not already so, begin the regular active support of at least one of the regular services of the church. If we are to have a really strong church, we must have some upon whom we can depend, rain or shine. Let us study to be a better disciplined and more dependent body of workers. For what definite service the church depend upon you for 1912? If you care to do so, I should be glad to make out this covenant, as you will have to live it this year; and when you come to the prayer-meeting service next Sunday morning, we will collect them and present them to our pastor. We feel quite sure this will prove an inspiration to him. I hope you will be with us next Sunday morning without fail. Yours, in Christian (signed.)

ARNO L. ROACH.

Books on Public Questions

A number of books on public questions being issued by the publishers is remarkable. It used to be one of the gloomy arguments of certain radical reformers that the existing business must necessarily be controlled by men of wealth, who would inevitably suppress books urging social reforms. Really things should have worked that way. They didn't.

It is the great house of Macmillan, for example, just bringing out a book on "The New Democracy," by Walter E. Weyl. The publisher's announcement says:

"This book seeks to interpret the industrial, political, social and moral revolution which is rapidly transforming this country into a new American commonwealth undreamed of by the men who founded the republic. The author shows how a powerful and resplendent democracy has developed out of our conditions and how this plutocracy, built upon the economic tendencies, is now in irrepressible conflict with a new democratic spirit. He describes the relations between the new democracy and the increase in the average man's wealth, education and political knowledge and by the standard of this new democracy he measures our broader economic and political developments; the trust, the labor union, immigration, conservation, monopoly, government regulation, the referendum, the initiative, the recall, the position of judges, the amendment of the federal constitution."

No indication of a desire to suppress anything appears in this description. The same house is just publishing Jane Addams's frank discussion of the social evil under the title, "A New Conscience and An Ancient Evil;" another volume on "Socialism" by John Spargo, one of the best of the Socialist writers, and Prof. J. B. Clark's "The Control of Trusts."

Within the last year or two it has produced such progressive studies of social problems as Rauschenbushch's "Christianity and the Social Crises," Devine's "Misery and Its Causes," Patten's "New Basis of Civilization," Goodnow's "Social Reform and the Constitution," Seager's "Social Insurance," Nearing's "Social Adjustment" and "Wages in the United States," William Allen White's "The Old Order Changeth," Miss Tarbell's "Tariff in Our Times," Simons's "Social Forces" and Vedder's "Socialism and the Ethics of Jesus."

Every one of these volumes expresses the progressive spirit in various aspects. The standpatter would find scant comfort in any of them.

Other publishers, too, are contributing to the literature of the subject. Professor Hobhouse's "Liberalism," published by Henry Holt, and his "Social Evolution," published by the Columbia University Press; Howe's "Privilege and Democracy in America" and his "The City of Hope of Democracy," published by Scribner's; Campbell's "Industrial Accidents," Lyman Abbott's "Spirit of Democracy" and Streightoff's "Standard of Living," published by Houghton, Mifflin; Sidney and Beatrice Webb's "Prevention of Destitution," published by Longman's; Woodruff's "City Government by Commission," published by Appleton's and Wilcox's elaborate "Municipal Franchises," published by the Engineering News, are a few books of the same sort.

These books would not be published if there were not a demand for them. Evidently an awakened public is calling for studies of social problems and the publishers are meeting the demand.

For material on each one of the above addresses search the magazine files. They are rich in material. One year ago Everyman was running a series on "The Idle Rich." Some time before that Success ran an article on "How They Spend Their Money."

In January number of Hampton-Columbia is an article headed, "Where Socialism Lives Today," that would be helpful on the first address. "The Social Crisis and Christianity," by Rauschenbush, is most valuable preparation of this address. It is also a valuable work for your home. It can be gotten for 50 cents. It is worth three times that amount.

For the third address the magazine will help. But one can open his eyes and gather all the material needed for an address from real life. This is especially true if one live in the city. Many places one has to cite instances of city politicians and their in their protection of the Liquor business, Prostitution, and General Graft, until they have produced a human machine for the purpose of prostituting the city to the work of pagan ideas and ideals as certain even an ancient state or city.

If the speakers will prepare faithful addresses, the debate can be made most helpful. Let the next meeting be set for the purpose of opening men's eyes to the tendencies of the times, many of which are condoned among respectable church members.

VI.—Suggestions.

Let us keep in mind that this program as well as the one to follow in next issue are to direct our thought toward Home Missions. Hence let the address be prepared with that thought in view.

For the first address consult the files of Survey Magazine. Also get World Almanac for both 1911 and 1912. The American Year Book is especially valuable but is harder to get hold of. Your public libraries ought to have it in their possession. The World Almanac costs 25 cents. The statistics therein are as accurate as can be gotten. Call your men's attention to the things that society is doing in a public way for the body, mind and morals. Also mention the things that the public ought to be doing that it is not.

In the second address note what private individuals are doing. Give attention not only to those who have their millions and are giving their thousands, but note also those who have a small amount of this world's goods and are liberal with it. Then show what we, as individuals, ought to be doing. A careful study of the Scriptures suggested will give one a good viewpoint for this address.

In that there are only two addresses they can be made 15 minutes each without being hurtful to the meeting.

For the discussion. A debate would be a good way to handle this. If you have a couple of men who are interested in history assign them this debate. It will be a revelation to your whole Brotherhood to know how fast the world has traveled in the last 50 years. The discussion suggests the collecting of most interesting facts in history.

TRY THE PROGRAMS

Men's meetings cannot exist upon speeches from the outside. There must be an internal working among the members themselves if your men and your work progresses. The above programs are framed for observance by any group of men in any Christian church. A wise program committee will save itself a lot of hard work by carefully planning to observe these programs. The problem of a meeting time and place is bothersome to some groups. Many groups meet on week nights at the church or at the homes of members, where programs are rendered. Others meet on Sunday afternoon, while still others meet early on Sunday evening. The time and place is immaterial, the only thing is "meet—meet—meet" and keep on meeting regularly, on definite dates, and never have a meeting without a well worked out program. The above offers some very valuable suggestions in this regard.

BROTHERHOOD BOYS

CHAS. B. HAHN, Editor

Some Rules of the Game

¶ A good motto—"Nobody's mad, sorry, that's all."

—O—

¶ "How will you go up to your father if the lad be not with you?"

—O—

¶ Teach the boys to play square with themselves, rather than with you.

—O—

¶ Never be foolish enough to chase a boy. He likes the game of hide and seek.

—O—

¶ A leader of boys must have the patience of Job and never, never lose his temper.

—O—

¶ In adolescent life cigarette smoking creates unholy desires and is the great manufacturer of Juvenile delinquents.

—O—

¶ Men are born with a desire for association and we must not blame the boy when he acquires the gang spirit early in life.

—O—

¶ As we turn back the pages of the stories of men, we find that somewhere along the way those lives were touched by a friend.

—O—

¶ Let the boys feel and truly know that when they do wrong it does not provoke you, but only hurts you.

—O—

¶ If some folks would love boys as they love some dogs there would seem to be some reason for their madness.

—O—

¶ Never give a boy a book where the story is about a good little boy who never did anything wrong and then died.

—O—

¶ If one considers seriously the life of the boy he will find that it is impossible for a boy to go out to play without breaking some rule made by careful parents.

—O—

¶ We should always let the boy understand that he should tell the truth. That punishment should be given in all kindness and the boy should be taught to take it like a man. Once call a boy a liar or let him think you believe him one and he is far on the road of being just what you think.

The Four Ages in the Life of a Boy

BY CHARLES B. HAHN.

A boy's life may be divided into the following divisions and known as the Babyhood, Adolescent and Young Manhood

Of the Babyhood age we will have little in this article.

Passive or Individual age is that part of a boy's life from the time he is about three years old until he begins to want to run with other fellows and to "gang." A boy in this age is perfectly contented to throw a ball into the air for himself or more as he fancies and build block towers. He is a selfish individual and all his plans are made for himself. He does not care whether one else has a good time or not, just as long as he does. The boy in this age who steals or is guilty of other crimes is more of a criminal at heart than the older boy whose life is influenced by his companions. The boy in the Passive age does wrong by himself and without what he is about to do more than older boys who run with the gang. I have known boys in this age that have destroyed hundreds of dollars' worth of property and brought face to face with their deed to seem not to care or realize the gravity of what they had done.

One time I remember that I brought two boys to the Juvenile court for destroying hundreds of dollars' worth of property in a store shop on Sunday afternoon when no one was around. The judge talked to them a long time when at last one of them began to cry. The judge thinking that he had touched the boy's heart, said: "Well, my boy, you feel bad about it? Now come and tell us the whole story."

The boy cried all the more, but between sobs he said: "I'm hungry. I want something to eat."

The boy did not care for what he had done or thought of his own comfort.

A boy in the Passive age will tell falsehoods to make believe that he knows a great deal more than he does and to appear big with the other fellows, or again he will tell a falsehood to save some one. A boy came into court one day who was eight years old. He told me that he had been tied to a post and gagged by a crowd of hoodlums and left there until three days in the morning. He said a milkman released him and then he went home and slept in the bed until morning.

It was my custom, I went out to investigate and do nothing about the case. Willie told me not to tell me who the milkman was or any of the boys were that had tied him to the post, yet he played with them every day. There were no marks on his arms to show that he had been tied, in fact he could not do one single thing that showed what he had done was true. What really happened was that he was playing out with the boys and remained out so late that he was afraid to go home for fear of getting a whipping, so made up the story which he told to his mother.

3. Adolescence Age. A boy in this age, twelve to eighteen, is in the transitional period of his life. His whole being seems at war, heart against head, life against death, and sin against right. He has left behind his little wooden gun, the little toy drum and whistle, the broomstick horse and make believe. He cannot have a good time alone. He wants other boys with him when he plays ball. He wants some one to pitch when he bats and has learned, too, that if he hits the ball he must take his turn at chasing it. He has learned that team work counts. That he must sacrifice for the good of the gang to which he belongs.

The greatest changes come to a boy during this period of his life. He is squirming and restless and wants to put on long pants and longing to be like father or big brother. During this period criminals are made as also are saints. More crime is committed during adolescence than at any other time in a man's life. Ignorance is the cause of much of the crime and just here is where the fathers should instruct their sons on the origin of life and send them out into the world able to battle with the temptations that they are sure to meet. When a baby comes into the home and the boy asks questions, he should not be told that a fairy brought it. Even when he is young, sometimes too young to understand, fathers think, he has heard from the boys enough to make him realize that he is being fooled. The reason why so many boys do not know or have the true idea of life is because the parents have turned this important training of their boy's life over to vicious companions who know only the vulgar and impure side of these holy things. I do not have much sympathy with a parent when I hear a father or mother say, "My boy is as innocent as a baby." I know then that that father or mother does not know their son. Boys in some of our Christian homes are going down to perdition, morally, because of self-abuse. Whose fault? Read the history of the Juvenile courts of our land. See there how young the children are when such habits are formed. The parents should watch very closely and as soon as they feel that their boys have heard something on the outside that has caused them to open their eyes, these things should be told them in a frank, open way.

Your boy cannot live in a glass house. He must go to school with all kinds of children, from all kinds of homes and environments. A boy should be told what makes him weak, his muscles flabby, his eyesight poor, his memory dim, why he has no ambition, in fact all that makes him less a man. Remember, that he can reason. Appeal to him in the right way—in a manly way.

During adolescence a boy begins to plan for the future. He does not care for the past, but looks ahead when he shall be a man. At this age he is a hero worshiper. He holds up some one as his ideal, and loves that one more for what he does than what position he holds in the community.

A boy in this age is breaking away from habits or rather is changing his habits. He measures himself in his relation to God and man. And God is leading him out from the nest to be a separate individual with manhood powers. Let us do our part to make God's plan a success.

4. Young Manhood. The age of young manhood is a continuation of the adolescent age. The boy has put on long trousers and is counted a man. He plans to be a bigger and better man than the men he sees around him. He feels that he can accomplish anything that is given him to do. This, indeed, is the age of the young man and the world will write in its history the doings of the Twentieth century. During this period in a boy's life he is making big plans for his life. He has not yet tested out all the friends. He is beginning to see that every one cannot be trusted. He is getting experience, the most valuable of all teaching. He decides, too, what he wants to be. He gradually lets the world know his game. He is beginning to take sides politically and religiously. Now is the time for the mother's and father's training to count. Let us make that it has been solid and good and on the old Gospel of Christ running through as a silver thread.

Fixing the Place for Bible Study

BY R. P. SHEPHERD.

R. P. SHEPHERD

When a boy strikes the physical and mental changes of adolescence, his whole nature is not teaching but guidance. He responds with enthusiasm not to instruction but to ship. If he continue in school work he is driven himself or be driven by the compulsion of others to learn from them. He is in semiconscious possession of a great power; he awakens to his own individuality. The instinct and incentive in him is toward the exercise of powers which he feels but cannot use till he use them. He could not define himself, often he scarcely knows it himself, the native and normal demand of his being for the development of his personality, the use of his abilities in social affairs, the knowledge of himself in relation to others in relation to economic, political and social adjustment. This never comes through study of books, not even of the Bible, but by actual contact with men and movements. The first and greatest demand upon the teacher of young men is not for expert scholarship and adept logic skill, but for tactful, patient, resourceful and constructive leadership in doing the things of worth and profit.

As a young man finds the adjustment for which he hungers, and feels himself under responsibility to his wife, his husband and father, a citizen, a factor in the general life of his community, his dominant needs and demands are not those of his childhood nor yet of his youth. He does not crave instruction. He does not respond to desires for leadership. He wants help, encouragement, sincere sympathy and appreciative understanding; he needs guidance in meeting man's demands of each day and in grappling successfully with the moral issues of his individual life, his home, his group and his country. He has neither the ability nor the inclination to study as he did in childhood and youth. He has not the varied problems of a new manhood to face and either master or be mastered by them; he is facing life's urgent problems. From the bread-and-butter problems of his job to the problem of bringing to his family their largest and best enjoyment of the privileges and advantages of our civilization, the problems of responsible masculine living throng upon him. If the church has anything of vital interest for him, the message must come to him along the lines of these immediate and crushing problems.

We study arithmetic not to learn the text-book but to learn how to practice in daily life the necessary use of numbers. We study grammar not to learn the text-book but to learn how to use language properly in our daily life. We study geography not to learn the text-book but to have an intelligent working knowledge of our earth and its people. We study technical and professional books not to learn their contents but to use them in gaining skillful command of the resources and agencies of which they teach. In short, a text-book exists not as an end of study but as a means to the skillful use of knowledge, not to be learned but to be used to guide the learner aright in some field of knowledge and life.

THE BIBLE

In all the world of books there is but one text-book on God; that is the Bible. It is to be used as every other text-book, not to be learned merely as a book or a library of books, but to be studied so as to learn how in daily life to practice the presence of God; how to deal, as in the presence of God, with the commonplace experiences which daily life brings. Boys need help to find themselves and their place in the world. Men need to know the meaning of life, why suffering and toil and trouble and disappointment come, and how to meet them honestly and victoriously. Now the Bible, the text-book on God, is the one book on religion, the only sure religious explanation of the commonplace experience which come to common men.

BIBLE-CLASS STUDY OF THE BIBLE

The verse-by-verse-read-and-comment method, the yes-and-no question method, the all-one-man-talk-lecture method, the stick-to-lesson-though-the-heavens-fall and the empty, inane, and downright ignorant method, have served in the past to empty the church and Bible-school of men, and they will continue to drive boys and men away from the church faster than contests and special spasms can get them back. Teachers of men and boys have every reason in the world to urge them to learn to use the Bible like good teachers use good text-books in school, to familiarize students with the subject matter, God, and God's ways of dealing with men and boys in private and in public life. The Bible teacher's unique and holy privilege is to help men to be religious, to show them how to live like Christ, to encourage them always to do the things which are pleasing to the Father.

THE BIBLE STUDY COMMITTEE

The Bible teaching which is done now and shall be done in the future is the supreme concern of this committee. It is useless to try to get classes of men and boys to study the Bible as an end, to study like a bunch of school boys drilling through their text-books. They can't and they won't. But to get those who are teachers now, and picked men who shall be the teachers in the future, to call them together and program with them a definite campaign against the ignorant, indifferent and wilful wickedness of men; to program a definite campaign, to enlist the eager interest of men in religion and religious life; to program a masculine campaign for a masculine use of the Bible; to make men think with masculine vigor and virility of the truth as it is in Jesus; to devise a program of proficiency suited to the men ready "in hand" and those who are yet "in the bush," but who are to be brought to the hand—such a task is worthy the best of the best church in the world. No higher and worthier task confronts the Bible study committee than to form of inner circle of teachers and leaders who will choose the lessons and search in them for the vital eternal spiritual truth, study out ways in which the human soil of men's hearts can best be prepared to receive, incorporate and embody chosen truths, and to plan carefully and consistently, not merely to get men to come to class, but to get men to be honestly, deeply, sincerely and deathlessly religious. The work of the Brotherhood and the organized Men's classes sparing no pains or effort to give helpful suggestions to those who wish to work along this line as suggested. Suppose we enlarge our slogan "Men and Religion" so it shall read "Men and the perfect man, Christ Jesus, our Savior."

The Week of Prayer

Recommended for Observance by Organized Men's Bible Classes, Brotherhoods and Men's Organizations, March 31 to April 6, 1912.

Last year the Jackson Avenue Brotherhood at Kansas City observed the week of prayer with nightly meetings for men only. The gatherings were evangelistic in character and devotional in spirit. The men of the church turned out in numbers and as many as seventy-five men were present on a stormy night. The consciences of the men were quickened, and while the direct evangelistic results were only one man brought into the church, the impression upon the men themselves was marked. Out of the week of prayer has grown a weekly prayer-meeting for men, held in an upper room each Sunday evening, lasting for one hour. These men are realizing their opportunities and obligations and are going out two by two, seeking the lost of the community. At these weekly meetings the experiences of these men are told in remarkably vivid style, and the net result is that the church is proving itself to be of inestimable service to the community. These men not only pray, but they take off their coats and work. They are determined to keep their portion of the city clean, and are active in politics. This hard winter they have dispensed food, fuel and clothing to many poor families. Every department of this church is alive and active, and the observance of the week of prayer had much to do with stimulating the men to activity.

Pastors, Presidents of Men's Bible Classes, Leagues, Clubs, Brotherhoods and kindred agencies, look over the following program and determine to try the experiment this year. Sit down and write us your experience. We are sure that much joy and blessing will be yours for the effort.

GOD'S NEED OF MEN

It is not only true that God needs God, it is also true that God needs man. When God called men to serve Him, it was because He had work for them to do. When Christ in the New Testament called His disciples, it was in order to make them fishers of men. God summons men to serve Him today because He needs men to carry out His great work of saving the world. It is true that we ought to give our lives to God because we need Him, but it is also true that we ought to serve God because He needs us. How God's work would prosper if He could have the men that He needs in our business and social and political life! Sometimes it is hard for men to realize their need of God. But it ought to be easy for every man to realize God's need of him.

Bible Readings: Gen. 12:1-9; 1 Sam. 1:1-11; Isaiah 6:1-8; Matt. 9:36-38; Luke 11:1-13; Acts 9:1-19.

Prayers: That men everywhere may realize God's call to them; that they God's need of them; that they may His service consciously and resolutely; they may witness for Him in their business and social relations, and in all public affairs; that our whole life may be blessed and elevated and uplifted by men who are seeking God's will and work.

MONDAY.

BOOK OF LIFE. We are told in Scripture that men are to be judged out of the Book of Life. This Book is not a myth or mystery. It is a book wherein is set down the actual account between God and man; the debit and credit account between man and his Maker. The account is not a fiction of the imagination. It is the actual and real. It is the Everlasting record of the relation between what God has done for man, and what man has done or has tried to do for God. Upon that account man is judged. His worth is measured by it. Men are reckoned out of such a Book today. A man is counted to be morally defective who repays with indifference or ingratitude his parents, his friends, or his country, whose affection, loyalty and protection have been lavished upon him. Above them all, there stands our God, our indebtedness to God. The story of our lives is told. How will the story of our lives be judged? It is out of such a Book that the souls of men must eventually be judged. "Give Myself for Thee, what hast Thou for Me?"

Bible Readings: Daniel 12:1-3; Mal. 3:1-10; Matt. 25:31-46; Luke 16:19-31; Luke 19:11-28; John 10:12.

Prayers: That all men may realize that the relation between God and man is necessary as well as between man and man; that they may realize the extent of their obligations to God; that men may seek to keep their accounts right with God; that all men may seek to escape the judgment which must be visited upon the careless, selfish and indolent soul.

TUESDAY.

THE MISSION OF CHRIST. That was the mission of Christ. That is the mission of the Christian. A man becomes a Christian when he takes the mission of Jesus his own; when he seeks like his Master, to seek and to save the lost. There are no honorary degrees in the Kingdom of the Apostles. There are no brevet commissions in the Army of Jesus. The name Christian must be won in order to be worn. A man must perform the Mission of Jesus in order to have the right to His name. Have I a right to wear His name? What have I done, what am I doing, to save men in the name of Christ?

Bible Readings: Ezekiel 34:11-16; Hosea 1:1-3; Matt. 18:12-14; Luke 15:1-7; John 10:1-10; John 21:15-17.

Prayers: That men may search their hearts to see if they are seeking to perform the Mission of Jesus; that men may realize the need of the world for sympathy, friendship, love;

that every man may win the right to the name of Christian by making some special definite effort for others; that all men who profess and call themselves Christians may have earned the name.

WEDNESDAY.

THE FEAR OF PAUL. A man can be measured in many ways. One of them is by the quality of his fears. If you know what a man is afraid of, you know what kind of a man he is. It has been said that men in our day are afraid of but three things: failure, sickness and poverty. But Paul was afraid of none of these things. He had met them all, and they had no terror for him. Paul had only one fear. He was afraid that he might become useless and unprofitable. The word "cast-away" in I Cor. 9:27 really means "good-for-nothing." With Paul that was a daily fear. He buffeted his body and took daily moral exercise in order that he might not become useless and inefficient. The fear of Paul should be a live fear with every earnest man, and the only one. We ought not to be afraid of failure or poverty, but we ought to bestir ourselves if we are not to become enervated by the comforts, and selfish by the work of our daily lives.

Bible Readings: Numbers 14:22-24; Judges 5:23; Matt. 25:19-30; I Cor. 9:24-27; Gal. 6:7-9.

Prayers: That the fear of falling away in our service of God may be a daily fear with all men; that we may be delivered from unworthy fears; that we may exercise ourselves in godliness, lest we, too, become castaways; that we may merit the "Well done, good and faithful servant."

THURSDAY.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS. Paul says in Romans 8:19 that the whole creation is waiting for the revealing of the sons of God. Nothing, that is, can be done in the world unless a son of God is there to do it. The world does not groan for more laws, for better legislation, for systems or programs, but it groans for a son of God. There is nothing that a real son of God cannot do, and there is nothing that can be done without him. Paul was thinking of Roman law, Roman system and Roman government, the best in the world, when he wrote these words. But he said that it was not for these that the world was waiting. There was something better and more needed than them all, and that was a son of God. Let any man, however feeble or inconspicuous he may feel himself to be, devote his life to God, and his life thus devoted becomes the hope of the world, the very thing for which it is waiting and groaning.

Bible Readings: Exodus 3:7-12; Judges 7:1-8; Zech. 4:6; Luke 10:17-20; John 14:12-14; Romans 8:16-21; Phil. 4:13.

Prayers: That men may remember that what the world in which they live is, depends upon what they are; that men may not expect impersonal agencies to save the world, but may remember that the world's redemption waits for them; that men may not think too meanly of themselves, but may attempt great things for God and expect great things of God.

FRIDAY.

BETRAYED BY HIS FRIENDS Christ was betrayed by His friend. That was the bitterest drop in His cup. Most of us read the story of His betrayal as if it were past history, but it is not. The story of Judas is not only to be looked back upon with horror, but it is to be held up before each Disciple today. Every one of us needs to ask the question, "Is it I?" For Christ is being betrayed today by His friends. Men are judging Christ by watching us. They may not read the life of Christ in the Gospels, but they do read His life and character as reflected in us. We are the living epistles that are known and read of all men. The Christ that they accept or reject is the Christ they see in us. The Christianity that they believe to be a reality or a fiction is the kind they discover in us. Christ today is at the mercy of His friends and He is being betrayed every day. Every man who bears Christ's name either commends or betrays his Master. How is it with me? Is the kind of Christianity they find in me likely to help or to hinder the cause of Christ? Is He honored or betrayed by my kind of discipleship? "Is it I?"

Bible Readings: Psalm 51; Mark 14:43-50; Acts 4:13; I Cor. 8:9-13; II Cor. 3:2-3.

Prayers: That Christ may not be betrayed by us; that we may be loyal to Him, His cause, His Church; that men may take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus; because of what we are and do, His name be magnified, His cause may be prospered, Kingdom may be extended.

SATURDAY.

SUFFERING HARDSHIPS

Christ does not appeal men to do the easy thing to do the hard thing. appeal is grounded not the love of men for ease; but upon their ability to endure hardship. Paul did not think that Timothy would have an easier time than he had had; he told him to come on and his share of the hardships as a good soldier of the Lord Jesus Christ. It is thus that appeal should be put in our day. Men are to be told to become Christians in order to get comfort in this world and the next. do not respond to the call of comfort; but appeal to heroism must win them. The love of Christ must prevail with men just because it is the call of the Cross. It is because the Captain of our Salvation bids us to take up the cross that men find in His service their perfect freedom and their perfect joy.

Bible Readings: Luke 9:23; II Cor. 6:10-18; 2 Tim. 2:3-4.

Prayers: That we may neither ask nor expect the easy thing for ourselves; that we learn to glory in our tribulations and to count it all joy when we fall into manifold trials; that we may be willing to take our share of the hardships and to know the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ; that men may respond to this call of Christ to a life of heroism and enroll themselves beneath the banner of the Cross.

Brotherhood Volunteers

In response to the call issued by the College Presidents and circulated by and at the expense of the Brotherhood Movement, 300 out of 3,224 ministers, to whom the call was sent, replied that they would observe the third Sunday in January, 1912, as Brotherhood Volunteer Day, and would preach a sermon on the ministry as a calling. As a result we have about fifty volunteers already reported as making the definite decision, and as many more thinking seriously of taking the step. It was our original intention to make this a feature of this issue of CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine, but the subject is so alarmingly big, and the situation regarding our ministerial supply so awfully serious from a standpoint of returns from this, the only concerted plea that has thus far been made by our religious people, that we have arranged with the Editors of the Christian Evangelist for a special issue of that paper to set forth the matter of Volunteers for the Ministry and Mission field. This special issue of the Evangelist will appear about March 7th. It will contain some startling and distressingly true facts regarding the ministry of the Christian Churches of America. Watch for it.

OUR MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

LESSON 2—MARCH 10.

JESUS THE HEALER.

Text—Mark 1:29-45; Matthew 1:23-25. Golden Text—Matthew 8:17.

the Ministry of Jesus was two-fold. He taught and He healed. He taught in the synagogue and then went out to relieve a suffering world that moved Him with compassion. There was soul-hunger and physical infirmity. The first, He satisfied with gracious words that were like manna from heaven. The second He relieved with an unfailing effort that has been the wonder of the ages. Our twentieth Century world has not outgrown the need of Jesus, the healer. Soul-hunger and physical infirmity still abound. Teaching and healing—that is our present need. May not our touch with Jesus today, as a Men's Bible Class, help us to bring something of the blessing of His ministry to our sin-sick, dying world.

Jesus in the Home. It was more than a passing incident that Jesus, that day, "entered the house of Simon and Andrew." He was invited to share the hospitality of these plain fishermen, and He brought with Him, what still brings into every home where He is welcomed, a great blessing. A suffering man was cured, an anxious family relieved, a new demonstration of His power witnessed. When Jesus comes into the home the things that mar and despoil it are going to flee in flight. A friend of mine lived in a wretched tenement house. Sin had come in and robbed the poor family, until nothing was left but a despairing wife and a few broken pieces of furniture. Then, one night, the man stumbled into a revival meeting, half drunken. There, for the first time, he met Jesus and let Him come into his heart and invited Him to come into his wrecked home, to help him in its rebuilding. By the grace of God he was freed from drink and saved his wages. Soon the broken furniture was replaced by new, what went out at the door, and the home became a working man's palace. Jesus had entered the house. Have you welcomed Him into yours? Do you honor Him by reading His Word? Do you recognize His presence by daily asking Him into your counsel as you plan the affairs of the day? Do you show your gratitude for the three square meals that greet you each day by an expression of thanks at the table? If not, I beg you to invite Him in today. He never fails to bring a blessing into the home where He is a welcomed and honored guest.

Bringing Them to Jesus. How soon our deeds find their way down the street and out into the community, whether they be good or bad. The news of the marvelous cure of one distressed woman, came like a message of hope to hundreds of bedsides where disease held carnival and death was lurking in the shadows. If He healed one, why not another? But how helpless disease has left its victims. Only through the ministry of the faith and love of others, can they find their way to the great Physician. "They brought unto Him all that were diseased." God's mercy, through Christ, is only limited by our ministry. If there were any sick folks left that night in Capernaum, it was because no friendly hand had brought them to Jesus. So, today, the power of Jesus to save has been limited by our failure to bring men to Him. That class of yours gave a small group of men a new vision of life last year. But its power might have been multiplied, if only you men had brought all who needed these great life-lessons to the study of God's Word.

Prayer and Power. Every great demand upon Jesus' strength was preceded by prayer. Every great victory was followed by prayer. "In the morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out and departed into a desert place and there prayed." Prayer and power, in Holy Writ and in human experience, are inseparably linked. As those early disciples prayed for courage and power to speak the Word with boldness, "the place was shaken where they were gathered together." When John Knox prayed "Give me Scotland, or I die," a throne was shaken and a new kingdom born. When George Muller, of Bristol, England, prayed for food for hungry orphans, the windows of heaven seemed to open for the outpouring of God's bounty. When you men pray as you ought, and work as you pray, something is going to happen in your neighborhood that the enemies of righteousness are not looking for.

The Popularity of Service. "All men are seeking thee." Strange we have been so slow in learning the path to public favor. Fame has held out an alluring reward. To secure it, men have gone into the trade of wholesale murder, called war. Or they strain every effort at the loss of every worthy motive, to pile up a mountain of dirt, which we call wealth. Or, they risk comfort, health and life, that they may have a place in "Who's Who," which we call reputation. Jesus knew the path to human favor and that was service. "If any among you would become great, let him serve." No wonder that one of the derelicts of human ambition, soliloquizing on his fateful career, said: "Alexander, Cæsar, and I have founded empires; but on what do these creations of our genius rest? Upon force, mere force. Jesus founded His Kingdom upon love, and today millions of men are ready to lay down their lives for Him." Following His example, no disciple is so humble, but, in the field of service, he may win his way into the esteem and gratitude of an increasing circle of his fellow-men.

The Efficacy of Touch. Much of our so-called benevolence fails at a vital point. Through our institutional agencies there is lack of the personal element. Benefactor and beneficiary never come in touch with each other. It is so much easier to send a check to the Provident Association than to go down into the haunts of want and misery, and not near a strain on one's sympathy. It requires no less sacrifice to contribute to the building of a hospital than to go down through the wards administering to sick and dying. It would have been easy for Jesus to have spoken the Word to the loathsome leper, that came for cleansing, and sent him away healed; but He needed the lesson as well as His disciples. "He stretched forth his hand and touched him." Today the world of suffering and want needs nothing so much as the touch of a helping hand. In his "Vision of Sir Launfal," Lowell has expressed it in these lines:

"Not what we give, but what we share.
The gift without the giver is bare.
Who gives himself with his alms, feeds three, Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me."

A friend of mine was called to visit a poor degraded woman in the city prison. As he entered the prison corridor she shrunk from the sight that met her eyes. It was an old woman, cast, recovering from a debauch. Her hair was disheveled, her face soiled, her clothes torn and filthy. The impulse of duty led him to speak to the woman of One who came to save such as she, at the same time assuring her of her own love. "Did you say you loved me?" asked this Magdalene. "Yes," replied my friend. "Then kiss me." But a moment was needed to master the feeling of repulsion, and then this woman of refinement and Christian grace stooped down and kissed the soiled cheek and it was the kiss of salvation.

Arrow Points. In having Jesus in your house that day, Peter was more than recompensed for the old fishing smack he abandoned at the wharf. * * * * How many churches would be crowded today if we should bring into them all who needed the help of our great Physician. * * * * If He could heal diseases then, why not have faith that He can save that old bloat, whose only occupation is to clean out spittoons for a drink now and then? * * * * If you would get up a few minutes earlier in the morning there would be no excuse for neglecting the family altar. * * * * The man who delivers the goods of his store have no fear of becoming lonesome, either at the store or in the church. * * * * Jesus is both willing and able to save the vilest sinner who will come to Him. * * * * If you would to help this old world to be better and cleaner, take off with your gloves. Don't be afraid to touch it. * * * * If you have been cleansed, try to show it. You may, you cannot conceal it. If you follow the old trail, proclaim your faith as loudly as you will, nobody will believe it.

LESSON 3—MARCH 17.

THE PARALYTIC FORGIVEN AND HEALED.

Text—Mark 2:1-12. Golden Text—Psalms 103:2-3.

The growing popularity of Jesus after our last lesson, compelled Him to withdraw from Capernaum until the excitement had died away.

But He no sooner returns to His adopted home than crowds again besiege Him. They flock to the humble home where Jesus is stopping.

overflow its modest capacity. They gather at the doorway and cluster around on the steps as far as they can hear the voice of the great teacher. How like a modern congregation was this throng that crowded about Jesus. Some came because they were truth-lovers, some out of curiosity, some for selfish reasons, and some, like the Pharisees (Luke 5, 17), to accuse.

Church in the House. When Jesus came to a home He soon transforms it into a gathering-place for worshipers. It may simply be a family circle, in devotion, or it may open its doors to a neighborhood prayer-meeting, or to some gathering for the edification of saints or the saving of sinners. The truly Christian home has always been willing to lend itself to the service of Christ. Paul's salutation to Aquilla and Priscilla included a greeting to "the church that met in their house." In the pioneer days the home often became the gathering place of the neighborhood, where men like Campbell, Scott, and Stone, "preached the word from house to house." How about your home? Have you thrown it open to the Master's use, when you are looking for a place to hold a cotillion, a prayer-meeting or for a committee meeting, a choir rehearsal? Or have you been unwilling to have such gatherings, in the interest of the home, would mar your hardwood floors or your rugs, or damage some expensive piece of furniture? If your house is too fine for the service, I am afraid Jesus Himself would not feel welcome. What a blessing to have church and home linked together in some way. A friend of mine, now in Australia, has his new home far away from churches. He had two little sons in the family. One day he said to his wife, "We can't afford to bring these boys up without church influence. Let us open our home and invite the neighbors to join us in some simple service on Lord's day." So the church began first with the father and mother breaking bread in the presence of their Lord, then one neighbor after another coming in and at last a public gathering place and a strong church. No, this was not the last. The two sons of this man are today ministers of the gospel, bearing the good news to many hearts.

Helplessness of Sin. "They came, and brought unto Him a man, sick of the palsy, of four." In this brief sentence is the story of the world's greatest tragedy, the blighting effect of sin. Here sin has entered and robbed a strong man of all his powers. The Great Physician is not able to move him, but what is that to a helpless paralytic? He calls on his friends, two, three, four. Singly they are helpless, but together they can swing his couch beneath him and bear him to the place of healing. Sin is producing the same results in the spiritual neighborhood. Perhaps the physical effort is not so conspicuous but it has left its mark on a spiritual paralytic. You try to interest your Bible Class, that through it you may get him in personal touch with the Physician of souls. He treats your invitation with indifference, or meets you with an array of excuses, or promises to come but fails to keep his promise. What can be done? Leave him to go down to a hopeless grave? Not if the real love of Christ throbs in your heart. Send another member of the class after him, and then another and another. The four of you will get him, if you have half the faith of the friends of this paralytic. The modern men's movement means that, if it means anything, the combination of many to reach and help the individual.

Overcoming Obstacles. The way to the City of Health is a difficult road. If the disease has become firmly rooted, there may be many obstacles to overcome that will test the power of endurance. It may require the surgeon's knife, or some other form of heroic treatment. It is always the path of patience and self-denial. In the case of the paralytic, one difficulty was overcome only to meet another. "They could not come nigh unto Him for the crowd." Undaunted, they climb to the roof, tear away the tile and let him down at the feet of Jesus. There have always been difficulties in the way of salvation. Bunyan's Pilgrim, you remember, had all manner of obstacles in the way,—Slough of Despond, Hill of Difficulty, Dungeon of Giant Despair, Apollyon, the opposition of believers, but he put his fingers in his ears and ran on, crying, "Life, Life, Eternal Life." Unless you have in you the stuff that is undaunted by difficulty, don't accept a place on the membership committee of your class, or the soul-saving crew of the Kingdom.

The Triumph of Faith. I am wondering if we really grasp the meaning and power of faith. It is the nearest omnipotence of any force in the world today. Back of every movement, of any real value or magnitude, has been some man's faith. Take the digging of the Panama canal, the founding of the Chinese Republic, the Evangelization of the world—each the result of the irresistible faith of some man, which became contagion. "And Jesus, seeing their faith." Jesus has seen fit to limit His power to the measure of our belief. When He returned, on one occasion, to His native village of Nazareth, it was said, "He did not any mighty works there, because of their unbelief." Perhaps this explains the meager growth of your church, the low tide of it spiritually, and the distressing state of your finances. What you need is faith in the power of God, and the sufficiency of the gospel, and the effectiveness of consecrated personal effort. If the faith of four men can bring one to Christ and save him, the faith of forty should bring ten, and that of four hundred, one hundred; and so the conquest of the world sweeps on with irresistible power.

His Power Proven. The paralytic had not come to Jesus to get rid of sin, but of its effects on his body. He was, perhaps, ignorant of the relation of the two. But Jesus, with the true physician's instinct, traced the disease back from the symptom to the cause, and found it in a hidden sin. Little could be gained by remedying the symptom without removing the cause, hence the startling statement "thy sins be forgiven thee." It was startling, because of the presumptuous claim of this Galilean teacher. Sins are against God, only God can forgive them. Rightly those critical Pharisees reasoned and rightly Jesus met their unexpressed censure with a demonstration that should have forever linked their conception of Him with God. We test the claims of all men in one way or another. Their professions are measured by their achievements. The test of the carpenter's ability is the house. The test of a Raphael is the life-breathing fresco in the great cathedral. The test of the genius of Homer and Horace is the epic and the ode. So the test of the Sin-destroyer was his power to remedy the havoc that sin had wrought. "That ye may know that the son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." As one man leaped from his pallet, gathered it up and returned to the home out of which he had been carried a helpless invalid, the authority of Jesus to forgive sins, and His inseparable with God, as the only begotten, were lished.

Arrow Points. When Jesus really into the house, the victims of sin, sorrow want will find their way to the door, help. * * * * Sin has strewn our world helpless victims who must perish, without aid of some friendly hand. * * * * I four men to bring one to Jesus then, and ratio has not changed since. * * * * I culties in the way of soul-winners should dissuade them, but increase their determination to win out. * * * * Faith in its holy mission of bringing men to Christ for healing will find a way or make it. * * * * The real need of the world today is not material but spiritual. With the Kingdom of God within, the outer material essentials will be added. * * * * Wherever man tries to carry out Christ's program of service, he will find "the Scribbling there," in the person of critics and finders. * * * * The unanswerable argument in behalf of Jesus' claims and authority remains the renewed lives of those who have been freed from bondage to sin.

LESSON 4—MARCH 24.

FEASTING AND FASTING.

Text—Mark 2:13-22. Golden Text—Mark 2:17.

Jesus never lacked for a pulpit from which to proclaim his gospel. If the synagogue, with its conventional rostrum and reading-desk, were not at hand, He improvised a place and went on with His sermon. Yesterday His pulpit was the sacred precinct of the home. Tomorrow He will step into a pulpit not made with hands, on the mountain summit, and the next day He will speak from a fisherman's boat. Today He stands upon the wave-washed sands "by the seaside." It is not what He said here, but what He did, that concerns us. Though He spoke to multitudes at this beach-meeting, His sermon is not reported. But what He did was regarded of such importance that each of the synoptic evangelists has told the story.

As Jesus Passed By. Our Lord was always on the watch for opportunities. As He passed through that brief three years' journey what marvels met His eyes that had escaped the notice of the world's sages. Nobody else would have seen anything in those four plain fishermen to attract attention. Nobody else would have given a passing thought to the widow's offering. Nobody else would have seen in sparrow and vine and toiler and child what He saw and has revealed to our wondering gaze. "As He passed by He saw a man called Matthew sitting at the place of toll." (Matt. 9:9.) Was that all He saw? Some one has said that "Christ had the double vision of the sculptor." He not only saw the material in the rough, but He saw the inner symmetry to be brought out by the forming process of discipline. He not only saw the publican, but He saw in him Matthew, the fearless herald of the cross,—preacher, and martyr. As He passed by your place yesterday, what did He see? A man communitarian, industrialized, materialized? Or was it a man whose tomorrow would find him in the house of God, helping to sound His praise whose life was to be measured, not by earthly power, but by motive and sacrificial service.

The Irrevocable Choice. It was a wonderful moment in the life of Matthew when he saw Jesus standing there, calling him by name and inviting him into the inner circle of discipleship. Who would care for a despised publican? The church did not want him who had become accustomed to hearing his name linked with that of harlot, gambler, and sinner. But here was a chance. "He saith unto him, Follow me." The call was flattering, but it involved loss. He must leave something of "his business, his gains, his hopes of wealth, his companionships, his luxuries." Matthew was ready to do it. Without question or hesitation he made the choice. "He arose and followed him." Luke tells us he left behind his accounts, his office, his position, his friends. He left all to follow Jesus, and, having made a positive, definite choice, he never turned back. The appeal that came to Matthew that day, is the appeal of Christianity to the Twentieth Century.

century manhood of America. With doors opening toward a thousand fruitful fields, we need men who can go and men who can come. It may involve cost and loss—the loss of what is honestly ours and the leaving behind of questionable business methods; whatever the sacrifice, Christ's "Follow me" is the path to the only goal that is worth

Where Saints and Sinners Meet. A strange meeting that which met in Matthew's spacious house. "Many publicans and sinners sat down with Jesus and His disciples." It was the first step in Matthew's self-renunciation. His first step had been to leave all and follow Jesus. His second was to bring his old companions in sin, to his newly found Jesus. And where could he better accomplish his purpose than under his own hospitable roof, in the closer fellowship, as guests at Matthew's dining table. Jesus and His disciples, publicans and sinners, meeting on a plane of social equality that He may bring them toward His level of spiritual supremacy. It was a new way of meeting sinners and wrong-doers. The whole fabric of society was to ostracise wrong-doers, but Jesus was with them. He sits at the table with people whom nobody wants, and says, "I am after you." The church is to be "a life-saving station," must be a common meeting place for saints and sinners. It sees, in the filthiest wretch on the street, something worth saving, and is not too proud to sit by him in the pew and bring him into its fellowship.

Mission of His Coming. The point of differentiation between the church and your social organizations, is the attitude of the church toward the lost members of our race. The church invites those of its own level, the church reaches down to help the sinners up, the church seeks the lost. No other religion has Jesus' answer to pharisaical criticism is, "I do not call the righteous but sinners, repentance." Schools are founded, not for the scholars, but for the unlearned, who do not know. Some one has said "The school is the school and Christ is the teacher. The disciple is a bad man who wants to become good, or a good man who wants to become a better one, or the best of men, who feels he wants to be one like Christ."

Methods for New Times. Jesus was a great insurgent of His time. Because things had always been so, was no reason why they should continue to be. Ceremonies that become meaningless, need no longer to be observed because once they were the expression of deep conviction or religious devotion. Fasting might have its place in times of distress, but not when hearts were thrilled with the joy of some unmeasured blessing. "As long as they have the bridegroom with them they cannot fast." A new dispensation was being ushered in. Christianity was not to be a reformed Judaism, a patch on the unseemly rent of the old wornout garment of the past. We still need this lesson in dealing with questions of expediency, in both secular and religious life. We are living in new times, breathing the air of the Twentieth century, witnessing the most marvelous transformation the world has ever known. Because they did so when you were a boy, is no argument for its continuance. Your father may have always voted the straight party ticket, but that is no reason why you should not be a man and vote your convictions, on the great moral issues of today, regardless of party. Your father may never have heard of modern institutional methods, for reaching men and building up the Kingdom, but that is no excuse for your planting yourself in the path of religious progress and opposing every measure for making the church a power in the social service of the community. Be true to the great realities of the Gospel, loyal to the positive commands of Christ; but don't keep on putting new wine into old wine-skins, when self-corking bottles, of the latest invention, can be had.

Arrow Points. Wherever He went, Jesus always taught the same old Gospel, good tidings to the poor, release to the captives, sight to the blind, liberty to those broken by calamity. * * * * The alchemy of the gospel surpasses the wildest dream of mediæval chemist, for, in following Christ, Levi becomes Matthew, the sinner is changed into saint, and the publican into a preacher. * * * * The best measure of a man's conviction is his attitude when the call of God demands some great sacrifice at his hand. * * * * It is not the company a man keeps, but his motive on keeping the company he does, that determines the man's standing. * * * * The hardest man to win to the Bible Class and a place in the Kingdom, is the man who prides himself on the sufficiency of his knowledge, and the correctness of his conduct. * * * * What the sinner needs is not a patch to cover the rent in his moral character, but an out and out new life, born from above.

LESSON 5—MARCH 31.

REVIEW.

Golden Text—Matthew 4:16.

We have gone far enough into the history of the church, to pause and formulate some conclusions. If in some way we were to lose the rest of the gospel story, what would be our impression, from what we have already learned? Where would we place Him? What would be our attitude toward Him? We have had the story of the shepherds, and the wise men and the aged Simeon and Anna and the multitude that were beginning to throng him, bearing universal testimony to his supernatural birth, supernatural perfection, supernatural wisdom and supernatural power. His claims to supernatural birth might easily be pushed aside, if his after career were wholly within the range of human possibility. But when we listen to words and deeds that harmonize with the story of his miraculous conception, we can not reject the one without denying the other.

The Group Around the Cradle. I would recommend that you read again the story of the coming of the shepherds and the aged saints and the wise men, in the light of the early events of His Galilean ministry, which we have been studying. As one after another, they come and look down upon Mary's child, and in gift or song proclaim his praise, their testimony becomes part of a symmetrical whole,—His birth, the prophecy of His marvelous ministry, His achievement the fulfillment of the hopes of the group that gathered around His cradle.

Training for Service. How little we know of the first thirty years of Jesus' life. Aside from the halo that was thrown over His cradle, but once are we permitted to look at the life that was fashioned in obscurity, for world supremacy. At twelve He steps in to the light, and then retires to pass eighteen uneventful years in a mountain village and a home of toil. Such has always been the training school for men of power. This morning a future president of our republic sat down at the breakfast table, it may be in your neighborhood, but even his own family failed to recognize in him anything but a romping, fun-loving boy. Here, hidden from the world, are being put into operation the formative influences that are to determine his exalted destiny. So the human side of Jesus was being fashioned by the village in which he grew, the home, the school, the synagogue, the Scriptures, the social life, the touch of nature and His heart touch with God. When He emerged from the obscurity of Nazareth at the age of thirty His character was formed, His purpose fixed, His life plan determined upon.

The Testing Time. The story of His baptism and temptation, with which His public career began, was rather the test of a life whose mission had already been determined upon, than in any way contributing to its power. The trial trip of the ocean steamer does not add power to the engine or increase its tonnage, but puts them to practical test. The final examination does not increase the scholar's knowledge, but measures the amount of knowledge he already has. The experience through which Jesus passed, as He began His public ministry, were but proofs of His fitness for the task of saving the world from the domination of sin.

The Hour Has Come. Paul recognizes the peculiar fitness in the beginning of His ministry. "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son." Even the devil had conspired to make this the one period in all history, most auspicious for the beginning of a new dispensation. Greek culture, Roman supremacy, Jewish expectations, the disappointments and hopes of the ages—all had contributed to the ripeness of the hour. So Jesus began His ministry saying: "The time has been filled and the Kingdom of God is at hand. From this time on, for three years and no more, He throws himself into the tide of human life, seeking to purify its current and turn its channels of service. To this end He calls His followers, healed men's infirmities, sought to ease the world's heart-ache.

The Man With a Message and Method. A new social conscience is being awakened in our day. There are some who ascribe to a few modern agitators. But one who has carefully these opening chapters in the life of Jesus will discover that two thousand years ago was begun a social service which must, in time, regenerate the world, and make impossible the sins now committed by our society. Three circumstances have been brought out in our studies, that make up the social program of Jesus. 1. He put Himself in touch with the masses. He chose men for His helpers. He ate with publicans and sinners. 2. He was filled with compassion. He touched the leper. He wept over human sin and suffering. 3. He healed men by power divine. He healed and clothed and satisfied. The men who have really contributed to the social up-lift, have caught the spirit of service and are walking in the footsteps of loyalty to Him.

Arrow Points. Jesus still commands the adoration of shepherds and Magi. The lowly and learned bow before his shrine, each is helped and comforted. * * * * * Life and child life have both been blessed by the example of that Nazareth home and the boy that grew under its tender care. * * * * * It is the privilege of every disciple, like the Baptist, to prepare the way for the coming of the Kingdom into some soul. * * * * * Jesus showed Himself to be the brother-man of all races by selecting men from the varied world of life to be near Him. * * * * * Through the inspiration of Jesus, the healing-art has been applied its ministry by the building of dispensaries and hospitals in every part of the world. * * * * * Jesus' attitude toward the sinner in His day, reveals the heart of God toward the transgressor, and should reveal to every Christian man his obligation to other transgressors.

LESSON 1—APRIL 7.

THE APPEARANCE OF THE RISEN LORD.

Text—1 Cor. 13:1-11. Golden Text—Acts 1:2-32.

With religion and patriotism are kept aglow the memory of epoch-forming events of history. With France the fall of the Bastille, with us the signing of the Declaration of Independence, have fixed great days which fill the heart with national pride. With the Christian every first day of the week, and especially the day that best represents the anniversary of the resurrection of our Lord, have enkindled and given the heart new anchorage. In the bearing of this great truth upon the whole religious problem, it is fitting that we turn aside from the earlier events in Christ's ministry, to study this most splendid achievement, the victory over the grave. In this greater miracle in mind, we will be better prepared to give due credence to the marvels of His three years' ministry. For, if He arose from the dead, there can be no doubt He accomplished all the lesser miracles of the Gospel.

The Back-Bone of the Gospel. When Phillips Brooks was asked what subject he would use in preaching before Queen Victoria, he replied, "I have only one sermon." Paul has practically made the same confession. "I declare unto you the gospel which I preached. I have only one sermon,—the death, burial and resurrection of Christ." Wrapped up in the meaning emanating from these events is the Gospel of "good news." Everything we hold sacred rests upon them. "Declared to be the Son of God with power, by his resurrection from the dead." While this declaration stands, the Christian's faith is secure. If you can disprove the resurrection of Jesus, the whole Christian system crumbles into ruin. It seems strange that men get alarmed at some puny attack on the outer fortifications of Christian belief, while the great citadel of faith remains unshaken.

Why Christ Died. There have been many theories of the atonement. To the mind of the average layman, they are for the most part meaningless, some of them positively repulsive. It is refreshing to turn from the beleaguered theories of modern thinkers, to the plain statement of Paul, "That Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." As Peter puts it, "Who his own self, bare our sins in his body on the tree, that we might die unto sin, might live unto righteousness." Who can not find in these great utterances, a sufficient cause for an unwavering loyalty to Jesus Christ. Enough for us, that He loved the world with an undying love, that He did not shrink from the cross. Enough for us, that out of that tragic hour came the world's deliverance. Enough, that the shedding of His blood, became a life-giving stream, flowing through the centuries. So that as I can sit with my brethren around the table of my Lord, and partaking of the elements that represent His sacrifice, be able to say, "He died for me," I am satisfied. The heart craves no greater assurance of God's personal love.

The Certainty of the Resurrection. From the very first, the fact of the resurrection has been looked upon, by friends and foe alike, as determining the claims of the Gospel. Paul frankly admits it. "If Christ hath not been raised," he says, "then is our preaching vain, and your faith also vain." No wonder the infidel has sought to justify his attitude by an attack upon this citadel of faith, and denying the resurrection, to say,

"For hence he lies in a lone Syrian town,
While on his grave, with shining eyes,
The Syrian stars look down."

What is the situation? On the side of infidelity not a single witness has been produced, save the soldiers who guarded the tomb in which Jesus was buried. And since they declared that His body was stolen by His disciples while they were asleep, their testimony would not stand in any modern court. On the other hand, the New Testament presents an array of testimony from eye witnesses. Jesus is reported to have been seen on eleven separate occasions, after His resurrection. The disciples met Him singly and in groups, at one time as many as five hundred enjoying His company. The fact that these witnesses so thoroughly believed their testimony, that they surrendered life rather than renounce it, is an important element. But leaving out testimony of those who companied with Him during forty days, Paul had an experience of his own that swung him from the ranks of unbelief to faith. "I have seen him myself. As one born out of due time, he appeared unto me also." Before the testimony of these men, borne out through all the centuries, the strongest minds have yielded implicit faith, and have joined with Paul in the declaration, "Now, is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."

The Effect on Individual Character. The best argument of the resurrection after all is not the testimony of the witnesses, but its effect on the witnesses. How belief in the resurrection changed those men's lives. Before the resurrection, they were self-seeking, distrustful, unstable. At His arrest all forsook Him. At the trial Peter denied Him. But after the resurrection, they boldly championed His cause with an abandon that was the marvel of their enemies, and that was able to win to their standard 3,000 in a single day. But the change wrought in those disciples, was less wonderful than that which followed the changed faith of Paul. He never could forget the old life, bitter in its opposition to the gospel of Christ, cruel in its treatment of those humble disciples, zealous in his ambition to destroy the church. "I am the least of the apostles," he wrote. "I don't deserve the title, because I persecuted the church of God." But out of the bitter anguish that followed the Damascus vision, as pure gold from the refiner's fire, Paul was transformed in life and purpose, patiently enduring what he had once inflicted, fearlessly pushing out the boundaries of Christian influence, and saying "By the grace of God, I am what I am." The resurrection did it. It made Saul of Tarsus into the apostle to the Gentiles. It has lost none of its power upon the human heart. It is still helping men to rise and walk in newness of life. The selfish seeker becomes a servant, the drunkard an example of sobriety, the sinner a saint.

The Effect on Human History. Today, as never before, two civilizations are being measured. One has caught its inspiration from the resurrection morn. It has been shot through and through with the ideals of Calvary. We call it Christian Civilization. The other has been dominated by non-Christian faiths. These faiths, whether that of Confucius Buddha, or Mahomet, have had one effect in common. They have dwarfed and blighted and hindered human progress. They have left the masses in ignorance, the women in slavery, the world in darkness. Such is pagan civilization. Today the civilization, whose strength and purpose has resulted from influence of the risen Christ, is proving that it must dominate the world. Already the van of the missionary army has penetrated every land. Already the results of their labors are proving that what Christianity has done for the Orient it will in time do for the Orient.

Arrow Points. There is a sermon in the Easter lily that should point every man to a clean, white life. * * * * If God's love pressed in a dying Savior, cannot touch and soften your heart, it is incurably hardened. * * * * What a dark, cheerless, lonely world this would be if you took out of it a risen Christ. * * * * No event of history is better attested than the resurrection. There are the testimony of witnesses, the monument of the Lord's day, and almost nineteen centuries of Christian triumph. * * * * The best argument for the resurrection and the most difficult to answer, after all, is the risen life. * * * The resurrection is not only the crowning proof that Jesus is the Son of God, but also proof of immortal life beyond the grave.

The Bible or Christian Men, Which?

Last month we tried the experiment of omitting the text from the Bible School Lessons and published only the comment, on the theory that a Bible School should be a Bible School, and a Bible Class should be a Bible Class and not a CHRISTIAN MEN Class. We have no hesitancy in saying that this was purely an experiment, but we believe that a Bible School should be a Bible School in fact and that the Book itself should be the authority for the text of the lesson. Thus far we have only received two communications from throughout our entire list of subscribers complaining in regard to the omission of the text. We can print the text if it is advisable, but it takes up space needed for other matter which is crowding for attention. We would much prefer not to publish the text if our subscribers would be satisfied to refer to the Book instead of CHRISTIAN MEN for the text itself. Unless there is decided objection we will continue to omit the text, and we are told by the Bible School leaders of the country that we have taken a long step in the right direction. Are you with us in this progressive enterprise?

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, APRIL, 1912

APRIL SHOWERS

We have passed the quarter pole, and are in the second quarter of 1912. March is a mean month, so the preachers are scattered throughout the Nation. Snows and rains were the order from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. Kansas, Colorado, Missouri and Oklahoma, much of the East struggled under a blanket most of the month. Traffic of all kinds was demoralized. The Church Offering for Foreign Missions was largely postponed by many congregations, until better weather prevailed. But the church has lost in attendance during March, the moisture hoarded by the Almighty in Kansas and Nebraska promises to be worth millions to the frontier, so we must rejoice and turn our face toward the future. April is the Easter month when we remember the widow and the orphan, the aged and the afflicted. The women of our C. W. B. M. have their self-denial week of prayer, and our Brotherhood Chapters also have been asked to observe the week fittingly. Then there is Conservation Sunday, April 28th. This day is written high on our calendar for 1912. It is the Men's and Boys' Day in Churches of Christ throughout the land. The Directors of the General Brotherhood have asked our churches to observe the day with meetings for men and boys. The responses received at this writing are most gratifying. Hundreds of churches have replied that they will observe the day, and requested literature to assist them. Thousands of copies of the Conservation Day program printed elsewhere in this issue have been sent to our ministers and officers of Brotherhood Chapters. Thousands of men and boys will be gathered together throughout all the Protestant churches of the land, for the day is to be universally observed by all churches of the various communions.

March was a good month with the Brotherhood movement. We circulated more literature, and sent out more communications from the general office than in any previous month in the history of the general movement. With the close of March, Mr. Shellenberger leaves the work of Field Secretary, and the writer confesses to a feeling of loneliness. Prior to last July there were three secretaries, then there were two, and now there is only one National Secretary. This does not mean that the work is to be curtailed—far from it. Each day sees more accomplished in the general movement than the previous day. This has always been so. It simply means concentration of effort. The National Secretary may write more, but shorter letters. Work in the field will be cared for through volunteer Field Secretaries, and officers and directors of the National Movement, and laymen in the various states, for be it said to our credit, we have some powerful men in the pew who may be used with profit in the propagation of this movement. And then we have Secretaries of other National and State Societies who yearn to see the men of our various congregations at work in the church. Activity among the men means progress all along the line. No branch of our work but will receive a decided impetus when the men are aroused. Even the C. W. B. M. officers say this is so, for where the men are busy the women have more time to devote to their chosen work, and this is as it should be.

There will be a Great Christian Conservation Congress in New York City during April, the dates, 19th to 24th, the place, Carnegie Hall. Our Headquarters will be established at the Hotel where we want to see hundreds of pastors with their interested men in attendance at the Congress. This promises to be the Edinburgh of America that week. The Editor of this magazine expects to be in attendance during the entire week. We will journey to the metropolis by easy stages, with Prof. W. C. Payne, of the C. W. B. M. Chair, of Lawrence, Kansas, as traveling companion, stopping enroute at Indianapolis and Cincinnati for conference, thence to Washington, D. C., where we will meet by appointment, Champ Clark, Speaker of the National Congress, take in the sights of the Nation's Capitol, and catch a glimpse of President Taft, if he is at home. We will hold "Team Rallies" at Hagerstown and Baltimore on the going trip, Norfolk, Pittsburg, Washington, and Bethany College on the back trip. The dates of these meetings appear elsewhere in this issue.

This is the Home Mission Number of CHRISTIAN MEN. We consider it an honor to unveil to your gaze the countenance of our Missionary in New York, Jos. Keevil. The article about him by Geo. W. Kramer, the church builder, who has designed some of our choicest church buildings, is a man of the City Mission Committee, who does justice to both man and work. The article by Mr. Keevil himself is worth wide reading. Secretary Raum, of Montana, presents the work of the frontiers, while McCash, Muckley and Hadd add spice to the solid food of the work. The work of the American Society has never received the consideration of the people that it merits, nor as much shown by other communions to Home work. The work needs more publicity, must have it or our already limited forces will be materially curtailed.

stead and go right along. You may lose a man or two, and a year or two in the operation, but a group of men that mean business cannot be held back by an inefficient or inactive leader. Suggest, plead, coax, help pull, guide, direct,
everything you possibly can do for him, do it, and if he still lies dormant, cut the rope and forget about it.

Speak Up, Brethren

How can CHRISTIAN MEN Magazine best serve the cause of Christ among men? What sort of articles are the most appealing? What faults, failures, sins, and short-comings are apparent to our readers? We would like to have you answer these matters by making your criticism constructive rather than destructive. We have the greatest desire to make CHRISTIAN MEN be to the men of our churches just what it ought to be—no more and no less. We can do this better if we know when we are deviating from the path of merit.

We have in the past asked for opinions in regard to various matters and the same have been freely supplied by our kind and ever-increasing constituency. We hope that the response to this appeal will be fully as cordial.

Brethren, let us hear from you and give us the privilege of making public use of some of the things you say.

WHEREAS, The Board of Directors, after mature consideration, accepted such resignation, the same being in conformity with Mr. Shellenberger's wishes in the matter, be it

RESOLVED, By the Executive Board of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, that we express to Mr. Shellenberger our sincere confidence in his sterling character and Christian manhood, and commend him, without reservation, for his untiring labors during the two years and four months of his connection with this organization. Be it

RESOLVED FURTHER, That in accepting his resignation the Board desires to commend him to the Churches of Christ at large as a minister of ability and as a man worthy of all confidence. Be it

The Doubling Process

The circulation of CHRISTIAN MEN magazine has kept up wonderfully well, in spite of the fact that we have no agents, and rely altogether on our friends in securing new subscribers, and upon the loyalty of our old subscribers in promptly renewing, but CHRISTIAN MEN magazine is altogether too valuable a medium of circulation to be limited to 2000 readers. If the suggestion herein offered is followed, our circulation ought to double or treble within the next few months.

We are suggesting to the presidents and secretaries of our Brotherhoods, Men's Bible Classes, Leagues and Churches, that they "pair off" for subscription campaigns. This will be found to be one of the most enjoyable stunts you could tackle. You could make no better investment of time for the advancement of work among men in your community than you are preparing for a membership campaign, a building campaign, or a fundraising campaign, or revival campaign. CHRISTIAN MEN's subscription campaign will do much toward advancing the work of others. This "pair off" idea is as old as Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. In the Gospels we read that men went out "two by two." There is need for more of this supplementary work in every sort of an undertaking. One man may help another, and as he helps he will discover new powers. He will get a new bracing of his purpose. Men do not live too much to themselves. It is not an outworn plan for one Brotherhood or class group to visit another on special occasions, and in this fellowship of men and churches more than doubled their powers. It stimulates them to do their best, and it is done with zest and enthusiasm. Will you not strike hands with us in placing CHRISTIAN MEN in the hands of every man among us who is in any wise identified with the Church? The low club rates we are making, and the exceptional quality of the material we are publishing ought to commend itself at once as a good business proposition.

Volunteer Field Secretaries

Volunteers for Field Work in putting to work at a worthwhile task are giving themselves to the Brotherhood Movement. One of our most efficient workers recently offered his services, willing to pay his own traveling expenses to go into a number of churches at any cost to either the Brotherhood Movement or the local congregation. We communicated with several of the churches that do not have any organized men's work. One church accepted the proposition and the result was a Brotherhood Chapter of promise. Another pastor responded too late to secure it, while the remaining offers were pending.

In writing of the matter, the volunteer says: "The trouble with getting work on foot is the indifference of preachers." We have known this for a long time, but have not dared to do it for fear of offending.

Whether intentional or not, our ministers are not giving this work among men the sympathetic coöperation that we believe they should receive. We are not coming — God forbid. We receive with letters of sympathy daily to counterbalance these discouraging features. The Movement expects some influence, but our churches themselves and the ministers in particular cannot afford to be indifferent to this tremendously promising movement.

Is the Local Church Making Good?

The Church really stands or falls on purely local tests. It may cherish visions of big, world-wide things, but if it is heedless before the call of local needs and has no vital connection locally, men properly scorn her pretexts of service to the larger world. We cannot send efficiently our gospel to Samaria if we ignore the local situation in Jerusalem. A church of five hundred members had a fine foreign missionary spirit owing to the aggressive leadership of two or three noble men and women. But the carpets in the local church were unpresentable, the hymn books slid from their covers when picked up, dilatory payments of the pastor's salary made him blue and spoiled his credit, a local social effort for boys and men was allowed to fail, and other signs of indifference robbed the larger work of this church of sweet odor. Not one whit less of the larger program, of course, but surely a more vital influence in the community is needed if consistency and Christ's new program are considered. No outside man can specify the details of another man's local program, but intelligent Christian men in this great day of social Christianity need not be told how to make some kind of vital connection of the local church on social lines with its community.

The Problem of America

BY I. N. MCCASH, SECRETARY AMERICAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

I. N. McCASH

Self-preservation is the first law of life. Instinct and memory in dumb animals prevent them from eating poisonous herbs or frequenting places of danger. They have no reason to guide them as to consequences of action, beyond what their natural senses reveal and warn. The life of the individual human partakes of a wider range of attack and more subtle approaches of danger to life. Groups of human beings, when put into their largest aggregation, known as national life, are subject to the same law. Our forefathers, in Revolutionary times, declared not only the right to establish a nation, but to defend it against all enemies which seek to subvert the principles for which the nation stands, or destroy it by assaults. Self-preservation of the United States is its first obligation. To let free government, religious liberty and a Protestant nation perish from the earth, is to be unfaithful to this greatest trust bequeathed to us and our children. That law has been operative against every enemy engaging with us in the six wars of American history. Our patriotism has quickly responded to every appeal for protection against armed foes. Our military history, because of such ardent patriotism is glorious and unparalleled.

NATIONAL PRINCIPLES

NATIONAL DANGERS

The nation having advanced in age, physical, social, commercial and diplomatic, has dangers which, in the approach, are subtle and deadly. Lurking agencies of destruction, sex parasites, to fasten themselves upon national vitals, fatten upon the life and strength of the Republic. Memory of struggles other peoples have had for their national existence, warns citizens of the United States against similar experiences. Observations of tendencies of the times, practices now in vogue and intelligent forecasts of the future based upon known truths and principles all bring one conclusion:—that the nation's life is in jeopardy. It is the duty of every lover of his native land, to preserve it.

NEGLECTED FIELDS

A Survey of Neglected Fields, by representatives of twenty-one Home Mission Boards, uncovered the religious needs of those states and discovered American Protestantism, armed and equipped against dangerous dangers in our national life. Days of consultation in thirteen states of the Northwest brought together representative mission workers in each, who from observation and experience, presented conditions morally and spiritually destructive of our government. The need of information, concerning the religious states, by the National Board and state workers, themselves, in the field, as related to unvisited parts of the commonwealths, called for application of the inductive and scientific methods of home missions. What influences that vitiate and destroy the purity of our life are jeopardizing the whole life.

UNCHRISTIAN LUMBER CAMPS

Lumber camps in the timber states have about 317,000 men employed in groups from fifty to three hundred each. These men are in the woods nearly nine months of the year without Gospel privileges, or any uplifting social influence. The great forests of the Northwest need a mounted ministry to visit the woodmen, whose camps are moved as millable timber is exhausted. Mining camps, with conditions a little more favorable, because of permanency, are equally destitute of religious advantages. The states like Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas and parts of Montana, which cannot point to snow-capped mountains, pearly lakes or forest reserves that characterize other states, have their religious problems with equal complexity. Eighty per cent of the Dakotans reside on the soil. Through that

EMPTY COUNTRY PULPITS

vast agricultural region, governed by those states,
the rural neglect of the church seems almost complete. Even in Kansas one-fifth of the churches are out in the country, and few of them are efficient, according to standards which have been set by competent pastors. The rural districts, many of them supporting a dense population, have country churches once prosperous. The early settlers, who built these, moved to other parts and left them. New-comers were often of faiths at variance with the builders of the church, and ministers were left without support. The location of towns along railroads drew churches to them, and

UNCHURCHED PLAINS

left large areas of land, twenty and fifty miles from trading places, without houses of worship. As an illustration: Within twenty-five miles of Omaha is a tract of land one hundred miles in extent each way, quite thickly populated, without any organized church work, except where a Sunday-School missionary recently planted one church in a town of that region.

Great irrigation territory, and farming regions on the plains have an increasing population, where men and women have grown from childhood without having reasonable opportunity to hear preaching of the Gospel. The vast rural regions of America are without sufficient and efficient Gospel ministrations.

OUR CITY PROBLEM

Our cities, with their heterogeneous mass of humanity, with their Babel of dialects and languages, are fostering enemies of national longevity in municipal grafts, political chicanery, debauching liquor traffic, white-slave corruption and low standards of morals. According to authorities, exhibits of vice and forms of sin are shown in some American cities, unknown in pagan lands. These are components of a dark picture. They are, however, true to facts, to be substantiated by indubitable proofs. The Church of Christ must face these conditions. Christian men of America are called with a clarion call, not to take up arms against an army mobilized on our borders, but to save the nation from moral decay and spiritual ruin. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is salt to the putrefying morals of our body politic. Christ is the light which not only dispels darkness, in which pestilence walks and breeds, but like sunshine gives color to flowers of virtue, and ripens the fruits of righteousness.

IS THE CHURCH PROGRESSING?

The church has made wonderful progress. It has been thrust into conditions on the American continent, which would overthrow any other agency not divine. The world's history fails to show a test of religion so severe and a situation with such a variety of nationalities, and constantly changing population, as the Church of our Lord in the United States. Yet the church has more than held its own. While the population of the United States has increased 47 per cent in the past twenty years, the church has increased 71 per cent in the same period. Christianity divided, is weakened in the presence of united forces of evil. But there is a growing coöperation and increasing unity among believers in Christ. The power of Christianity now exercises influences over all departments of government. Congress, with the Legislatures of states, is mightily influenced for good by Christian sentiment produced by the church. The National Judiciary together with lower courts of commonwealths, recognizes the church and the principles of our Christian religion as fundamental in the interpretation of law and as a preserving force in our country. The Executive Department of the nation, together with those of states, feels pressure of Christian sentiment that enforces law, protects the weak and gives assurance of national safety.

Home Missions are the alignment of Christian forces for the self-preservation of our country. No duty is so sacred and urgent to true Americans as this in this cause. No gift so far-reaching as that of contributors to American Missions. No need, in city, rural communities, mining and lumber camps among Oriental and foreigners, for the negro, in the growing South, in the East, in the industrial North, in the West, in all parts of America is so real as at this critical period of our national life. A million dollars for American Missions, to be raised by the opening of the Panama Canal, is reasonable, urgent and imperative. Shall we have it? Are you impressed with the above facts demonstrating the need of more money?

The Relation of Church Extension and Home Missions

G. W. MUCKLEY, SECRETARY BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

G. W. MUCKLEY

In the progress of Christianity new species have arisen from time to time carry forward its work. While the goal is the same and the terms of operation never change, yet the Gospel did not come with fore-ordained method. It came rather as a vital force with freedom to unfold its energy in whatever way external conditions of growth might demand.

THE DEVELOPMENT AND GROWTH OF THE CHURCH GIVES ABUNDANT EVIDENCE OF THE ABOVE FACT. Several hundred years elapsed before Christianity became a hospital. Since then the founding of charitable institutions has been a prominent feature of the church's work.

INSTITUTIONS Inherent in Christianity was the intellectual impulse but this did not at once shape itself into educational institutions, but it is now considered the primary duty of the church to have its own educational institutions. The church which stands for and fosters education has the surest and brightest future.

THE PRINTING PRESS

No sooner was printing invented than the church laid hold on this mighty means for the propagation of its sacred and vital truths. Religious newspapers and publishing houses are the result.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Then came the rapid progress of civilization which made necessary the Missionary Societies at home and abroad. The Word of Life must go to the pagan and the Foreign Society came into existence. The homeland on its frontier needed the gospel and our Home Society was the result. This is simply the application of the principle of division of labor to the work of the church.

HOME MISSIONS FIRST

In the evolution of our Missionary Enterprises it was reasonable to expect that we would first coöperate in sending out evangelists to preach the Gospel and organize churches. The Home Missionary is the pioneer. He blazes the way. He is the scout. He is on picket duty. He is on the firing line. If his work is not done well the new church will not be established. After the voice of the pioneer preacher is heard in this new land, the sound of the mason's trowel, the whistling of the plane and the steady noise of the carpenter's hammer must be heard in the erection of the church building. Unless the work of the Missionary is well done there will be no need of the church building. Without the work of the Home Board there would be no need of the Church Extension Board. But, because of the many new organizations created by our Home Board, we must have the Board of Church Extension as the constant builder of fortifications under whose cover the battles of the King may be fought.

Again, suppose an army of conquest should move upon a strategic center of population, capture it and then move on to the next city, leaving the last unprotected and uncared for. The enemy in the meantime, seeing this, recaptures the city just taken by the army of conquest. Has anything been gained? On the contrary men have been sacrificed and money spent uselessly. The Home Board is on a mission of conquest. When it captures a town the Board of Church Extension helps the preacher to hold it by helping him to a modern work-shop—a new and up to date building. In a forward movement everything that has been captured must be held. The fact is that the Home Board and State Boards will not arrange to enter a difficult field unless they first have the assurance of help from the Church Extension Board. How glorious and business-like is this coöperation and fellowship!

WHAT A PIONEER SAID

The earnest and beloved DeWitt of Tulare City, California, whose obituary appeared in our church papers, spent twenty-eight years in evangelistic work in the West. He used to say that he could go into a community and easily enlist three or four times as many as could denominational evangelists, but that fully seventy-five per cent of his work was lost to our people because he could not assist the converts in providing themselves a house in which to meet. The church-building contributes to the permanency of the work of the evangelist. The building the bulwark holds the territory taken by soldiers of the cross. A man familiar with our work in the West says that if Church Extension had been pushed twenty-five years ago as it is today, we would now be fifty per cent stronger than we are. It is to house homeless Disciples of the Lord.

THE CASE OF OKLAHOMA

By this coöperation we get on the field with our Christian Union Plea. Today we are first in influence and in church property in Oklahoma because the Home Board and Church Extension Board worked together when different sections of the state were opened up. We got suitable building lots at small cost. It would have compelled us to pay as much for the lot alone as both lot and building cost us. This is good sense as well as good business. As a result there have been over 240 churches helped in Oklahoma in the nick of time that are now influential in their communities. And, what we did in Oklahoma has been done in more than 50 cases in the mission fields of the United States and Canada.

STRENGTHENING THE BASE

We must strengthen the base of support. The one great purpose of every soul in harmony with the Savior is to carry the Gospel to the very ends of the earth. Every ecclesiastical institution within our Brotherhood; every missionary organization whatever its name and immediate end every church enterprise of every kind must subserve this one purpose of the world's evangelization. But if we meet the enemy at home and abroad, hold the territory that is already finally ours, we must take care of base of supplies at home and strengthen the local churches in our field. More than this, we must increase their number in the yet unopened territory of the United States. A well established local church must be the source of supply to all our aggressive work in the foreign field.

The Pope's other self, Satoli, while speaking to their Congress some years ago in Chicago, laid special emphasis on the thought that America is the key to the future. Books like "Our Country" and "The New Era" show conclusively that the progress of Christ's Kingdom throughout the world depends upon the work done here.

The offering of our churches in May to the American Society should be such as the work we have laid upon that Board demands. Let us educate and prepare ourselves intelligently for a great task. Let all give. Let all give cheerfully. Let all give cheerfully according to their ability and God will give the increase.

Brotherhood Volunteers

The publishers of the Christian Evangelist very graciously opened the pages of that sterling paper to the Brotherhood Movement and accorded us a SPECIAL EDITION in their issue of March 7th for the purpose of reporting results of BROTHERHOOD VOLUNTEER DAY, Sunday, January 15th. Sixty-one Volunteers for the Ministry and Mission Field were then reported. We have since received reports of upwards of a score of others, whose names and faces will be added to the growing list of Volunteers enlisting in the cause of the Christian Ministry through the efforts of this Movement.

The attention of our Schools and Colleges is called to these Volunteers, and already some of them are started on their course of study in several of our Educational Institutions.

Copies of the SPECIAL EDITION of the Christian Evangelist will be sent to those interested upon application to this office.

The Work of Joseph Keevil

BY GEORGE W. KRAMER, CHAIRMAN NEW YORK CITY MISSIONS COMMITTEE.

GEORGE W. KRAMER

In 1908 the American Christian Missionary Society, in coöperation with the Disciples' Missionary Union of New York City, enlarged their work in this city, combining their regular mission work with institutional work and work among foreigners. In 1909 Joseph Keevil took charge of all work undertaken by the A. C. M. S. and the D. M. U., and stands today as the sole representative, supported by the City Mission Committee, facing these conditions, and as such deserves the support of every member of our Brotherhood.

KEEVIL, THE MAN

Joseph Keevil is the third son of Rev. Joseph and Mary Keevil, born in Wiltshire, England, August 22, 1872. The father, an itinerant Methodist preacher, his wife and seven children migrated to this country in 1885, settling in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn. Soon after arrival Joseph, Jr., learned the carpenter's trade, continuing at it until leaving for college in 1890.

THE TURN IN THE LANE

In February, 1888, he joined the Methodist church. Studying the Discipline in connection with the new testament, he soon found himself out of sympathy with the doctrine and system of the M. E. church. At this time he was brought in touch with the Christian Mission, then meeting in a store on Manhattan avenue (this mission is now the Humboldt Street Church), and shortly became secretary of the Bible School. Being thus brought in contact with the teaching of the Disciples of Christ he found himself in perfect accord and agreement, and in the fall of the same year was immersed by Dr. W. A. Belting.

He was active in the work, assisting in the various public meetings, and finally decided to devote his life to the ministry.

He took advantage of every opportunity in day and evening schools, improving his education and preparing for college. Influenced by his pastor, I. S. Edwards, he entered the College of the Bible, Lexington, Ky., February, 1900.

HIS EARLY WORK During his college work he started and conducted a mission in South Lexington, now the South Side Christian Church. After graduation he located with churches in Northern Kentucky and in 1899 went to Canada for the A. C. M. S., establishing the church in Portage, Ont. After three years he came to New York State, locating at Glensville.

In November, 1903, he came to his home church on Humboldt street in Brooklyn, to succeed his brother, J. L.—now of Knoxville, Tenn. He was the church, then incorporated as the Second Church of Christ in Brooklyn, having a membership of 180, with their buildings on Humboldt street.

JOB Brother Keevil remained as pastor of church until February, 1912, when he was appointed as Superintendent of Institutional Work and Missions—to which he was appointed in November, 1909—increased as to take all of his time, previously combined this work with the pastorate.

He has six churches and one mission which constituted the original Union. It has grown in three years to six churches, five missions, an institutional mission among the Russians and he gives classes four nights of the week, teaching the English language and giving an citizenship to the foreigners.

QUESTIONS? Brother Keevil is an indefatigable worker.

While others enjoy their leisure, he is always on the job, during summer months conducting open air meetings in his ward, first began in connection with other churches, and by the Humboldt Street Church.

Every summer he aided the Russian mission in open air meetings among the foreigners on the East Side, Manhattan. In the Greenpoint section—the Seventh Ward of Brooklyn—his home faces a peculiar condition. This ward, with a population of 80,000, a manufacturing center, has over 70 per cent of foreigners, mostly Poles, Hungarians and other Slavic races; over 50 per cent speaking foreign languages only and those from the Hebrews are largely Polish.

These churches are yielding to this influx of the foreigners and today in this district five Protestant churches are crowded with the membership being “crowded

THE DISAPPEARING CHURCH

Brother Keevil is making a heroic effort to save the situation for the “disappearing” church by converting the church into a “community house,” and doing institutional and educational work among foreigners.

With limited accommodations and money, success has demonstrated the wisdom of the change. Our church and Bible school are today stronger than ever—while others are abandoning the field. The institutional work has met an enthusiastic response.

The church is now the property of the D. M. U. as representing the A. C. M. S., thus making the work national.

An adequate building contemplated will cost $50,000. A portion costing $20,000 will probably be erected this season.

A NATIONAL
WORK This heroic work is for the Brotherhood at large and for the cause, and can only be done by those on the ground. It should be well and enthusiastically supported.

The same problem exists on the great East Side in Manhattan. In a rented basement room of a church on the East Side—the Olivet Memorial—the Russian Christian Church meets for two services and a Bible school each Lord's day and evening mid-week. On four evenings English classes are conducted, the English language and the principles of American citizenship being taught. On Saturday evenings the rooms are frequently crowded with an eager throng to attend a stereopticon, illustrated, temperance or other moral and instructive lecture. On Sunday afternoons the Russian missionary and some of the brethren hold religious services in a restaurant.

There are over 150,000 Russians on the East Side, most of whom are within a mile of this church, yet this is practically the only mission work being done among Russians by any Christian people. Many of these people fled from intolerable conditions at home, holding the Greek Church largely responsible for them. Some were connected with a great Christian body in Russia—estimated over a million—who are practically one with the Disciples of Christ in this country in teaching, ordinances and faith.

BUILDINGS NEEDED

The greatest success would crown our efforts in this great work, were it properly housed in our own buildings. In consequence, we are advocating, strenuously, the securing of a proper building in an advantageous locality as a Community House, in which every diverse branch of this work might be conducted.

Such a building will cost $100,000. A much less sum will secure a beginning.

TANGIBLE RESULTS

Two years ago, one Tengerhan Dadianoff was converted at this East Side

Russian Mission, became an Elder and later returned to Russia, opened a mission in Vladikavkas, a city of 5,000. That church now has a membership of immersed believers, and weekly congregations of from 100 to 200.

Russia is opposed to proselytizing mission work by foreigners. However, this brother secured a permit from the Prime Minister, purchased a site and now endeavoring to secure funds for building. As no adequate buildings can be found, they meet in homes. The houses are small and the people poor.

THE GATES AJAR

Thus a way to open missions in Russia is that diplomacy could be secure. It is a fact, that the most effective work in European fields is the result of the work of the returned missionaries converted and fitted for the work in America, who can present the plea to their countrymen and win their confidence no one else can.

Children's Number Next

The Brotherhood Movement insists that the Man be responsible for the Boy. The law makes the parent responsible for the child. The May issue of Christian Men will devote itself largely to the subject of Children and their relation to the Home, School, and Church. An interesting treatise on the "Children's Congregation" will capture your attention. A. McLean will tell of the origin of Children's Day for Foreign Missions. Mrs. A. C. Smither will have a PLAIN TALK WITH PARENTS, while R. P. Shepherd will speak on "Conservation vs. Conversion of the Child." You will be interested in the next number of Christian Men, because it will deal with one of the most vital subjects with which the Church and civilization at large is concerned.

Taking the Northwest For Christ

BY J. S. RAUM, SECRETARY MONTANA CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

J. S. RAUM

N-O-R-T-H-W-E-S-T spells opportunity. Opportunity for the farmer, professional man, and in fact any man who has the courage to go to a new and developing country and grow up with it. Here are thousands of acres of virgin soil waiting for the homesteader and other thousands of homes for sale at nominal cost, sure to increase in value as the country develops. Eastern people are just beginning to realize some of the splendid opportunities for investment that are to be had here, and as a result the development of this country is going forward leaps and bounds. All the Northwest States without exception increase rapidly in population the last decade and the census of 1920 will show a greater percentage of increase. Montana will double her population and with the opening of the Panama Canal and the Coast States, such as Oregon and Washington, will develop with unusual rapidity.

And while this rapid development of this wonderful country will mean much to the merchant, lawyer, doctor and farmer, it ought to mean even more to the Church of Christ. For if the Northwest spells opportunity for him who is interested in the material development of the land, it also presents a wonderful opportunity to him who is interested in the moral and spiritual welfare of the people. For instance, here are three great counties in Montana, Custer, Dawson and Rosebud, whose combined area is equal to that of the State of Ohio, and yet, in this vast territory there are a few more than a score of churches of all faiths combined. And in all this territory there is only one church pleading for the restoration of Primitive Christianity. A brother preacher recently covered 319 miles of this territory in the three counties named and reports families on nearly every section of this land. These people have very little money and are going to see hardships and struggles for several years before getting on their feet financially. They are not in position to pay much now for the preaching of the gospel, and it may be several years before some of these communities will be strong enough to support, unaided, a resident minister. Therefore the church at large through the A. C. M.

A. C. M. S. TO THE RESCUE

S. and the Church Extension Board must come to their aid. A minister who has not made good elsewhere will not succeed in these places, for the conditions demand men of tact, ability and spirituality. Men who can build their own homes with their own hands after they get on the field; men who will purchase with their salaries a team and buggy to cover the many miles of their parish and thank God for the privilege of being empire builders.

The country stretching from Missoula to Flathead Lake and west to the Idaho line is rich in resources, inviting to the homeseeker and must be churched and equipped for Christ. Less than fifty ministers of all faiths are looking after the spiritual welfare of the people from the North Dakota boundary to the Idaho state line along the Great Northern Railroad and the average width of their parishes is more than one hundred miles, and in length equal the distance from New York City to Indianapolis. In all this stretch of territory there are only two churches pleading for New Testament Christianity. To this particular section of Montana that the people have been streaming the last two years several cities of a thousand and more souls have sprung up. Because of lack of funds, the simple gospel has never been heard in these growing towns and cities, and when townsite companies offered us lots on choice corners if we would come in and build within a certain length of time we had to thank them, but lose our opportunity, for we had no way to finance the projects if undertaken. The Brotherhood at large will pay dearly in the years to come, in money and men, for neglecting these opportunities.

OUR RELIGIOUS NEIGHBORS

Our religious neighbors realize the value of present opportunities in the Northwest better than we do. One denomination is spending $25,000 in Montana alone this year. I have before me a copy of another denominational paper which states that last year their denomination spent $14,000 of Home Missionary money in Montana and this year will receive $17,000.

HOW MONEY TALKS

Last year the A. C. M. S. spent $800 in Montana and the C. W. B. M. a similar amount.

Sometimes I think we accomplished much permanent good with our lot as our religious neighbors did with thousands, for the Northwest is all soil for the New Testament Plea. In the long run money will win the day and this great country which today to be had for the taking will go over to denominationalism. While I have mentioned Montana specifically because I am in touch with conditions and know the facts, yet this same condition prevails in all the Northwestern states, Idaho, Washington and Oregon, as well as Montana, must be won for the Kingdom in the next ten years or the regional supremacy will be surrendered to denominational brethren. Two generations ago our fathers sinned away the day of grace in the New England area. Let us not make the same mistake and sin away our opportunity in this great, developing Northwest.

SECTIONALISM? NO!

When a man pleads for a particular section of the country some will accuse him of sectionalism. I am willing to incur that risk if in any way I can impress upon the Brotherhood the greatness and the value of the present opportunity in the Northwest. From July 1, 1910, to January 1, 1911, fourteen churches were organized and manned in Montana. This number might have been doubled had the money been available. The same conditions face every state in the Northwest. The great need here is money and men. The offerings for Home Missions must be increased before the appropriations for the Northwestern States can be increased. We are all praying that the day will speedily come when the wealth of the Brotherhood will pour into the coffers of the A. C. M. S. While we wait for increased offerings, a vast, rich ing from our grasp. Is there of bringing the opportunity of the great Northwest and the missionary budget of the Brotherhood together a period of five years? Ten dollars a year for five years in each of the Northwestern States make this country ours and no one ever be able to take it away from out your "living links" in Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon or Oregon. In the Northwest the increase of missionary funds will produce results today and furnish a source of missionary supplies for tomorrow as well. In a few short years, the great Northwest, rich in resources and wealth, splendid in material prosperity and moral attainment, churched and equipped for Christ and the propagation of the New Testament Plea, will turn in to the coffers of the A. C. M. S., the F. C. M. S., the Church Extension Board, the C. W. B. M., et al., hundreds of dollars for every one received and in turn help save the East and South and North until all America and the whole world shall have heard the plea and the prayer of our Lord is answered.

A Most Important Day

Sunday, April 28th, is CONSERVATION DAY FOR MEN AND BOYS throughout America. Every Church, large and small, city and country, is asked to fittingly observe the day.
 "I have few men in my church," writes one minister, "and do not believe enough interest can be worked up to make the day successful." We sympathize with this brother. He is not alone, for hundreds of ministers have the same situation to confront. But, brethren, seriously, isn't this a good time to start in to change conditions? Three men that mean business in a church can come together and lay plans for this day, and make it a success. At least you can advertise the day in your community, and get what men you can command to interest themselves in the plan, and preach on the important subject of "Men's Work in The Church." A full packet of literature to help in preparation is yours for a postage stamp. If you are a Minister of a Church of Christ, we have already sent you a reply card with a stamp upon it, so you see it is the Brotherhood's stamp that you are asked to spend. At least send us a message that you will do what you can and we will do our VERY BEST to help you make the day the VERY BEST you ever had in your church.

Famine and Pestilence

More than 3,000,000 people in Central China are facing starvation, homes and crops in an area of 50,000 square miles having been destroyed by the worst floods in forty years. This is one of the greatest famines of modern times, 600,000 families being without food or means of support.

There is a strong Famine Relief Committee in Shanghai composed of Chinese and foreigners of all faiths, and this committee has appealed to America for a million dollars. As many as possible of the destitute people will be employed in building dikes and such other work as will help to prevent a recurrence of flood and famine in future years. All labor is to be paid for in grain, not in money. The need is so tremendous that the Chinese Government and people are unable to meet more than a fraction of it—though they are doing what they can.

At the request of President Taft and other Red Cross officials the China Famine Relief Committee has been organized in New York, and all moneys received will be cabled without charge through the State Department at Washington.

Every day the situation becomes more appalling. If help is to avail it must be sent at once. Will YOU not do what you can to relieve the terrible suffering of men, women and helpless little children?

Send remittances to F. M. Rains, Secretary, Box 884, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Flesh and Blood of Brotherhood

Story of How the South Street Brotherhood Handled a Revival

BY F. L. MOFFETT, MINISTER, SPRINGFIELD, MO.

1—J. Will Hall, President; 2—A. T. Quisenbury, Finance; 3—Irvin Lowry, Publicity; 4—W. R. Self, Bible School;
5—W. T. Carrington, Personal Work; 6—A. S. E. Sanders, Secretary.

First let me state that our men have been unusually active since the R. A. Company visited us last fall. In the Men and Religion Forward Movement campaign was started in our city they went into it with enthusiasm and undertook every task assigned and faithfully performed every task with enthusiasm. They put much into that movement and got much out of it. However, the source of their enthusiasm was their own Brotherhood meetings which they had been holding every two weeks for the past three months previous to our revival in February. The programs at these Brotherhood meetings were of very high order; and as soon as one meeting had closed the men began to look forward to the next one with joyful anticipation. One reason for this is to be found in the fact that our President, J. Will Hall, dropped on to the plan of appointing a new committee on program for each meeting. Each committee tried to excel the other. The standard being high on the start it brought out the best that was in the men, and you know that means much. When men at the head of large business concerns and professional men give their best, things move and so the Brotherhood moved. It was much alive. Three enthusiastic meetings were held without refreshments. At the other meetings, including a reception to the ladies of the church, refreshments were served. All of the meetings were deeply but broadly religious.

While these enthusiastic religious meetings were being held the men were feeling their way for something still more definite to do for the church. The church Board had voted in the summer to hold a meeting in February, but no definite arrangements had been made for it. Early in December some of the men suggested that the Brotherhood get under the meeting and that it be held with home forces. This suggestion at the next meeting shaped itself into a unanimous vote to hold a revival meeting in February, asking the Pastor to do the preaching and our choir leader, Mrs. Cowan, with her choir to take charge of the music. The Pastor did not take the initiative in any of these plans. After they had voted to get under the meeting and along about the first of the year the Pastor stated to them that a meeting properly handled called for a number of committees, and suggested that a committee for every detail of the work be appointed. This was promptly done. We had the following committees: Publicity, House, Music, Baptistry, Personal Work, Devotional, Sunday-School, and Reception. The Pastor was relieved of every detail of management and devoted himself to preaching the gospel and making what he could. This was a new but pleasant experience. These committees did excellent work. I never saw more faithful work done in any meeting. The Kur Society, which had purchased and paid for our pipe organ, caught the spirit of the occasion and decided to serve lunch for those who preferred to come to church from their places of business rather than go home for lunch. This gave opportunity for our Prayer meetings. Two of these were held each evening just before the service, one for women and one for men. Many of the men gave an hour or two each day a number of days during the meeting visiting business houses and inviting them to the meeting. Conferences were held a number of nights after the meeting Monday night, which is always a high night in a meeting, saw the house filled. Many nights the attendance of men equaled that of the women.

Keep in mind that all the advertising was done in the name of the Brotherhood. It was understood throughout that the Brotherhood was carrying the revival. The newspapers always spoke of the meeting as the Brotherhood meeting. Nothing has made so good an impression for the church in recent years. The Pastor preached between 900 and 1,000 people on Sunday evenings. We had twenty of service with 92 added, 57 of which were by baptism. This could not have been done without the enthusiastic support of the Brotherhood. But this in no way measures the good which our men have done the cause of Christianity in our city. What the Church needs today is to be dignified by the hearty enthusiastic support of men.

New York City for Christ

BY JOSEPH KEEVIL, SUPT. CITY MISSIONS, GREATER NEW YORK.

Ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria in the uttermost parts of the earth." This sane and efficient method for a world conquest was followed and the Gospel was "preached in all creation under heaven." The "uttermost parts" heard the word and became subject to the Prince of Peace.

It is still the supreme task of the Church to "go." The winning of the world for Christ is the work now before the Church. It is the Master's order, it is our duty to obey. In the completion of this task the first duty is to bring America to Christ. Save America for the world's sake. Here the people of all the earth meet, many only for a short time to stay in this land, and then return to their native land carrying with them American ideals, customs and religious impressions. The opportunity here for a world conquest has not yet been fully appreciated by the Church. When the Church is aroused to the opportunity here given, there will be no scarcity of money or men to discharge this obligation.

The missionary propaganda, to accomplish this work, must be alive to two distinct lines of service. The first task is the pioneer work, or work of entering every new field and occupying it in the name of Jesus Christ. Every new colony established or settlement opened, its representatives of the cross should be the first on the ground. The splendid success of the cause of primitive Christianity in many of the newer states must be attributed to this wise, far-seeing policy on the part of our missionary organizations. Too much cannot be written about the importance of this work, and it is to be hoped this policy will be continued until in every township, village or settlement a church will be found teaching men to live "soberly, righteously and Godly."

OUR CITIES SECOND

The second great task is to enter the great centers of population and activity, and determine their life and policy. The city is here and has come to stay. A condition we must deal with, a problem to face. Ex-Gov. Glenn, of North Carolina, was reported as saying, in an address: "The great cities of the land are snapping their fingers in the face of Almighty God." "The sins of Chicago are crying aloud unto the heavens. It is a disgrace to civilization." The New York Sun, in an editorial in 1908 said: "A wise man has said—'Look to your great cities for they are the plague spots of the nation.' They are, one and all, cesspools of corruption, and are tolerated and acquiesced in as such by the people who dwell in them whose mingled complicity and indifference are alone responsible for the condition." This arraignment of our cities, too true as all familiar with actual conditions must admit, is an open challenge to the Church. Christianity will be tried out in these centers and the final issue will be determined by its power to stoop and then to rise again, bringing with it a redeemed city. The final outcome, we are not doubting, but the long and bitter experience possible as a result of the inactivity of the forces for righteousness may cause every man to stop and consider the awful price we are paying for our indifference. What is the answer, what remedy have we? "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" is still God's answer to the problem of sin and suggests the real solution to the question before us.

NEW YORK CITY THIRD

No city in the world is growing more rapidly to a world commanding position than this cosmopolitan City of New York. It is the great center of commerce, finance, learning, politics, social, and (strange as it appears), religious life also. The great national religious movements find it of strategic importance to center in this great city; for here they can touch and influence life and world movements as no where else. But apart from such facts, the city itself offers a great opportunity for real missionary work that commands the attention of the Churches of Christ everywhere. A brief view of the field will make this clear. The census of 1910 gives New York City 1,996,900 of foreign-born, divided as follows: From Austria-Hungary, 265,500; Germany, 279,200; Great Britain, 105,800; Ireland, 252,500; Italy, 340,400; Russia and Finland, 485,600; Norway, Sweden and Denmark, 65,000; balance of Europe, 83,500; all others, 22,600. It is of vital importance to know that during the past 10 years, while the foreign-born population has increased 52.7 per cent, the natives of Russia and Finland have increased during the same period 163.7 per cent; the natives of Italy, 134.1 per cent; and the natives of Austria-Hungary, 117.6 per cent. The natives of these three countries constituting more than half, or 56.6 per cent of the entire foreign population of the city, while the native-born from Germany and Ireland have actually decreased 8.2 per cent during the same period.

THE RELIGION OF GREATER NEW YORK

The above statements prepare us for the following, furnished by the Church Federation of New York City. "For round number purposes the religious make-up of New York City April 15, 1910, was not from the following:

Roman Catholic.	1,665,000
Protestant.	1,800,000
Jewish.	1,265,000
All others.	36,800
Total.	4,766,800

In the midst of this heterogeneous mass, we must come with the simple gospel of Jesus Christ and supply the needed inspiration in the lives of the people.
